ALL DOWN TOOLS TODAY!

STRIKE AT THREE O'CLOCK, TODAY FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI!

To the Workers of New York:

Sacco and Vanzetti have placed their lives in your hands. They have appealed to the might of organized labor to save them from the shattering vengeance of the Massachusetts electric chair. They have given seven years of their lives to the world proletariat; they are now about to give their life-blood for the same cause.

We appeal to you in this desperate situation to answer our strike call and down tools at three o'clock. Ignore the cringing cowardice of your reactionary leaders who have washed their hands of the life-blood of Sacco and Vanzetti. Demonstrate your humanity, your courage, your devotion to Sacco and Vanzetti. Orders, or no orders, down tools at three o'clock today and march on Union Square.

Once again fill this historic meeting-place and demonstrate the militant solidarity of the working class. Urge your fellow-workers to down tools. See that they answer to the last plea of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The vulture-like Massachusetts courts have given up our comrades to the executioner and now the socialists together with their reactionary labor leaders, true to their historic role, have piously said: "We have done enough—let them die!" Answer this murderous attitude by striking today.

STOP EXECUTIONER!

Resolution Unanimously Adopted by District 2 Workers (Communist) Party Convention

For seven years Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, two valiant and militant workers in the cause of Labor's emancipation have been confined in a Massachusetts jail under death sentence on a trumped-up charge.

The sentencing to death and the refusal to grant a new trial to these victims of class justice is a challenge to the working class of America and to the world proletariat.

Not a single one of the legal representatives of the capitalist state has intervened on behalf of a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti notwithstanding the enormous amount of new evidence sumbitted and notwithstanding the enormous mass protests of labor the world over, not because they were actually convinced of the crime attributed to Sacco and Vanzetti but because in the persons of these two fighters they wanted to deal a blow to the whole working class.

The world proletariat, however, knows that Sacco and Vanzetti were convicted not on account of any crime but on account of fighting against capitalism, for the overthrow of capitalism.

The flagrant and brazen murder is being legally committed in the face of an outraged mankind. The machine of capitalist justice must be vindicated and the integrity of the capitalist state machine must be defended at the cost of the lives of two men who have given their all for their class brothers and who even in the face of the most excruciating tortures never for a moment wavered in their fidelity to the cause of the working class. Capitalism is asserting its authority because it wants to teach labor a lesson for the time to come. American capitalism wields the executioner's weapon once more to assert its supremacy as a class state equipped with class laws and class institutions.

The working class must meet that challenge with a manifestation of power. The working class is hostile to the class domination, class rule and class justice of capitalism. More than once during the past seven years has the working class stayed the hands of the executioners of Sacco and Vanzetti and by its protests and vigorous manifestations aroused the interest of every thinking man and woman. The working class must now redouble its efforts. It must form a strong unbroken united front of all the toilers against the culmination of the crime against Sacco and Vanzetti.

The convention of District No. 2 of the Workers (Communist) Party issues this appeal to the working class of this district as well as to the workers of America to make the day of August 22 a day of a general strike of millions of workers, a day of mass demonstrations and protest meetings in order to achieve an eleventh hour rescue of our condemned fellow-workers. The District Convention pledges the most active support of its members as well as sympathizers in this historic struggle. It calls upon every member and sympathizer to serve as a model example for the rest of the workers in leaving shops, factories, plants, railroads, docks, offices, etc., at 3 P. M. Monday, August 22 and the workers of New York City and environs to assemble at 4 o'clock for a monster mass demonstration at Union Square.

The Convention records the new perfidious action of the socialist party and the union bureaucracy in refusing to join this momentous struggle for the cause of labor. During the whole struggle for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti the socialist party and its allies paid only lip service to the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti, not appealing to the workers to fight for their class cause but to the authorities in the name of so-called humanity and justice. During all this struggle the socialists and their allies were as much afraid of the mass movement of the workers as were the legal representatives of the capitalist system themselves. At the crucial moment they preferred thru the officialdom of the New York Central Trade and Labor Council and the socialist party to stab in the back

WORKER PEASANT ARMIES MOVING AGAINST CANTON

HONGKONG, Aug. 21.—Information has been received here that the troops commanded by Holung and Yeh Ting, in rebellion against the bloody Wuhan government, are moving rapidly towards the Kwantung province border, and that workers and peasants are joining them along the way.

With the armies striking towards Canton are Tan Pin-shan, former minister of agriculture at Wuhan, and member of the Chinese Communist Party, Chen Tu-sui, and other active leaders of the Chinese labor and peasant movements.

There is information here from Japanese sources that Wuhan has sent 20,000 troops to Nanking, to fight against the Northern war-lords' at-

SAVE SACCO, VANZETTI!

New York's workers, when they gather by thousands in Union Square this afternoon to protest the impending murder of their two comrades Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, will be part of a mighty world-wide protest which is rising today from the toilers of every country. Strikes, demonstrations and boycotts are the order of the day.

The call to strike, which went out from the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Labor Defense here, has been issued by labor organizations all over Europe and South America. In many places the workers did not wait for an official call, but spontaneously walked out of shops and mines, factories and offices when the news came that the Massachusetts Supreme Court had denied the defense appeal and thus added one more act of persecution to the torture of Sacco and Vanzetti. Word came late yesterday that the wrath of Paris workers had brot out the military.

Not only word of strikes and demonstrations, parades, cablegrams and resolutions of protest come from abroad, but very definite threats of a boycott of American products are heard in many places. There is a report that the International Federation of Trade Unions is planning an organized boycott by all its members. In the meantime, action has already been taken by a committee in Geneva, Switzerland, and other similar steps may be expected soon.

Los Angeles, San Francisco, Minneapolis and the whole middle west; Chicago, various parts of New York state and Pennsylvania, have plans for monster protest demonstrations today. The workers, roused as never before by the slow cruelty of the courts and the government, are to gather in every large city by thousands to voice such a cry for justice as has never been heard in America.

In London and Paris, where the cause of Sacco and Vanzetti has been championed with such splendid courage that the authorities tremble for the comfort of American representatives, there are to be mass meetings and demonstrations in front of the American consulates. American business men are openly threatened in the radical press, and by the government officials are urged to keep of sight on Monday.

Germany, which had huge meetings in all large cities as soon as the Supreme Court news arrived, will continue the protest today with gatherings where thousands of workers—who are exploited so harshly by American as well as their own capitalists—will denounce the brand of "justice" we mete out defenders of the working class.

All over the Soviet Republic have come great cries of indignation against the crime which grows nearer and nearer with each failure of the legal moves. Every village knows the story of Sacco and Vanzetti and has uttered its condemnation of those who have planned these workers' doom. Writers, artists, peasants, factory workers have issued calls to their brothers in America to stop this terrible murder.

South America Hears.

These calls have been heard not only in North, but also in South America, and Buenos Aires is once again planning a general strike today in behalf of the two Italian radicals. They were the first to start a boycott of American products, and this surest way to affect the point of view of the American capitalists is now being adopted elsewhere.

While the workers thruout the world demonstrate their hatred of class justice as it is being revealed in Massachusetts, many liberals here and abroad have been voicing opposition to the Supreme Court's decision and demanding a stay of execution to permit a thoro review of the case.

Frank P. Walsh, former chairman of the War Labor Board and a noted labor attorney, declared in a telegram to the Citizen National Committee at Boston that failure of the United States government to open the Department of Justice files in the Sacco-Vanzetti case "would constitute a bloodstain upon the nation and a reflection upon the decent administration of justice."

THE COURT DECREES IT

FIGHT TO THE END FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI!

Declaration by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party

Our working class brothers, Sacco and Vanzetti, are doomed to be murdered by the capitalist class after midnight of August 22.

The capitalist class courts and state machinery heard with startled ears the tremendous protest of the workers of the world, and for a few days hesitated, slowed up, and readjusted its plans, utilizing a few more devices of delay and judicial trickery—only to quiet the protest of the working masses.

The reprieve was only a ruse of the bourgeoisie to quiet the workers and make it easier to go ahead with the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti!

The "full bench" of the Massachusetts State Supreme Court has denied a new trial. It has rejected all consideration of the new evidence which proves Sacco and Vanzetti to be innocent. The whole world, including the judges who pronounced this murderous verdict, knows full well that the evidence offered to them, which would have been offered at a new trial, does not merely raise doubt of guilt, but absolutely proves that Sacco and Vanzetti had nothing whatever to do with the crime which serves as the excuse for the execution of class enemies.

The action of the Massachusetts supreme court proves that this is not

MAKE THE STRIKE TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI THE BEGINNING OF A NEW EPOCH OF ORGANIZATION, MILITANCY AND STRUGGLE FOR LABOR MOVEMENT

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

TWO prisoners of war are being murdered in Massachusetts.

The war is the class war and the prisoners are Sacco and Vanzetti—two workingmen innocent of any crime except that of loyalty to their class.

To this case the ordinary rules of civilized warfare do not apply. So amply has this fact been demonstrated that not even the spokesmen of the capitalist class dare any longer to speak of justice in the abstract in connection with the seven-year torture of Sacco and Vanzetti.

BEFORE the eyes of the whole world these two war prisoners are being done to death. With a cold brutality that speaks volumes to intelligent workers the class enemies of America's toiling millions, after having sated every jaded sadistic impulse in a seven-year session in the torture chambers of Massachusetts, prepare to smother the feeble flame of life which still flickers in the breasts of their victims.

BUT let us understand that there is nothing personal in all this horror—except for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Cold as the shimmering bayonets which let out the lifeblood of the Communards, hard as the iron and steel which form the base of modern capitalist industry, as impersonal as the deadly current which is to drive the spark of life from them and char their bodies to cinders, the class justice of American capitalism has reached out and taken two hostages from our ranks.

MAKE no mistake. Just as the devotees of ancient witch-craft made an image of those they desired to destroy and burned it, believing that its living counterpart would die, so do the rulers of America, altho freed from this old superstition, believe nevertheless that by destroying Sacco and Vanzetti they will cow America's workers and by this fearful example drive from their minds all thot of rebellion.

THE murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti think not at all of them as individuals. As they vision them sitting in the electric chair, they do not see the forms of Sacco and Vanzetti.

They see seated in that scientific instrument of class justice, in itself

The comrades of The DAILY WORKER staff have again been called to appear before the Federal Court, in connection with the case, which has been initiated by the Military Order of the World and other patriotic societies. We ask all comrades to begin at once with renewed energy their efforts to raise funds for the GUARD THE DAILY WORKER FUND. At this critical time in the midst of the Sacco-Vanzetti fight, we cannot afford to cripple our paper by allowing the enemies of labor to be successful. No doubt the case is again being opened now because of the splendid agitation carried on by The DAILY WORKER for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. We must continue until victory is won. We rely upon you to stand by us at this critical hour.

Thousands Gather for Los Angeles Sacco and Vanzetti Mass Protest

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21. — Thousands of workers and sympathizers are assembling for the monster Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting to be held at the Labor Temple here later this afternoon. The crowds are orderly and if the police do not attack the meeting there will be no disorder.

THINK OF THE SUSTAINING FUND AT EVERY MEETING!

Poverty on Increase As Prosperity Rant Cools

Unemployment and poverty are considerably more noticeable in New York City this summer than they were last. Commissioner Bird S. Coler of the public welfare department tells the story. His figures show about 50 per cent increase in the number patronizing the municipal lodging house now. The average cared for monthly this year is higher than any for the past five years.

There has been an increase in the number of dependent children cared for and an increase in the amount spent for war veterans and their dependents. Veterans cannot be put into almshouses.

WORKERS OF U. S. S. R. MAKE GIGANTIC PROTEST FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

MOSCOW, Aug. 21.—As the day fixed for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti draws nearer, the protest movement all over the Soviet Union is growing stronger. There is no single town which has not protested against the insolent challenge of the American class justice to the international proletariat. The impending cold-blooded murder of two innocent workers has aroused the whole of public opinion in the Soviet Union in indignation and angry protest. Numerous public bodies have joined their voices to the powerful protests of the working class organizations.

The Federation of Soviet Writers has also protested as the representatives of the intelligentsia in the Soviet Union. It appeals to the writers and intellectuals of the whole world to protest against the murder of the two innocent workers sentenced to death by capitalism.

The All-Ukrainian Union of Proletarian Writers has appealed to Upton Sinclair, Charles Chaplin, Michael Gold and other revolutionary writers and artists to re-double the struggle for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. The representatives of the Baptists, the Molokans and the Tolstoists have sent a telegram in the name of the sectarians in Moscow to President Coolidge requesting mercy for the condemned men.

In discussing the Sacco and Vanzetti case, Pravda has declared that altho the United States ambassadors thruout the world are making hypocritical statements that the American government is unable to interfere in the case, the world proletariat knows that the two men are innocent and places the blame for their murder directly on the government.

many occasions and was recently in the public eye as counsel for the city and stockholders of the B.-M.T., has telegraphed the New Republic that he is "converted to the necessity for further action to establish the guilt or innocence (of Sacco and Vanzetti) if that is yet possible." He "deplores" the condition of Massachusetts law which has made the present situation in the case possible.

Legion Post Protests.

A protest against "Massachusetts justice" was voiced in a resolution made public esterday by the Willard Straight Post of the American Legion. This stated that "there exists a conviction that perhaps human machinery may have failed perfectly to function" in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Liberals Appeal to Fuller.

"To keep the door open" for further opportunities to prove the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti, a group of professional men and women are telegraphing friends and acquaintances asking them "to urge responsible believers in America to join in a plea to Governor Fuller to commute the sentence of Sacco and Vanzetti, or stay execution until all doubts are resolved." Among the signers of this appeal are Jane Addams, Charles P. Beard, Bruce Bliven, John Dewey, Norman Hapgood and Paul U. Kellogg.

Civil Liberties Protests Police Act.

Pointing out the danger of suppression of the rights of free speech, the American Civil Liberties Union on Saturday sent telegrams to Mayor Thompson and the chief of police of Chicago protesting the denial of a permit for a Sacco-Vanzetti meeting which had been arranged for Friday evening in Ashland Auditorium.

The International Seamen's Club will hold a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration noon today at South and Whitehall Sts. After the meeting ends the participants will go in a body to the Union Square rally. The speakers will include Pat Devine, A. V. Severino, Lena Chernenko, Harry Kweit and John Marshall.

"Doubt That Will Not Down" is the title of a full page editorial on the Sacco-Vanzetti case in the New York World of Aug. 20. The World takes up some of the details of the Lowell-Stratton-Grant report to Gov. Fuller, showing what the advisory commission overlooked or chose to ignore in the record. It points out what contrary conclusions should be drawn from the evidence when impartially examined.

"The real solution of this case would be a new trial before a new judge under new conditions," states the World. It then concludes with an appeal "to the governor, to his council and to friends of justice in Massachusetts" to "stay the execution. Wait, listen, and do not put an irrevocable end upon a case that is so full of doubt."

Seven questions are asked President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard in the New York Times in a full-page reprint of a letter the editors of the New Republic sent. The letter also appears in the current issue of the magazine.

The questions challenge the advisory commission's findings on Judge Thayer's prejudice, prosecutor Katzmann's prejudicial cross-examination, the ambiguous gun testimony of Massachusetts state police, Capt. Proctor, on Sacco's cap (which did not fit him in court but which the advisors solemnly accepted without trying it on Sacco), on the Berardelli pistol, on Sacco's alibi, and on the suppression of the Gould testimony by the prosecution.

In its leading editorial of August 20th, the Times declares that decision of the Massachusetts supreme court leaves "lingering doubts" as to the proper conduct of the Sacco and Vanzetti case by the prosecution and it demands that everything be done to give the two innocent prisoners justice. The editorial calls especial attention to the neglect of the Investigation Committee to deal in detail with Judge Thayer's "improprieties" and prejudice in handling the case, and calls for a new stay of execution by the federal courts if such action is still possible.

Fight to Put Hoover Over as Republican Candidate to Begin

Herbert Hoover's political friends will begin this week the unofficial boom which they hope will result in his election as president of the U. S.

Ever since Calvin Coolidge declared that he did not "choose" to be a candidate in 1928, backers of Hoover have been loudest in insisting that the latter was the best of the republican party at the next election.

The announcement that the fight to put Hoover across will begin soon has just been made by W. Ward Smith, one of the leading Hoover supporters in 1920, and later secretary to former governor Nathan L. Miller.

Smith declares that Hoover is the only candidate who can win votes in the south, and takes for granted that Al Smith will be the candidate of the democrats.

British Attempt Boycott Of Soviet Union Oil but Officially Admit Failure

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (FP).—Efforts by British oil interests to propagandize gas and oil consumers against buying Soviet oil have failed, declares the department of commerce. "There appears to have been little or no diminution in the importation and sale of Russian oil in this country," reports the department's commercial attaché in London. "Some temporary effect has undoubtedly been felt as a result of an active press campaign against the retail selling of Russian petrol but it seems doubtful that this will ultimately result in any marked reduction in total sales."

Fight To The End To Save Sacco, Vanzetti

a struggle about evidence, but a struggle of class against class. The capitalist courts, the whole machinery of the law, conceals the evidence, lies about it, and then murders our comrades. Class hate, and not evidence, is the reason why the capitalist class of America, acting through the executioner on this Monday night, will burn to death in the electric chair two noble and fearless men whose only crime has been their devotion for the cause of the liberation of their class.

The crime which takes place in Dedham jail this Monday night shows that the whole apparatus of the law in this country is an apparatus of murder and repression, for the benefit of the prosperous upper classes, for the exploitation of the working class and their merciless punishment behind the shield of hypocritical legal forms in cases where bold and honest members or masses of the working class dare to expose the system of exploitation. The capitalist court lied when it declared that Sacco and Vanzetti received a trial "as free and impartial as the lot of humanity will admit." Sacco and Vanzetti received seven years of torture in punishment for their loyalty to their fellow workers, and now they go to their death as martyrs of their class.

Show Their Malice.

The capitalist class courts in murdering our brothers expose the hideous face of American capitalism to the whole world. Millions of workers, farmers and all honest opponents of capitalist terrorism in seven continents look up this ghastly crime of the cruellest capitalism that has ever been known. Millions of workers for the first time begin to understand what "American democracy" is.

The tremendous demonstrations which the workers of foreign countries have made in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti played a heavy part in causing the American imperialists to slow up their criminal plans for a few days in order to apply a few more legal tricks intended only to cover the crime and confuse the minds of the workers. But the workers throughout the world will never have the hideous bloody picture of American justice erased from their minds. The workers of the world learned to hate the brutal and callous American capitalist class. The political institutions of America, the federal state of this country, will be better understood and better fought by the workers of this country and other countries in the future great struggles which will arise out of the imperialism of the capitalist United States.

Nasty Role of Liberals.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti crowd many disillusionments before the eyes of our class. The nasty, contemptible role of such so-called liberals as Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes is exposed in this crisis when Holmes is obliged to function for his class in denying a writ of habeus corpus to innocent men about to be assassinated by the state of Massachusetts. Again the cowardly part of Senator William E. Borah—the role of the capitalist who plays with liberal phrases in serving as the final trickster of the working class—appears when Borah at the last minute speaks for the death of the enemies of the capitalist class, advising all who will listen to him not "to pay the slightest attention to foreign protests or mob protests at home." And still again, the function of the socialist party of America, whose leadership is under the influence of the capitalist class ideology of this country, shows its true function in the class struggle by refusing to give even its "moral" support to the only means which can save Sacco and Vanzetti—mass demonstrations and strikes.

Can Be Saved.

But the Workers (Communist) Party of America appeals to the workers not to be cowed or terrorized by the ruling class. Only a few hours remain in which the workers can yet save their brothers from death.

Mass demonstrations and strikes have already caused the American capitalists to hesitate and postpone their criminal plans. More strikes and demonstrations can cause them to hesitate again. Still more strikes and mass demonstrations can save Sacco and Vanzetti, even at this hour, if the American workers will act with enough energy and devotion to their cause.

Sacco and Vanzetti can yet be saved!

Strikes and demonstrations will stop the hand of the executioner!

All out onto the street!

Get your fellow workers out! All union men, and all unorganized—out of the shop!

Establish picket lines. Nobody to work on Monday morning, August 22nd!

Strike for the life of Sacco and Vanzetti on Monday morning, August 22nd!

BRANDEIS DENIES PLEA FOR SACCO-VANZETTI STAY

Federal Investigation Sought by Liberals

One more legal move is contemplated by Arthur D. Hill, attorney for Sacco and Vanzetti, following yesterday's refusal of United States Supreme Court Justice Brandeis to entertain a petition for a stay of execution for the two men.

Hill will call upon Justice Harlan Stone to grant the stay, and if he refuses to act—as have both Brandeis and Oliver Wendell Holmes, what is said to be the last hope to save the condemned men thru the courts will have failed.

He's Interested.

Justice Brandeis, when visited yesterday at his home in Hatham, 130 miles from Boston, refused to grant the petition, so attorney Hill reports, because of the fact that his family was so interested in the case that it would be unethical for him to intervene.

While counsel tries this last court move, Mrs. Jessica Henderson, a wealthy Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizer left here tonight for Washington to make an examination of the department of justice records in this case. Just what her next step will be after that was not clear. She will have to work fast if she completes her probe before the men are slated to die. Arthur Garfield Hays, New York lawyer, and Francis Fisher Kane, of Philadelphia are also reported to have gone to Washington to get the department of justice records "unlocked."

Borah Offers to Look In.

Both are allied with the Citizens' National Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, composed of prominent liberals, which yesterday announced that Senator William E. Borah has offered his time and services to aid in the legal end of the case. The telegram from Borah says:

"Replying to your telegram, I would be glad to go over the case with counsel and if I find I can be of service relative to innocence or fair trial, will volunteer my time and services."

The committee said Senator Borah was invited to leave for Boston immediately and that efforts are being made to obtain an airplane for him. He also has been asked to address an appeal to Governor Fuller for a stay of execution.

Two Workers Brave.

Sacco and Vanzetti were stoical when they received the news of their latest defeat. They hadn't placed any hopes on its success anway. They have been disappointed too often before.

They fully expect to die tonight.

Nevertheless their friends continue their frantic efforts to save them. A strong appeal will be made to Governor Fuller tomorrow. Another appeal is to be made to Senator David I. Walsh, who lives here. U. S. Attorney General Sargent said yesterday he would take under advisement an appeal that was made to him yesterday for the opening of the department of justice files.

But these are slim chances—very slim indeed and no one knows it any better than Sacco and Vanzetti.

Vanzetti was visited again yesterday morning by his sister Luigia, who saw him Saturday for the first time in 19 years. Yesterday's meeting was rather brief and unemotional. Mrs. Sacco visited her husband in an adjoining cell at the same time. She has called on him every day recently and these meetings have become uneventful. Yesterday's meeting was vastly different from Saturday's touching scenes, when Sacco and his wife stood by and stared at Vanzetti and his sister in their emotional embrace. They will see their loved ones again today perhaps for the last time.

Dispute Among Oppressors.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 21.—The situation in Belmont County was further complicated by apparent differences among law enforcement officers. Prosecutor Paul V. FOREIGN BORN WORKERS' COUNCIL TELEGRAPH FULLER FOR NEW TRIAL

The National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, with offices at 41 Union Square, New York City, makes public the following telegram sent to Governor Fuller August 19th:

In the name of millions of foreign born workers in this country we ask you to grant an unconditional pardon to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Signed: NINA SAMORODIN, Executive Secretary,
National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

The National Council has the support of millions of workers in this country of both foreign and American birth. "It is our firm belief," states the secretary of the council, "that Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered the tortures of death many times over during the seven years of imprisonment." The secretary further states, "At this time when the eyes of the millions of foreign born in this country are fixed upon the government's anti-alien policy which expresses itself in the effort to adopt anti-alien legislation as registration, etc., this case of Sacco and Vanzetti only tends to increase the belief that the persecution of Sacco and Vanzetti is due to the fact that they are of foreign birth.

"We asked the governor as early as last April that a new trial be given Sacco and Vanzetti and that the Department of Justice records be made available for that trial. At this hour, however, when all possibilities for a new trial seem to be exhausted we asked the governor for executive clemency for the two condemned men in ordrer that the minds of all those who have interested themselves in this case may be set at peace and that our belief in the justice of the American government may be restored to us once more."

Son of Feng Denounces Father.

MOSCOW, Aug. 21.—Pravda, organ of the All Union Communist Party, publishes a letter to the paper from Feng Cheng-kuo, the son of Feng Yu-hsiang. This is a copy of a letter which the young man has sent to his father, and it points out that, knowing his father's opportunism and obstinate, ambitious character, he is not surprised to hear that Feng Yu-hsiang has passed over to the side of counter-revolution. He writes:

"Having now thrown off the mask, and not only refusing to defend the interests of the working class and peasantry, but even openly cooperating with and forming a bloc with Chiang Kai-shek, the hangman of the workers and peasants, you have published an impudent declaration alleging that merchants, dealers and owners of industrial enterprises are oppressed by the workmen and peasants of Wuhan territory.

Should Support Workers.

"All this is nonsense. The time has not come yet for the Chinese workmen and peasantry to 'oppress' the capitalists, merchants and landlords.

"But even if the workmen and peasantry really oppressed the manufacturers, gentry and landlords, you ought to adopt the point of view that the interests of the majority of the population support the workers' and peasants' purpose of throwing off the exploiters.

"Being revolutionary, I take into consideration only the interests of the revolution and not the mutual relation of father and son, and therefore I am bound to break off all connection with a counter-revolutionary father.

"Henceforth I will regard you just as Chang Tso-lin, Chiang Kai-shek and other counter-revolutionaries and fight with the greatest energy against my own father. These are my last words to a counter-revolutionary father."

Competition of Hangmen.

Pravad points out that there is now observed in China real competition between hangmen of different denominations and different tendencies. The laurels secured by Chiang Kai-shek from merchants and foreign imperialists fo his persecution of workers and peasants disturb the sleep of Wang Ching-wei, who is striving by mass execution to outdo such experienced robbers and murderers and hangmen as Chiang Tso-lin and Chiang Kai-shek.

The workers of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, says Pravda, cannot remain indifferent thru this orgy of cruelty and vileness now going on in China.

All Rally for Defense!

Even in the midst of the struggles against the death and for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, it is necessary to proceed with a campaign for the defense of the Chinese revolutionaries.

The struggle against the American hangmen has assumed considerable proportions despite the sabotage by reformist leaders, and this shows that proletarian solidarity is no "Communist invention" but lives in the hearts of millions of honest proletarians in all parts of the earth.

Fight Harder.

But it is necessary to carry on a still more stringent fight against the hangmen's terror in China, especially now when the Kuomintang leaders directed by Wang Ching-wei are forming elaborate plans for the most violent struggle against the Communist Party.

The working classes of the world, says Pravda, would be guilty of the greatest crime if they did not hasten to help detachments of the workmen and peasants, who are not only fighting in China their own enemies, but the enemies of all workers.

Revolt Among Troops.

Pravda announces that reports are continually being received from China, of the greatest unrest among the hangmen's troops, who are obliged to disarm their own military forces for their sympathy expressed towards the revolutionaries. This unrest will certainly increase when the working classes of the whole world loudly raise their voices against the traitors and bandits attempting to extinguish the revolutionary flames with blood.

The heroic young Communist Party of China is holding high the banner of struggle for China's independence and for the unity of the Chinese people, for a workers' and peasants' China. It must be surrounded by a wall of sympathy from the working masses of all the world.

Latvian Prisoners Go On a Hunger Strike

RIGA, Latvia, Aug. 21.—All the political prisoners of the Central and Terminal prisons of Riga are continuing their long hunger-strike against the unspeakable conditions obtaining in the jails. The political prisoners who are kept in the lowest level of damp, unsanitary cells are demanding the right to read books, to see visitors oftener than every two months, and to buy other foods than the substances served by the prison officials. The Lettish bourgeois press is doing all in its power to discredit the hunger strike.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

CHICAGO CROWDS GAS BOMBED BY MOUNTED POLICE

Cops Attack Sacco and Vanzetti Mass Meeting

By THURBER LEWIS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 21.—Fully half of Chicago's police, motor and foot, concentrated at or in the vicinity of Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren St., Friday night and dispersed with hickory clubs and tear gar bombs several thousand workers who gathered for a scheduled protest in that hall against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Not content with keeping the streets sparse with demonstrators by frequent charges, by running motor cycles on the sidewalks and by explosions of tear gas—squad cars, racing up and down nearby thorofares, frequently stopped long enough to allow plain clothes men to leap out and arrest workers recognized as participating in previous protests. George Maurer, Secretary of the Chicago International Labor Defense, Aurora D'Angelo, arrested in the protest parade of last week and ten others were taken to various district stations and held incommunicado over night. Efforts to locate them failed until noon Saturday when they were found to be booked on high bail for "inciting to riot."

Bunk About "Mobs."

Local newspapers and national press services are carrying stories of "surging mobs" and "girl riot leaders." They are also featuring the explosion of two bombs, one in a restaurant, obviously the result of a trade war and the other in a candy company, probably for the same reason. These are openly proclaimed to be "highly suspected" of being the work of Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers. As for the "mobs," it is many years since such an impressive police force has been mobilized in one place in this city. Not for ten seconds were more than five people allowed to come together in the neighborhood of the hall. The doors at both entrances, on Van Buren and on Ashland were guarded by a double row of uniformed and plain clothes officers.

The violent suppression of all right of free speech and assemblage that is confronting the radical and labor movement of the city in the present agitation for Sacco and Vanzetti is unprecedented since the famous raids of 1919.

Another attempt to voice a protest against the legal murder of the two Massachusetts workers will be made on Monday under the leadership of International Labor Defense when a demonstration will gather at Vernon Park, Sibley and Taylor Sts., at 3 p. m.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Police Arrest Greeks As Fear of Workers' Power Seizes Bosses

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Two Greek workers, Economos and Hogelias, one of whom is a representative of the daily Greek paper, Empros of New York, were arrested without warrant this morning by Boston police, upon their arrival from New York. After being illegally detained and brought to the police station, they were cross-examined by the police officer and later by the representative from the State house.

In questioning, the police were particularly interested to secure a statement of the use of force in the revolutionary struggle against capitalism. The question of whether or not the detained workers believed in the use of force was asked about 15 times. Finally, the representative from the State house wanted to know what would the workers do if they were in majority and were attacked by the minority, to which Comrade Hogelias, the representative of the Greek paper, replied, "Once the workers come to power and are in majority they would not stand with folded arms and allow themselves to be attacked."

The fright and imagination of the police officer further prompted the question as to whether or not there exists an underground Communist Party. The police have searched the bag and also the shipment of books and were somewhat perplexed and alarmed at seeing the books on Leninism on Organization, Elements of Political Education, and the Building Up of Socialism. They were also alarmed at seeing a large number of leaflets, used for the purpose of announcing mass meeting.

Nick Economos was asked what he was doing in Boston and in reply he frankly stated that he comes to Boston after losing his job in New York, on account of participation in the Sacco-Vanzetti strike. On further questioning Comrade Economos stated that if the strike should be called on any other time he would not hesitate to join.

It was evident that the chief reason for the arrest is the apprehension of the police regarding the possible strike and their desire to prevent this strike by terrorizing the workers. However, this terrorism does not stop the determination of Boston workers, who are meeting tonight at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Hall, to consider the calling of a general strike for Monday.

THOUSANDS OF SOVIET WORKERS DEMAND THAT SACCO AND VANZETTI BE FREED

MOSCOW, AUG 21.—The confirmation of the death sentence on Sacco and Vanzetti has caused great indignation amongst the workers of the Soviet Union. A tremendous movement of protest has commenced all over the U. S. S. R. Protest meetings in which tens of thousands of workers took part have been called in Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov and other towns against this terrible scandal of bourgeois class justice. The resolutions adopted at these protest meetings of the toilers of the Soviet Union appeal to the workers of the world to unite their powers to prevent the vicious and brutal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and to force the American bourgeoisie to abolish the bestial sentence. Collections were made in many factories for the victims of capitalist terror.

WHOLE WORLD PROTESTS TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI FROM DEATH

NEW STRIKES IN ARGENTINE.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 21.—A manifesto calling upon workers to strike on Monday in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti was issued today by the Argentina Regional Confederation, and a similar call is expected following Sunday's meeting of the Syndical Union of Argentina to whom the police denied a permit for a protest demonstration.

This action followed the decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court and also as a result of this rejection of appeal an added guard was placed at the various American institutions in this city.

SOVIET PEASANTS CALL ON U. S. FARMERS.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 21.—The Red Peasants Internationals today appealed to the farmers of America and the peasants of all countries inviting them to join the protest of the working class against the execution of the two innocent workers, Sacco and Vanzetti.

GERMAN PROTEST.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—The first radical meeting ever held in the former House of Lords for the Kingdom of Prussia, took place tonight as part of the nation-wide protest against the Supreme Court decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Never before had the red flag adorned these walls for the building is denied for political party meetings.

Spontaneous demonstrations of protest were held also in Hamburg, Cologne, Hanover, Leipsic, Halle and other cities. At every gathering the speeches appealed for pardon and branded the action of the Massachusetts courts as torture worse than the middle ages.

This charge of torture is voiced in the protest sent to the American Embassy by the Berlin trade unions, and it is a charge repeated by many of the conservative Berlin papers. Throughout the whole German press there is almost unanimous condemnation of the latest step in this "most barbaric judicial murder."

SWISS TO BOYCOTT U. S. GOODS.

GENEVA, Aug. 21.—A boycott of American products, especially films, is to be advocated by a special propaganda committee appointed tonight at a meeting held in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti in one of the city's largest halls.

The gathering, addressed by trade unionists and radicals, also approved the despatch to Governor Fuller of a cablegram demanding the release of the two doomed workers.

The American embassy is under special armed guard following the calling of demonstrations in all the principal cities. The authorities show every evidence of fight at the bitter attitude of the Swiss workers.

BRITISH MINERS DEMAND LIBERATION.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The British Miners' Federation, thru its president, Herbert Smith, issued a statement today "protesting against the miscarriage of justice in the Sacco-Vanzetti trial and urging their liberation." A denunciation of the Supreme Court's action was also published by Ben Tillett of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress.

Protests came from H. G. Wells; John Galsworthy, Chairman F. O. Roberts of the British Labor Party, and all liberal and radical papers. Officials of the British trade unions sent a cablegram to Governor Fuller urging him to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Communists are planning a mass demonstration outside the American Consulate on Monday night, and a great protest meeting in Hyde Park.

A cablegram imploring Governor Fuller to save Sacco and Vanzetti was sent today by four British churchmen, who made their plea "In the name of Christ."

ROCHESTER LAWYERS DEMAND STAY.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 21.—A group of prominent lawyers of this city today telegraphed President Coolidge and Governor Fuller urging "commutation of sentence or stay until all doubts are absolved" concerning the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

They state that "substantion legal opinion here holds that Sacco and Vanzetti have not had a fair trial."

MACHINISTS DEMAND LIBERATION.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Lodge 478 of the International Association of Machinists has passed resulutions denouncing the death sentence which the corrupt Supreme Court of Massachusetts has sustained against Sacco and Vanzetti and demands their immediate-liberation. A copy of the resolution has been forwarded to Governor Fuller.

LETTISH WORKERS DENOUNCE FULLER.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—The Lettish workers of Chicago, assembled at Harmony Hall, have passed resolutions denouncing the brutal sentence of the Massachusetts capitalist courts against Sacco and Vanzetti and demand the immediate release of the two condemned men. The resolution has been sent to Governor Fuller.

the general strike called for August 22.

Strike Anyway.

We appeal to the workers of all the labor organizations of New York City and environs to frustrate this treacherous attempt of the trade union bureaucrats and socialists. The workers must make this day of August 22 the greatest labor demonstration in the history of the United States. Only thru their own power, thru their vigorous determination, thru a united effort of millions can they halt the hands of the murderers and save Sacco and Vanzetti.

We know that together with the workers of America the workers of the world will on August 22 protest in collossal masses against the proposed legal murder. Let us join hands with our fellow-workers in other countries. Let us make this day a day of growing strength of the working-class.

Comrades, fellow-workers, in the name of our class interests, in the name of our liberation, in the name of our class victims, Sacco and Vanzetti, we appeal to you!

Down tools at 3 p. m. Monday, August 22!

On to Union Square to the huge mass demonstration at 4 o'clock!

Raise your voices in protest against the capitalist murderers!

Stay the hand of the executioner! Save Sacco and Vanzetti!

Negro Experts Attend Pan-African Congress Opening in New York

M. Dantes Bellegarde, former minister of Haiti to France, minister of education in Haiti and delegate to the League of Nations, is one of the first delegates to arrive for the 4th Pan-African Congress meeting in New York Aug. 21-24. Delegates from different groups of colored people will report on labor, economic, political and social conditions in their sections.

Dr. Normail Sylvain, son of one of Haiti's patriots, will also attend the congress unless the American occupation (by marines) in Haiti finds a way to prevent him, the Circle for Peace and Foreign Relations learns. The circle is arranging the congress.

Chief Amoah III of Gold Coast, West Africa, is already here. He knows conditions in the English, French and Portuguese West African colonies from years of study. He has attended previous congresses. T. Augustus Toote, former acting attorney general of Bahamas is also here for the congress.

Congress headquarters are at Grace Congreational Church, 308 W. 139th St., New York. The opening meeting is at St. Marks Methodist Episcopal Church, 137th St. and St. Nicholas Ave., Sunday afternoon at 4 p. m.

Soviet Purchases Break All Records; Experts In U. S. Study Methods

During July, Russian purchases through Amtorg Trading Corp. in the United States broke all monthly records by over 50%. The total, exclusive of cotton, was $4,600,000. Orders for the first ten months of the curent soviet fiscal year amount to $22,700,000 in this country, says Saul G. Bron, chairman of Amtorg's board.

Cotton purchases this season made by the All-Russian extile Syndicate total $48,000,000. Most of Amtorg's purchases are production rather than consumption goods—machinery, equipment and raw material.

During the last 10 months 75 Soviet technicians and industrial executives have visited the United States to familiarize themselves with American productive methods. They represented some of the largest Soviet economic organizations, including Asneft oil trust, Grosnet oil trust, Don Basin coal trust, the chemical trust, the Dnieper hydroelectric development and the supreme economic council.

New York Wins 500 New Readers

The splendid campaign conducted by the Daily Worker for Sacco and Vanzetti, has gained for us Five Hundred additional readers in New York City and vicinity alone, within the short period of two weeks.

This indicates how fully the Daily Worker expresses the sympathy which the workers feel for the condemned men, and how thoroughly the workers appreciate the strong fight which we are waging for their release.

Now is the time to prove to the workers the value of our paper.

In every shop and residential section, our comrades should be actively carrying on the campaign for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, the shining leader of the fight for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Only Argument.

Every step in the Sacco and Vanzetti case, from its very beginning, has shown that the only arguments possible with such a brutal and cynical ruling class as that in America are those which appeal to their more sordid interests.

All the world may talk of the injustice inflicted upon these two martyred workers from now until three minutes past twelve tonight, and at three minutes past twelve the switch will be thrown and the current sent slashing thru their bodies. The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is not decided on the basis of justice. If there had been any intention to treat them justly, they would not have been arrested in the first place, they would not have been unfairly tried by a prejudiced judge, the U. S. government would not have concealed, as it still does conceal, evidence favorable to them, and they would never have been convicted by the jury. Senator Borah's brazen letter to Jane Adams, stating that the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti depend only on an inquiry into their guilt or innocence is mere addition of insult to injury.

Neither will any appeal to mercy, as advocated by some of our friends in the liberal camp, have any effect on a ruling class with the traditions and the habits of cruelty and repression that prevail among the mill owners of New England. These men are the aristocrats of American capitalism, descended from revolutionary war smugglers and semi-pirates, many of them, and used to browbeating and terrorizing the alien servants that come into their control. They have ruled by terror for generations, and their hearts are very hard towards appeals for mercy. If they were susceptible to any humane request, they would not have tortured their victims with such avidity as they show when they make Mrs. Sacco walk past the electric chair on every trip to her husband, as they showed in their granting the reprieve on the tenth of August only forty minutes before the time of execution, and even then not informing the condemned until nearly a half hour later. This is sheer deliberate torture, and indicates the love of cruelty, and belief in cruelty as a means of ruling. If the masters in Massachusetts had their way, it is hardly to be doubted that they would burn their victims at the stake rather than with an electric current.

But when appeals both to justice and to humanity fail, recent events have shown that appeals to self interest are considered. The mill-owners of New England are a semi-independent group of American industrialists, but they have their needs. In the end, they are subordinate to Wall Street financial lords, as are other industrialists. In the end, they have to have a market for their goods.

And the wave of resentment, taking expression more and more definitely in strikes and boycotts, which, tho they do not yet immediately touch the Massachusetts mill owners, must give them a most uncomfortable feeling of insecurity, has saved Sacco and Vanzetti until now. Pressure is both direct and indirect, and the indirect pressure may be most efficacious. Wall Street, expressing itself thru its favored journal, the New York Times, has become somewhat doubtful of the justice of an immediate execution for Sacco and Vanzetti. The reason for this is that American financial imperialism requires a certain amount of disunity and partial cooperation from various sections of the world it has set out to conquer. A united front of debtor nations against the U. S. A., on some sentimental appeal like the salvation of Sacco and Vanzetti, popular among the working classes of those nations, might lead to embarrassing situations for Morgan's deputies abroad, for Hoover's agents everywhere. It might transcend the limits of the case; it might lead to the general theory that the U. S. A. is a Shylock nation, determined on its pound of flesh, and that theory is extremely bad for the pawnbroking business the biggest banks and the Department of Commerce have been hard at work building up. It tears down in a few months a whole laboriously constructed and expensive camouflage of "friendship", between vampire Wall Street and the sleeping nations of South America, Asia, Africa and Europe. What is the use of subsidizing a Pan-American Federation of Labor, to fool Latin America, if every Latin finds himself personally insulted by the railroading of Sacco and Vanzetti to death?

If Sacco and Vanzetti die tonight, it will be in no small measure because the working class of the world did not begin its real argument, the argument of strikes and boycotts and mass demonstrations, until too late for those first effected, the financiers of New York, to coerce their New England satellites. It will be because the New England textile manufacturers were not sufficiently convinced in time, that they would suffer too heavy a loss in trade to pay for the satisfaction of burning to death a couple of hated labor leaders.

But if the punishment inflicted on New England trade and Wall Street imperialism is heavy enough, the Sacco-Vanzetti strikes and boycotts may save some other lives in the near future.

The strike and the boycott, along with that virile school in social facts, the mass demonstration, picketing and parades are not only the only argument by which Sacco and Vanzetti in the death house today will be brought out of it alive, they are the surest protection in the future against other cases of like nature.

Strike! Picket! Protest! Until the Last Minute

By MICHAEL GOLD

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Boston and New England have become a graveyard. It sounds incredible, but here at the very scene where the international crime against Sacco and Vanzetti is being committed, there has been less stirring of the social conscience than in any other city of the world.

There was a meeting of labor union delegates last night to discuss the protest strike. About fifty workers were present, mostly from the Italian Barbers Unions, from the Upholsterers' Union, and from the Jewish needle trades. Where were the American workers? They were at home drinking homebrew and playing poker. Or they were reading the tabloid newspapers, with their scare stories of proposed bombings.

Representatives of the Sacco and Vanzetti Defense have tried all this week to get into the meetings of different local unions. The fat bullnecked grafters of Irish descent who exploit the A. F. of L. machine in this benighted city refused them admission, and sneered at any request for an open discussion. These porkfed labor tories with Wall Street minds are helping in the crucifixion of Sacco and Vanzetti. They are helping as gleefully as they helped in the frame-up of Tom Mooney in California. They always can be counted to help capitalism, in this as in other crises.

There is a complete sinister silence in all the newspapers. One of the editorial writers on a Boston paper won the Pulitzer Prize with an editorial pleading for "fairness" to Sacco and Vanzetti. That was almost a year ago. This past month the hero of the Pulitzer prize has uttered not even a mournful sound. The man is evidently dead. All the bright breezy newspaper liberals are dead in Boston. There are scores of them who read the Nation, the New Republic, the American Mercury, and other "fair" and "liberal" sheets. There are scores of them who know at first hand the truth about Sacco and Vanzetti and the truth about Boston. But they are dead. They are drinking bootleg somewhere, shooting craps, and trying hard to forget the depths of their mental slavery. Not a word in the "free" press of Boston.

Not a word from Boston's liberterain aristocracy. Boston has been known as the cradle of American liberty. It was here that the American Revolution was begun. It was here that King George's private property was dumped into the harbor by direct actionists at the Boston Tea Party. It was here that Bunker Hill was fought.

It was also in Boston that the flame of the Civil War to free the slaves was lighted. It was here that a mob of high-nosed, blue-blooded Yankee aristocrats rescued at the cost of two lives the runaway slave Anthony Burns from the federal authorities.

The men of Boston fought at Bunker Hill in the revolution of 1776. The men of Boston rescued Anthony Burns in 1860 and helped launch the second American revolution. The men of Boston, in 1927, are lynching Sacco and Vanzetti. In those three dates is contained the tragedy of Boston. Yes, this is a dead city.

All that is left in these withered hearts is a great fear. They are afraid of their own workers. They are afraid of the immigrants. Sacco and Vanzetti are a symbol of the immigrant rebel worker whom they could not completely enslave. They will kill Sacco and Vanzetti first, then they will turn on the other immigrant workers. There will be lynchings, finger-printings, deportations, mass-hysterias in New England. These decadent Yankee masters, those blue-blooded inheritors of the rebel glory of Bunker Hill and Gettysburg, are shaken by a rat-like fear.

Bugles sound in the street. I look out, and see a regiment of state militia marching grimly by, bayonets on the alert. Aeroplanes whirl in the sky. Last night as I went by the postoffice there were scores of silent men with rifles on post. Every policeman in the city is on 24-hour reserve duty, sitting nervously in the station houses waiting for battle. The fire department is mobilized. The American Legion is guarding certain homes. Even the insurances companies are on active duty. They have filled the newspapers with great advertisements, warning the businessmen to insure themselves against riots and explosions before it is too late.

The newspapers spread scare after scare. Now the vast Boston subway is to be bombed—now a certain rich man's home, now a public building. And every boob, yokel, blueblood or Irish policeman and his relative buys and believes these newspapers.

It is a panic. It is a lynching. And for what? There are two lonely immigrant workers in the death house in Charlestown jail and they are to be electrocuted Monday night. And so the city moves in fear. And the men higher-up, who have created this panic, rub their hands delightedly. When this is over, they will move on to the next step in the great chess game. They will be ready for their mass attack on the immigrant workers then—their registry bills in Congress, their deportations, their raids and arrests.

The Charlestown jail in across the historic Charles River from Boston, that placid stream of which the good Longfellow wrote so placidly. Charlestown is an industrial quarter of the city, a congeries of slum streets and grimy factories, of lumber yards, freight sidings, ugly shacks and tin can dumpheaps, a fitting industrial background for the murder New England industry is about to commit.

Go a mile down the same bank of the Charles and you come to Harvard, the cultural mask of that murderer. Harvard with its sleek lawns, its noble elms, its quiet redbrick old buildings where genteel scholars labor at science and art.

Sacco and Vanzetti are being tortured in the Charlestown jail, and Harvard, the home of science and art, speaks not a word. Harvard even has helped in the torture. It was President Lowell of Harvard who perfumed the murder. This little man is descended from James Russel Lowell, who wrote fiery abolition poetry. This little man hates Jews, and tried to keep them out of his college. This little man is a friend of millionaires, and they support his college. This little man is proud that he is a Nordic, a Lowell, a blueblood, a Boston aristocrat.

Governor Fuller, another of the executioners who will turn on the switch today, is of a different category. He is a self-made man. He began in life as a bicycle racer; then he opened a bicycle repair shop; then when automobiles came in, he landed the Packard agency for New England, and earned about 10 million dollars before he went into politics. Once he was denounced by Sam Gompers at an A. F. of L. convention for a notorious lockout. As a Congressman he made a rabid murderous speech against all Reds, anarchists, Bolsheviks and readers of "The Nation."

Judge Robert Grant, who helped in the execution, is an old senile Boston Brahmin who once wrote a mad violent book denouncing Italians. It can be found in any library.

Judge Thayer one need not discuss. This is the man who went around asking his golfing friends during the Sacco and Vanzetti trial: "Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards?"

Yes, New England is made up of such as these. And these are the men who have thrust Sacco and Vanzetti back into the deathhouse.

It is such as they who inflame the minds of the ignorant Boston masses with stories of bombings. It is such as they who know when and how those bombs are placed. It is such as they who spread the fear in New England these last wild hours.

A telephone girl says over the wire to an Italian who is sputtering at her in broken English, as he tries to get a number:

"Ah, shut up, yeh ginny rat, wait till you see what we do to yeh on August 22nd."

A timid little groceryman remarks to a customer:

"Yes, I think maybe those two Italians are innocent, but we gotta kill them, aint we, or we'll all be bombed in our beds, wont we?"

A clerk drinking ice cream soda at a fountain:

"All them Italians look like murderers to me, anyway."

A young sailor prowling about Scollay Square on the hunt for women:

"They ought to be killed. They insulted the American flag."

A gracious tranquil matron in a Beacon street drawing room, while the mellow light filters through violet panes:

"Yes, there is some doubt, but one must believe such good men as President Lowell, must one not?"

The master class in again killing two workers. The workers of the world are rising in protest. But in Boston, the scene of the crime, most of the workers have accepted the viewpoint of the masters. That is one of the tragedies in this great world tragedy of our time.

It is not the last word on this matter, however. Boston is a city filled with landmarks and famous old houses saturated with the history of the first American revolution. There will come a time when a new revolutionary landmark will be visited—the death house at the Charlestown jail. And Americans will speak of Governor Fuller and President Lowell, as they now speak of Benedict Arnold, and they will speak of Sacco and Vanzetti as they now speak of Abraham Lincoln and John Brown.

But Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!

Wire President Coolidge at Rapid City, S. D., for federal intervention!

Strike, picket, protest until the last minute!

Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!

Make Strike Begin a New Epoch

a symbol of technical progress—the gallows belongs to the feudal period as crucifixion typifies the slave era—not Sacco and Vanzetti but a composite picture of all rebels against Capitalism's rule.

IN killing two workingmen American capitalism serves notice upon the whole working class that it intends to give no quarter in the class war.

Rulers always have depended upon death as their ally when their falsehoods have been exposed and shattered by the resistless logic of the class struggle. American capitalism is no exception.

The hypocricy, the cruelty, the sordid character of the boasted institutions of America are seen once more now in all their nakedness ten years after the world rang with the denunciation of the crucifixion of Tom Mooney and Warren Billings.

FROM the Pacific coast the deadly class justice of America's rulers crept eastward until it ensnared two workers on the Atlantic seaboard. In storied Boston, "cradle of American liberties," the executioners are busy.

They are murdering, they think, and they smile at the thot, every fighter in the ranks of the labor movement. This unconcealed joy with which the executioners go about their task springs from this fact alone —that Sacco and Vanzetti personfy for American capitalism the rebellion that burns in the hearts of millions of their fellow-workers.

SACCO and Vanzetti shall not die!

Their bodies may be charred to a crisp in the electric chair but Sacco and Vanzetti will not die. They will live in the white hot heat of the class war, their names will be a battle cry, their memories an inspiration, their deaths a debt for which an army of organized workers will exact payment measured by the scales of class justice—workingclass justice.

The workingclass of America and of the rest of the world already has tried the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti. The verdict has been rendered.

It is Guilty.

SENTENCE has been passed—but suspended. Suspended not because we await atonement, for this never will and never can be made.

The sentence passed by the masses upon their masters, the slayers of Sacco and Vanzetti, is suspended while we prepare to carry it out in a way that will leave no doubt of our strength or of our intentions.

But today we begin to prepare. We read aright the program of the capitalists of America. Sacco and Vanzetti are only the first two of our class to enter their death chamber to serve as a warning to other rebels.

IF we save them from death so much the better. It will be a sign that we are not entirely powerless—that we have made a beginning at our task.

If their lives are taken we will build such a monument to them as America has never seen. We will build over their graves a labor movement which will be a fortress inpregnable to the attack of the bloody bands of capitalism, a fortress from which as a center there will go forth the armies of the toiling millions of America to fight and conquer both in the daily and the final struggles a ruling class which lives by robbery bulwarked by murder.

Make the strike to save Sacco and Vanzetti the beginning of a new epoch of organization, militancy and struggle for the American labor and revolutionary movement.

Needle Trade Defense

Sigman Must Be Taught His Last Lesson.

The Sigman raid on the office of the Joint Defense was an attempt to destroy the work of the Committee. The intention to destroy the ammunition depot of the Cloakmakers and Furriers, by stopping the supply of ammunition he thought he would demoralize the ranks of the fighting workers, and in this way break up the Defense. This must be given the answer that it deserves. Sigman must learn that just as he could not destroy the Joint Boards of the Cloakmakers and Furriers Union, so he will not be able to hinder the work of the Joint Defense Committee. The entire progressive movement must rally to the Joint Defense Committee and give it the fullest support in order to deliver the final blow to the Sigman clique.

The Starlight Park Jamboree of August 28th was arranged by the Defense Committee for the purpose of raising enough funds to carry the struggle to a successful conclusion. It must be a 100 per cent success. Starlight Park must be crowded to capacity.

POLA NEGRI

The Polish star is being featured in a new screen play "Barbed Wire" showing at the Broadway Theatre this week.

Two New Noel Coward Plays Scheduled for Early Production

Grace La Rue will be one of the headliners at the Palace this week. Jack Donahue, continues as Master of Ceremonies for a second week. Others on the bill include: Harry Roye and Billie Maye, assisted by Charles Embler and Boyd Davis; Mr. and Mrs. Coburn in a condensed version of "The Better 'Ole" by Bruce Bairnsfather and Arthur Elliott with music by Herman Drewski; Marjorie White and Ed Tierney; George and Jack Dormonde; Gus Fowler and Bob Anderson.

Odette Myrtil; Karyl Norman; Benny Rubin; Will and Gladys Ahearn; Moss and Frye; Kharum; Paul Decker and Company; Les Jardys and Bob Anderson form the vaudeville program at the Albee in Brooklyn.

Moss' Broadway this week is featuring Will J. Wart in his short sketch "The Story." Pat Henning, Hawthorne and Cooke, Ted and Al Waldman are other acts on the bill.

Noel Coward, the English playwright whose play "The Vortex" created quite a sensation two seasons back, is listed for several plays this season. At least two of his plays are certain to be seen here. The Chanin's will produce "The Marquise" and the Actor's Theatre have the other—which is as yet unnamed. Noel Coward will appear in "The Second Man" in London some time in October.

Beatrice Lille, the English Comedienne, who appeared here in the Charlot revues, will be seen in a new musical show, "The Little Darling," which Carles Dillingham will produce. Guy Bolton, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby wrote the book and lyrics.

WORKERS TO DISREGARD LEADERS' SACCO AND VANZETTI TREACHERY

Workers Will Strike Today in Protest Against Massachusetts Murders

Replying to the statement made by socialist and A. F. of L. labor leaders that they would not take part in the Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike tomorrow, Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, said, "We have dedicated our lives to saving Sacco and Vanzetti. We do not think that this is the time to indulge in pettyfogging politics, but the action of John Ryan of the Central Trades and Labor Council and that of the socialists and reactionary labor leaders, so-called, calls for sharp characterization. Because we have called this protest strike in a last minute effort to save Sacco and Vanzetti we have been called 'red'. But those who have refused to answer the strike call have been compelled to show their standard and it is a bilious yellow.

Scores Socialist Action.

"History will record in terms of shame those who like Pontius Pilate, washed their hands and turned our martyred comrades over to the Massachusetts executioner. Tomorrow's strike was called by the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the central national committee for the condemned men. Only the Emergency Committee in New York has the courage to answer this call. It is well that we are on record, for the day is not far distant when those who are betraying Sacco and Vanzetti will stand before the righteous wrath of the emancipated, militant workers of America. We appeal to the individual members of organized labor to ignore their leaders' cowardice and strike on behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti at 3 o'clock today. Claessens, Ryan, Shiplacoff, et al., the Judas Iscariots of the labor movement, will be taken care of adequately by the aroused workers of New York in due time."

Appeals To Labor.

The following appeal is published today in the radical labor daily press which consists of The DAILY WORKER; the Freiheit; Uj Elore, the Hungarian daily; Empros, the Greek daily; The Day; Rossky Golos, the Russian daily; Laisve, the Lithuanian daily; Eteonpian, the Finnish daily; the New York Volkszeitung, with combined circulation of more than 250,000. The appeal reads:

To the workers of New York: Sacco and Vanzetti have placed their lives in your hands. They have appealed to the might of organized labor to save them from the shattering vengeance of the Massachusetts electric chair. They have given seven years of their lives to the world proletariat; they are now about to give their life-blood to the same cause.

Strike!

We appeal to you in this desperate situation to answer our strike call and down tools at three o'clock. Ignore the cringing cowardice of your reactionary leaders who have washed their hands of the life-blood of Sacco and Vanzetti. Demonstrate your humanity, your courage, your devotion to Sacco and Vanzetti. Orders or no orders, down tools at three o'clock today and march on Union Square.

Once again fill this historic meeting place and demonstrate the militant solidarity of the working class. Urge your fellow workers to down tools. See that they answer the last plea of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Socialist Traitors.

The vulture-like Massachusetts courts have given up our comrades to the executioners and now the socialists together with their reactionary labor leaders, true to their historic roles, have piously said, "We have done enough—let them die." Answer this murderous attitude by striking today.

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, when asked if tomorrow's strike would prove successful said, "I have implicit faith in the deep sense of humanity of the workers of New York. In spite of the sabotaging tactics of the socialists and their reactionary friends, I am sure that hundreds of thousands of workers will answer our appeal. Sacco and Vanzetti have ceased to be two unfortunate framed-up workers and have become symbols of the oppressed masses throughout the world. They have stirred tens of millions of European strikers to strike, I am sure that New York labor will not ignore the appeal of Vanzetti and his unfortunate comrade, Sacco, who said, 'Our only hope lies in the united action of the working class.'

"With the disgusting fawning for which the 'pinks' are best known, they have decided to 'respectfully appeal to Governor Fuller.' If appeals had any potency Sacco and Vanzetti would have been freed long ago. But this is not a question of appeals or respectful urgings; mass strike action on an international scale is the only salvation for our imprisoned comrades. This is the only way. I am sure the response to our strike call will be splendid."

According to officials of the Emergency Committee the following unions have pledged aid in today's strike and demonstration:

The Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, the Iron and Bronze Workers' Union, the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, the International Labor Defense, the Bakers' Union, the Millinery Workers' Union, the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, the Marine Transport Workers' Union, the Cabinet Makers' Union and 10,000 workers belonging to the International Union of Fur Workers.

The Union Square mass meeting which has been called by the Emergency Committee for 4 o'clock is expected to be the largest demonstration of its kind in the annals of the American labor movement. Miss Baron, secretary of the committee, expects more than 50,000 workers to take part in the demonstration.

Prominent Speakers.

Four speaking stands will be erected to take care of the enormous turnout which attend the demonstration. The following radical speakers will address the meeting: Leonard Abbott, former editor 'Current Opinion"; Richard Brazier; John J. Ballam, National Progressive Textile Committee; August Burckhardt, Protection of Foreign Born Workers; P. Pascal Cosgrove, Amalgamated Food Workers; Pat Devine, organizer New York section, International Labor Defense; Louis Engdahl and William F. Dunne, editors of The DAILY WORKER; Rebecca Grecht; Louis Hyman, manager Joint Board Cloak and Dressmakers' Union; Bishop Paul Jones, Fellowship of Reconciliation; Charles Kiss, editor Uj Elore; Harry Kelly, Modern School; Chares Krumbein; I. Lattimer, manager Suitcase and Bagmakers' Union; I. Liebowitz, assistant manager, Joint Board Furriers' Union; Ludwig Lore editor New York Volkszeitung; Richard B. Moore, organizer American Negro Labor Congress; Moissaye J. Olgin, editor Freiheit; A. Paretz; Luis Quintiliano; A. Ramulglia; Mateo Rico; Jack Stachel; Morris E. Taft, manager Local 41, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; Carlo Tresca, editor Il Martello; I. H. Wagner, president, International Students Organization.

Also James Walsh, leader of last year's traction strike; W. W. Weinstone, secretary District 2, N. Y. Workers (Communist) Party; Bert Wolfe, director Workers' School; Rose Wortis, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Local 22; Ben Gold, manager Joint Board Furriers' Union; Irving Potash, International Furriers' Union; Otto Huiswood, Negro Congress; Ben Lifshitz, secretary Jewish Federation, W. P.; Melech Epstein, editor Freiheit; Shachne Epstein, editor Freiheit; Chester A. Bixby, Fur Workers' Protective Union; Anthony Bimba, editor Lajsve; Alexander Trachtenburg; Harry M. Wicks, assistant editor DAILY WORKER; Louis Bau, Photographers' Union; Kate Gitlow, executive United Council, Workingclass Housewives; Rose Baron, secretary Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee; Rose Pesotto; N. Napoli, editor Il Rose Pesotto;; N. Napoli, F. Coco, editors Il Lavoratore; F. Camardo.

Republican Protests.

In eloquent reply to those reactionaries who insist that all the actions of the Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers have been red propagandists is the following statement from a good republican and conservative, editor of a well-known monthly periodical:

Dr. Henry Knight Miller, editor and publisher of "Psychology," a monthly publication with over three hundred thousand readers, today sent the following telegram to President Coolidge, he informed Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee:

Denounces Execution.

"I am neither an anarchist nor a Communist, but a Yankee and a republican, both paternal and maternal dating back to Mayflower days. I feel that Sacco and Vanzetti have been condemned at the bar of justice and are being ruthlessly put to death by the state. There is a strong presumption of miscarriage of justice in their case. In behalf of three hundred thousand readers of our magazine I urge you to intervene to save our fair country from the impending blot of shame."

Arthur Howland, managing editor of the same publication, said to Miss Baron, "It has often been said that if Jesus of Nazareth came back to earth he would be crucified again. From my personal knowledge of Vanzetti's character I am convinced that it is precisely this kind of tragedy that is about to be enacted now. So far as his guilt is concerned I am firmly convinced that both he and Sacco are as completely innocent of the crime as that I myself am.

"I am afraid there is little hope that the impending tragedy can be averted but the intervening moments should be spent in every concentrated form of activity on the part of all lovers of humanity that the lives of these noble and self-forgetful men shall not be sacrificed."

To All Fur Workers in the Shops of the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Fur Trimmnig Association, and Independent Shops

Our brothers, Niepla Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, after their years of torture by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts, are now close to their doom. Nothing can save them from death except a demonstration of protest from the united ranks of the workers.

Sacco and Vanzetti look to you to raise such a cry of indignation that the officials will not dare to kill them. You must make your mighty protest today. This is your last chance. Tomorrow it will be too late.

Strike today, at 3 o'clock, and come with your fellow-workers to Union Square at 4 p. m. to take part in a mighty mass meeting of protest. Join with all workers thruout the world in striking against the attempt of the state of Massachusetts to murder Sacco and Vanzetti.

Every fur worker should be at Union Square to raise his voice in protest. SACCO AND VANZETTI MUST BE SAVED! STRIKE TODAY FOR THEIR FREEDOM!

JOINT BOARD FURRIERS' UNION.
B. GOLD, Manager.

SHIPLACOFF'S UNION TAX IS EXPOSED BY HELPERS BELONGING TO ORGANIZATION

(Statement by a Group of Helpers.)

On August 16th an article by A. I. Shiplacoff, manager of the International Pocketbook Workers' Union, appeared in the Jewish Daily "Forward" where he slanders the Jewish "Freiheit" and "The Day," because these two newspapers dared to expose to the workers of our trade the manner in which the "great chief" attempted to smuggle thru a $30 tax for the helpers and a $60 tax for the mechanics.

Among the many lying statements found in Shiplacoff's article one has to be answered. He states that the union won a minimum scale of $30 per week for the helpers. We declare that tho it is true that the new agreement includes such a clause concerning a minimum scale for helpers our situation is very little better than before, for the following reasons:

Conditions Almost the Same.

1. The minimum scale is only for pocketbook helpers and even for them the minimum has become the maximum.

2. Many helpers received $30 per week and sometimes more during the busy season, even before this agreement came into effect.

3. Most of the helpers have been in the trade for 5 or 6 years and are good mechanics. $30 per week for these helpers is a crime, for a great number of them are married and such a scale is nothing less than starvation wages.

4. The non-classified helpers, such as general helpers, packers, examiners and trimmers, who make up the largest part of the section receive no protection at all, for the agreement ignores them completely.

Bosses Take Advantage.

The employers take advantage of the fact that the above enumerated class of helpers who are not protected by the agreement to reduce the guaranteed minimum scale of the classified helpers. Instead of calling upon the union for classified helpers the bosses call for non-classified help. In this way the minimum scale becomes a dead letter.

5. The employers look upon the helpers as an inferior class of workers and exploit them in the worst possible manner. The officials have the same attitude towards the helpers as the bosses and treat us in a most humiliating manner.

6. The office takes little interest to understand and protect the interests of the helpers. At a time when many helpers are jobless the office does nothing to prevent the bosses from taking up boys and girls from the street, contrary to the agreement, under the pretext that they only need general help. Thus the wage standards of the helpers who work in the trade for years are reduced.

7. The point in the agreement calling for the abolition of the system of two helpers to one pocketbook maker which aimed to improve the conditions of the helpers as well as the pocketbook makers is not being carried out. If this were done it would make it possible for a large portion of the helpers, who are in the trade for years, to become mechanics and thus enable them to make a living wage.

Made No Attempt.

The officials of our union have never made the least attempt to enforce this point. On the contrary, the officialdom put obstacles in the way of those members who insisted upon the enforcement of the above clause. The officials went so far as to depose the progressive pocketbook makers' committee in a most scandalous manner for the "sin" of attempting to enforce the point in the agreement calling for one helper to one pocketbook maker. The officialdom not only deposed the committee, but suspended all the members of the committee from the union.

Our officials think that the helpers, who are mostly young workers can easily be ignored. But when it comes to collecting dues and levying taxes upon us, then the interest of the office grows and grows in ever larger proportion.

The International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee has issued an appeal to all the workers in New York to cooperate in the strike and demonstration planned for today.

The committee also urges all who can go to Boston and participate in the protest to be staged there against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The International Sacco-Vanzetti Commitee is working jointly with all other committees regardless of affiliation in the fight to save the two condemned men.

An Answer to Senator Borah.

The International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee reports to Senator Borah's statement to Jane Addams that the senator from Idaho is running true to form, referring to his part as special prosecutor in the attempted frame-up against Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone, twenty years ago.

The committee brands Borah's condemnation of Sacco and Vanzetti as typical of a man who owes his political position to the mining interests of north-west. According to this committee Borah has pilloried himself as a traitor to the cause of human liberty and has placed himself in the same category as Mr. Ralph Easley, of the National Civic Federation Committee.

PARIS IS ARMED CAMP AS WORKERS PROTEST MURDER

Fixed Bayonets Before American Embassy

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The streets leading to the American embassy today took on the aspect of an armed camp. Infantrymen with trench helmets and fixed bayonets and mounted republican guards reinforced the police force guarding all approaches to the embassy as a precaution against any Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations.

A group of more than three pedestrians is not allowed to pass together, and all suspicious individuals are required to show their identity. No loitering is permitted. Troops also are guarding the chancellory, while the consulate is watched by 50 policemen. There are more than 500 troops and police on active guard, while ample reinforcements are in readiness. Police are posted around the statue of Washington and guards around the hotels frequently used by Americans.

Workers Parade.

A mass parade of workers promenaded the boulevard outskirts of Paris and went to attend a demonstration at St. Gervais. The rain and cold did not dampen the ardor of the paraders. Police looked on during the speeches and the display of banners denouncing American imperialism and capitalism.

A screaming headline, "In Paris Representatives of Assassins Being Protected By Police!" is displayed in the Communist newspaper L'Humanite, which is in the forefront of the fight for the condemned men.

L'Humanite Editorial.

Editorially, L'Humanite says:

"The French government is in complicity with the American assassins in guarding the embassy in Paris night and day. But these precautions are in vain; the imperious voice of the proletariat must be heard."

There has been a renewal of the threats against the American Legion convention and the French government and police are not overlooking any step to protect the Legionnaires from the enraged French proletariat.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

BREAK UP BOSTON SACCO, VANZETTI DEMONSTRATION

Several Hurt; Four Are Arrested

(Special to the Daily Worker).

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Mounted police drove 50,000 people off the Boston Common this afternoon where they were discussing the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The appearance of ten pickets with placards was the signal for the police offensive. Riding their horses into the crowd, consisting mostly of workers, the local cossacks injured several people, one man having to receive medical attention.

Four workers were also arrested. They were: Polly Holliday, Clarina Michaelson, Wm. Patterson and Morris Freeman.

The American Legion which has been boasting for the last few days that they would stop all Sacco-Vanzetti gatherings did not appear as announced. Apparently when they saw the determined meeting of workers they slunk away.

Arrived Early.

The workers poured into the Common early today. By 3.30 p. m. over 4,000 were present. Police and detectives constantly mingled with the crowd awaiting for orders to break up the demonstration. The appearance of the placard carriers was the opportunity the police were waiting for. Charging brutally, the mounted police knocked several people down. All the placards were confiscated and destroyed. The rest of the crowd was then driven off the Common.

So the workers were forced to hold their meeting in a hall which was heavily guarded.

In fact the town is under complete guard today. The guards around the Federal Building are armel with long rifles and have bayonets hung to their cartridge belts.

All other public buildings are similarly guarded.

The Boston police have gone on 24-hour duty, the riot squad has been remobilized, National Guardsmen are ready for call and state troopers are on the job.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Funeral services for the late J. Ogden Armour, head of the internationally known packing firm of Armour & Company, which is famous for killing U. S. soldiers with "embalmed beef," will be held here Tuesday, Aug. 30th, it was announced today following receipt of a cablegram from his widow in London.

GERMAN CO-OPERATIVE RECTIFIES ERROR IN FIGHT WITH REACTIONARIES

DRESDEN, Aug. 21.—Considerable protests have been made by several proletarian organizations because of the campaign of the cooperative bureaucrats against the Communist Executive of Schwarzenberg and the proposal made at the cooperative conference in Dresden for expulsion of the society because of alleged infringement of the statutes and of the cooperative law. Up to the middle of March, about 40 such protests had been lodged, most of them adopted unanimously at cooperative, trade union and other meetings inclusive of Social Democratic and non-Party votes.

As the managing committee of the society realized that the expulsion question had aroused the indignation even of Social Democratic members against the committee of the auditing society and as it was afraid that the general discontent would find expression also at the Dresden Congress, it resorted to a crafty move in order to achieve its aims by other means.

It is well-known that the authorities adopted, apart from their disciplinary measures against the troublesome Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society, the methods of economic strangulation by preventing the rapidly developing society from obtaining much needed long-term credits. When the authorities noticed that the expulsion methods would not come off so easily and would probably lower their prestige, they informed the managing committee of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative that they did not intend to be relentless in regard to the credit question and that they would also withdraw the expulsion proposal, provided that the managing committee and the board of directors would declare their readiness to adopt a different attitude and would enter into commensurate obligations for the future.

Unfortunately the management of the auditing society has been successful with this trick. The responsible comrades in the managing committee who had the further smooth development of the society at heart, thought that the interests of the members made this sacrifice necessary. They signed the declaration which was demanded of them, but it must be said that, in the history of the central society, this declaration is the most preposterous thing which the authorities dared to proposed to the opposition. It is admitted in the declaration that the managing committee and the board of directors have infringed the statutes and the cooperative law and that they have done harm to the German Consumers' Cooperative movement, all of which justified the expulsion proposal. The managing committee and the board of directors of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society undertake in the declaration:

"To expel those members of their society who make the cooperative an organ of class struggle, the commissariat of strike and rebellion, who want to spend the funds of the cooperative for party political aims and act up to these intentions within the cooperative organization. The managing committee and the board of directors also undertake to see to it that in future neither rank and file members nor members of the managing committee and the board of directors mix up (!) their cooperative with the internal affairs of other consumers' cooperatives."

The managing committee and the board of directors demand expulsion for any members of the society who do not act up to this undertaking. The character of this declaration shows clearly what the authorities were aiming at. They were afraid (and the growing protest movement increased their fear) that the class-conscious and at the same time business-like executive of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society would set an example to other consumers' cooperative societies. Therefore their wish was to isolate the society and, over and above this, to discredit and put in the wrong its executive ("breach of solemn promises"), in order that, on the strength of this, the Communist executive could be overthrown, or that the expulsion could take place on a subsequent occasion under more favourable conditions.

That responsible comrades in Schwarzenberg signed this declaration must be deeply regretted. It shows that they completely lost their heads and their action cannot be justified even on the assumption that they meant to act in the interests of the members. The actual result of such an undertaking is: that the authorities were encouraged in their demagogic game, whereas there is no guarantee whatever that the authorities will keep their very vague promises in regards to credits. But above all, this step of the Schwarzenberg comrades is a very serious political error in the entire struggle between the proletarian opposition and the reactionary authorities. There is no doubt whatever that the position of the entire opposition throughout the Reich has been made much more difficult. Moreover, one must also be aware that this kind of thing will bring confusion into the vacillating sections of the opposition.

Signed For Sake of Unity.

Another error consists in the fact that the declaration was signed without previously appealing to the membership. It was only after the signing of the declaration on April 3rd, that a delegate meeting took place at which the business manager Ertinger made it known that the declaration had been signed, and explained what had induced the executive of the society to sign. It was done to preserve unity in the cooperative movement and also in order not to put obstacles in the way of the development of the consumers' cooperative society. Comrade Ertinger wound up his report with the promise that the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society would be as before the "pioneer of a proletarian cooperative policy." This slogan was greeted with applause by the meeting, whereas the extortionist attitude of the Executive of the Saxon Society was severely condemned. A considerable number of delegates and functionaries made a declaration expressing their joint protest. In this declaration it is said that, not the managing committee of the cooperative, but the executive of the cooperative society, has done harm to the consumers' cooperative movement. The declaration severely condemns the means and methods by which the undertaking had been obtained. The declaration concludes as follows:

"The members of the delegate meeting emphasise that in view of the success achieved through our proletarian cooperative policy, the only thing which matters is: to continue through our consumers' cooperative society a policy which truly serves proletarian interests."

Demand Soviet Relations.

Moreover proceedings at the meeting show that the bureaucrats did not succeed in shaking the confidence of the Social Democratic and non-Party members in the Communist leadership of the consumers' cooperative. Several proposals for the Congress in Essen were adopted Unanimously and also a resolution welcoming the invitation addressed by the Centrosoyuz to the central society to despatch of a delegation to the Soviet Union and demanding, particularly in view of the dangerous imperialist war policy of the west Eureopean powers directed against Soviet Russia, acceptance of this invitation and immediate initiation of close and friendly relations with the cooperative movement of Soviet Russia. The resolution also demands that the various local organizations should be invited to participate in such a delegation.

The result of the expulsion action against Schwarzenberg has been: that the attention of the whole Party has been drawn more than ever before to questions of cooperative work. The protest campaign led by the Party had remarkable successes from the very beginning. It was given emphasis through a protest resolution of the Party Congress in Essen which was addressed to all proletarian members of cooperatives and called upon them to oppose the split activity of the cooperative bureaucrats. The withdrawal of the expulsion proposal has certainly brought a change in the situation, but not a real change, as the incidents which accompanied this withdrawal showed clearer than ever before the anti-proletarian attitude of the authorities. Therefore the Party continues its campaign with the intention of mobilizing proletarian members of cooperatives against the reactionary policy of the authorities and their dictatorial and extortionist methods. All these matters are bound to play an important role at the conferences and also at the Congress in Essen.

LANDOWNERS IN CHINA

By EARL BROWDER.

ARTICLE I.

There is a general ignorance in Western countries about the conditions of land-ownership in China. Two opposing misconceptions prevail, which make it difficult to understand the peasant movement in China. These must first be disposed of.

The oldest of these misconceptions is, that there is no private ownership of land, or that such private ownership is recent, arising only since the overthrow of the Manchus (1911). Such well-known writers on China as MacGowan, Williams, Symon, Simcox, Douglas, deal with the land as exclusively the property of the head of the government, who is "the only landlord." Going to another extreme, a current conception is that China is "a land where the peasants already own most of the soil" (see Newsletter No. 8, of American Committee for Justice to China, July 28, 1927). Both of these ideas are far from the truth.

What, then, is the actual situation in its broad outlines? I will characterize the status of land-ownership and occupancy in a series of points, and then elaborate each of them with actual figures of investigations.

1. Private and absolute ownership of land is the basis of the Chinese landholding system. So-called public lands are largely based upon private ownership (by family, clan, etc.)

2. A very large proportion of the privately-owned land is in the hands of a relatively small class of landbasis of the Chinese land-hloding system. So-called public land is also cultivated by landless peasants. Thus the preponderant element in agricultural production is the tenant (varying in different provinces from 40 per cent to 80 per cent), and the agrarian question is dominated by the landlord-peasant relationship.

3. Peasant economics have been dragged under the influence of world markets, specialized cultivations, etc., but social and legal relationships are still dominated by feudal and semi-feudal customs, and institutions.

4. The unprogressive technique of agriculture (practically unchanged for thousands of years) produces an exceedingly minute division of units of cultivation. The tremendous pressure of population accentuates this factor, and simultaneously heightens the intensity of cultivation.

5. Out of these factors has grown an exploitation of the masses of peasantry, of a degree unknown in any other land, amounting to 70 or 80 per cent of their produce in the case of the main bulk of tenants or semi-tenants.

Here are the main outlines of the most fundamental question of the Chinese Revolution. It is not yet realized in the West, that it is the peasantry who furnish the main driving force of this revolution; it is quite usual, on the contrary, to read remarks in the American and English press especially, to the effect that the "conservative peasantry" of China will soon put an end to the "Bolshevik" tendencies of the revolution. It will be the purpose of these articles to make clear why it is that while the "Bolshevik" working class in the cities is leading the revolution, yet at the same time it is the "conservative" peasantry which relentlessly drives the revolution on and on, which makes it impossible to find a compromise which will stabilize China short of a thorough-going transformation of its entire economic and social system.

Patriotism and the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By HELEN BLACK.

One thing about the capitalist system, it never lets a money-making chance slip by. Its commercial [illegible] always peeled for opportu[illegible] cash in on every mood, [illegible] event of the moment.

Take the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti for instance. Up near Boston it is an opening for betting. On August 10th, in Roxbury, the odds were heavily against the two doomed men in the morning; but as the day wore on they steadily changed until at 7 p. m. they were 4 to 5 in favor of reprieve. This did not mean, of course, that these bettors hoped for a reprieve. What difference did that make to them? It was just that they were gambling on a stay of execution—and they won. Probably the odds are not so good today since the verdict of the state supreme court came in.

Here in New York, ex-soldiers are making the most of the great world-workers' tragedy in a novel office to office canvas. Armed with credentials from the American Legion they call upon bankers, brokers, manufacturers, and other pillars of our social order.

"I wanted to tell ya about a fund we're raisin' fer the edjacation o' foreigners in this country," says the stalwart legionnaire.

"Ya see ther er 13,000,000 ignorant foreigners right in our midst an' we gotta make good Americans out of 'em. This here Sacco-Vanzetti case shows ya what they are. Tryin' t' interfere with our courts an' law and prevent a couple of wop murderers from gettin' what's comin' to 'em.

"Now we're gonna establish a grist to the mill of a humble book salesman. Sacco and Vanzetti are workers. What other fate have workers anywhere?

What I keep wondering is about that electrocutioner, Robert Elliot of Richmond Hill, L. I.

He has had to stay up in Boston ever since August 10th waiting to kill Sacco and Vanzetti. I wonder whether he is annoyed. I wonder whether he gets paid for waiting, or whether he just gets paid by the job and all this extra delay is costing him money.

Of course his business must be pretty good for he kills for three states—New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. But if he only gets so much a murder, he doesn't want to spend any more time at it then necessary. That's one thing about modern methods of killing, they take less time than the old-fashioned ones; altho they must give much less thrill to the executioner. For instance, just pulling a switch is not very exciting even tho you know it burns a man to death. A hanging took more practice and skill.

One of Mr. Elliot's neighbors out in Richmond Hill told a friend of mine that Sacco and Vanzetti ought to be hanged. They ought to be a public hanging out in front of the City Hall with everybody invited. "That's the way to treat those criminals," says the neighbor.

That's the kind of people who live in Richmond Hill. It's a quiet, middle-class suburb, full of meek white-collar slaves, and very, very respectable. Mr. Elliot's neighbor is quite typical of the community. No wonder Mr. Elliot lives there. He is doubtless much admired.

I can picture him grasping the morning papers and eagerly scanning the pages for murders—"Business, you know my dear; business." Even if its only a bonus on each killing and a flat retainer the rest of the time, Mr. Elliot must relish seeing the numbers mount up. "Cop slays picket"—oh no; that wouldn't mean business. "Man chokes wife"; "Wife slays lover"; "Bandits kill pursers," etc., etc. The times are right for Mr. Elliot, that's certain. In his little suburban cottage he can sit secure; sure that for him there will be no business depression; lazily dreaming of switches and levers and straps and wires.

He's been waiting for this Boston job for a long time. They've kept postponing it year after year. Just nonsense. Sheer spinelessness on the part of the government. The idea of allowing appeals and stays and petitions and all this legal flub-dub! The idea of bringing him up there two weeks ago for the murder and then issuing a reprieve. Why not get the thing over with, He had the chair all ready, everything set; and then they postpone it again.

Well every business has its annoyances. Even killing is not free from cares. Now Mr. Elliot will have to go over the whole electric chair bit by bit again. Try every part of it. Make sure there is no slip-up, no error. Three men to be killed, and it must be done neatly and quickly.

Robert Elliot is sitting in Boston waiting. Workers of the world, will he be allowed to carry out his murderous job?

IS THIS I, OR SACCO AND VANZETTI?

By LEO YURMANN.

(Translation by Joseph N. Katz.)

O, how heavy weighs the day upon my back!
I would become blind,
I would become deaf
And not hear
Insanity colored voices
Of fear and blood. . . .

Always, out of my sleep I shiver!
And my eyes search,
And they dig;
Am I being crucified,
Will I be led bound
Monday midnight
To the last walk, of mine?
Or are these
Sacco and Vanzetti?
Brothers, my brothers!

I do not know!
It seems to me;
I, with death-scorched face,
I, with countless, uncounted,
Tortured deaths,
They lead me Monday midnight
To the murder-instrument, the modern. . . .

My night becomes restless
And red and fully insane;
With feverish visions,
With fearful phantasies, with death
delirium,
Like a raven, ever restless
I break out of my sleep
And cry and shiver.

The day became heavy
And out of all windows betrayal
scoffs at me;
My night, bloody-crying became
And I sit with bloody eyes upon my bed
And cry and shiver:
Is this I, or Sacco and Vanzetti? . . .

No, this is, the night answers:
This is, you and they,
And they and you
And the whole world,
The whole world,
The whole world!

WOMEN

WOMEN DRIVEN TO WORK AS AVERAGE AMERICAN WORKER'S WAGES FALL FAR SHORT OF NEEDS

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press).

How far American wages fall short of enabling the workers to support their families in decency and comfort can be computed with considerable accuracy from the U. S. department of labor's publication of cost of living figures for June, 1927. Using these figures to bring the original department of labor minimum budget up-to-date, we find the joker in all the employer blah about improvement in the living standards of American workers. There has been a gain, but the start was made at so low a standard that the average worker family still falls far short of the decent living which the country's productive capacity could provide.

High Cost of Living.

In August 1919, according to the department, a worker family including 3 children required at least $2,262.47 a year to maintain itself in health and reasonable comfort. The recent report shows that since that date the cost of the budget items has changed to such an extent that $2,188 is required to maintain the same standard today.

The average expenditures necessary to meet the major items of this health and comfort budget for a family with 3 children on the basis of costs in June 1927 were:

Dept. of Labor Minimum Budget	Per Year	Per Week
Food	$652	$12.53
Clothing	364	7.00
Rent	412	7.92
Fuel and light	155	2.98
House furnishings	60	1.15
Miscellaneous	545	10.47
Total	$2,188	$42.02

Women Forced to Work.

This means that the average father employed in industry should have at least $42 a week throughout the year. If he can't earn it himself the mother of his children must become a wage earner to supplement his inadequate earnings or his family will experience the rigors of poverty.

To assure this income the average male factory worker must average at least $41 for a full week's work to cover inevitable loss of earnings through sickness, layoffs and part time. The building trades worker, who can count on only about 75 per cent of full time work throughout the year, must make at least $56 a week when working. Nor will these earnings make any provision for the purchase of new necessaries and comforts added to the normal family standard by the progress of industry since 1919.

Wages Short of Needs.

If the wages paid in Illinois are typical, male workers in this country fall at least 30 per cent short of being able to provide a family with this minimum standard of health and comfort. The average male worker in Illinois factories, according to the state department of labor, makes about $31.50 a week. In the building industry the average is $44.27. For leading manufacturing industries the averages are iron and steel $31.30, cars and locomotives $31.61, agricultural implements $28.76, boots and shoes $25.08, oil $32.36, job printing $42.85, men's clothing $34.10 and meat packing $27.32.

A 40 per cent increase all along the line would hardly bring these earnings up to the department's standard. Yet they are the wages of men with every right to support a family in accordance with the standards amply possible with American industry.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

FARMERS

TO ORGANIZATIONS AND LEADERS OF TOILING FARMERS AND PEASANTS OF ALL COUNTRIES

Dear Friends: We are addressing this letter to you to join us in the struggle against the preparation for a new world war.

Recent events have shown that the menace of a world war is closer and more direct than it might have seemed some time ago. We have witnessed a number of open acts provocating armed conflicts.

No one who is sincerely interested in preserving peace can now close his eyes to these facts. It is not sufficient to call oneself an opponent to war without at the same time doing something definite against the real menace of war. It is not enough to declare oneself in favor of peace and to give vent to general slogans about the brotherhood of nations, and meanwhile to support the imperialists who are carrying on war against the revolutionary liberation movement of the peasants and workers and all toiling masses of China, and feverishly preparing a military invasion of the U. S. S. R. The struggle for peace must not be a struggle of words, but of action. All real friends of peace, all those who are really opposed to war, must at the present time unite on the basis of a domomn platform of struggle against the war dangers.

United Front.

Against the united front of the enemies of the toiling masses—the organizers of war, let us establish a united anti-war front of the toiling farmers and peasants of the world. Let us join the ranks of the working-class and those of its organizations which are really fighting against the threatening war. Let us strengthen in the struggle the fraternal alliance of the workers and farmers and peasants throughout the world. No matter how different the path along which the various farmers' and peasants' organizations and their leaders want to serve the cause and the interests of the farmers and peasants, no matter how different their fighting methods may be, in the face of the menace of war and in the struggle against it the extension and consolidation of the international unity of the toiling farmers and peasants of the world must become the most essential task of all the laboring farmer and peasant organizations and all real defenders of the farmers' and peasants' interests.

Reach Understading.

The Farmers' and Peasants' International Council proposes to the organizations and leaders of the toiling farmers and peasants of all countries to come to an understading among each other concerning joint measures and a common program of action against the menacing world war. It is necessary to prepare joint campaigns among the broad masses of farmers and peasants, it is necessary to disclose the instigators of the new world war by means of joint manifestoes and leaflets, by means of issuing common pamphlets, and adopting anti-war resolutions at the farmers' and peasants' meetings, by means of manifestations and demonstrations, by means of convening various district and national anti-war farmers' and peasants' conferences, by appearing before all representative institutions (parliament, municipal, institutions, etc.), focussing the attention of the masses to the horrors which will result from such a war.

Unite to Struggle.

We call upon you to begin and carry on a most energetic campaign under the slogans: "Down with the instigators of war—the landlords and capitalists!" "Hands off China and the U. S. S. R.", "Farmers and workers of all countries, unite in the struggle against war!"

In order to lend the campaign a concrete character, and to rally the broad masses of farmers and peasants, it is necessary to link up these slogans with the everyday needs of the farmers and peasants. In every individual district it is necessary to combine this campaign with local conditions.

The anti-war struggle must be carried on not only by the farmers' and peasants' organizations and leaders, but must also draw in the farmers and peasants' masses. For this reason we propose to set up anti-war farmer and peasant committees and to unify their activities.

Help Offered.

The Farmers' and Peasants' International Council will help in every way any of your undertakings for the preservation of peace. We are ready to discuss all questions and proposals concerning the intensification of the anti-war struggle with all organizations and leaders of the farmers' and peasants' organizations made by them.

All farmers' and peasants' organizations and their leaders must at the same time carefully consider the question how to unite the national anti-war struggle of workers and peasants with this movement in other countries.

Dear friends, the Farmers' and Peasants' International Council calls upon you to join hands with the workingclass in the struggle against the preparation for a new war which will injure the toiling farmers and peasants more than anyone else. We therefore ask all the defenders of the farmers and peasants interests to express their opinion on the issues we touched upon here.

Awaiting your reply.

Yours fraternally,

For the Presidium of the Farmers' and Peasants' International Council.

FOREIGN BORN WORKERS' COUNCIL TELEGRAPH FULLER FOR NEW TRIAL

The National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, with offices at 41 Union Square, New York City, makes public the following telegram sent to Governor Fuller August 19th:

In the name of millions of foreign born workers in this country we ask you to grant an unconditional pardon to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Signed: NINA SAMORODIN, Executive Secretary,
National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

The National Council has the support of millions of workers in this country of both foreign and American birth. "It is our firm belief," states the secretary of the council, "that Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered the tortures of death many times over during the seven years of imprisonment." The secretary further states, "At this time when the eyes of the millions of foreign born in this country are fixed upon the government's anti-alien policy which expresses itself in the effort to adopt anti-alien legislation as registration, etc., this case of Sacco and Vanzetti only tends to increase the belief that the persecution of Sacco and Vanzetti is due to the fact that they are of foreign birth.

"We asked the governor as early as last April that a new trial be given Sacco and Vanzetti and that the Department of Justice records be made available for that trial. At this hour, however, when all possibilities for a new trial seem to be exhausted we asked the governor for executive clemency for the two condemned men in ordrer that the minds of all those who have interested themselves in this case may be set at peace and that our belief in the justice of the American government may be restored to us once more."

Son of Feng Denounces Father.

MOSCOW, Aug. 21.—Pravda, organ of the All Union Communist Party, publishes a letter to the paper from Feng Chong-kuo, the son of Feng Yu-hsiang. This is a copy of a letter which the young man has sent to his father, and it points out that, knowing his father's opportunism and obstinate, ambitious character, he is not surprised to hear that Feng Yu-hsiang has passed over to the side of counter-revolution. He writes:

"Having now thrown off the mask, and not only refusing to defend the interests of the working class and peasantry, but even openly cooperating with and forming a bloc with Chiang Kai-shek, the hangman of the workers and peasants, you have published an impudent declaration alleging that merchants, dealers and owners of industrial enterprises are oppressed by the workmen and peasants of Wuhan territory.

Should Support Workers.

"All this is nonsense. The time has not come yet for the Chinese workmen and peasantry to 'oppress' the capitalists, merchants and landlords.

"But even if the workmen and peasantry really oppressed the manufacturers, gentry and landlords, you ought to adopt the point of view that the interests of the majority of the population support the workers' and peasants' purpose of throwing off the exploiters.

"Being revolutionary, I take into consideration only the interests of the revolution and not the mutual relation of father and son, and therefore I am bound to break off all connection with a counter-revolutionary father.

"Henceforth I will regard you just as Chang Tso-lin, Chiang Kai-shek and other counter-revolutionaries and fight with the greatest energy against my own father. These are my last words to a counter-revolutionary father."

Competition of Hangmen.

Pravad points out that there is now observed in China real competition between hangmen of different denominations and different tendencies. The laurels secured by Chiang Kai-shek from merchants and foreign imperialists fo his persecution of workers and peasants disturb the sleep of Wang Ching-wei, who is striving by mass execution to outdo such experienced robbers and murderers and hangmen as Chiang Tso-lin and Chiang Kai-shek.

The workers of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, says Pravda, cannot remain indifferent thru this orgy of cruelty and vileness now going on in China.

All Rally for Defense!

Even in the midst of the struggles against the death and for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, it is necessary to proceed with a campaign for the defense of the Chinese revolutionaries.

The struggle against the American hangmen has assumed considerable proportions despite the sabotage by reformist leaders, and this shows that proletarian solidarity is no "Communist invention" but lives in the hearts of millions of honest proletarians in all parts of the earth.

Fight Harder.

But it is necessary to carry on a still more stringent fight against the hangmen's terror in China, especially now when the Kuomintang leaders directed by Wang Ching-wei are forming elaborate plans for the most violent struggle against the Communist Party.

The working classes of the world, says Pravda, would be guilty of the greatest crime if they did not hasten to help detachments of the workmen and peasants, who are not only fighting in China their own enemies, but the enemies of all workers.

Revolt Among Troops.

Pravda announces that reports are continually being received from China, of the greatest unrest among the hangmen's troops, who are obliged to disarm their own military forces for their sympathy expressed towards the revolutionaries. This unrest will certainly increase when the working classes of the whole world loudly raise their voices against the traitors and bandits attempting to extinguish the revolutionary flames with blood.

The heroic young Communist Party of China is holding high the banner of struggle for China's independence and for the unity of the Chinese people, for a workers' and peasants' China. It must be surrounded by a wall of sympathy from the working masses of all the world.

Earl R. Browder
The most authoritative account in English of recent events in China.

Browder has just returned from six months in China, as a member of the International Workers' Delegation, during which he visited over 40 cities and towns, during the period of the Chiang Kai-shek split. He spent two months in Hankow, in close touch with the leaders of the Kuomintang, the trade unions, the peasants, and other revolutionary bodies. He was also a delegate to the Pan-Pacific Trade Union Conference, and was the secretary of that body. He tells a graphic and authoritative story of the beginnings of the Civil War now raging in Nationalist China. The pamphlet has many documents, photos, etc.

Latvian Prisoners Go On a Hunger Strike

RIGA, Latvia, Aug. 21.—All the political prisoners of the Central and Terminal prisons of Riga are continuing their long hunger-strike against the unspeakable conditions obtaining in the jails. The political prisoners who are kept in the lowest level of damp, unsanitary cells are demanding the right to read books, to see visitors oftener than every two months, and to buy other foods than the supstances served by the prison officials. The Lettish bourgeois press is doing all in its power to discredit the hunger strike.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

CHICAGO CROWDS GAS BOMBED BY MOUNTED POLICE

Cops Attack Sacco and Vanzetti Mass Meeting

By THURBER LEWIS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 21.—Fully half of Chicago's police, motor and foot, concentrated at or in the vicinity of Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren St., Friday night and dispersed with hickory clubs and tear gar bombs several thousand workers who gathered for a scheduled protest in that hall against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Not content with keeping the streets sparse with demonstrators by frequent charges, by running motor cycles on the sidewalks and by explosions of tear gas—squad cars, racing up and down nearby thorofares, frequently stopped long enough to allow plain clothes men to leap out and arrest workers recognized as participating in previous protests. George Maurer, Secretary of the Chicago International Labor Defense, Aurora D'Angelo, arrested in the protest parade of last week and ten others were taken to various district stations and held incommunicado over night. Efforts to locate them failed until noon Saturday when they were found to be booked on high bail for "inciting to riot."

Bunk About "Mobs."

Local newspapers and national press services are carrying stories of "surging mobs" and "girl riot leaders." They are also featuring the explosion of two bombs, one in a restaurant, obviously the result of a trade war and the other in a candy company, probably for the same reason. These are openly proclaimed to be 'highly suspected" of being the work of Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers. As for the "mobs," it is many years since such an impressive police force has been mobilized in one place in this city. Not for ten seconds were more than five people allowed to come together in the neighborhood of the hall. The doors at both entrances, on Van Buren and on Ashland were guarded by a double row of uniformed and plain clothes officers.

The violent suppression of all right of free speech and assemblage that is confronting the radical and labor movement of the city in the present agitation for Sacco and Vanzetti is unprecedented since the famous raids of 1919.

Another attempt to voice a protest against the legal murder of the two Massachusetts workers will be made on Monday under the leadership of International Labor Defense when a demonstration will gather at Vernon Park, Sibley and Taylor Sts., at 3 p. m.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

Police Arrest Greeks As Fear of Workers' Power Seizes Bosses

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Two Greek workers, Economos and Hogelias, one of whom is a representative of the daily Greek paper, Empros of New York, were arrested without warrant this morning by Boston police, upon their arrival from New York. After being illegally detained and brought to the police station, they were cross-examined by the police officer and later by the representative from the State house.

In questioning, the police were particularly interested to secure a statement of the use of force in the revolutionary struggle against capitalism. The question of whether or not the detained workers believed in the use of force was asked about 15 times. Finally, the representative from the State house wanted to know what would the workers do if they were in majority and were attacked by the minority, to which Comrade Hogelias, the representative of the Greek paper, replied, "Once the workers come to power and are in majority they would not stand with folded arms and allow themselves to be attacked."

The fright and imagination of the police officer further prompted the question as to whether or not there exists an underground Communist Party. The police have searched the bag and also the shipment of books and were somewhat perplexed and alarmed at seeing the books on Leninism on Organization, Elements of Political Education, and the Building Up of Socialism. They were also alarmed at seeing a large number of leaflets, used for the purpose of announcing mass meeting.

Nick Economos was asked what he was doing in Boston and in reply he frankly stated that he comes to Boston after losing his job in New York, on account of participation in the Sacco-Vanzetti strike. On further questioning Comrade Economos stated that if the strike should be called on any other time he would not hesitate to join.

It was evident that the chief reason for the arrest is the apprehension of the police regarding the possible strike and their desire to prevent this strike by terrorizing the workers. However, this terrorism does not stop the determination of Boston workers, who are meeting tonight at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Hall, to consider the calling of a general strike for Monday.

THOUSANDS OF SOVIET WORKERS DEMAND THAT SACCO AND VANZETTI BE FREED

MOSCOW, AUG 21.—The confirmation of the death sentence on Sacco and Vanzetti has caused great indignation amongst the workers of the Soviet Union. A tremendous movement of protest has commenced all over the U. S. S. R. Protest meetings in which tens of thousands of workers took part have been called in Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov and other towns against this terrible scandal of bourgeois class justice. The resolutions adopted at these protest meetings of the toilers of the Soviet Union appeal to the workers of the world to unite their powers to prevent the vicious and brutal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and to force the American bourgeoisie to abolish the bestial sentence. Collections were made in many factories for the victims of capitalist terror.

WHOLE WORLD PROTESTS TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI FROM DEATH

Opinion All Over Globe Demands Reversal of Class Decision

NEW STRIKES IN ARGENTINE.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 21.—A manifesto calling upon workers to strike on Monday in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti was issued today by the Argentina Regional Confederation, and a similar call is expected following Sunday's meeting of the Syndical Union of Argentina to whom the police denied a permit for a protest demonstration.

This action followed the decision of the Massachusetts Supreme Court and also as a result of this rejection of appeal an added guard was placed at the various American institutions in this city.

GERMAN PROTEST.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—The first radical meeting ever held in the former House of Lords for the Kingdom of Prussia, took place tonight as part of the nation-wide protest against the Supreme Court decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Never before had the red flag adorned these walls for the building is denied for political party meetings.

Spontaneous demonstrations of protest were held also in Hamburg, Cologne, Hanover, Leipsic, Halle and other cities. At every gathering the speeches appealed for pardon and branded the action of the Massachusetts courts as torture worse than the middle ages.

This charge of torture is voiced in the protest sent to the American Embassy by the Berlin trade unions, and it is a charge repeated by many of the conservative Berlin papers. Throughout the whole German press there is almost unanimous condemnation of the latest step in this "most barbaric judicial murder."

SWISS TO BOYCOTT U. S. GOODS.

GENEVA, Aug. 21.—A boycott of American products, especially films, is to be advocated by a special propaganda committee appointed tonight at a meeting held in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti in one of the city's largest halls.

The gathering, addressed by trade unionists and radicals, also approved the despatch to Governor Fuller of a cablegram demanding the release of the two doomed workers.

The American embassy is under special armed guard following the calling of demonstrations in all the principal cities. The authorities show every evidence of fight at the bitter attitude of the Swiss workers.

BRITISH MINERS DEMAND LIBERATION.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The British Miners' Federation, thru its president, Herbert Smith, issued a statement today "protesting against the miscarriage of justice in the Sacco-Vanzetti trial and urging their liberation." A denunciation of the Supreme Court's action was also published by Ben Tillett of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress.

Protests came from H. G. Wells, John Galsworthy, Chairman F. O. Roberts of the British Labor Party, and all liberal and radical papers. Officials of the British trade unions sent a cablegram to Governor Fuller urging him to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Communists are planning a mass demonstration outside the American Consulate on Monday night, and a great protest meeting in Hyde Park.

A cablegram imploring Governor Fuller to save Sacco and Vanzetti was sent today by four British churchmen, who made their plea "In the name of Christ."

ROCHESTER LAWYERS DEMAND STAY.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 21.—A group of prominent lawyers of this city today telegraphed President Coolidge and Governor Fuller urging "commutation of sentence or stay until all doubts are absolved" concerning the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

They state that "substantion legal opinion here holds that Sacco and Vanzetti have not had a fair trial."

MACHINISTS DEMAND LIBERATION.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Lodge 478 of the International Association of Machinists has passed resolutions denouncing the death sentence which the corrupt Supreme Court of Massachusetts has sustained against Sacco and Vanzetti and demands their immediate liberation. A copy of the resolution has been forwarded to Governor Fuller.

All Soviet Union Makes Ready 10th Anniversary

MOSCOW, August 21.—The presidium of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Socailist Soviet Republics has decided to convene on October tenth in Moscow a congress of women workers and peasants, members of village and city Soviets.

Among the questions on the agenda are the position of women workers and peasants in the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the tenth anniversary of the October revolution, work in the Soviets and participation therein of women workers and peasants.

From all parts of the U. S. S. R. arrive news concerning the active preparation for the celebration of the tenth anniversay of the October revolution. There are being prepared exhibitions of the reconstruction of industry and agriculture during these ten years, particularly agronomic exhibitions in the different village districts.

"Stop The Executioner" Says District Two

the general strike called for August 22.

Strike Anyway.

We appeal to the workers of all the labor organizations of New York City and environs to frustrate this treacherous attempt of the trade union bureaucrats and socialists. The workers must make this day of August 22 the greatest labor demonstration in the history of the United States. Only thru their own power, thru their vigorous determination, thru a united effort of millions can they halt the hands of the murderers and save Sacco and Vanzetti.

We know that together with the workers of America the workers of the world will on August 22 protest in collossal masses against the proposed legal murder. Let us join hands with our fellow-workers in other countries. Let us make this day a day of growing strength of the working class.

Comrades, fellow-workers, in the name of our class interests, in the name of our liberation, in the name of our class victims, Sacco and Vanzetti, we appeal to you!

Down tools at 3 p. m. Monday, August 22!

On to Union Square to the huge mass demonstration at 4 o'clock!

Raise your voices in protest against the capitalist murderers!

Stay the hand of the executioner!

Save Sacco and Vanzetti!

Negro Experts Attend Pan-African Congress Opening in New York

M. Dantes Bellegarde, former minister of Haiti to France, minister of education in Haiti and delegate to the League of Nations, is one of the first delegates to arrive for the 4th Pan-African Congress meeting in New York Aug. 21-24. Delegates from different groups of colored people will report on labor, economic, political and social conditions in their sections.

Dr. Normail Sylvain, son of one of Haiti's patriots, will also attend the congress unless the American occupation (by marines) in Haiti finds a way to prevent him, the Circle for Peace and Foreign Relations learns. The circle is arranging the congress.

Chief Amoah III of Gold Coast, West Africa, is already here. He knows conditions in the English, French and Portuguese West African colonies from years of study. He has attended previous congresses. T. Augustus Toote, former acting attorney general of Bahamas is also here for the congress.

Congress headquarters are at Grace Congregational Church, 308 W. 139th St., New York. The opening meeting is at St. Marks Methodist Episcopal Church, 137th St. and St. Nicholas Ave., Sunday afternoon at 4 p. m.

Soviet Purchases Break All Records; Experts In U. S. Study Methods

During July Russian purchases through Amtorg Trading Corp. in the United States broke all monthly records by over 50%. The total, exclusive of cotton, was $4,600,000. Orders for the first ten months of the curent soviet fiscal year amount to $22,700,000 in this country, says Saul G. Bron, chairman of Amtorg's board.

Cotton purchases this season made by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate total $48,000,000. Most of Amtorg's purchases are production rather than consumption goods—machinery, equipment and raw material.

During the last 10 months 75 Soviet technicians and industrial executives have visited the United States to familiarize themselves with American productive methods. They represented some of the largest Soviet economic organizations, including Azneft oil trust, Grozneft oil trust, Don Basin coal trust, the [illegible] trust, the Dnieper hydroelectric development and the supreme economic council.

New York Wins 500 New Readers

The splendid campaign conducted by the Daily Worker for Sacco and Vanzetti, has gained for us Five Hundred additional readers in New York City and vicinity alone, within the short period of two weeks.

This indicates how fully the Daily Worker expresses the sympathy which the workers feel for the condemned men, and how thoroughly the workers appreciate the strong fight which we are waging for their release.

Now is the time to prove to the workers the value of our paper.

In every shop and residential section, our comrades should be actively carrying on the campaign for Five Thousand New Readers for the Daily Worker, the shining leader of the fight for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Only Argument.

Every step in the Sacco and Vanzetti case, from its very beginning, has shown that the only arguments possible with such a brutal and cynical ruling class as that in America are those which appeal to their more sordid interests.

All the world may talk of the injustice inflicted upon these two martyred workers from now until three minutes past twelve tonight, and at three minutes past twelve the switch will be thrown and the current sent slashing thru their bodies. The case of Sacco and Vanzetti is not decided on the basis of justice. If there had been any intention to treat them justly, they would not have been arrested in the first place, they would not have been unfairly tried by a prejudiced judge, the U. S. government would not have concealed, as it still does conceal, evidence favorable to them, and they would never have been convicted by the jury. Senator Borah's brazen letter to Jane Adams, stating that the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti depend only on an inquiry into their guilt or innocence is mere addition of insult to injury.

Neither will any appeal to mercy, as advocated by some of our friends in the liberal camp, have any effect on a ruling class with the traditions and the habits of cruelty and repression that prevail among the mill owners of New England. These men are the aristocrats of American capitalism, descended from revolutionary war smugglers and semi-pirates, many of them, and used to browbeating and terrorizing the alien servants that come into their control. They have ruled by terror for generations, and their hearts are very hard towards appeals for mercy. If they were susceptible to any humane request, they would not have tortured their victims with such avidity as they show when they make Mrs. Sacco walk past the electric chair on every trip to her husband, as they showed in their granting the reprieve on the tenth of August only forty minutes before the time of execution, and even then not informing the condemned until nearly a half hour later. This is sheer deliberate torture, and indicates the love of cruelty, and belief in cruelty as a means of ruling. If the masters in Massachusetts had their way, it is hardly to be doubted that they would burn their victims at the stake rather than with an electric current.

But when appeals both to justice and to humanity fail, recent events have shown that appeals to self interest are considered. The mill-owners of New England are a semi-independent group of American industrialists, but they have their needs. In the end, they are subordinate to Wall Street financial lords, as are other industrialists. In the end, they have to have a market for their goods.

And the wave of resentment, taking expression more and more definitely in strikes and boycotts, which, tho they do not yet immediately touch the Massachusetts mill owners, must give them a most uncomfortable feeling of insecurity, has saved Sacco and Vanzetti until now. Pressure is both direct and indirect, and the indirect pressure may be most efficacious. Wall Street, expressing itself thru its favored journal, the New York Times, has become somewhat doubtful of the justice of an immediate execution for Sacco and Vanzetti. The reason for this is that American financial imperialism requires a certain amount of disunity and partial cooperation from various sections of the world it has set out to conquer. A united front of debtor nations against the U. S. A., on some sentimental appeal like the salvation of Sacco and Vanzetti, popular among the working classes of those nations, might lead to embarrassing situations for Morgan's deputies abroad, for Hoover's agents everywhere. It might transcend the limits of the case; it might lead to the general theory that the U. S. A. is a Shylock nation, determined on its pound of flesh, and that theory is extremely bad for the pawnbroking business the biggest banks and the Department of Commerce have been hard at work building up. It tears down in a few months a whole laboriously constructed and expensive camouflage of "friendship", between vampire Wall Street and the sleeping nations of South America, Asia, Africa and Europe. What is the use of subsidizing a Pan-American Federation of Labor, to fool Latin America, if every Latin finds himself personally insulted by the railroading of Sacco and Vanzetti to death?

If Sacco and Vanzetti die tonight, it will be in no small measure because the working class of the world did not begin its real argument, the argument of strikes and boycotts and mass demonstrations, until too late for those first effected, the financiers of New York, to coerce their New England satellites. It will be because the New England textile manufacturers were not sufficiently convinced in time, that they would suffer too heavy a loss in trade to pay for the satisfaction of burning to death a couple of hated labor leaders.

But if the punishment inflicted on New England trade and Wall Street imperialism is heavy enough, the Sacco-Vanzetti strikes and boycotts may save some other lives in the near future.

The strike and the boycott, along with that virile school in social facts, the mass demonstration, picketing and parades are not only the only argument by which Sacco and Vanzetti in the death house today will be brought out of it alive, they are the surest protection in the future against other cases of like nature.

Strike! Picket! Protest! Until the Last Minute

By MICHAEL GOLD

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—Boston and New England have become a graveyard. It sounds incredible, but here at the very scene where the international crime against Sacco and Vanzetti is being committed, there has been less stirring of the social conscience than in any other city of the world.

There was a meeting of labor union delegates last night to discuss the protest strike. About fifty workers were present, mostly from the Italian Barbers Unions, from the Upholsterers' Union, and from the Jewish needle trades. Where were the American workers? They were at home drinking homebrew and playing poker. Or they were reading the tabloid newspapers, with their scare stories of proposed bombings.

Representatives of the Sacco and Vanzetti Defense have tried all this week to get into the meetings of different local unions. The fat bull-necked grafters of Irish descent who exploit the A. F. of L. machine in this benighted city refused them admission, and sneered at any request for an open discussion. These pork-fed labor tories with Wall Street minds are helping in the crucifixion of Sacco and Vanzetti. They are helping as gleefully as they helped in the frame-up of Tom Mooney in California. They always can be counted to help capitalism, in this as in other crises.

There is a complete sinister silence in all the newspapers. One of the editorial writers on a Boston paper won the Pulitzer Prize with an editorial pleading for "fairness" to Sacco and Vanzetti. That was almost a year ago. This past month the hero of the Pulitzer prize has uttered not even a mournful sound. The man is evidently dead. All the bright breezy newspaper liberals are dead in Boston. There are scores of them who read the Nation, the New Republic, the American Mercury, and other "fair" and "liberal" sheets. There are scores of them who know at first hand the truth about Sacco and Vanzetti and the truth about Boston. But they are dead. They are drinking bootleg somewhere, shooting craps, and trying hard to forget the depths of their mental slavery. Not a word in the "free" press of Boston.

Not a word from Boston's liberterain aristocracy. Boston has been known as the cradle of American liberty. It was here that the American Revolution was begun. It was here that King George's private property was dumped into the harbor by direct actionists at the Boston Tea Party. It was here that Bunker Hill was fought.

It was also in Boston that the flame of the Civil War to free the slaves was lighted. It was here that a mob of high-nosed, blue-blooded Yankee aristocrats rescued at the cost of two lives the runaway slave Anthony Burns from the federal authorities.

The men of Boston fought at Bunker Hill in the revolution of 1776. The men of Boston rescued Anthony Burns in 1860 and helped launch the second American revolution. The men of Boston, in 1927, are lynching Sacco and Vanzetti. In those three dates is contained the tragedy of Boston. Yes, this is a dead city.

All that is left in these withered hearts is a great fear. They are afraid of their own workers. They are afraid of the immigrants. Sacco and Vanzetti are a symbol of the immigrant rebel worker whom they could not completely enslave. They will kill Sacco and Vanzetti first, then they will turn on the other immigrant workers. There will be lynchings, finger-printings, deportations, mass-hysterias in New England. These decadent Yankee masters, those blue-blooded inheritors of the rebel glory of Bunker Hill and Gettysburg, are shaken by a rat-like fear.

Bugles sound in the street. I look out, and see a regiment of state militia marching grimly by, bayonets on the alert. Aeroplanes whirl in the sky. Last night as I went by the postoffice there were scores of silent men with rifles on post. Every policeman in the city is on 24-hour reserve duty, sitting nervously in the station houses waiting for battle. The fire department is mobilized. The American Legion is guarding certain homes. Even the insurances companies are on active duty. They have filled the newspapers with great advertisements, warning the businessmen to insure themselves against riots and explosions before it is too late.

The newspapers spread scare after scare. Now the vast Boston subway is to be bombed—now a certain rich man's home, now a public building. And every boob, yokel, blueblood or Irish policeman and his relative buys and believes these newspapers.

It is a panic. It is a lynching. And for what? There are two lonely immigrant workers in the death house in Charlestown jail and they are to be electrocuted Monday night. And so the city moves in fear. And the men higher-up, who have created this panic, rub their hands delightedly. When this is over, they will move on to the next step in the great chess game. They will be ready for their mass attack on the immigrant workers then—their registry bills in Congress, their deportations, their raids and arrests.

The Charlestown jail in across the historic Charles River from Boston, that placid stream of which the good Longfellow wrote so placidly. Charlestown is an industrial quarter of the city, a congeries of slum streets and grimy factories, of lumber yards, freight sidings, ugly shacks and tin can dumpheaps, a fitting industrial background for the murder New England industry is about to commit.

Go a mile down the same bank of the Charles and you come to Harvard, the cultural mask of that murderer, Harvard with its sleek lawns, its noble elms, its quiet redbrick old buildings where genteel scholars labor at science and art.

Sacco and Vanzetti are being tortured in the Charlestown jail, and Harvard, the home of science and art, speaks not a word. Harvard even has helped in the torture. It was President Lowell of Harvard who perfumed the murder. This little man is descended from James Russel Lowell, who wrote fiery abolition poetry. This little man hates Jews, and tried to keep them out of his college. This little man is a friend of millionaires, and they support his college. This little man is proud that he is a Nordic, a Lowell, a blueblood, a Boston aristocrat.

Governor Fuller, another of the executioners who will turn on the switch today, is of a different category. He is a self-made man. He began in life as a bicycle racer; then he opened a bicycle repair shop; then when automobiles came in, he landed the Packard agency for New England, and earned about 10 million dollars before he went into politics. Once he was denounced by Sam Gompers at an A. F. of L. convention for a notorious lockout. As a Congressman he made a rabid murderous speech against all Reds, anarchists, Bolsheviks and readers of "The Nation."

Judge Robert Grant, who helped in the execution, is an old senile Boston Brahmin who once wrote a mad violent book denouncing Italians. It can be found in any library.

Judge Thayer one need not discuss. This is the man who went around asking his golfing friends during the Sacco and Vanzetti trial: "Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards?"

Yes, New England is made up of such as these. And these are the men who have thrust Sacco and Vanzetti back into the deathhouse.

It is such as they who inflame the minds of the ignorant Boston masses with stories of bombings. It is such as they who know when and how those bombs are placed. It is such as they who spread the fear in New England these last wild hours.

A telephone girl says over the wire to an Italian who is sputtering at her in broken English, as he tries to get a number:

"Ah, shut up, yeh ginny rat, wait till you see what we do to yeh on August 22nd."

A timid little groceryman remarks to a customer:

"Yes, I think maybe those two Italians are innocent, but we gotta kill them, aint we, or we'll all be bombed in our beds, wont we?"

A clerk drinking ice cream soda at a fountain:

"All them Italians look like murderers to me, anyway."

A young sailor prowling about Scollay Square on the hunt for women:

"They ought to be killed. They insulted the American flag."

A gracious tranqil matron in a Beacon street drawing room, while the mellow light filters through violet panes:

"Yes, there is some doubt, but one must believe such good men as President Lowell, must one not?"

The master class in again killing two workers. The workers of the world are rising in protest. But in Boston, the scene of the crime, most of the workers have accepted the viewpoint of the masters. That is one of the tragedies in this great world tragedy of our time.

It is not the last word on this matter, however. Boston is a city filled with landmarks and famous old houses saturated with the history of the first American revolution. There will come a time when a new revolutionary landmark will be visited—the death house at the Charlestown jail. And Americans will speak of Governor Fuller and President Lowell, as they now speak of Benedict Arnold, and they will speak of Sacco and Vanzetti as they now speak of Abraham Lincoln and John Brown.

But Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!

Wire President Coolidge at Rapid City, S. D., for federal intervention!

Strike, picket, protest until the last minute!

Sacco and Vanzetti must not die!

a symbol of technical progress—the gallows belongs to the feudal period as crucifixion typifies the slave era—not Sacco and Vanzetti but a composite picture of all rebels against Capitalism's rule.

IN killing two workingmen American capitalism serves notice upon the whole working class that it intends to give no quarter in the class war.

Rulers always have depended upon death as their ally when their falsehoods have been exposed and shattered by the resistless logic of the class struggle. American capitalism is no exception.

The hypocricy, the cruelty, the sordid character of the boasted institutions of America are seen once more now in all their nakedness ten years after the world rang with the denunciation of the crucifixion of Tom Mooney and Warren Billings.

FROM the Pacific coast the deadly class justice of America's rulers crept eastward until it ensnared two workers on the Atlantic seaboard. In storied Boston, "cradle of American liberties," the executioners are busy.

They are murdering, they think, and they smile at the thot, every fighter in the ranks of the labor movement. This unconcealed joy with which the executioners go about their task springs from this fact alone —that Sacco and Vanzetti personfy for American capitalism the rebellion that burns in the hearts of millions of their fellow-workers.

SACCO and Vanzetti shall not die!

Their bodies may be charred to a crisp in the electric chair but Sacco and Vanzetti will not die. They will live in the white hot heat of the class war, their names will be a battle cry, their memories an inspiration, their deaths a debt for which an army of organized workers will exact payment measured by the scales of class justice—workingclass justice.

The workingclass of America and of the rest of the world already has tried the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti. The verdict has been rendered.

It is Guilty.

SENTENCE has been passed—but suspended. Suspended not because we await atonement, for this never will and never can be made.

The sentence passed by the masses upon their masters, the slayers of Sacco and Vanzetti, is suspended while we prepare to carry it out in a way that will leave no doubt of our strength or of our intentions.

But today we begin to prepare. We read aright the program of the capitalists of America. Sacco and Vanzetti are only the first two of our class to enter their death chamber to serve as a warning to other rebels.

IF we save them from death so much the better. It will be a sign that we are not entirely powerless—that we have made a beginning at our task.

If their lives are taken we will build such a monument to them as America has never seen. We will build over their graves a labor movement which will be a fortress inpregnable to the attack of the bloody bands of capitalism, a fortress from which as a center there will go forth the armies of the toiling millions of America to fight and conquer both in the daily and the final struggles a ruling class which lives by robbery bulwarked by murder.

Make the strike to save Sacco and Vanzetti the beginning of a new epoch of organization, militancy and struggle for the American labor and revolutionary movement.

Needle Trade Defense

Sigman Must Be Taught His Last Lesson.

The Sigman raid on the office of the Joint Defense was an attempt to destroy the work of the Committee. The intention to destroy the ammunition depot of the Cloakmakers and Furriers, by stopping the supply of ammunition he thought he would demoralize the ranks of the fighting workers, and in this way break up the Defense. This must be given the answer that it deserves. Sigman must learn that just as he could not destroy the Joint Boards of the Cloakmakers and Furriers Union, so he will not be able to hinder the work of the Joint Defense Committee. The entire progressive movement must rally to the Joint Defense Committee and give it the fullest support in order to deliver the final blow to the Sigman clique.

The Starlight Park Jamboree of August 28th was arranged by the Defense Committee for the purpose of raising enough funds to carry the struggle to a successful conclusion. It must be a 100 per cent success. Starlight Park must be crowded to capacity.

DRAMA

Two New Noel Coward Plays Scheduled for Early Production

Grace La Rue will be one of the headliners at the Palace this week. Jack Donahue, continues as Master of Ceremonies for a second week. Others on the bill include: Harry Roye and Billie Maye, assisted by Charles Embler and Boyd Davis; Mr. and Mrs. Coburn in a condensed version of "The Better 'Ole" by Bruce Bairnsfather and Arthur Elliott with music by Herman Drewski; Marjorie White and Ed Tierney; George and Jack Dormonde; Gus Fowler and Bob Anderson.

Odette Myrtil; Karyl Norman; Benny Rubin; Will and Gladys Ahearn; Moss and Frye; Kharum; Paul Decker and Company; Les Jardys and Bob Anderson form the vaudeville program at the Albee in Brooklyn.

Moss' Broadway this week is featuring Will J. Wart in his short sketch "The Story." Pat Henning, Hawthorne and Cooke, Ted and Al Waldman are other acts on the bill.

Noel Coward, the English playwright whose play "The Vortex" created quite a sensation two seasons back, is listed for several plays this season. At least two of his plays are certain to be seen here. The Chanin's will produce "The Marquise" and the Actor's Theatre have the other—which is as yet unnamed. Noel Coward will appear in "The Second Man" in London some time in October.

POLA NEGRI

The Polish star is being featured in a new screen play "Barbed Wire" showing at the Broadway Theatre this week.

Beatrice Lille, the English Comedienne who appeared here in the Charlot revues, will be seen in a new musical show, "The Little Darling," which Carles Dillingham will produce. Guy Bolton, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby wrote the book and lyrics.

UNITED STATES STEEL AND GENERAL MOTOR MERGER TO FORM SUPERTRUST

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press.)

Aug. 21.—More than $1,000,000,000 in profits turned over to the country's financial overlords in the short space of 5 years is the amazing record of U. S. Steel and General Motors, now being fused under Morgan dictatorship, according to a comparative study by the Wall Street Journal. At the same time rumors adding other important corporations to the steel-motors hookup indicate that New York bankers are calling into being a colossus with undreamed of economic power. American capital is preparing for a battle royal for the markets of the world, that is, for modern world dominion.

The average capital of the steel corporation in the 5 years 1922-26, according to the journal, was $2,099,505,679 on which it made a profit of $578,253,962 in that period or about 27½ per cent. The average capital of General Motors in the same period was $455,821,873 on which it made a profit of $480,354,397 or about 105½ per cent. Taken together these giants made a profit of $1,058,608,359 on an average capital of $2,555,327,552, or about 41 per cent.

The following table from the journal shows for the 2 corporations the capital (including funded debt, stock and surplus) and the profits for each year, 1922 to 1926, and for the first half of 1927:

	Average capital	Net earnings
	United States Steel Corp.
1922	$2,053,823,218	$68,020,447
1923	2,068,877,830	136,718,702
1924	2,093,605,058	112,377,701
1925	2,118,871,470	117,711,711
1926	2,162,350,820	143,425,341
5 years	$2,099,505,679	$578,253,962
Half 1927	2,184,775,353	65,657,490
	General Motors
1922	$385,437,600	$54,474,493
1923	420,880,166	72,008,955
1924	443,593,075	51,623,490
1925	468,561,651	116,016,277
1926	560,636,871	186,231,182
half 1927	684,307,858	129,250,207

From Jan. 1, 1922, to June 30, 1927, U. S. Steel profits totaled $643,901,006 and General Motors profits $609,604,603, or a combined total of $1,283,505,609, going largely to the same group of multimillionaires. The rate of growth of General Motors to an equal of the steel corporation has been a feature of the financial news.

The true magnitude of these sister corporations, in the eyes of the investing class, is best shown by the market value of their securities. On July 28, 1927, according to the journal, the total market value of U. S. Steel was $1,928,118,468 and of General Motors $2,128,820,892. This gives the combination a market value of more than $4,000,000,000.

Additional corporations about to enter this premier merger, according to latest information, include American Car & Foundry Co. with its subsidiary the J. G. Brill Co., manufacturers of street cars, and Baldwin Locomotive. Altogether the new supertrust will have a stranglehold on the manufacturing side of the transportation industry.

THOUSANDS IDLE AS JOBS VANISH AND PAYROLLS WEAKEN UNDER PROSPERITY

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press.)

Aug. 21.—Yes, we have no industrial depression—but U. S. department of labor's employment figures for June, 1927, show the number of workers on factory payrolls reduced to within 1 per cent of the low 1922 level. Since June, 1923, the number of factory employes has fallen off nearly 13 per cent and now stands only 4½ above the depression year, 1921.

A Million Jobs Less.

These figures mean that American factories are offering 1,170,000 fewer jobs than in June, 1923, and that this number of factory workers has been added to the unemployed unless diverted into unproductive occupations.

Employment has fallen so low that in spite of some increase in average per capita wages the total factory wage bill is 11 per cent below June, 1923. This means about $24,000,000 less wages going each week to factory workers. A year at this rate would mean approximately $1,000,000,000 less in wages than in 1923.

Employment Takes New Drop.

Between May and June of this year employment fell 0.7 per cent. It was the 3rd successive month of decreased employment, the total reduction since March amounting to 2⅓ per cent. In every month so far this year factory employment has been below the corresponding month of 1926.

The industries have been variously affected by the changes in employment since 1923. The table shows for 18 important industries the employment and payroll levels of June, 1927, expressed as percentages of 1923 which is taken as 100 per cent.

Factory employment and wages	Number employes	Total wages
Auto	101.6%	96.4%
Auto tires	113.8	120.2
Baking	104.8	110.4
Boots, shoes	84.4	79.9
Brick, cement	99.0	105.6
Clothing, men's	82.5	77.3
Cotton	87.6	88.5
Electrical apparatus	94.8	101.7
Foundries, machine shops	82.3	85.4
Furniture	91.6	98.8
Iron, steel	92.3	97.0
Knit goods	97.2	112.0
Meat	83.6	87.6
Petroleum refining	96.2	97.9
Printing, job	103.2	114.4
Railroad car bldg.	74.7	78.8
Sawmills	80.7	90.1
Woolen	78.2	77.5

Many Industries Effected.

Out of 54 industries included in the department's report, 47 show employment below the 1923 level. There are 27 industries in which the decline amounts to more than 10 per cent and 18 in which employment has fallen off more than 15 per cent. In 2 industrise employment represents a drop of about 35 per cent from 1923.

Factory wages in June, 1927, averaged $26.52 a week or about 1.8 per cent higher than in June, 1923. In the textile and clothing group, cotton mill workers averaged $16.43, woolen mill operatives $22.30, knit goods workers $19.52 and workers in the men's clothing shops $24.82. In the metal trades some averages were iron and steel mills $30.45, foundries and machine shops $29.68, auto plants $30.20, railroad car building and repair $30.30 and electrical apparatus $29.65. Other averages were baking $26.78, boots and shoes $22.35.

Gary's Death Blow To Preacher Spy Set to Fool Labor

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 21.—The late Elbert H. Gary will be keenly missed by the Rev. Mr. Maitland who occupies a Methodist pulpit in a steel town near Pittsburgh. Maitland's rise from steel worker to sky pilot was due to Gary's eager grasp of the relation of religion to industrial production. It began, as Maitland once confessed to The Federated Press, when the company spotter in the mill reported him to Superintendent Oliver for praying on company time.

"I was watertender on top of the 60-foot cooler," Maitland related, "and after some sinful years I resolved to pray an hour every day. The spotter caught me on my knees at my post and I expected to be fired. But the superintendent told me that religious men were good assets for the company and I could pray as much as I liked. From that time until I began to study for the ministry I prayed 3270 hours on company time."

Gary's Personal Preacher.

Gary heard of the praying watertender and invited him to address the annual stockholders meeting of the U. S. Steel Corp. to tell what religion was doing for the employes. Soon Maitland was an ordained Methodist preacher Gary's own sect, and was provided by the company with a little church that had long since been abandoned because of the steel trust's policy of importing southern European workers, who are mostly Roman Catholic. Maitland has been preaching in the steel town ever since, without a cent of salary from his handful of parishioners.

"I get a $1000 check every once in a while," he admitted, "sometimes from the company, sometimes from judge Gary himself. I shake hands with Gary now and then and can walk into his office any time."

Stool-Pigeon For God and Gary.

Maitland's real job, it developed, is to keep a keen eye on labor and radical stirrings in his parish and elsewhere in the steel domain. He can always be seen, for example, at gatherings of the Methodist Federation for Social Service, the progressive ministers leagued under Harry Ward to work for a better social order. He trails Ward around the country like a regular gumshoe spotter. He is a heavy set, battlebrowed, wellfed bruiser. Maitland will surely miss Gary and his $1000 checks.

Business Ready With Orders for Congress At December Session

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 21.—When congress convenes in December, it will have heard its master's voice in no unmistakable tones. For the United States Chamber of Commerce will have concluded its own policy conference at West Baden Springs, Ind. on October 18th and will have a complete list of orders ready for its servants in the capitol.

The Indiana conference, embracing national councillors, committee members and the board of directors of the Chamber will be the first ever called to consider questions of national economic and political policy. The fact it is to be held in the middle west near the center of agrarian discontent is held doubly significant.

With more than a thousand "councillors," each representing a trade association or commercial organization, and 200 officers, directors and committee members of the Chamber in session, the conference will "bring to a focus opinion of business executives representing organizations in every state," it is announced. Among the important questions on which the Chamber will inform congress of its will, are:

Flood control of the Mississippi.

Agricultural relief: the discussion centering on the report of the business men's agricultural commission.

Amendment of the Federal Reserve Act.

The relation of the government to public utilities and federal water power policy.

Trade relations.

Federal taxation, including tax reduction and revision.

Merchant marine.

Postal rates.

State and local legislation.

Wales Wants to Visit U. S. and Play Polo

VANCOUVER, B. C., August 21.—Efforts have been made almost daily to persuade the Prince of Wales to visit the United States again, especially the Meadowbrook polo matches and it developed today that while his royal highness is favorable to the idea, British officialdom feels the prince owes every minute of his visit to Canada and her interests.

FURRIERS WITH JOBS ASKED TO HELP UNEMPLOYED WORKERS

The Council of Unemployed Fur Workers are distributing thousands of leaflets in the market this morning calling upon those furriers who have jobs not to work overtime or on Saturdays or Sundays. It asks them to help in rebuilding the organization that has been smashed by the scab International.

The leaflets read as follows:

"To the unemployed fur workers and to the workers in the Associated Shops.

Fellow workers:

"The division in our union and the civil war now going on within it have brought upon us the most severe hardships. Those who are working in the shops are suffering very much, but those of us who are unemployed are suffering even more. Many of us have been going about without work for many months, and our families are in dire need. There is no hope of getting work—no hope of securing jobs. The little work which there now is, is being done at the homes, and in the sweatshops of corporations and contractors. Work is being done at night, on Saturdays and Sundays. A large number of workers are doing piece work. We are producing twice and three times as much as we did in 1925 and 1926. In many shops the workers slave 60 and 70 hours a week. Those who work earn scarcely enough to live on although they are slaving under the most terrible conditions. Those of us who are out of work suffer from hunger and need, walking the streets like beggars, and knocking at doors and begging for jobs. We are ready to sell ourselves for a slice of bread. The condition of the workers are unbearable, and what the future has in store for us is even more terrible.

Union Shattered.

"Sisters and brothers, what will become of us? Who is going to help us? Who is going to save us from hunger and despair?

"If our union were not shattered and split, it would be able to help us. The contractors and the corporation shops would not freely rob us of our jobs; the fur workers would not be so helpless as they are now; our plight would not be so bad.

"But our union has been split and broken. That is why the bosses and the contractors and the corporation shops have the upper hand. That is why the exploitation and the oppression are so great. That is why the fur workers are being thrown out of the shops. That is why the fur workers are enslaved.

"The unemployed fur workers, who are subjected to even greater hardships than the other workers, have resolved, at an open forum, to strive with all their might to put an end to our great suffering. We have re- a right to earn a livelihood in the a right to earn a livelihood in the trade in which we have worked and suffered for many long years. We shall not permit anyone to play with our lives and with the lives of our wives and children. We will not tolerate the deals which the traitors are making on our account, whereby they give up the conditions we have won through years of suffering. We shall not permit any workers to work 60 and 70 hours a week while thousands of us are walking the streets without any work at all. The union agreement forbids us to work on Saturdays and Sundays at the present time. We appeal to all fur workers not to work on Saturdays and Sundays. It is not fair. It is not brotherly to work many hours' overtime while thousands of workers are suffering from hunger. You know that the army of unemployed serves to drag down wages and to wipe out union conditions in the shops.

Saturday Meeting.

"A committee of unemployed and active members will gather at the office of the union, 22 East 22nd street, on Saturday, at 7:00 o'clock in the morning, and from there will go to the shops in order to stop those who will be going to work. By working on Saturdays and Sundays, the trade and the union conditions are being undermined.

"Fur workers: you have allowed yourselves to be misguided by traitors to our union! You have allowed these traitors to destroy the power of our union. You alone are to blame for the oppression and need which are afflicting you at the present time.

"Stop breaking the union any further. Stop ruining the trade which was built up and developed with the blood of the fur workers.

"By means of brutal intimidation, gangsterism and conspiracies with the bosses, the McGradys and the Stetskys and their henchmen have brought us to the point of ruin. How much longer will you allow yourselves to be misled? How much longer will you tolerate the scab union and the scab officials?

"We appeal to you, sisters and brothers, help yourselves and help us. Forsake the traitors who have brought upon you hardships and derision. Ignore the scab union. Ignore the scab officials. Do not go to their meetings. They are our enemies. They broke our Union. They sold us to the bosses and to the contractors. They are to be blamed for our sufferings. They are leading us to a precipice.

"It is high time that you liberate yourselves. It is high time that you correct your mistakes. The Joint Board is calling you. Workers of the Associated shops, join our ranks!

Council of Unemployed Fur Workers, Joint Board Furriers Union, B. Gold, manager.

WORKERS USED UP IN TIME IT TAKES FOR BOSSES' AUTO STOCKS TO YIELD FORTUNE

By LELAND OLDS.

The bitter contrast between what multimillionaires get and what workers get out of industrialism is reflected in the latest announcement of the General Motors Corp. When this Morgan-DuPont giant carries out the proposed 2 for 1 splitup of its common stock, 1 share bought for $100 prior to 1917 will have blossomed into 37½ shares with a market value August 1st of more than $4000. Meanwhile the original workers who toiled for a subsistence wage are on the scrap heap or fact approaching that natural end of the machine slave.

Stocks Go Up; Workers Go to Pieces.

The history of General Motors common stock is complicated. When the present Delaware corporation took over the original New Jersey company in 1917 it issued to the stockholders 5 shares for each share held. In 1920 stockholders received 10 shares for each share then held, giving the holder of the original share in the New Jersey corporation 50 shares. In 1924 the outstanding stock was reduced, owners receiving 1 share in exchange for each 4 shares held at the time. In 1926 a 50 per cent stock dividend increased the shares representing 1 original share to 18¾. These had a market value of $228 apiece August 1, 1927. The latest splitup brings the shares representing each original share to 37½.

A rich man who put $10,000 into the original stock has profited mightily. The 100 shares he bought have become 3750 shares with a market value of about $417,500 giving him a profit of more than $400,000. In addition this invester has received between 1917 and 1927 cash dividends totaling $71,732, bringing his entire gain to date to about $480,000. His next year's dividends, even if there are no extras, will bring him an income of $18,750 from this one corporation.

Nash and Hudson Gains.

This is an old story in motor finance. A $10,000 investment in 100 shares of Nash Motors Co. in 1916 has now grown to 5000 shares with a market value of about $875,000. In the interim the owner has received $110,200 in cash dividends. His entire gain to date has amounted to $485,000.

Hudson Motor stock dividends include 900 per cent in 1910, about 90 per cent in 1913, 500 per cent in 1922, 10 per cent in 1924 and 20 per cent in 1926. This gives the original investor in 100 shares of $10 par stock in 1909 approximately 12,000 shares today with a total market value of about $960,000, a profit of $950,000. In addition he has received $182,500 in cash. His entire gain to date on an investment of $1,000 amounts to about $1,131,500.

If we imagine a rich man who purchased 100 shares in each of these companies in the days when their original stock was to be had at par, we have an original investment of only $21,000, surely a small amount for a rich man to risk in a new industry. But today he would hold 3750 shares of General Motors, 5000 shares of Nash and 12,000 shares of Hudson, with a combined market value of about $1,752,500, and would have received $364,432 in cash dividends.

This wealthy man who started with $21,000 invested in 3 motor stocks now would have a cash dividend income from this source alone of more than $81,000 a year or nearly 400 per cent on his investment. Auto workers who invested their lives in the industry at the same time that this rich man invested his dollars are now being laid off, burned out by the grind for which they received an average of less than $1700 a year.

"Embalmed Beef" King To Be Buried Tuesday

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Funeral services for the late J. Ogden Armour, head of the internationally known packing firm of Armour & Company, which is famous for killing U. S. soldiers with "embalmed beef," will be held here Tuesday, Aug. 30th, it was announced today following receipt of a cablegram from his widow in London.

Shoe Workers Make Appeal to Fellows To Join the Union

When the workers returned from the May 1926 strike those who were fortunate enough to get their positions back, were informed by the manufacturers that conditions and prices would remain the same under open shop conditions as they were under the union. These assertions were also made at the time of the cancellation of the agreement. Were these promises kept? You know as well as we do, they were not, and any one with an ounce of common sense knows they have been thoroughly fooled.

Workers Terrorized.

Hardly had Union-restraint been removed when the knife began to fall in nearly every Board of Trade shop. Reductions not only took place, but conditions became unbearable. Today, from all reports, workers employed in the factories dare not call their souls their own. It is either take it or leave it—and if you don't like it, there is the door.

Not only these conditions prevail, but they will continue to grow worse, unless you take some measure to stop it, otherwise no shoe-worker can feel safe on his job. Events of the past year have proven that independent Unions are of no benefit to the shoe workers, and therefore realizing this, a group of shoe workers, representing every branch of the industry, having received appeals from men in shops from all parts of the city to try and remedy this situation, and with no selfish motives, held a number of meetings where the situation was thoroughly discussed. Finally, it was the unanimous opinion that the only solution was a national organization—which is the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Organization Begun.

Negotiations were then opened with the General Office of the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union, with the result that Secretary-Treasurer C. L. Baine came to Brooklyn and explained the policy of the Boot & Shoe Workers Union, giving Greater New York local autonomy (home rule), with assurances that the General Office of the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union will support, both financially and morally, every effort to organize Greater New York.

Union headquarters have been established in Lenruth Hall, Waverly and Myrtle Avenues, and any shoe worker desiring further information will call there. The office is open from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m., and regular meetings will be held at this Hall every Tuesday evening at 8 p. m.

Shoe Workers Unionize!

It is up to the shoe workers to avail themselves of this opportunity to become union members. Here is the chance to join an organization where the consitution and by-laws are lived up to and also who believe in keeping sacred all signed agreements and where a sick and death benefit is provided for by the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union—something we have never had before.

This movement will try to standardize the industry in this city and keep the shoe trade so it will not be driven away again through more uncalled-for strikes. No doubt, propaganda will burst forth against this movement, but do not be fooled by any false reports. Call at headquarters and get all information at first hand. This movement has for its object the welfare of the shoe workers of this city, and the longer you delay the worse the conditions will become. Organize now in order to try and get living conditions by organizing under the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union.

You will have the whole labor movement of the country with you.

U. S. Deports Hundreds Of Mexican Workers in New Drive on Aliens

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 21.—450 deported Mexican workers have just arrived at Reynosa, Mexico, with tales of their sufferings at the hands of the American immigration authorities. The workers, who are being deported in the United States' new drive against the foreign born, were rounded up from a number of southern districts and herded in a concentration camp at Falfurrias, Texas, under armed guards. Many of the workers deported had been in the United States for as many as twelve years.

The Mexicans in Los Angeles, California, have lodged a protest with the American authorities in an effort to do away with the police restrictions and espionage to which they are at present being subjected.

Sacco and Vanzetti Shall Not Die!

SPOKE FOR SACCO, VANZETTI, POLICE INTIMIDATE HIM

Because he has been an active worker in the struggle to liberate Sacco and Vanzetti, Louis A. Baum, secretary of the Photographic Workers' Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is now being threatened by reactionary neighbors and the police.

Friday a large sign outside of the union office, 282 St. Anns Ave., the Bronx, was torn down. It contained pictures of Sacco and Vanzetti and read in part, "Two innocent workers framed up by politicians and the vested interests." A note was also sent him yesterday, warning that more drastic action will be taken if he continues to speak and agitate for the release of the two condemned workers.

Visited By Police.

These two acts are the aftermath of a visit Baum received Wednesday by Detective Gilbert who questioned him at great length as to his activities. Gilbert advised him to cease his labor activities. Baum emphatically refused.

"These acts on the part of the police and mislead individuals will not stop my work one iota," stated Baum yesterday evening. "Not only will I continue to work for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, but the union which I represent will do likewise.

"The Photographic Workers' Union will join Monday's strike and participate with the thousands of workers in the Union Square demonstration to save the lives of our two fellow workers."

PARDON VANZETTI, SACCO, PLEA FROM FOREIGN COUNCIL

Demanding the immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, 41 Union Square, has sent the following telegram to Governor Fuller:

"Alvan T. Fuller,
"Governor of Massachusetts.
"Honorable Sir:

"In the name of millions of foreign-born workers in this country we ask you to grant an unconditional pardon to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

"Nina Samorodin,
"Executive Secretary."

"It is our firm belief," declared Nina Samarodin, in a statement issued yesterday, "that Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered the tortures of death many times over during the seven years of their imprisonment.

Government Policy.

"When the eyes of millions of foreign-born workers are fixed on the government's alien policy and its effort to adopt anti-alien legislation and registration, the case of Sacco and Vanzetti becomes especially important in view of the fact that their foreign birth tends to increase the persecution of aliens residing here. We ask the governor of Massachusetts for a new trial and ask that the records of the Department of Justice be made available.

College Students Hold Meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti

Several hundred college students attended an open air meeting arranged by the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee Friday at Amsterdam Ave. and 138th St. A resolution was adopted demanding either a new trial or the immediate release of the two condemned workers.

The gathering was addressed by Carl Weisberg, and Theodore Mormance of the Liberal Club, C. C. N. Y.; Wayne Walden and W. S. Van Valkenberg of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee; Jacob Margolies of the Sacco-Vanzetti Liberation Committee and Luther Widner, journalist.

Prof. Carl N. Llewelwyan will speak on the case over radio station WPCH at 9 p. m. tonight under the auspices of the committee.

A. F. of L. to Organize Baltimore Dyer Bosses; Critic Told to Shut Up

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 21.—At an organization meeting here of the Retail Cleaners and Dyers of Baltimore, called under the auspices of the A. F. of L. for the purpose of organizing the retailers, many of whom are employers of labor, the collaboration tactics of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy are clearly demonstrated. [illegible]

CO-OPERATIVES

GERMAN CO-OPERATIVE RECTIFIES ERROR IN FIGHT WITH REACTIONARIES

DRESDEN, Aug. 21.—Considerable protests have been made by several proletarian organizations because of the campaign of the cooperative bureaucrats against the Communist Executive of Schwarzenberg and the proposal made at the cooperative conference in Dresden for expulsion of the society because of alleged infringement of the statutes and of the cooperative law. Up to the middle of March, about 40 such protests had been lodged, most of them adopted unanimously at cooperative, trade union and other meetings inclusive of Social Democratic and non-Party votes.

As the managing committee of the society realized that the expulsion question had aroused the indignation even of Social Democratic members against the committee of the auditing society and as it was afraid that the general discontent would find expression also at the Dresden Congress, it resorted to a crafty move in order to achieve its aims by other means.

It is well-known that the authorities adopted, apart from their disciplinary measures against the troublesome Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society, the methods of economic strangulation by preventing the rapidly developing society from obtaining much needed long-term credits. When the authorities noticed that the expulsion methods would not come off so easily and would probably lower their prestige, they informed the managing committee of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative that they did not intend to be relentless in regard to the credit question and that they would also withdraw the expulsion proposal, provided that the managing committee and the board of directors would declare their readiness to adopt a different attitude and would enter into commensurate obligations for the future.

Unfortunately the management of the auditing society has been successful with this trick. The responsible comrades in the managing committee who had the further smooth development of the society at heart, thought that the interests of the members made this sacrifice necessary. They signed the declaration which was demanded of them, but it must be said that, in the history of the central society, this declaration is the most preposterous thing which the authorities dared to proposed to the opposition. It is admitted in the declaration that the managing committee and the board of directors have infringed the statutes and the cooperative law and that they have done harm to the German Consumers' Cooperative movement, all of which justified the expulsion proposal. The managing committee and the board of directors of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society undertake in the declaration:

"To expel those members of their society who make the cooperative an organ of class struggle, the commissariat of strike and rebellion, who want to spend the funds of the cooperative for party political aims and act up to these intentions within the cooperative organization. The managing committee and the board of directors also undertake to see to it that in future neither rank and file members nor members of the managing committee and the board of directors mix up (!) their cooperative with the internal affairs of other consumers' cooperatives."

The managing committee and the board of directors demand expulsion for any members of the society who do not act up to this undertaking. The character of this declaration shows clearly what the authorities were aiming at. They were afraid (and the growing protest movement increased their fear) that the class-conscious and at the same time business-like executive of the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society would set an example to other consumers' cooperative societies. Therefore their wish was to isolate the society and, over and above this, to discredit and put in the wrong its executive ("breach of solemn promises"), in order that, on the strength of this, the Communist executive could be overthrown, or that the expulsion could take place on a subsequent occasion under more favourable conditions.

That responsible comrades in Schwarzenberg signed this declaration must be deeply regretted. It shows that they completely lost their heads and their action cannot be justified even on the assumption that they meant to act in the interests of the members. The actual result of such an undertaking is: that the authorities were encouraged in their demagogic game, whereas there is no guarantee whatever that the authorities will keep their very vague promises in regards to credits. But above all, this step of the Schwarzenberg comrades is a very serious political error in the entire struggle between the proletarian opposition and the reactionary authorities. There is no doubt whatever that the position of the entire opposition throughout the Reich has been made much more difficult. Moreover, one must also be aware that this kind of thing will bring confusion into the vacillating sections of the opposition.

Signed For Sake of Unity.

Another error consists in the fact that the declaration was signed without previously appealing to the membership. It was only after the signing of the declaration on April 3rd, that a delegate meeting took place at which the business manager Ertinger made it known that the declaration had been signed, and explained what had induced the executive of the society to sign. It was done to preserve unity in the cooperative movement and also in order not to put obstacles in the way of the development of the consumers' cooperative society. Comrade Ertinger wound up his report with the promise that the Schwarzenberg Consumers' Cooperative Society would be as before the "pioneer of a proletarian cooperative policy." This slogan was greeted with applause by the meeting, whereas the extortionist attitude of the Executive of the Saxon Society was severely condemned. A considerable number of delegates and functionaries made a declaration expressing their joint protest. In this declaration it is said that, not the managing committee of the cooperative, but the executive of the cooperative society, has done harm to the consumers' cooperative movement. The declaration severely condemns the means and methods by which the undertaking had been obtained. The declaration concludes as follows:

"The members of the delegate meeting emphasise that in view of the success achieved through our proletarian cooperative policy, the only thing which matters is: to continue through our consumers' cooperative society a policy which truly serves proletarian interests."

Demand Soviet Relations.

Moreover proceedings at the meeting show that the bureaucrats did not succeed in shaking the confidence of the Social Democratic and non-Party members in the Communist leadership of the consumers' cooperative. Several proposals for the Congress in Essen were adopted Unanimously and also a resolution welcoming the invitation addressed by the Centrosoyuz to the central society to despatch of a delegation to the Soviet Union and demanding, particularly in view of the dangerous imperialist war policy of the west Eureopean powers directed against Soviet Russia, acceptance of this invitation and immediate initiation of close and friendly relations with the cooperative movement of Soviet Russia. The resolution also demands that the various local organizations should be invited to participate in such a delegation.

The result of the expulsion action against Schwarzenberg has been: that the attention of the whole Party has been drawn more than ever before to questions of cooperative work. The protest campaign led by the Party had remarkable successes from the very beginning. It was given emphasis through a protest resolution of the Party Congress in Essen which was addressed to all proletarian members of cooperatives and called upon them to oppose the split activity of the cooperative bureaucrats. The withdrawal of the expulsion proposal has certainly brought a change in the situation, but not a real change, as the incidents which accompanied this withdrawal showed clearer than ever before the anti-proletarian attitude of the authorities. Therefore the Party continues its campaign with the intention of mobilizing proletarian members of cooperatives against the reactionary policy of the authorities and their dictatorial and extortionist methods. All these matters are bound to play an important role at the conferences and also at the Congress in Essen.

FIFTY-SEVEN REVOLT VICTIMS BURIED TOGETHER

Workers killed in the Vienna uprising a short time ago. Some were shot by the capitalist-clerical police, and some fell before the hastily summoned troops of the socialist mayor, Deitz. They got a funeral at the expense of the city, and Deitz remains in office to conduct fresh treasons against the workers.

LANDOWNERS IN CHINA

By EARL BROWDER.

ARTICLE I.

There is a general ignorance in Western countries about the conditions of landownership in China. Two opposing misconceptions prevail, which make it difficult to understand the peasant movement in China. These must first be disposed of.

The oldest of these misconceptions is, that there is no private ownership of land, or that such private ownership is recent, arising only since the overthrow of the Manchus (1911). Such well-known writers on China as MacGowan, Williams, Symon, Simcox, Douglas, deal with the land as exclusively the property of the head of the government, who is "the only landlord." Going to another extreme, a current conception is that China is "a land where the peasants already own most of the soil" (see Newsletter No. 8, of American Committee for Justice to China, July 28, 1927). Both of these ideas are far from the truth.

What, then, is the actual situation in its broad outlines? I will characterize the status of land-ownership and occupancy in a series of points, and then elaborate each of them with actual figures of investigations.

1. Private and absolute ownership of land is the basis of the Chinese landholding system. So-called public lands are largely based upon private ownership (by family, clan, etc.)

2. A very large proportion of the privately-owned land is in the hands of a relatively small class of land-basis of the Chinese land-hloding system. So-called public land is also cultivated by landless peasants. Thus the preponderant element in agricultural production is the tenant (varying in different provinces from 40 per cent to 80 per cent), and the agrarian question is dominated by the landlord-peasant relationship.

3. Peasant economics have been dragged under the influence of world markets, specialized cultivations, etc., but social and legal relationships are still dominated by feudal and semi-feudal customs, and institutions.

4. The unprogressive technique of agriculture (practically unchanged for thousands of years) produces an exceedingly minute division of units of cultivation. The tremendous pressure of population accentuates this factor, and simultaneously heightens the intensity of cultivation.

5. Out of these factors has grown an exploitation of the masses of peasantry, of a degree unknown in any other land, amounting to 70 or 80 per cent of their produce in the case of the main bulk of tenants or semi-tenants.

Here are the main outlines of the most fundamental question of the Chinese Revolution. It is not yet realized in the West, that it is the peasantry who furnish the main driving force of this revolution; it is quite usual, on the contrary, to read remarks in the American and English press especially, to the effect that the "conservative peasantry" of China will soon put an end to the "Bolshevik" tendencies of the revolution. It will be the purpose of these articles to make clear why it is that while the "Bolshevik" working class in the cities is leading the revolution, yet at the same time it is the "conservative" peasantry which relentlessly drives the revolution on and on, which makes it impossible to find a compromise which will stabilize China short of a thorough-going transformation of its entire economic and social system.

Patriotism and the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By HELEN BLACK.

One thing about the capitalist system, it never lets a money-making chance slip by. Its commercial eye is always peeled for opportunities to cash in on every mood, or whim, or event of the moment.

Take the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti for instance. Up near Boston it is an opening for betting. On August 10th, in Roxbury, the odds were heavily against the two doomed men in the morning; but as the day wore on they steadily changed until at 7 p. m. they were 4 to 5 in favor of reprieve. This did not mean, of course, that these bettors hoped for a reprieve. What difference did that make to them? It was just that they were gambling on a stay of execution—and they won. Probably the odds are not so good today since the verdict of the state supreme court came in.

Here in New York, ex-soldiers are making the most of the great world-workers' tragedy in a novel office to office canvas. Armed with credentials from the American Legion they call upon bankers, brokers, manufacturers, and other pillars of our social order.

"I wanted to tell ya about a fund we're raisin' fer the edjacation o' foreigners in this country," says the stalwart legionnaire.

"Ya see ther er 13,000,000 ignorant foreigners right in our midst an' we gotta make good Americans out of 'em. This here Sacco-Vanzetti case shows ya what they are. Tryin' t' interfere with our courts an' law and prevent a couple of wop murderers from gettin' what's comin' to 'em.

"Now we're gonna establish a fund to edjacate these b——s, or out they go. What we want you to do is endorse this complete history of the world war—written from both the Allied and the German point of view, everythin' about the war—an' then we'll inscribe in it the name of your son (he already knows the man has one) or some other relative who served in the world war.' All the profits of the history go to edjacatin' these 13 million foreigners—every cent of profit to the fund: and all its costs you is $127 includin' your name among the endorsers. The most complete account of all the events of the great world war, etc., etc."

Before he leaves, the salesman shows some of the pictures they have decided to leave out of the book because they are too horrible—some of the atrocities of the great conflict for democracy. Since the history is said to present both sides of the war, we can presume the unpublished pictures are also the atrocities committed by both armies.

But after all, if Representative Johnson uses Sacco and Vanzetti for personal publicity for himself, and Secretary of Labor Davis uses them as an excuse for some more of his anti-alien measures, why are they not grist to the mill of a humble book salesman. Sacco and Vanzetti are workers. What other fate have workers anywhere?

What I keep wondering is about that electrocutioner, Robert Elliot of Richmond Hill, L. I.

He has had to stay up in Boston ever since August 10th waiting to kill Sacco and Vanzetti. I wonder whether he is annoyed. I wonder whether he gets paid for waiting, or whether he just gets paid by the job and all this extra delay is costing him money.

Of course his business must be pretty good for he kills for three states—New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. But if he only gets so much a murder, he doesn't want to spend any more time at it then necessary. That's one thing about modern methods of killing, they take less time than the old-fashioned ones; altho they must give much less thrill to the executioner. For instance, just pulling a switch is not very exciting even tho you know it burns a man to death. A hanging took more practice and skill.

One of Mr. Elliot's neighbors out in Richmond Hill told a friend of mine that Sacco and Vanzetti ought to be hanged. There ought to be a public hanging out in front of the City Hall with everybody invited. "That's the way to treat those criminals," says the neighbor.

That's the kind of people who live in Richmond Hill. It's a quiet, middle-class suburb, full of meek white-collar slaves, and very, very respectable. Mr. Elliot's neighbor is quite typical of the community. No wonder Mr. Elliot lives there. He is doubtless much admired.

I can picture him grasping the morning papers and eagerly scanning the pages for murders—"Business, you know my dear; business." Even if its only a bonus on each killing and a flat retainer the rest of the time, Mr. Elliot must relish seeing the numbers mount up. "Cop slays picket"—oh no; that wouldn't mean business. "Man chokes wife"; "Wife slays lover"; "Bandits kill pursuers," etc., etc. The times are right, for Mr. Elliot, that's certain. In his little suburban cottage he can sit secure; sure that for him there will be no business depression; lazily dreaming of switches and levers and straps and wires.

He's been waiting for this Boston job for a long time. They've kept postponing it year after year. Just nonsence. Sheer spinelessness on the part of the government. The idea of allowing appeals and stays and petitions and all this legal dub-dub! The idea of bringing him up there two weeks ago for the murder and then issuing a reprieve. Why not get the thing over with. He had the chair all ready, everything set; and then they postpone it again.

Well every business has its annoyances. Even killing is not free from cares. Now Mr. Elliot will have to go over the whole electric chair bit by bit again. Try every part of it. Make sure there is no slip-up, no error. Three men to be killed, and it must be done neatly and quickly.

Robert Elliot is sitting in Boston waiting. Workers of the world, will he be allowed to carry out his murderous job?

IS THIS I, OR SACCO AND VANZETTI?

By LEO YURMANN.

(Translation by Joseph N. Katz.)

O, how heavy weighs the day upon
my back!
I would become blind,
I would become deaf
And not hear
Insanity colored voices
Of fear and blood. . . .

Always, out of my sleep I shiver!
And my eyes search,
And they dig;
Am I being crucified,
Will I be led bound
Monday midnight
To the last walk, of mine?
Or are these
Sacco and Vanzetti?
Brothers, my brothers!

I do not know!
It seems to me;
I, with death-scorched face,
I, with countless, uncounted,
Tortured deaths,
They lead me Monday midnight
To the murder-instrument, the modern. . . .

My night becomes restless
And red and fully insane;
With feverish visions,
With fearful phantasies, with death
delirium,
Like a raven, ever restless
I break out of my sleep
And cry and shiver.

The day became heavy
And out of all windows betrayal
scoffs at me;
My night, bloody-crying became
And I sit with bloody eyes upon my bed
And cry and shiver:
Is this I, or Sacco and Vanzetti? . . .

No, this is, the night answers:
This is, you and they,
And they and you
And the whole world,
The whole world,
The whole world!

WOMEN

WOMEN DRIVEN TO WORK AS AVERAGE AMERICAN WORKER'S WAGES FALL FAR SHORT OF NEEDS

By LELAND OLDS,
(Federated Press).

How far American wages fall short of enabling the workers to support their families in decency and comfort can be computed with considerable accuracy from the U. S. department of labor's publication of cost of living figures for June, 1927. Using these figures to bring the original department of labor minimum budget up-to-date, we find the joker in all the employer blah about improvement in the living standards of American workers. There has been a gain, but the start was made at so low a standard that the average worker family still falls far short of the decent living which the country's productive capacity could provide.

High Cost of Living.

In August 1919, according to the department, a worker family including 3 children required at least $2,262.47 a year to maintain itself in health and reasonable comfort. The recent report shows that since that date the cost of the budget items has changed to such an extent that $2,188 is required to maintain the same standard today.

The average expenditures necessary to meet the major items of this health and comfort budget for a family with 3 children on the basis of costs in June 1927 were:

Dept. of Labor Minimum Budget	Per Year	Per Week
Food	$652	$12.53
Clothing	364	7.00
Rent	412	7.92
Fuel and light	155	2.98
House furnishings	60	1.15
Miscellaneous	545	10.47
Total	$2,188	$42.02

Women Forced to Work.

This means that the average father employed in industry should have at least $42 a week throughout the year. If he can't earn it himself the mother of his children must become a wage earner to supplement his inadequate earnings or his family will experience the rigors of poverty.

To assure this income the average male factory worker must average at least $41 for a full week's work to cover inevitable loss of earnings through sickness, layoffs and part time. The building trades worker, who can count on only about 75 per cent of full time work throughout the year, must make at least $56 a week when working. Nor will these earnings make any provision for the purchase of new necessaries and comforts added to the normal family standard by the progress of industry since 1919.

Wages Short of Needs.

If the wages paid in Illinois are typical, male workers in this country fall at least 30 per cent short of being able to provide a family with this minimum standard of health and comfort. The average male worker in Illinois factories, according to the state department of labor, makes about $31.50 a week. In the building industry the average is $44.27. For leading manufacturing industries the averages are iron and steel $31.30, cars and locomotives $31.61, agricultural implements $28.76, boots and shoes $25.08, oil $32.36, job printing $42.85, men's clothing $34.10 and meat packing $27.32.

A 40 per cent increase all along the line would hardly bring these earnings up to the department's standard. Yet they are the wages of men with every right to support a family in accordance with the standards amply possible with American industry.

Shall Not Die!

FARMERS

TO ORGANIZATIONS AND LEADERS OF TOILING FARMERS AND PEASANTS OF ALL COUNTRIES

Dear Friends: We are addressing this letter to you to join us in the struggle against the preparation for a new world war.

Recent events have shown that the menace of a world war is closer and more direct than it might have seemed some time ago. We have witnessed a number of open acts provocating armed conflicts.

No one who is sincerely interested in preserving peace can now close his eyes to these facts. It is not sufficient to call oneself an opponent to war without at the same time doing something definite against the real menace of war. It is not enough to declare oneself in favor of peace and to give vent to general slogans about the brotherhood of nations, and meanwhile to support the imperialists who are carrying on war against the revolutionary liberation movement of the peasants and workers and all toiling masses of China, and feverishly preparing a military invasion of the U. S. S. R. The struggle for peace must not be a struggle of words, but of action. All real friends of peace, all those who are really opposed to war, must at the present time unite on the basis of a comomn platform of struggle against the war dangers.

United Front.

Against the united front of the enemies of the toiling masses—the organizers of war, let us establish a united anti-war front of the toiling farmers and peasants of the world. Let us join the ranks of the working-class and those of its organizations which are really fighting against the threatening war. Let us strengthen in the struggle the fraternal alliance of the workers and farmers and peasants throughout the world. No matter how different the path along which the various farmers' and peasants' organizations and their leaders want to serve the cause and the interests of the farmers and peasants, no matter how different their fighting methods may be, in the face of the menace of war and in the struggle against it the extension and consolidation of the international unity of the toiling farmers and peasants of the world must become the most essential task of all the laboring farmer and peasant organizations and all real defenders of the farmers' and peasants' interests.

Reach Understading.

The Farmers' and Peasants' International Council proposes to the organizations and leaders of the toiling farmers and peasants of all countries to come to an understading among each other concerning joint measures and a common program of action against the menacing world war. It is necessary to prepare joint campaigns among the broad masses of farmers and peasants. It is necessary to disclose the instigators of the new world war by means of joint manifestoes and leaflets, by means of issuing common pamphlets, and adopting anti-war resolutions at the farmers' and peasants' meetings, by means of manifestations and demonstrations, by means of convening various district and national anti-war farmers' and peasants' conferences, by appearing before all representative institutions (parliament, municipal, institutions, etc.), focussing the attention of the masses to the horrors which will result from such a war.

Unite to Struggle.

We call upon you to begin and carry on a most energetic campaign under the slogans: "Down with the instigators of war—the landlords and capitalists!" "Hands off China and the U. S. S. R.", "Farmers and workers of all countries, unite in the struggle against war!"

In order to lend the campaign a concrete character, and to rally the broad masses of farmers and peasants, it is necessary to link up these slogans with the everyday needs of the farmers and peasants. In every individual district it is necessary to combine this campaign with local conditions.

The anti-war struggle must be carried on not only by the farmers' and peasants' organizations and leaders, but must also draw in the farmers and peasants masses. For this reason we propose to set up anti-war farmer and peasant committees and to unify their activities.

Help Offered.

The Farmers' and Peasants' International Council will help in every way any of your undertakings for the preservation of peace. We are ready to discuss all questions and proposals concerning the intensification of the anti-war struggle with all organizations and leaders of the farmers' and peasants' organizations made by them.

All farmers' and peasants' organizations and their leaders must at the same time carefully consider the question how to unite the national anti-war struggle of workers and peasants with this movement in other countries.

Dear friends, the Farmers' and Peasants' International Council calls upon you to join hands with the workingclass in the struggle against the preparation for a new war which will injure the toiling farmers and peasants more than anyone else. We therefore ask all the defenders of the farmers and peasants interests to express their opinion on the issues we touched upon here.

Awaiting your reply.

Yours fraternally,

For the Presidium of the Farmers' and Peasants' International Council.

Sacco and Vanzetti Murdered!

SACCO AND VANZETTI ARE DEAD! LONG LIVE SACCO AND VANZETTI!

THE FOUL murder has been committed. Sacco and Vanzetti are dead. Their lives have been burned out of them in the electric chair by the owning class assassins.

But for the workers of the world, Sacco and Vanzetti still live, carrying the torch of labor's struggle for emancipation thru every land.

Sacco and Vanzetti were banner bearers of the revolution. It was for this they died. Millions spring forward to take up the banner of revolution where they were forced to drop it.

THE RULING class feared Sacco and Vanzetti. It sought to smother this fear thru the legalized assassination of our comrades.

The rulers believed Sacco and Vanzetti less dangerous dead than alive. So they murdered them.

BUT THE seven years of torture inflicted upon Sacco and Vanzetti, the victims of American capitalist "justice," aroused international labor to a realization of the hungry lust for working class blood of the American dollar worshippers.

The seven years of suffering of Sacco and Vanzetti has done more than any other single influence to help cement the unity of world labor for greater struggles against the common oppressor, international greed, at the head of which stands the American plutocracy.

THE WORKING class never forgets. Down thru the years Tuesday, August 23, 1927, will be remembered as the day of martyrdom of Sacco and Vanzetti. The children of the workingclass, each new generation, will always remember.

THE MURDER crew from Thayer, the puny capitalist judge of Dedham, to Coolidge, New England's strike breaker president, from the multi-millionaire mill baron of Massachusetts, former senator, William Butler, to the Morgans and Rockefellers, will regret to the last dying day of the social system in defense of which they make war upon the working class.

Sacco and Vanzetti dead are mightier than ever, battering at the pillars, growing ever weaker, that support the social structure, the upholders of which took their lives.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead; Long live Sacco and Vanzetti! LONG LIVE THE WORLD REVOLUTION!

THE CRADLE OF LIBERTY?

"THEIR NAMES WILL BE SHOUTED IN FUTURE CLASS WAR BATTLES"

THE following is the statement of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee on the execution of the two revolutionists, our comrades:

WE mourn with sorrowing hearts the loss of our murdered comrades, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. We know this sorrow is shared with us by tens of millions of workers and sympathizers throughout the world. Today the criminal government of Massachusetts perpetrated a crime of such enormity that will cause its name to stink in the nostrils of all civilized men forever.

BUT our grief is heightened with a feeling of just hatred for a system of society under which two innocent workers may be murdered in cold blood as human sacrifices to master-class hate. We dedicate ourselves now to the abolition of this system of society where legal class lynchings are carried on with diabolical callousness.

One Killed, 25 Hurt In Geneva Protest of Double Murder

LONDON, Aug. 22.—One person was killed and more than twenty-five wounded in Geneva tonight in Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch received here tonight.

Several of the wounded persons are in a critical condition.

Five thousand workers gathered in the Place Palais—the Central Park of Geneva—and paraded through the

The Daily Worker Called To Federal Court

APPEARING in the United States District Court—Southern District of New York—before Judge J. Burns, our comrades, J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne and Bert Miller of The DAILY WORKER staff and David Gordon asked for an adjournment of their case until Monday, August 29th. Attorney Joseph R. Brodsky presented the plea for adjournment.

The fact that the hearing was called on the date August 22, set for the Sacco-Vanzetti execution is considered to be no mere coincidence. It coincides with the supervision which has been instituted over The DAILY WORKER offices by the Bomb Squad. Many signs point indisputably to the fact that the prosecution is being pressed at this particular time because of the leading part taken by our DAILY WORKER in the agitation for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

For this reason we ask our friends and supporters to again set the wheels in motion to protect The DAILY WORKER against its enemies. The Guard The DAILY WORKER Fund must be revived with vigor. Our forces must again be mobilized for the coming attack. A retainer of $500.00 will have to be deposited with our attorneys before they can take up our case. We rely upon all readers of The DAILY WORKER and particularly upon all Party branches to act at once on the question of the immediate collection of funds.

WARDEN STARTS ELECTROCUTIONS AT EARLIEST POSSIBLE MOMENT; GOV. FULLER REBUFFS EVERY PETITION

Workers Died With Greatest Bravery; Refuse Religion; Machine Guns Menace Crowds

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are dead.

They were murdered by order of "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts" in the electric chair at the Charlestown state prison a few minutes after midnight.

Each was pronounced dead a few seconds after the electrical switch was thrown by Robert C. Elliott, Sing Sing executioner, and their bodies were laid on the stone slabs brot into the death chamber.

THE MURDER CREW WORKS FAST.

Sacco entered the death chamber at 12:11; he was pronounced dead at 12:19. Vanzetti entered the death chamber at 12:20; his lifeless body was removed from the electric chair at 12:26.

Both workers made short speeches protesting their innocence to the last. Little opportunity was given them, however, and they were rushed into the chair and hurriedly strapped by prison guards.

Celestino Madeiros, 25-year-old Portuguese who confessed that he was a member of the Morelli gang of Providence which committed the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were framed, was the first to be electrocuted, he being pronounced dead at 12:05.

At 11:20 o'clock Michael A. Musmanno, one of the attorneys for the defense, dashed up to the prison and hurried into the warden's office and asked if he could see the condemned men.

"It's too late," said the warden.

"Is there no hope of seeing them?"

"Not now," replied the warden, "but I will tell them that you were here."

"Can I go with you when you tell them?"

"No, too late," said the warden.

Musmanno leaned against the wall completely wilted. The reporters asked him:

"Did you have a message for them?" "Of course, I had a last message," he replied.

BOSTON PICKETS MARCH DESPITE POLICE TERROR

Scores Arrested in Big Demonstration

(Special to the Daily Worker).

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—After four picket lines had been broken by police raids and wholesale arrests, Edna St. Vincent Millay, internationally known poetess, Professor Ellen Hayes, Ella Reeve Bloor, Margaret Hatfield: head of Mount Airy private school; Powers Hapgood, young militant mine leader who has already been arrested twice for Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations were among the 125 placed under arrest for reforming the picket line and demonstarting in front of the State House.

Hapgood was taken away to the psychopathic hospital where he will be held for an "examination." Hapgood, who was one of the most brilliant students in his class at Harvard has been causing the Boston cossacks a good deal of trouble, and his arrest is a frame-up to keep him from leading new protest demonstrations.

Mrs. James S. Cram and J. Borden Harriman have left New York for this city to join the protest. It is said that they have in their possession a plea from Mrs. Thayer, wife of Judge Webster Thayer, who sentenced the men to the chair, for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Four groups of picketers, maintaining a death march in front of the state house in protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, had been arrested by the Boston police up to 1:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Among those arrested were John Howard Lawson, playwright; Harry Cantor, of the Workers (Communist) Party; Paula Halliday and Alfred Baker Lewis, of the socialist party.

Despite police terrorism and attempts to smash demonstrations at the state house, pickets continuel to demonstrate before the state house. As the picket lines began to increase in size and as crowds of spectators began to boo Governor Fuller and to demand the unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti the police made their charge.

German Workers Theatening

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—So high is feeling over the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti running among the workers of Germany that the United States Ambassador Shurman fears to enter or leave the embassy without a guard of secret service men. Thousands of letters protesting the action of the Massachusetts Supreme Court in upholding the death sentence are pouring into the embassy. Many of the letters bear the name of prominent Germans.

Japan Workers to Boycott U. S.

TOKIO, Aug. 22.—Following the sending of a cable to President Coolidge protesting against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti, labor organizations have covered the entire city with a rain of handbills and posters calling on the Japanese workers to boycott American goods.

A monster mass meeting has been called at which prominent Japanese labor leaders will speak. The police have promised not to interfere, but it is expected that they will attempt to break up the protest.

Extra guards are being thrown about the American embassy as excitement runs at feverpitch.

French Workers Aroused.

MARSEILLES, France, Aug. 22.—Hundreds of workers assembled here in a huge meeting to protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Speakers from all branches of the labor movement addressed the workers, outlining the history of the case and calling on the international working class to strengthen the protest against this legalized murder. Police were present but did not care to interefere.

Protest meetings and demonstrations have been held at Avignon, Limoges, Nimes and many other towns and centers thruout France.

Brest Council Cables Coolidge.

BREST, France, Aug. 22.—The municipal Council has passed a resolution asking for mercy for Sacco and Vanzetti. The resolution has been cabled to President Coolidge.

HAVRE, France, Aug. 22.—Several were injured when police here interfered with a meeting that was being held to protest the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. The police had refused permission to hold the meeting and when the crowds assembled tried to disperse them. The workers resisted and the police used force. Excitement is high among the workers thruout France, and special guards are being maintained at all United States official buildings.

Atlanta Protest Meeting.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 22.—At a huge mass meeting in which hundreds here participated, and labor and sympathetic organizations took part, resolutions denouncing the action of the Massachusetts Supreme Court in upholding the death sentence for Sacco and Vanzetti and demanding their immediate liberation were passed. Copies of the resolutions were sent to Judge Webster Thayer and President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Sacco, Vanzetti Are Murdered!

At 10.40 Governor Fuller closed the last door of hope for Sacco and Vanzetti. He refused to grant any further respite to the two doomed men. His answer was made to Miss Luigia Vanzetti and Mrs. Rose Sacco who made a last impassioned plea to the governor when less than two hours of life remained for the two workers.

The women were accompanied during their visit to the governor by attorney Michael Musmanno of the defense counsel and William G. Thompson, former head of the defense legal forces, and his son. The party left the state house shortly afterward.

A constant stream of callers waited on Gov. Fuller all evening and pleaded for a respite for Sacco and Vanzetti. Mrs. Rose Sacco, Miss Luigia Vanzetti, Arthur D. Hill, chief of defense counsel—all were dismissed casually by the governor who told them to "produce more evidence." Flanked by three of his hard-boiled legal advisers, Fuller was deaf to their pleas.

At 9 p. m. Warden Hendry notified Sacco and Vanzetti that they are to die. "We must bow to the inevitable," was Vanzetti's comment.

Thousands of workers started to march on Bunker Hill from the north end at 11.55 tonight.

They were broken up at once by police who rushed them into disorder. They immediately reformed their procession and again started. Clashes were frequent. Police swinging their clubs mercilessly.

At Bunker Hill.

Squads of mounted men rushed from the prison to break up the workers. Machine guns were mounted on Bunker Hill.

Mounted cops, state constabulary and foot police—fortified by machine guns, rifles and clubs—were on guard outside the Charlestown state prison a few minutes after midnight. A total of 2,300 have been recruited for "any emergency," in the words of Supt. Crowley of the Boston police department.

The victims of one of the most cold-blooded judicial murders ever recorded, Sacco, shoeworker, and Vanzetti, a fish peddler, were framed-up as a result of a conspiracy between agents of the department of justice and a petty Massachusetts prosecuting attorney as a means of disposing of them as "dangerous radicals."

Never in the history of the world labor movement has there arisen such a thunderous mass fury against the assassination of these two workers by the mill-owners of New England.

In every country of the world, workers by the thousands joined in angry protests against this iniquitous crime. With cold contempt the officials of the Massachusetts proceeded with the plans for the murder.

Vanzetti Speaks.

Vanzetti made a short talk in which he protested his innocence. He was cool and collected. As he entered the death chamber he shook hands with his guards.

Then he sat down in the chair without any instructions and said: "I wish to tell you I am innocent and never committed a crime. I thank you for everything you have done for me. I am innocent of all crime—not only of this one but of all crimes. I am an innocent man."

The proceedure in the death chamber was still and grim. Warden Hendry gave the signal. Robert C. Elliott, the executioner, was standing at the switch and caught the signal instantly. He pushed the switch in with a hand. The lights went dim. The victim in the chair gave a lunge that made the strong leather straps creak. After ten seconds the switch was gradually drawn out, but not all the way. The lights grew bright again.

In another ten seconds the switch was forced in again. More dim lights. There was second lunge by the victim but weaker than the first.

They Fear Their Own Crime!

By JOHN DOS PASSOS.

Sacco and Vanzetti died tonight. The trembling hand of an old man reached for the switch that threw the current of hate, terror and death into the bodies of two great men, two young men who went to their death with their eyes open to a new sun rising over a festered world.

In the state house the head of the lynching party sat in his office keeping the mask of strength and fairness to the last. In comfortable country homes well-guarded by riot guns—members of the commission, the justices, the attorney-generals, all those on whom the guilt of this seven-year-long assassination rests, sat in their easy chairs. They have proved to the world that they are masters. Whoever their class wants to kill, they kill and protests are mere empty wind. Only one member of the committee has broken and run. Judge Stratton sailed for Europe yesterday. If they are so sure, why the terror? Why have they had to mobilize state constabulary with riot guns, tear gas and machine guns for their protection?

Why have they had to resort to futile tricks like kidnaping Powers Hapgood and hiding him in an insane asylum for fear he would make a speech? Was one speech going to overthrow the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The government lynchers in their silk hats and in their comfortable swivel chairs, sitting at their mahogany desks are afraid of the crime they scarcely dared commit.

Beyond the horizon they hear the rumble of marching feet. They know that they are dead stinking corpses, and that Sacco and Vanzetti whom they kill are alive—a million men marching on Boston under the fiery sun of the future.

Put Sacco and Vanzetti Placards on Car

Charged with obstructing traffic, Herman Zukofsky, was arrested in front of the Sacco and Vanzetti Emergency Defense headquarters yesterday. Zukofsky was putting placards demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti on his automobile when the police made their arrest. He was held at the Mercer St. station for the nigut

STRIKE EVERYWHERE FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

SYDNEY WORKERS DROP TOOLS.

SYDNEY, Aug. 22.—All members of the seamen and other unions downed tools here in a strike to protest against the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Posters and placards have been put up thruout the city and the feeling among the workers is intense.

TOKIO POLICE ARREST 31.

TOKIO, Aug. 22.—Twenty workers were arrested here when the Japanese police broke up a monster mass meeting to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Later ten more were arrested on their way to petition the United States embassy for the liberation of the doomed prisoners. Another arrest was made yesterday morning when an enraged worker tried to force his way into the American embassy in an effort to compel the United States officials abroad to hear the protest of Japanese labor. The arrests were made at a meeting which the police had promised not to interfere.

MOSCOW, Aug. 22.—The entire front page of Pravda has been dedicated to the appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti. Under a huge headline: "Save the Proletarian Martyrs," appeared a page of news made up of dispatches from the United States telling of the latest developments in the case. A cartoon represented the American bosses as a top-hatted snake, about which were strewn crucifixes and swastikas, praying over Sacco and Vanzetti.

ITALIAN LEGION CABLES COOLIDGE.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—A protest from the Italian Legion in Great Britain has been cabled to President Coolidge, calling on him to pardon Sacco and Vanzetti "to oblige humanity and Italian blood."

PARIS WORKERS APPEAL.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—A delegation of 70 workers' representatives called at the United States embassy here and presented a plea for Sacco and Vanzetti. The American charge d'affaires refused to listen to the appeal. The delegation was headed by Deputy Alexandre Piquemal, head of the left wing in the French trade union movement.

SWEDISH WORKERS STRIKE.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 22.—A general strike to protest against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has been called here. All workers downed tools with an enthusiasm that alarmed the authorities. Feeling runs high and the workers are demanding a boycott of all American products.

FRENCH PROTEST MURDER.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—French radical newspapers today printed last hour appeals in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Communist newspaper L'Humanite published a demand that President Coolidge intervene, citing the Mooney case in California in 1917 when President Wilson intervened.

L'Ouevre commented: "It is most significant that everywhere in Europe and the entire world today the Star Spangled Banner must be guarded by armed forces."

OVER 20,000 ROCHESTER WORKERS STRIKE.

ROCHESTER, Aug. 22.—Thousands of workers went on strike here in protest against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti. Initiative in the strike was taken by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers who walked out altho the union officials refused to call a strike. The clothing workers were joined by others from many trades. The strike is expected to exceed in numbers the strike of two weeks ago when over 20,000 workers went out.

YOUNGSTOWN GENERAL STRIKE.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Aug. 22.—Thousands of workers downed tools here in a general strike to protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The strike call was issued at a mass meeting in the Ukrainian Hall which was addressed by Carl Hacker, secretary of the Cleveland International Labor Defense.

Plans for organizing a death watch were under way late last night as the watchers awaited the final developments in the case of the two doomed workers.

EDITOR PROTESTS.

Amos Bertacchini, editor of United America, has protested in the name of his readers against the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti. "In the name of many thousands of readers," Mrs. Bertacchini's telegram runs, "we go on protest against the execution of the two innocent leaders of the working class sentenced to death thru a positive miscarriage of justice."

STAMFORD PROTESTS AT CITY HALL.

STAMFORD, Aug. 22.—A meeting to protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti was held yesterday evening on the steps of the City Hall here. Several prominent speakers addressed the enthusiastic crowd who had gathered in hundreds to protest. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Stamford Sacco and Vanzetti Defense Committee.

MURDERER IN ITALY CONFESSES TO CRIME FOR WHICH SACCO AND VANZETTI HAVE BEEN DOOMED; AMERICAN AMBASSADOR WON'T HEAR NEW EVIDENCE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

CHICAGO, Aug. 22. — Certain proof that Sacco and Vanzetti did not commit the crime for which they have been sentenced to burn by the Massachusetts overlords is contained in two cablegrams received by the International Labor Defense from the International Red Aid, signed by Jacob Schloer, secretary.

The first cablegram says; "The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin today reports that the real participant in the murder and hold-up of Parmenter was found by a Berlin architect in Italy."

U. S. Ambassador Accomplice.

Declaring that the American ambassador in Italy is aiding in the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by refusing to listen to the new evidence, the second cablegram says:

"The Berlin architect, who saw the real person in Rome who committed the crime, gave the newspapers an interview. We are convinced of the truth of the statement. We are in possession of a drawing of the person. The witness is ready to make a statement under oath before the American ambassador, but the ambassador declines to see him, declaring that he is too busy."

The Vossische Zeitung is the biggest paper in Berlin. Both cables have been forwarded to the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee at Boston to be used by the attorneys for a stay of execution.

Hairspinners' Union Disbands.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22 (FP). — The Hairspinners' Union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor as Federal Union 10,399, has disbanded.

Thousands in Union Sq. Sing International Upon News of Murder

When the twelve thousand workers gathered at Union Square until 1 a. m. learned that the Massachusetts oligarchy had finally murdered Sacco and Vanzetti after seven long years of torture, they broke into the International.

Scores of women fainted when the news of the murder was flashed on the board.

Hundreds of policemen, heavily armed, watched the demonstration.

When it was announced that Sacco and Vanzetti were murdered the crowd groaned—then booed and hissed. Scores of women fainted. A new march to City Hall was then started. Armored cars tried to prevent them from continuing.

WARDEN MAY NOT GIVE UP BODIES OF MURDERED MEN

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Massachusetts carries its cruelty beyond the grave. It was very plainly intimated today at the warden's office that the relatives and friends of Sacco and Vanzetti, the workers who have braved police clubs in the effort to save them will not be given their bodies to bury. Prison quicklime for them.

When Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers began talking today about the big demonstration they would have at the funeral of the men, the authorities became silent and started looking up the law.

They found that they do not have to give up the bodies unless they choose. The executed men, under the law, can be buried in quick time. But no one would say that is what will be done. In all probabilities the bodies will be held for a post mortem and surrendered to relatives after the feeling dies down and then only on an agreement that the funerals will be private and quiet. But all that remains to be seen.

streets, gathering sympathizers as they marched. The agitators attacked several of the big hotels and American shops, and broke all the windows in the American Legation Building, the dispatch states.

Revolvers were used freely by the demonstartors and it is believed that a check-up will reveal a toll of casualties greater than now estimated.

An American garage was partly destroyed.

The police station, where five leaders who had been arrested were lodged, was stormed and those incarcerated were freed by the sympathizers. City Councillor Albaret, who attempted to interfere, was stoned and removed to the hospital.

Last Legal Attempts for Sacco, Vanzetti

1.—Justices Taft and Stone joined Holmes and Brandeis in refusing to permit their case to be brot to the United States Supreme Court.

2.—Judge Sisk of Massachusetts Superior Court declined to stay execution. He had been appealed to last Friday and reserved decision.

3.—Assistant Attorney General Farnham announced that he would open files of Department of Justice relating to case if Gov. Fuller or Pres. Lowell would make an official request.

4.—A new action of a "new and startling nature" was filed in the United States District Court by three famous lawyers—Arthur Garfield Hayes, New York; Francis Fisher Kane, Philadelphia and Frank P. Walsh, New York.

5.—Federal intervention was sought thru United States Senators David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, and William E. Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign-Relations Committee.

6.—At 10:47, a little more than an hour before the execution, Gov. Fuller refused last plea of Mrs. Rose Sacco and Miss Luigia Vanzetti.

"THEIR NAMES WILL BE SHOUTED IN FUTURE CLASS WAR BATTLES"

THEY took two simple workers—a shoemaker and a fish peddler—and crucified them on the cross of Mammon as a warning to thinking workers that henceforth political and economic heresies shall be punishable by death in America.

THE result of this act of barbarity will be far-reaching. The names—Sacco and Vanzetti—shall become—they are already—symbols for the disinherited workers throughout the world. Their names will be shouted in all future battles of the class war—they will be whispered with reverence wherever workers will gather—they will become watchwords for all who would engage in the bitter struggle for a finer, a better, system of society.

THROUGH their seven years of fiendish torture our innocent comrades rose infinitely superior to their prosecutors and executioners. When Fuller and Thayer and Lowell are long since forgotten Sacco and Vanzetti will be yet unborn poets.

IN our sorrow we are proud to remember that our dead comrades met their pitiable fate with calm courage and steadfast hearts. They met the tragic sordidness of their plight with cool dignity that raised them out of the death house and placed them forever in the hearts of their fellow-workers. They died as all true revolutionists die, with quiet manner and faithful messages to their class.

THIS venal murder is proof undeniable that the workers of America have little to hope for from the courts and social institutions as long as they remain under the heels of the master class. Massachusetts has done more today to inflame the hearts of the toilers of America than anything else in the past fifty years in the history of the class struggle. We accept the seared bodies of our comrades but leave the cause of future class strife where it properly belongs—with the Fullers, the Thayers and the Lowells as typical agents of their decadent class.

HISTORY will record that in the second American revolution blood flowed where it did in 1776—in Boston.

IT is said that the American public forgets easily. We will make it our holy task to see that this infamy is never forgotten. The bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti died this morning, but something greater, cleaner, and immeasurably more potent came into the world when the unharnessed bolts of electricity burst into their tortured bodies.

NEGRO CONGRESS OPENS WITH CALL TO CO-OPERATION

Pan-African Body Calls All Workers to Battle

Only thru cooperation between the Negro workers and the white workers can the problems of the Negro be solved, William Pickens, field secretary for the Association for the Advancement of the Colored People declared in his opening address to the Fourth Pan-American Congress which is being held at St. Mark's M. E. Church.

Common Interest of all Producers.

"The proletariat, the workers, the producers of the goods of human society are beginning to sense a common interest in a common cause, a need for mutual support in Moscow, in Hankow, in Paris and in Passaic," Prof. Pickens said.

Declaring that the negroes were enslaved not because they were black, but because they were easy to exploit Pickens added, "The Negroes of Africa were enslaved because they offered the greatest return for the smallest amount of outlay and effort to the slave hunter. They were enslaved not because they were black but for offering a resistance of spear heads to powder-driven bullets."

Warns Against "Good" Imperialists.

Pickens warned the Negro congress against the danger of believing that any one of the imperialist powers is better intentioned than the others. The French he said are careless about the color line but they exploit Negro labor wherever they can, notably in North Africa.

Thirteen countries besides the United States are represented at the congress. There are delegates from all over the world, from Latin America and the Antilles, Asia and Africa.

Prof. Pickens who was a delegate to the recent Anti-Imperialist Conference in Brussels is reporting on it to the present congress.

The Colored Worker.

By ESTHER LOWELL.

What is the situation of colored workers around the world and what is to be done about it? These two questions are among the problems of darker peoples to be considered by the 4th Pan-African Congress meeting in New York Aug. 21-24, says Nina G. Du Bois.

Mrs. Du Bois is a member of the executive committee of the Circle for Peace and Foreign Relations, sponsor of the 3rd and 4th congresses. The Circle is "an organization of American women who believe in the universality of the race problem," their first bulletin on the congress states. Mrs. Du Bois' husband, Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois, has been prominent in all past congresses and is editor of The Crisis, organ of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"The organization of commerce and industry so as to make the main objects of capital and labor the welfare of the many, rather than the enriching of the few," was one point formulated by the executive at the 3rd congress. Another was world disarmament and the abolition of war, but the right of blacks to bear arms in their own defense pending whites' disarming. Another called for abolition of slavery and the liquor traffic.

The congress will bring together delegates from Negro groups in different sections of Africa and from the West Indies, though the bulk of representatives will be from the organizations of American Negroes or come as individuals from this country. The Haitian delegates include those who were clapped into prison on a flimsy pretext by president Louis Borno as they were about to sail for the Pan-American Federation of Labor convention in Washington.

Mexican Workers Warn U. S. Supreme Court of Danger of Injustice

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 22.—Resolutions declaring that Sacco and Vanzetti are "the victims of capitalism on whom it has concentrated its hate," were sent by the delegates to the Mexican Federation of Labor now in session here to the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court to warn him of the consequences that may be expected from the murder of the two workers.

"Two million Mexican workers protest before the world the action prepared against our comrades Sacco and Vanzetti," the telegram reads. "The United States Supreme Court should act with justice and avoid the serious consequences which would move the entire proletariat of the world."

History of Vanzetti-Sacco Case Is Sent to U. S. Ambassadors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. — The state department has sent to every American diplomatic agent thruout the world a complete history of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Two years ago the state department sent a similar statement to its agents in every country. The present document, it is stated, has not been revised in any way. Brandeis in the Role of Pilate.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, the much-touted liberal, has washed his hands off Sacco-Vanzetti on the flimsy excuse that members of his family were interested in the case.

Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea, acted in a similar manner when the rebel carpenter of Nazareth was slated for execution.

Alleged liberal and rock-ribbed conservative act in accordance with the wishes of the ruling classes of the United States, that have decreed the death of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Louis D. Brandeis is part of the capitalist machine that intends to make an example of Sacco and Vanzetti. His liberalism does not click when the system on which he feeds demands compliance with its needs. The capitalist class of the United States consider the Sacco and Vanzetti case a challenge. They are bent on murder and "justice" does not cut any ice. Capitalist justice, despite legal documents and the opinions of fossilized judges does not travel with the book. It discards the book when it suits its purpose. The technicalities that are mouthed by the legal dotards of the supreme court as an excuse for refusing to halt the hands of the hangman, are meaningless phrases, but they serve a useful purpose. They enable the capitalists to murder two innocent workers with a show of legality.

There has been no case in American history where the class character of our system of "justice" has been so thoroly exposed as in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The great majority of the population of this country believes in their innocence. Even a large section of the capitalist press is calling for action on the part of Governor Fuller that would stay the executioner's hand. Yet the dominant section of the American ruling class is intent on their death. And the "liberal" Brandeis is going along.

A Pilate has come to judgment.

Legion a Foe of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The French Communists are striking a responsive chord in the hearts of all American class-conscious workers when they tell the American Legion, "If Sacco and Vanzetti are murdered in America, you cannot hold any convention in France."

It is not just that the American Legion is one of the most vulgar and blatant representatives of American jingoism wherever it goes. It is not just that the legion shares to the full the "hundred percentism" that is partially responsible for the death sentence upon Sacco and Vanzetti. And it is not just that the Legion is made up for the most part of the sons of rich men, who did little more than profit from the war, safe in "the service of supply," or in staff positions from which they sent to their death in futile charges the common cannon fodder of the trenches, whenever times were too dull, and the news needed pepping up.

But the American Legion has made itself one of the most brutal instruments for repression of American workers that the American capitalists possess.

Just as a sample of Legion tactics, take the Centralia case in 1919.

The American Legion of Centralia, Washington, deliberately plotted the murder of I. W. W. union organizers and the destruction of their hall, situated in that town. They paraded past the hall with ropes in their hands, broke ranks at a given signal, and charged in force. The workers inside the hall defended themselves bravely, but were overcome. When the fight was over, and the unionists in jail, the Legion deliberately took Wesley Everest, one of the I. W. W.'s, loaded him in an automobile, hideously mutilated him with a knife, hanged him from a bridge, hauled him up before he was dead and then hanged him again, repeated this three times, until his throat was torn open by the rope, and finally buried him secretly, the next night, after leaving him dead on exhibition for hours.

That's the way the Legion fights labor.

The Legion has broken strikes, raided union halls, committed arson, assault, mayhem, and has lynched, tarred and feathered, and flogged unionists.

In the present Sacco-Vanzetti case the Legion has fully supported Hangman Thayer, commended his every action, and called for a supply of machine guns and bombs to kill any sympathizers with Thayer's victims. If the French workers run the Legion out of France, they will not be attacking any innocent third parties.

For the Unity of Labor.

The DAILY WORKER in this issue publishes in full the speech delivered by William Pickens before the opening session of the Fourth Pan-African Congress now being held in New York City. It should be read and thoroly studied by workers of all colors and nationalities because, as Pickens so ably points out:

> "If there is a factory or a mill that employs many people of many different races, the destiny of those people is far more involved in their work and wages than in their language and birthplaces."

Mr. Pickens reported especially on the recent conference held at Brussels, Belgium, that brought together the spokesmen of submerged masses the world over. This did not give him an opportunity to discuss in detail the many problems involved in the building of the unity of white and black labor in the United States. This will be done during the sessions of the congress since:

> "Capitalist exploiters are a natural class ,not to be distinguished by race, color, language or ancient history. Even an American Negro capitalist, late descendant of raped Africa, is just exactly like other capitalists."

In this realization the Pan-African Congress might well put upon the order of the day a special program to be urged upon the American Federation of Labor, that meets in annual convention in Los Angeles, in October, and upon the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

"THEY CRUCIFY US NOT OUR IDEAS" SACCO WRITES SON IN DEATH CELL

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—On the eve of the day set for his electrocution and that of Bartolomeo Vanzetti on framed-up charges of murder, Nicola Sacoo has written a farewell letter to his 14-year-old son, Dante.

"They can crucify our bodies as they are doing, but they cannot destroy our ideas that will remain for the youth of the future to come," is his conclusion in his message. The letter follows:

Charlestown, State Prison.

My Dean Son and Companion:

Since the day I saw you last I had always the idea to write you this letter, but the length of my hunger strike and the thought I might not be able to explain myself, made me put it off all this time.

The other day I ended my hunger strike and just as soon as I did that I thought of you to write to you, but I find that I did not have enough strength and I cannot finish it at one time.

I never thought that our inseparable life could be separated but the thought of seven dolorous years, makes it seem it did come. But then it has not changed really the unrest and the heart beat of affection. That has remained as it was. More I say that our ineffable affection reciprocal, is today more than any other time, of course. That is not only a great deal but it is grand because you can see the real brotherly love, not only in the joy, but also and more in the struggle of suffering. Remember this, Dante. We have demonstrated this, and, modesty apart, we are proud of it.

Much we have suffered during this long calvary. We protest today as we protested yesterday. We protest always for our freedom.

If I stopped my hunger strike the other day, it was because there was no more sign of life in me. Because I protested with my hunger strike yesterday, as today I protest for life and not for death.

I sacrificed because I wanted to come back to the embrace of your dear little sister, Inez, and your mother and all the beloved friends and comrades of life not death. So, sonny, today life begins to revive slow and calm, but yet without horizon and always with sadness and visions of death.

Tears Wasted.

Well, my dear boy, after your mother had talked to me so much and I had dreamed of you day and night, how joyful it was to see you at last. To have talked with you like we used to in the days—in those days. Much I told you on that visit and more I wanted to say, but I saw that you will remain the same affectionate boy, faithful to your mother, who loves you so much, and I did not want to hurt your sensibilities any longer, because I am sure that you will continue to be the same boy and remember what I have told you. I knew that and what here I am going to tell you will touch your sensibilities, but don't cry, Dante, because many tears have been wasted, as your mother's have been wasted for seven years, and never did any good.

Told To Comfort Mother.

So sonny, instead of crying, be strong, so as to be able to comfort your mother, and when you want to distract your mother from the discouraging soulness, I will tell you what I used to do. To take her for a long walk in the quiet country, gathering wild flowers here and there, resting under the shade of trees, between the harmony of the vivid stream and the gentle tranquility of the mother nature, and I am sure that she will enjoy this very much, as you sure would be happy for it. But remember always, Dante, in the play of happiness, don't you use all for yourself only, but down yourself just one step, at your side and help the weak ones that cry for help, help the prosecuted and the victim, because they are your better friends; they are the comrades that fight and fall as your father and Bartolomeo fought and fell yesterday for the conquest of the joy of freedom for all the poor workers. In this struggle of life you will find more love and you will be loved.

I am sure that from what your mother told me about what you said during these late terrible days when I was lying in the iniquitious death house—that description gave me happiness because it showed that you will be the beloved boy I had always dreamed.

Praises Comrades.

Therefore, whatever should happen tomorrow, nobody knows but if they should kill us, you must not forget to look at your friends and comrades with the smiling gaze of gratitude as you look at your beloved ones because they love you as they love everyone of the fallen persecuted comrades. I tell you, your father that is all the life to you, your father that loves you and saw them, and knows their noble faith (that is mine) their supreme sacrifice that they are still doing for our freedom, for I have fought with them, and they are the ones that still hold the last of our hope that they can still save us from electrocution, it is the struggle and fight between the rich and the poor for safety and freedom, son, which you will understand in the future of your years to come, of this unrest and struggle of life's battle.

"Shame of Century."

Much I thought of you while I was lying in the death house—the singing, the kind tender voices of the children from the playground, where there was all the life and the joy of liberty—just one step from the wall which contained the buried agony of three buried souls. It would remind me so often of you and your sister, Inez, and I wish I could see you every moment. But I feel better that you did not come to the death house so that you could not see the horrible picture of three lying in agony waiting to be electrocuted, because I do not know what effect it would have on your young age. But then, in another way if you were not so sensitive it would be very useful to you tomorrow when you could use this horrible memory to hold up to the world the shame of the century in the cruel persecution and unjust death. Yes, Dante, they can crucify our bodies today as they are doing, but they cannot destroy our ideas that will remain for the youth of the future to come.

Future To Youth.

Dante, when I said three human lives buried I meant to say that with us is another young man by the name of Celestino Maderios that is to be electrocuted at the same time with us. He has been twice before in that horrible death house, that should be destroyed with the hammers of real progress—that horrible house that will shame forever the future of the citizens of Massachusetts. They should destroy that house and put up a factory or school, to teach many of the hundreds of the poor orphan boys of the world.

Dante, I say once more to love and be nearest to your mother and the loved ones in these sad days, and I am sure that with your brave and kind goodness they will feel less discomfort. And you will also not to forget to love me a little—for I do. Oh, sonny, thinking so much and so often of you.

Best fraternal greetings to all the beloved ones. Love—kiss to little Inez and mother. Most hearty affectionate embrace.

Your father and companion.

P. S.—Bartolomeo sends you the most affectionate greetings. I hope that your mother will help you to understand this letter because I could have written much better and more simply if I was feeling good. But I am so weak.

Needle Trade Defense

Collections and Donations.

The Hungarian Branch of I. L. D. of Chicago, sent a check for $5. B. Radinowski, Omaha, Nebraska sent a $2 donation. S. Zuckerman, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin donated $2.50. $1 was received from S. Berkowitz, Roxbury, Mass.

Join the Workers' Self Defense.

Stop the pogrom in the needle trades. The Sigman gang is collapsing. It is exerting its last strength in a last struggle to weaken the Joint Board. Its last test act was a raid on the offices of Local 22 to steal its furniture: The workers must rally to deliver the final blow to this band of gangsters. This is possible only through a strong Workers' Self Defense, of thousands of workers who will donate weekly to carry on the fight, to a successful finish. "Every worker a member of the Self Defense" must become the slogan of the entire progressive movement. If you have not yet joined the ever increasing army of workers do so without further delay. Do not allow the Sigman clique to proceed further with its pogrom upon the union.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, DAILY WORKER:

I think this Mussolini business will come to a war with Russia. After the war if Mussolini is in power over Europe, he will place an Emperor here to rule America; after that will come the yellow periol and wipe out 70 per cent of the white race. After the war with Russia we will know what the Mussolini business is—its the man behind Mussolini, who has been behind it all for centuries. So what is the use of talking about the labor question. The only hope is to organize many millions of men for peace all over the world; this may carry with it much in the way of good for labor. Organize 30 million, then aim to organize 30 million more, mind you for peace; this will inconvenient the enemy, no matter what happens, keep on organizing; the people want peace, no politics, no other talk. Organize on what the people want and are ready for. Start at once. Respectfully yours.—A. D.

EDITOR, DAILY WORKER:

I am a Jap working with whites, Filippines and Japs in a big pear ranch not far from the capital of the Golden State.

As we were cutting pear-blight one day, the boss came around with those hungry eyes for misses we sometimes make. Soon I heard the boss shout, "See here, Gad damn it, and here's another! God hell! Get yourself to the house and pack up your junks. We have five boys from the town."

At noon I found my fellow Filippines and Japs, altogether six in number, with blankets packed up, ready to look for another boss, and in their stead already six blankets of those who were to come, lying in our places.

We are Filippines and Japs. That's enough. We dare not forget that we are not dead yet.—T. Yanai.

Christianity Rampant.

Editor, DAILY WORKER:

The enclosed clipping taken from the "Catholic Universe Bulletin" July 22, 1927 which is the official bulletin of the Cleveland Catholic Churches needs very little comment if any at all. It justs tears the mask off of their pretended policy of peace and good will amongst all people of the world and brings to light that where Mr. Capitalist goes to conquer new fields of exploitation there you will find the church backing him up.

For Mass Slaughter.

The Nicaragua flareup came at a time when, luckily, it was admitted by all that agreements were in force that held all factions to a set program. But despite this fact we find the press severely condemning the Government and upholding the brigands without considering that we have the right to agreements just as weak nations have. If airplanes are not to be used why make them? To shoot the bandits one at a time is no less cruel than to do it in one fell swoop.

Fraternally yours—George Elson.

Union Fails Workers.

To the Daily Worker:

I am sorry I can't help you. I am sending your book back.

The mine is not working union, and I can't tell the people to buy one because the union people are not helped by the union and are starving.

The leaders of the union make the people scabs. The people can't find work and no help. Anything I can do for you? I am sure willing to help if I could. That is all.

Respectfully yours,
MARSHALL MARTIN.

To the Daily Worker:

Until Aug. 9 I did not know the meaning of the statue "Civic Virtue," standing in front of the City Hall, in which a masculine figure stands in defiant pose, weapon aloft, stepping on the bodies of overthrown women. But this evening, when I saw a squad of policemen on Canal St., in mobile imitation of "Civic Virtue," swinging their clubs on the heads of demonstrators marching to City Hall in what seemed to be a spontaneous demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti, I discovered that to the present rulers it is civic virtue to throw down men, women, and children if necessary, to stifle the protesting voice of the workers. Yours for Sacco and Vanzetti.

SAMUEL BLUM.

DAILY WORKER'S Heroic Stand.

Dear Comrade:

This is to congratulate you for your heroic and daring act in rescuing two of our comrades from the blood thirsty hands of the capitalist tyrants, who use the cloak of democracy to murder two innocent men. I am well aware that were it not for the strong and daring appeal of The DAILY WORKER and the international workers' press the czars of America and the world would have celebrated the slaughter of our comrades.

Again we lead and the rest follow.
—Milner, Norfolk, Va.

DAILY WORKER:

In your propaganda in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti it seems to me that it might be wise to concentrate a special pressure against the railway workers. If you could arouse them you might start a spontaneous walkout on all trains moving in and out of Massachusetts. If you could accomplish that it would be a crushing stroke.

Fraternally yours,—John J. Stanley, Boston.

DRAMA

Ben Hecht Farce—Dreiser's "American Tragedy" Slated for Chicago

With the return of Edna Ferber, who arrived from Paris Tuesday, casting of "The Royal Family," the comedy on which she has collaborated with George S. Kaufman, will proceed immediately. The play is scheduled to open in New York in October.

"An American Tragedy" will go to Chicago early next month. Morgan Farley, Ruth Nugent, Walter Walker, Philip Wood, Willard Dashiell, Tyler Barclay, Caroline Newcombe are in the cast of the Dreiser play which opens at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago, September 4th. Louis Cline is restaging the play.

Sam H. Harris has put into rehearsal "The Man Eating Tiger," a new farce by Ben Hecht and Rose Caylor.

The musical version of "Arizona," which the Shubert's are preparing in association with L. Lawrence Weber, will be known as "Bonita." The score of the operetta is by Sigmund Romberg and the book by Edward Locke.

On the Screen

"Baby Mine," Margaret Mayo's famous stage farce is to be shown on the screen by Metro with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur co-starred in the male leads.

Helene Costello will have the role of Nancy in Metro's production of "In Old Kentucky." She will play opposite James Murray in the A. P. Younger screen story, which is taken from the old stage melodrama by Frank Dazey.

Nat Carr and Will Walling are the latest additions to the cast of "The Jazz Singer," in which Al Jolson is being starred.

The 55th Street Cinema is devoting this week to James Cruze productions, and has selected three films for showing. They are: "Hollywood," "The Goose Hangs High," and "Merton of the Movies."

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK

The noted comedian is slated for an important role in "Just Fancy," the Joseph Stantley musical comedy due here next month.

5.—Seamen's and other unions in Sydney, Australia, walk out in protest for framed workers.

Millions of workers thruout the world struck yesterday in an effort to save Sacco and Vanzetti from burning in the electric chair.

Joining 200,000 workers in New York City in a monster walkout to prevent the murder, miners thruout the anthracite regions in Pennsylvania, seamen in Sydney, Australia, workers of many trades in Boston, Philadelphia, Youngstown, O., thousands of workers in other cities thruout the United States, Europe, South America and Australia threw down their tools to demand the immediate and unconditional release of the two victims of capitalist justice.

Despite mass arrests and wholesale clubbing monster demonstrations took place thruout the country. In Boston where hundreds of workers picketed the State House, 123 were arrested by 5 p. m. and many railroaded to a psychopathic hospital where they will be kept for ten days "for examination." Among those arrested in Boston were Ella Reeve Bloor, veteran labor fighter, and Prof. Ellen Hayes.

Trample Women and Children.

Scores of women and children were trampled at Cheswick, Pa., when state cossacks drove their horses thru the crowd and swinging their clubs, dispersed a meeting of five thousand.

With the last vestiges of hope in legal action almost completely swept away by the refusal of Chief Justice William Howard Taft and Justice Harlan Stone to stay the execution of the framed-up workers, the rank and file of American labor responded more strongly to the strike than had been expected.

A. F. L. Officialdom Sabotages Strike.

Despite the efforts of the American Federation of Labor officialdom and of the socialist party leaders to sabotage the strike, the rank and file answered the call. In New York City scores of shops joined the strike despite efforts of the right wing union officialdom to prevent any mass demonstrations.

Three Brooklyn locals of the furriers' union, defied their International leaders and voted to strike. Thousands of workers belonging to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers threw down their tools in spite of the cowardly silence maintained by the officialdom of the union. The rank and file of labor in New York City did not wish to see Sacco and Vanzetti burn in the electric chair and it struck in spite of the orders of right wing officials.

Thruout the anthracite coal region workers threw down their tools in the demonstration.

More than fifty thousand workers joined in a mass demonstration in New York City. The meeting exceeded the one held on August 10th. Scores of record demonstrations were held in other cities thruout the country.

TROOPER KILLED WHEN COSSACKS CHARGE MINERS

Women and Children Herded and Trampled

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 22.—Hundreds of miners' women and children were trampled down by mounted police and many heads were broken by police clubs and Sargeant John J. Downing of the state police was shot and killed at a Sacco-Vanzetti mass meeting held this morning at the Frank Gadja farm, Cheswick, Penn.

The meeting opened in an orderly manner with five thousand in attendance when a number of state troopers rushed in from hiding places surrounding the place and not permitting any one to leave. Additional troopers on horses came rushing in as reinforcements. Two of the Cossacks mounted the platform and ordered the meeting stopped and while the committee made efforts to persuade the officers not to interfere, orders were given to charge at the crowd. In a most brutal manner the mounted police rushed into the peaceful assemblage clubbing every one on the way. Tear gas bombs increased the excitement. An attempt of the Sun Telegraph, a pittsburgh newspaper, to photograph the scene of the riot was stopped by troopers who smashed the camera. The banner of several local miners unions were torn to pieces in the police charge.

MARIETTE, Wis., Aug. 22.—Declaring that "America's self complacency has disappeared," Ferre C. Watkins, commander of the Illinois American Legion has called all American "manhood" to uphold the laws of the country and governor Fuller's Sacco and Vanzetti decision with "unsheathed bayonets and machine guns." We must root out the radicals, Watkins asserted.

Cigar Workers Quit Jobs in Queens for Sacco and Vanzetti

More than 1,000 men and women employes of the Prospero De Nobili Cigar Company, Pierce avenue and Hamilton street, Long Island City, Queens, went on strike yesterday afternoon in protest against the scheduled execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. A resolution of protest was forwarded by the employes to Governor Fuller of Massachusetts.

The workers quit at noon and said they would return to their jobs this morning.

Police of the Astoria precinct maintained a guard at the cigar factory, but there was no disorder of any kind.

FUR WORKERS OF BROOKLYN STRIKE DESPITE LEADERS

Socialist Officials Sabotage Walkout

Despite the attempts of the right wing officialdom to prevent a walkout, three locals affiliated with the International Fur Workers' Union, Locals 2, 3 and 28, went on strike yesterday for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Disgusted with the tactics of their right wing officialdom, the rank and file of workers invited Ben Gold to address their meeting at the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum only to have it prematurely broken up by John Goronsky, chairman of the Brooklyn Joint Board and a member of the socialist party. When Gold arrived to adress the membership he found the hall emptied at the orders of the socialist leadership.

Socialists Sabotage Strike.

Yesterday's strike was called despite a long fight on the part of the socialist leaders of the International and the Brooklyn Joint Board to prevent it. President Phillip Silverstein of the International, Peter Lucci, organizer, and Vice-president Kalmikoff of the International, all of them members of the socialist party fought the stoppage at a meeting last Thursday. Many of the right wing leaders were forced to agree to a strike by the Joint Board by the insistent demand of the rank and file.

The socialist leaders refused to address the meeting at the Lyceum. The meeting was closed by the socialist chairman at the earliest moment despite the protest of the membership which wanted to wait for Gold's arrival.

Daily Worker Lauded By Bishop Brown for Sacco-Vanzetti Fight

Congratulating The DAILY WORKER "on its magnificent effort to save Comrades Sacco and Vanzetti," Bishop and Mrs. William Montgomery Brown have sent The DAILY WORKER $100 to help it in its struggle for the working class.

The bishop's check is only one of the many contributions that are pouring in from all parts of the country to aid The DAILY WORKER in its struggle for existence. The federal action that has been started against The DAILY WORKER makes support like that offered by Bishop Brown necessary to the survival of the national labor daily.

Walker's Visit Called An Insult After Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti

BERLIN, Aug. 22. — The Sacco-Vanzetti case has given the press another opportunity to picture America as a greedy Uncle Shylock and "the land of the electric chair, lynchings and the Ku Klux Klan." The entire Berlin press is devoting columns to the case.

The Communist newspaper "Welt Am Abend," announces Mayor Walker's proposed visit with "jazz Walker is coming to Berlin just 24 hours after the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. It is an insult to Berlin's population that this man should be received here as a representative of the class that will murder Sacco and Vanzetti."

In view of the Communist demonstrations planned for tonight, the heaviest police guard has been thrown around the American embassy in Wilhelmplatz and around the consulate

NEW YORK POLICE MURDER 2 MORE IN SLAYING ORGY

More Bystanders Killed By Stray Bullets

Two more victims of possible police bullets are dead today and Police Commissioner Warren has ordered double target practice for patrolmen.

Carmel Mina, 35, of 86 Elizabeth street, an innocent bystander, died at midnight at Bellevue, the victim of a stray police bullet. Alphonse Modica, 38, of 8 Central avenue, Brooklyn, died a few hours later. Police say a gangster bullet ended his life.

The shooting occurred at Mulberry and Broome streets almost at the same spot where Ruby Giannetino, 9, was accidentally slain by a police bullet in a police chase.

Detective Peter Hayins of the homicide squad was at the home of Ruby's parents to investigate the death of the girl when shooting began outside. Nordica and a man named Giuseppe Joisette, of 160 Lewis street, were fighting.

Other police hurried to the scene. The two fled, several shots were fired. Nordica was mortally wounded and Mina, who happened along, was also shot. Nordica died at Beekman street hospital a short while after Mina succumbed at Bellevue.

Guards Patrol Court as Thayer Opens Sessions

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 22.—Under a battery of guns, while an array of armed guards patrolled the corridors of the Worcester County Court House, Judge Webster Thayer opened the session of the criminal court here yesterday. All the usual precautions were taken because of the officials fear of reprisals for Sacco and Vanzetti and the judge walked into the court house accompanied by his personal guard, State Trooper Delaney of Lowel, in plain clothes. The unlucky trooper had to stand on guard until the judge went to lunch at noon.

Laundry Women Average $800.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (FP).—$800 is the medial annual wage for New York state's 11,300 women workers in laundries. They average under $15 a week. Many work for less than $12 a week and only 7 per cent receive more than $20 a week.

ANTHRACITE MINERS HOLD HUGE DEMONSTRATIONS FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 22.—The miners of the anthracite region registered their protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti execution by striking in spite of the failure of Rinaldo Cappellini to sanction the strike. The meetings held thruout the anthracite region by the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee testify to this fact.

The meetings in Pittston with two thousand present, in Old Forge with five hundred, and similar gatherings in many other points in the region all were enthusiastic demonstrations of the miners will to save Sacco and Vanzetti.

A meeting was held in Wilkes-Barre in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium with Mayor Ben Thomas of the Machinists' Union and Irving Green of the Sacco-Vanzetti Conference of Philadelphia speaking.

Additional meetings were held in Shenandoah and Mahanoy City. All the meetings sent wires to Coolidge and Fuller demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti and pointing out the frame-up.

INDIAN COOPERATIVES STRIVE TO BUILD BANKS; BRITISH REFUSE THEIR CAPITAL.

DELHI, Aug. 22. — There are in India 77,000 cooperatives of various kinds with a membership of 3,000,000. Of these, only 5,432 are other than agricultural cooperatives. The working capital of the non-agricultural cooperatives, most of which are credit cooperatives.

A few data on the social composition of the Indian peasant population will throw light on the importance of these agricultural credit cooperatives. The peasant population of India is over 180 million strong and embraces about 59 million families. Of these 59 million, 11 million are well-to-do peasants (Malik Rayets), 13 million middle peasants, (Rhodkashts), 25 million poor peasants (Thani), and 10 million pauperized peasants (Chapperband). The well-to-do peasants are on an average poorer than the European middle peasants. However, there are among them millions of families who can be designed as kulaks, and who have accumulated some savings. Apart from these 3,000,000 families, the entire peasantry groans under the burden of debt on which they have to pay exhorbitant interest. According to statistics, agrarian debts in India, amount to 10 milliard rupees. The annual burden of interest for these debts amounts to 18-45 per cent.

According to the Indian cooperative leaders, agricultural credit cooperatives were established to free the peasants from the grip of the usurers. It is in this spirit that one of the most prominent cooperators of India, the founder of the district cooperative bank in Bombay, Lalubhai, Samaldas, writes in the "Asiatic Review" the periodical of the East India Co., which has imperialist tendencies: In fact, it is also the policy of the British government to set a limit to the exploitation of the peasantry with the help of credit cooperatives in order to increase the savings of the aforementioned three million kulaks and also in order to improve the financial position of the other peasants. The government hopes to effect thereby, another accumulation of capital, and to amalgamate it with usurious capital, creating thereby a system of agrarian credits which would finance agriculture at the rate of ten per cent interest at the utmost. It is in this manner that British imperialism wants to bring Indian agriculture and raw material production into the channel of circulation and to place it under tthe direct influence of finance capital.

British Withhold Credits.

But British imperialism itself does not want to put much capital into this. Government credits do not amount on an average to more than 5 per cent of the total working capital of the agricultural credit cooperatives. According to Samaldas, the funds of these credit cooperatives are dominated and administered by 530 provincial and central cooperative banks with a working capital of 500 million rupees in round figures (33.4 million). This was in 1926. In 1919, the capital was only 175 million which means a 200 per cent increase in eight years.

For the same purpose, an agrarian mortgage bank is to be established in accordance with the decision of the All-Indian Cooperative Congress in Bombay at the end of 1926. The business of this bank and its branches shall be: re-purchase of peasant land and houses, land amelioration, building dwellings for the peasantry, liquidation of the old debts, in special cases new purchases of land. Wherever no legal obstacles exist, mortgage credits are to be granted "with right of transference" so that the mortgage debtor is converted into a tenant farmer.

This development of the system of credit cooperatives is no doubt a great stride forward as compared with feudal monopolist economy and the methods of exploitation practiced hitherto by big landowners and money-lenders. But at the same time, this development is fraught with a counter-revolutionary elements as far as the future is concerned. Although the revolutionary movement of India must aim at an aalliance between workers and peasants, for a bourgeois-democratic revolution with a program of land nationalization, there is in the unification of big finance and the kulaks the tendency to establish a bloc against that development in order to isolate thereby the labor movement with the ultimate intent of crushing it.

Private and Public Lands in China

By EARL BROWDER.

ARTICLE II.

There is quite a controversy among sinologists about the question whether feudalism persists still in China. My own observations and study in China convinced me that unquestionably semi-feudal relationships and customs do persist, and play a prominent role in China's present struggles. But it must be made clear at once, in dealing with the land tenure system, that the dominant, the determining factor is the right of private ownership and not the relationship of a feudal lord holding title to nation or province and parcelling it out to his political lieutenants.

An Old System.

According to the Russian sinologist, Zakharov, private ownership of land became the dominant system thruout China during the Han Dynasty, 206 B. C. to 230 A. D. Alongside the dominant form, there has persisted thru the centuries, remnants of the old forms of tribal ownership, seen today in the so-called "public" lands. But however ancient, or modern, private ownership may be, it is clearly established in Chinese law and custom today. (See article "Contemporary Civil Code in China," in "The China Weekly Review," Shanghai, July 1926.)

The so-called public lands are, in effect tho not formally, absorbed into the system of private ownership. The following details are culled from an unpublished investigation, made under the direction of Michael Borodin, which will appear later in two volumes under the title "The Peasant Movement in Kwantung." What is true of Kwantung holds good generally for South China; in the North, the "public lands" play a much smaller role,

Public Land.

There are three main forms of public lands: ancestral lands, village lands, and scholar fields. The most important is the ancestral land, which in Kwantung comprises about 25% of all cultivated fields. Originally these lands were connected with ancestor worship. Rich landholders, many generations ago, set aside portions of their holdings, to be preserved from division or sale, the produce of which was to be devoted to the rites of ancestor worship. Many also provided that a proportion of the income must be used to purchase additional land, thus providing for automatic enlargment. These areas also grew thru the custom of descendants demonstrating their piety by themselves adding to the ancestral land.

Practically all of this ancestral land is rented out, mostly to landless peasants or to "middlemen" who sublet it to the poor cultivator. The rents amount to huge sums, which are at the disposal of the "elders" of the family; by means of this control, these elders form the principal portion of the ruling-caste in the villages wherever the ancestral lands exist. They are a large part of that class called "gentry," a term which in the Chinese peasant movement has become a one of deepest contempt and hatred.

Village Domain.

The village public lands, are those which have been set aside to provide for special village needs, such as upkeep of the village school, road building, maintenance of village temple, etc. This is merely a variation of ancestral lands, the principal difference being merely that, instead of being administered by the elders of a single clan or family, they are in the hands of "village elders," comprising several families.

The scholar fields are lands of which the incomes have been assigned to certain "learned persons" as a sort of reward for culture. These lands are either assigned by elders of the family from ancestral land, to some member who has made the clan famous by becoming a "scholar," or by a "Min Yun Tang" (society of learning) which often have great estates or funds procured from the government. These "Min Yun Tang" are a sort of trade union of the literate sections of the village ruling class. All these lands are cultivated by propertyless tenants.

So far as the mass of peasantry are concerned, they get no benefits from public lands. The principal effect of this form of landownership, which in Kwantung comprises 30 to 40% of all fields, is to weld together into a closely-knit body, the village ruling class, the "gentry", who are the masters of the village, its funds, its works in road building or irrigation, etc., who levy taxes, control local militia, and administer "justice" to the peasantry.

Jail Ex-Soldier as Sacco-Vanzetti Picket

MORRIS WILLIAM GURKIN.

He carried a banner reading, "We were supposed to have fought for justice! Give justice to Sacco and Vanzetti! They must not die!" For this he was arrested by the Boston police and thrown into jail. Gurkin asks, "If this is the treatment accorded an ex-soldier in 1927, it is easy to imagine the brutal tyranny that was visited upon foreign-born workers during the red-baiting days of 1920, when Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested and convicted upon a framed-up charge of murder.

Pickens Addresses Pan-African Congress

EDITOR'S NOTE — The DAILY WORKER herewith publishes in full the address of William Pickens before the Fourth Pan-African Congress now being held in New York City.

A CONFERENCE of the oppressed is the beginning of the end of the oppression. The result of mere individual effort at emancipation of any kind is so infinitesimally small that it can be put down as zero,—for all the social good it may accomplish.

The beginning of the end of American slavery was not in sight until a group of run-away slaves like Frederick Douglass began to confer and co-operate with white abolitionists like Garrison and Phillips. After nominal emancipation was achieved, repression, disfranchisement and segregation might have gone on unchallenged for generations, had not brave black men, like W. E. Burghardt DuBois, begun to confer and co-operate with just and equally brave white men, like Moorfield Storey.

The devouring of Africa, the raping of Haiti, and the bullying of Nicaragua will go forward as far as human selfishness will carry them, unless those whose welfare is at stake shall begin to confer and co-operate. The proletariat, the workers, the producers of the goods of human society and beginning to sense a common interest in a common cause, and a need for mutual support,—in Moscow, in Hankow, in Paris and in Passaic.

The Workers Know No Race.

THE ultimate causes, then, lie deeper than race or color; and any ultimate success must call for -ooperation beyond all racial and color lines.

In spite of the powerful tradition of the myth of race, we wish to say that a likeness in economic condition is far sounder basis for co-operation among men than is a similarity of skin-color or nose-shape.

If there is a factory or a mill that employs many people of many different races, the destiny of those people is far more involved in their work and wages than in their language and birth-places.

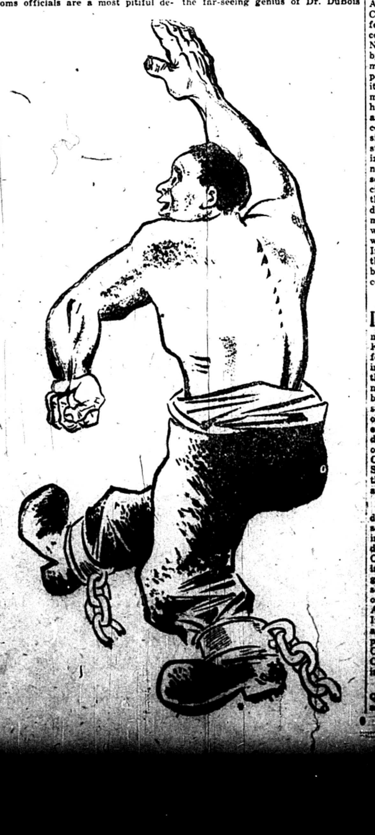
But the superstition of race and of nationality is so strong in the minds of men that many movements for the good of mankind still find themselves at first narrowly limited by racial and national lines.

This shows that man's social development has not kept pace with his scientific advancement: for human science has in the last one hundred years reduced the relative size of the earth and made of it such a small community that everybody is economically elbowing everybody else.

Coal miners in India are helping to fix the wages of coal miners in Wales; for English ships may coal in India and make a trip to Europe and perhaps back to India, without recoaling. The speed of transportation and the instantaneousness of communication have made mere racial and national policies unstatesmanlike and silly. Human science is fast making of the world one market of goods and one community of social interests, so that enslaved workers in South Africa will surely lower the standard of living for supposedly free workers in the Mississippi Valley. Self-seeking wealth and capital will find it advantages as water finds its level, with the unerring constancy of natural law. Tariff walls and customs officials are a most pitiful defense against the inevitable. It is like shutting out the tide with a picket fence.

Economic Lines—Deeper Than Race.

BUT a movement for improvement must begin sometimes somewhere. The psychology of the masses must be recognized for what it is: The Pan-African Congress a biennial conference of all the descendants of Africa thruout the world, was conceived by the far-seeing genius of Dr. DuBois and was first organized in Paris in 1919. It recognizes the fact that in a world largely dominated by a group-conscious white men there is a "color problem" for the colored people of the world, and especially for the descendants of Africa.



Perhaps nobody dreams that the problem of the Negro or of the Chinaman can ever be solved simply by the co-operation of Negroes or of Chinese with Chinese. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People began with the conference and cooperation of a group of colored men styling themselves "The Niagara Movement," and also headed by W. E. Burghardt DuBois. This movement became a real national power when by protest and publicity it brought some of the more socially-minded white people to see that they had a common interest in the claims and aims of the movement of the colored men. Racial organization is simply local fermentation,—a first stage in the evolution of world organization and co-operation along economic lines. Economic lines are societally more fundamental than racial lines. The effective agent is not the theorist and his theory nor the doctrinaire and his doctrine, but human science is the miner and sapper which is laying seige to the whole works of nationalism and racialism. In the end human sciences, rather than religion, will bring to pass, not by persuasion but thru necessity, a condition of universal brotherhood.

Congress of Oppressed Peoples.

IT is interesting that the first world's conference of the oppressed has met in Brussels, Belgium, in February, 1927, eight years after the founding of the Pan-African Congress in Paris. This conference represents the first grouping together of the submerged masses thru the barb-wire barriers of racial and national consciousness. This congress of the oppressed was so new that nearly every group which came to it, had a different name for it. It was variously called "The Anti-Imperialist Conference," "The League for the Suppression of Colonial Violence," the congress of "Oppressed Peoples and the Working Class," etc.

When the representatives of Indonesia, or the Dutch Indies, presented their resolution to the meeting, they addressed the assembled delegates as "the Congress against Colonial Oppression and Imperialism." When the Persian delegation got the floor, it addressed the assembly as "the International Congress of Oppressed Peoples." The South Africans addressed it as "the first International Conference of Workers and Oppressed Peoples in all Imperialist countries and Colonies." The Chinese said "the Congress Against Colonial Oppression and Imperialism."

And the resolution on the Negro Question of the world spoke up in a sort of mixture of French and English and called the gathering "The International Congress contre the Colonial Oppression and l'Imperialism."

Abolition of Racial and Economic Oppression.

IT is clear that imperialism, oppression, suppression, financial and commercial robbery, colonial and semi-colonial tyranny, are for the first time put into the same rank together, where they belong.

The congress also put race prejudice in the same rank when it called for "Immediate abolition of all racial restrictions, social, political and economic." This first league of the economically, politically and socially oppressed called for complete racial equality thruout the world.

Some day posterity will marvel, not only that such a call was even necessary, but that it should have fallen on deaf and even hostile ears.

French Imperialism Attacked.

IT was noticeable that French Imperialism in Indo-China and in North Africa was just as severely accused as the imperialism of English-speaking nations. Colored people are accustomed to regard the French as especially just to other races. The French may lack a color psychosis and may be more cosmopolitan in their attitude on the abstract subject of "race," but a French imperialist or economic robber is just like any other. Economic exploitation knows neither race nor color. It will attack that group which is most helpless, most open to exploitation.

The Negroes of Africa were not enslaved because they were Negroes but because they offered the greatest return for the smallest amount of outlay and effort to the slave hunter. The poorly organized and defenseless congeries of tribes appealed to the slave-raider as a Klondike, an El Dorado. They were enslaved not for being black, but for offering a resistance of spear heads to powder-driven lead balls. The French may be careless of race and color in both Paris and North Africa, but they will practice economic exploitation in the place where economic exploitation is most profitable, and that is in North Africa. Capitalistic exploiters are a natural class, not to be distinguished by race, color, language or ancient history. Even an American Negro capitalist, late descendant of raped Africa, is just exactly like other capitalists. He must be like the others. A Negro who owns a thousand acres in Olabama or Texas, pays his tenants and "hands" just as little and charges them just as much as any white farm-owner in the neighborhood.

The American Negro and the Pan-African Congress must see common interest and make common cause with the other oppressed and exploited peoples of the world.

The world is my country.
To do good is my religion.
The Human Race is my race.

On War and Danger of War

Theses adopted at the Plenum of the E. C. C. I. on May 29, 1927.

The VII. Enlarged Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International held in December last year, warned the international working class of the danger of war. The events which have taken place in China and Great Britain since that time have wholly and completely confirmed the forecasts made by the Executive Committee of the Communist International. The concentration of troops in China, the bombardment of Chinese cities by international capitalism, already mark the opening of the war against the toiling masses of China who are fighting for their emancipation. The raid on the Soviet Embassy in Peking made by Chang Tso-lin, at the instigation of London, and with the support of the diplomatic representatives of all the capitalist governments, and the raid on the Soviet Union Trade Delegation in London and the consequent breaking off of relations between Great Britain and the Soviet Union are criminal acts calculated to provoke war.

Now more than ever before is it necessary for the masses of the workers of all countries to exercise vigilance. Communists of all countries must close up their ranks and mobilize all their forces in the face of the war which has already begun in China and the war which is being prepared against the Soviet Union.

Capitalist Antagonisms and War.

1. With the world war of 1914-1918 there opened for the masses of the toilers of all countries a period of cruel wars of extermination, of unbridled and ruthless plunder of colonial countries and violent outrages against the working class. Ten million killed, nineteen million disabled and crippled, an enormous expenditure of economic resources, the economic inter-connections of world economy shattered for years, depreciating currency, impoverishment of the masses of the people, growth of internal reaction in all countries throughout the world, a raging capitalist offensive against the working class, the Balkanization of Europe, and the intensification since the world war of capitalist antagonisms,—such are the results of the war of 1914-1918.

2. The conclusion of the war was immediately followed by a period of "little wars" for the regulation of frontiers: the struggle between Germany and Poland for Upper Silesia, the armed occupation of Fiume by the Italian Fascists, the Greco-Turkish war for Smyrna, military collisions between Balkan States. The establishment of proletarian dictatorship in Hungary brought about the attack on it by the capitalist States—Czecho-Slovakia and Roumania. Simultaneously therewith the capitalist world mobilized its forces for the purpose of crushing the proletarian revolution in Soviet Russia. The intervention commenced in 1918-1919 and "developed into" the war of Poland against Soviet Russia. This was followed by the occupation of the Ruhr and which was relieved by the colonial expedition of France against the Riff rebellion in Morocco. The French imperialist war against the Druses marked the close of the decade following the conclusion of the great war of 1914-1918. The whole of the period following the great war has been a period of imperialist struggles and partial wars which are but the prelude to a fresh period of great wars.

3. Although in the course of the last few years capitalism had attained a certain stabilization, this stabilization was of an extremely relative nature. The proletarian revolution in Russia dealt a heavy blow to world capitalism. The national revolutionary movements in the colonies make a new breach in the capitalist system. These two factors alone combined with the resistance of the international working class to the capitalist offensive exclude any possibility for a lasting stabilization of the capitalist order.

The years which have elapsed since the conclusion of the world war were years of an especially marked "deterioration" of capitalism. The cyclical character of world economy has lost its pre-war periodicity; crises in world economy arise now here and now there, very brief and feverish booms are followed by prolonged depression. The re-distribution of the world brought about by the imperialist robbers as a result of the world war has created new sources of fierce competition and the danger of fresh conflicts between imperialist powers. A stubborn struggle is going on for regions which are either sources of raw material or places to which foreign capital can be exported. The capitalist States have cut themselves off from each other with new customs barriers, restricting thereby former trading facilities. Diminished consumption by the masses in the biggest capitalist States, the establishment of national industries in the colonies and overseas countries, which were formerly markets for foreign manufactured goods, confront world capitalism with the extremely acute problem of markets. The struggle for markets is assuming acute forms unprecedented in pre-war capitalist economy. This economic struggle is leading to armed collisions.

Maryland R. R. Courts Strike by Firing of Brotherhood Secretary

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 22. — By the discharge of Alston G. Cook, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen in Maryland, the Western Maryland railroad is courting another disastrous strike which may make it a 100 per cent non- union railroad.

Cook and two other trainmen were fired for alleged subordination but they declare that the Western Maryland is trying to provoke a strike of conductors and trainmen. Three years ago the engineers and firemen struck when the road refused to grant a wage increase won on all other eastern roads. The Western Maryland is one of the two or three important carriers which do not recognize the engine service unions.

The persistent refusal of President Byers to negotiate a settlement of the long-fought engine strike has been condemned by labor and liberals alike. Even national church committees have entered their denunciation of Byers' autocratic stand.

Washington representatives of the Trainmen declare there has been constant friction between the train service unions and the Western Maryland since the engineers and firemen's strike. Although efforts will be made to obtain Cook's reinstatement, the possibility of a general strike is admitted.

LABOR PROTESTS MURDER OF SACCO, VANZETTI; 150,000 PARIS WORKERS MARCH ON U.S. EMBASSY

WORKERS PARTY HITS BRUTALITY OF PA. COSSACKS

Start Move to Aid Men Arrested at Cheswick

BULLETIN

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23.—Over 20 miners have been arrested as a result of the riot at Cheeswick where state police broke up a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration. They are charged with inciting to riot. The police are searching for a man whom they accuse of shooting a state trooper.

The International Labor Defense is handling the case. It expects to organize defense conferences thruout the district.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23.—Scoring the smash-up of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration at Cheswick by mounted state troopers armed with guns, clubs, tear gas bombs, the Workers (Communist) Party, District 5, has issued the following statement condemning the brutality of the state cossacks and calling upon all of the workers of the district to organize defense committees for the protection of the arrested men:

"A riot took place yesterday at Cheswick, Pa., where several thousand miners, women and children gathered together in order to discuss the case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

A number of mounted state troopers armed with guns, clubs and tear gas bombs in a most brutal fashion rode into this peaceful assemblage, trampling and wounding hundreds of men, women and children.

The state troopers who are kept in this district for strike breaking purposes and who are solely responsible for the hundreds of casualties which are the result of this riot are still at liberty.

Instead a number of miners who were beaten up and trampled by the police horses are under arrest charged with inciting to riot. They are in danger of being railroaded to jail. The Workers Party most emphatically condemns the unwarranted brutal action of the state troopers and calls upon all workers of this district to proceed immediately with the formation of defense committees in order to make it possible to provide the arrested men with the necessary legal protection. We call upon all workers'

Argentina Workers to Strike Indefinitely in Protest Against Murder

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 23. — Workers affiliated with the Argentina Regional Labor Federation voted to strike indefinitely in protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Hundreds of workers belonging to other national labor organizations remained away from work in protest.

Reports from Rosario state that workers in sugar refineries and railway plants and railway shops thruout central Argentina failed to report to work.

Police fired into crowds of demonstrators while mounted troops rode thru masses of demonstrators.

Sing International at Death House Protest

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Mass demonstrations marked the murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Singing the International several hundred of workers, many carrying placards, marched across the bridge from the city proper into the Charlestown district. Their objective was state prison but a detour was under way to Bunker Hill when police descended on the marchers in Thompson Square. Foot and mounted police charged the parade, whose ranks had been augmented by spectators along the route. In the crush under the elevated structure at Thompson Square, twenty persons were arrested. They were charged with "violating a city ordinance."

"Mother" Ella Reeves Bloor, Oakland, Cal., who was talking at a union meeting in the north end and went to a window to address two thousand persons outside of the street was arrested and charged with "inciting to riot."

Another "riot call" was sounded when, upon her release on bail, "Mother" Bloor returned to the union

"WE DIE FOR FUTURE VICTORY," SAY VICTIMS IN LAST MESSAGE

Sacco and Vanzetti, Facing Death Chair, See Triumph for World Workers

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—"Just treasure our suffering, our sorrow, our mistakes, our defeats, our passion for future battles for the great emancipation."

These were the words penned by Sacco and Vanzetti in a letter to those who fought for their freedom. The letter was written on Monday. A few minutes after Tuesday midnight the two framed-up workers were murdered.

The letter follows in part:

No Faith In Courts.

"August 21, 1927.

"From the Death House of Massachusetts State Prison.

"Dearest friends and comrades of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee:

"After tomorrow night we will be [illegible]uted, save a new staying of the [illegible]ce by the United States supre[illegible] court or by Governor Alvan T. Fulle.

"But now it is 5.30 in the afternoon and no one has returned yet. This tells us there is no good news. It almost tells us that their efforts have failed and that you are spending these remaining few hours in despairing efforts to prevent our execution.

"We Are Not Vanquished."

"In a word, we feel lost. That we [illegible] have to die does not diminish [illegible] appreciation and gratitude for your great solidarity with us and our families.

"Only two of us will die—our ideal, you, our comrades will live by millions. We have won. We are not vanquished.

"Just treasure our suffering, our sorrow, our mistakes, our defeat, our passion, for future battles for the great emancipation.

"We embrace you all and bid you our extreme good bye. Now and ever, long life to you all. Long life to liberty.

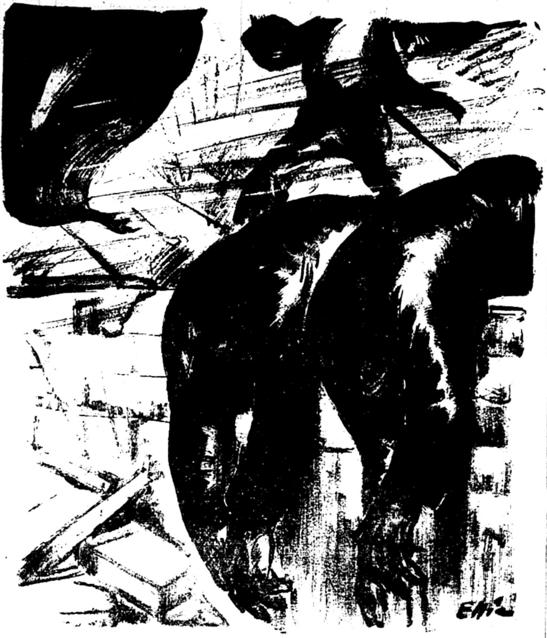
"Yours in life and death.

"Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

"Nicola Sacco."

The hall in which the bodies will lie in state here will be filled with posters and banners in all languages and wil recall every stage of the seven year fight that was made to save the men from the chair.

CARRY ON!



The Sacco-Vanzetti Murder

Manifesto of C. E. C. of Workers (Communist) Party

SACCO and VANZETTI have been murdered. The lifeless, bloody bodies of two brave men have been thrown at the feet of the working class whose companions they were. Two leaders of the workers have been murdered by the capitalist class of America—murdered as a sign of the contempt and hatred and fear which the capitalist class feels for the working class.

This is murder under the forms of capitalist law. It is the law of capitalist dictatorship, now exposed to the eyes of the working class of the world, stripped of the hypocrisy of "a fair trial."

THEY say they have "executed two anarchists" for a crime. But what the capitalist courts and the capitalist class have done, is to issue an insult and a challenge to the working class of America and the world. The electric current which tortured and destroyed Sacco and Vanzetti, conveyed to the workers of this and all countries the declaration of intensified class war of American capital against labor. It served notice that American capitalism, now grown more wealthy and more powerful, more arrogant and cruel than any other ruling class that the world has ever known, intends to use a free hand for the ruthless extermination of all which resists its power.

It is not a question of two individuals' lives; Sacco and Vanzetti are murdered because they had become symbols of the organization and the struggles of the working class against the capitalists. Their execution is the forerunner of still more arrogant and ruthless offensives against the trade unions, against all workers' organizations and especially against the militant section of the workers.

The dicision of Governor Fuller, which was really not a decision only of Governor Fuller, but especially of his masters, the powerful financial and industrial capitalists of whom he is but the cringing servant,—this decision is related to all of the struggles of the workers of the present time, and to the particular stage of American imperialism. The decision to execute the working class martyrs is related to the present drive to destroy the United Mine Workers' Union. In Ohio troops are now turned loose upon the striking coal miners. It is related to the capitalist war against the needle workers in New York.

THIS monstrous crime shows the real character of American justice. It is the class justice of the capitalist class. If many workers have wondered how it was possible to condemn these two brave men to death in the face of the public knowledge that they were innocent, this was only because such workers did not understand that capitalist justice means merely the merciless suppression of the working class, in order to help the capitalist class to pile up wealth thru the exploitation of labor. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti will open the eyes of many millions of workers to American justice—capitalist class justice.

"American capital is powerful and can destroy its enemies," says Fuller, the flunky and mouthpiece of his class. But millions of workers look on and learn to understand and to hate the enemies and exploiters and murderers of their class.

In every country of the world the honest working class, and even sections of the middle bourgeois, spit in the face of American capitalism. Every American embassy, every American consulate and every American business establishment in foreign countries, stands out before the workers of those countries as a house of shame. Thus the exploited classes of the whole world are learning of the danger they face in the rising power of American imperialism. They are

POLICE WOUND HUNDREDS IN EFFORT TO QUELL MONSTER DEMONSTRATION

Memorial Mass Meetings Thruout World Are Planned; Denounce Massachusetts Murder

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Bitter in their resentment against the murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti in the Massachusetts electric chair, over 150,000 Paris workers today joined in one of the most fiery demonstrations in years.

Defying hundreds of armed police, machine guns, and all the death-dealing equipment at the city's command, the demonstrators, led by Communists, staged a miniature commune and erected a barricade on the Boulevard Sebastopol. Hundreds, including police, were injured in the battles and an equal number of workers were arrested.

DENOUNCE MURDERERS.

Shouting, "Sacco and Vanzetti will be avenged"; "Down with the Yankee murderers," the crowd made their way toward the American embassy, but were halted by several lines of bayonets. Hospitals thruout the city reported many casualties, but the number has not been determined.

Around the Etoile section, which is the fashionable American residential section, the "International" was sung and the demonstrators shouted, "Down with the American murderers."

Warning to the American Legion that it would be impossible for them to hold their proposed convention in Paris next month was contained in speeches at numerous protest mass meetings held during the day.

Strikes, demonstrations and boycotts are being held thruout the world in denunciation of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

While plans for monster memorial meetings were being rushed in cities thruout the United States, workers in Argentina declared an indefinite strike to protest against American capitalist justice, Geneva workers staged enthusiastic demonstrations before the American consulate and the League of Nations building, and workers in Moscow, Paris, Berlin, London and Copenhagen condemned the murder of the two framed-up workers at huge mass meetings.

Plans for nation-wide memorial meetings for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti have just been completed. A conference composed of representatives of the International Labor Defense, the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committe, and the National Citizens' Council met in Boston yesterday and appointed a committee to make tentative arrangements. This includes Powers Hapgood, now facing a six-months' jail sentence for attempting to make a speech on the Boston Common last Sunday; Michael Gold, editor of "The New Masses"; Ann Washington Craton, Alfred Baker Lewis, Clarina Michaelson, George Krasko, Harry J. Cantor, member district executive committee of Workers (Communist) Party of Boston, and R. Zelms.

Call For Facts of Frame-up.

Another committee was also chosen which will soon send out a call for a national conference to be held in New York to demand a complete senatorial investigation into all the details of the notorious frame-up which culminated in the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti in the death chair early yesterday morning.

The murdered workers will be cremated. This was decided here this afternoon at a meeting of friends and relatives including Sacco's widow and Vanzetti's sister.

It was also decided to let the bodies lie in state for two or three days in some hall, if permission can be obtained from the health authorities. Then there is to be a monster funeral procession to the Forest Hill crematory.

Vanzetti's ashes will be taken to Italy by his sister, Luigia, and Sacco's will be turned over to his wife.

This plan for disposing of the bodies was approved after several had been considered. One suggestion that was made was to take the bodies to memorial demonstrations thruout the country, including New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

A memorial parade for the two workers will be held at the North

Eighteen Arrested In Berlin Sacco-Vanzetti Protests

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—Eighteen workers were arrested in Berlin for demonstrating before the United States embassy. The arrests were the culmination of the police ferocity which has marked the efforts of the German officials

The workers of Germany continued right up to the last minute to agitate for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti. More than twenty meetings were held in Berlin on the night of the murder while mounted and foot police heavily armed guarded all the street approaches and had machine guns planted on vantage points.

Workers who secured a building in the center of Berlin have painted across the side in yard-high letters: "America's christian dollar justice is tonight murdering Sacco and Vanzetti. Men, pause and think in this last hour."

Fifth Party Convention to Open With Mass Meeting At Central Opera House, Tuesday, August 30th

WORKERS of New York City and vicinity will join in welcoming the Fifth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party by attending the Mass Meeting planned for Tuesday night, August 30, at the Central Opera House, 67th Street, near Third Avenue. The gathering will be under the auspices of the Party's Central Executive Committee. Admission will be 50 cents. A program of nationally prominent speakers will be announced shortly.

How Shall We Pay Tribute to the Memory of Our Martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti

Murdered in cold blood our heroes died with the note of defiance on their lips and unwavering devotion to the cause of the working class in their hearts. How shall we express our deep sense of loss! How shall we give vent to our undying hatred of the system, which so heartlessly takes the lives of the truest and bravest in our midst?

No tears will serve us now. The iron fist of the ruling class has steeled us well against such softness. By its brazen defiance of millions of voices, raised in the name of simple justice, to stay the execution of this horrible crime, the capitalist class has demonstrated, so that even the blind can see, its ruthless disregard for even the most elementary standards of human rights. It has dared to do this thing because it has felt its power to see it through, without let or hindrance. And we, the working class have learned the lesson, which the electric current that charred the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti, has seared deep in our hearts. We shall crush the rule of the tyrants. We shall challenge the power of the ruling class which has dared to commit this infamous deed. We will build up our strength until the day when the oppressors will be overthrown and labor shall be enthroned as the ruling class.

We shall build up our organs for the struggle, build and strengthen The DAILY WORKER, guard it well from its enemies, who yesterday murdered Sacco and Vanzetti and today raise their hands against our paper. This shall be our lasting tribute to the memory of our fallen fighters, Sacco and Vanzetti.

Strikes, Boycotts, Mass Protest Over Murder

End in Boston either today or tomorrow, it was learned at the headquarters of the Defense Committee.

Condolences To Mrs. Sacco.

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, 80 East 11th street, sent the following telegram to Mrs. Rose Sacco, wife of the executed radical. It read:

"On behalf of hundreds of thousands of sympathizers in New York I send my most heartfelt condolences in your hour of grief. Your murdered husband and his comrade-in-arms will live forever in the hearts of his fellow-workers. We feel deeply for you and your fatherless children, Inez and Dante."

Miss Baron also sent a wire to Miss Luigia Vanzetti. It read:

"In your grief for your murdered brother be consoled in the knowledge that he and his dear comrade, Nicola, died as martyrs to the cause of millions of toilers thruout the world. We grieve with you and ask you to remember that you are not alone in your grief. Millions mourn with you."

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—One hundred public schoolhouse janitors, their assistants and other men employed around institutions of learning in this city, were this afternoon sworn in by chief of police clerk, Capt. Joseph Harriman, for guard duty.

The men were given a badge, a revolver and a club and will be stationed at school houses and other public buildings for duty in preparation for Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations.

An additional hundred will be sworn in tomorrow.

BOSTON, Aug. 23. — Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are dead.

They were murdered by order of "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts" in the electric chair at the Charlestown state prison a few minutes after midnight.

Each was pronounced dead a few seconds after the electric switch was thrown by Robert C. Elliott, Sing Sing executioner, and their bodies were laid on the stone slabs brot into the death chamber.

The two innocent workers, who have been tortured for the past seven years, died with the greatest bravery. Both made short speeches protesting their innocence, but little opportunity was given them as they were hurriedly rushed into the death chair.

"Farewell my wife and child and all my friends," shouted Sacco as the warden Hendry gave the signal to the executioner.

As Vanzetti was led into the death chamber he turned to the two guards and shook hands with them. He sat down in the chair, almost willingly and said calmly:

"I am Innocent!"

"I wish to tell you I am innocent and never committed any crime. I thank you for everything you have done for me. I am innocent of all crime, not only of this one, but all. I am an innocent man," Vanzetti said.

"I wish to forgive some people for what they are now doing to me," he concluded.

Celestino Madeiros, 25-year-old Portuguese who confessed that he was a member of the Morelli gang of Providence which committed the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were framed, was the first to be electrocuted, he being pronounced dead at 12:05.

At 2 o'clock in the morning a wagon drove into the prison yard. The lifeless bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti were lifted into the wagon and driven away to a mortuary two miles away in the East End. It was here that Mrs. Rose Sacco, Miss Luigia Vanzetti, and members of the defense committee claimed them.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—Hope for the five missing Dole fliers and their two would-be rescuers, Capt. Billy Erwin and Alvin Eichwaldt, had all but vanished with the coming of dawn today—one week after the ill-fated "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran," hopped off on their disastrous attempt to reach Honolulu.

THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

By JAMES P. CANNON.
(Sec'y., International Labor Defense)

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead but their names will live forever and become a shining banner for the upward striving toilers of the world. They have been murdered by the assassins of the capitalist class. Their execution was a cynically brutal defiance of the world-wide demand of the millions of people that they be liberated or at least be given a new trial to prove over again their innocence. It was a legal lynching, a fiendish act of class vengeance, cunningly prepared and planned and violently consummated by the willing tools of the capitalist class.

Sacco and Vanzetti died for the working class. Like their immortal comrades of Chicago's Haymarket they died as martyrs to the cause of labor. This was known or felt by tens of millions of workers in every corner of the globe who fought bitterly to the very last moment to vindicate the two martyred labor fighters. Their admirable loyalty and devotion to the cause of labor was the only crime they were guilty of, they were innocent of the crime charged against them by their executioners.

The last words of Vanzetti uttered a minute before the current of death silenced his voice were the echo of the deep convictions of the people: "I wish to tell you that I am innocent and have never committed a crime, but perhaps sometimes sins. I am innocent of all crimes, not only of this one but of all. I am an innocent man."

The Massachusetts executioners have put to death two glorious spirits. These two fighters living for seven years in the shadow of the electric chair unceasingly tortured by their suspension between delay and death, calmly watching the relentless net of the capitalist lynchers closing about them, showed by their heroic conduct how the revolutionary fighters of the working class can die at the hands of their class enemy.

The noble dignity and courage which sustained them throughout the seven years remained with them to the end. They went to death calmly and bravely without fear or embarrassment. It was their murderers, the governors and the judges who hid their faces in fear and shame. Their determined loyalty to the cause is at the same time a mark of shame on the heads of the cowards and the prophets of respectability who could never make common cause with these clear eyed fighters.

Yes, their names will live forever for the electric current that killed them has burned their names permanently into the hearts of the toilers of the world. Their miserable executioners will be buried in oblivion while the names and struggles of Sacco and Vanzetti still remain a shining guide to the masses, an inspiration to the oppressed everywhere. They are our noble and heroic martyrs. Their conduct up to the very last moment was in that spirit. The fight of the working class has already made their names immortal and for us their memory is imperishable. Their voices are stilled but their silence thunders around the world. The workers of America who fought to free Sacco and Vanzetti must pay tribute to their heroic memory in every section of the country. The workers must gather at memorial meetings to pledge themselves to keep alive the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti and their fight, to pour their hatred upon the heads of the murderers to build our strength to prevent new Sacco-Vanzetti cases and to obtain freedom for the class fighters who are also victims of the frame-up and still in prison.

The International Labor Defense will continue its work for that cause in the spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Honor and respect to our fallen comrades. Remember Sacco and Vanzetti. Remember labor's deathless martyrs!

NANTICOKE, Pa., Aug. 23.—While Sacco and Vanzetti were awaiting death last night 2,000 hard coal miners assembled here to protest against the murder of the two innocent prisoners. Resolutions denouncing the "outrageous murder" and demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti were sent to President Coolidge and Governor Fuller.

Build the Labor Party as a Challenge to the Assassins of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IT was the capitalist government of the United States of America that burned Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to death in the human slaughter house, one of the many torture chambers of the Charlestown Penitentiary at Boston, Massachusetts.

This is the most important lesson that the American working class must learn as the lifeless bodies of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, so courageous in life, so brave in the face of death, are removed from the abbatoir of the New England oligarchs of great greed.

Learning this lesson to the full, that the United States government of the blood-lusting owning class is the real assassin of the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, the working class of this country must inevitably develop its strength along the right path, toward the defeat of that government and the abolition of the social system for which it stands.

American labor must stand aghast at the ease and self-assurance with which the murder crew in Boston, the long-heralded center of "American culture," proceeded with its bloody work.

This brief article will deal with merely one effort,—the struggle of the workers to break away from the political domination of the working class, to turn their backs on the republican and democratic parties, to develop their own independent political action — thru the Labor Party—and unite the forces of the working class to battle the ruling class forces guilty of the assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Where is the worker who would shake the assassin's hand of Robert C. Elliott, the hideous-faced executioner, who threw on the powerful electric current that roasted our comrades alive?

Yet the executioner, Elliott, was merely the servant of the dominant government, getting his $150 for each murder that he committed. It was the capitalist state that paid his Judas gold.

The same capitalist government paid Elliott that pays the puny human, Judge Webster Thayer, who sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti to death, no less the assassin and executioner as he sits, black gowned, holding court at Dedham, Massachusetts.

The same capitalist government that paid Elliott pays Governor Alvan T. Fuller, the chief executive of Massachusetts, who spoke the "NO!" of the American ruling class in answer to the demands of international labor that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed, being innocent of the crime charged against them.

This is the same capitalist government that has carefully selected all its judges, both in the federal and state courts in Massachusetts, as well as its own United States Supreme Court. Many lawyers sought a loophole somewhere for the two proletarians, Sacco, the shoemaker, and Vanzetti, the fish peddler. But they failed.

The murder crew stood solid. The United States Supreme Court Justices, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Louis Dembitz Brandeis and Harlan Fiske Stone, when appealed to, supported Fuller and Thayer, and they were in turn supported by William Howard Taft, the Chief Justice himself, who had new infamy heaped upon his name because of the vicious resistance he offered to the anti-child labor amendment to the federal constitution, that threatens to take children out of the mills of New England and put them in school.

At the very moment that world labor was directing its attack against the United States government, demanding the opening of the files of the department of justice that contained testimony sufficient to furnish a basis for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the figurehead of the government, Calvin Coolidge, was enjoying himself in the national playground known as Yellowstone Park, in Wyoming.

This is the murder crew that joined in making a Roman holiday, a murder feast, with our two comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, as the victims, because the strength of the working class was not powerful enough to liberate them.

Labor that is loyal to Sacco and Vanzetti turns its back on the executioner, Elliott; on the judge, Thayer; on the governor, Fuller; on the judges, Holmes, Brandeis, Stone, Taft; on the attorney general, Sargent; on the president, "Silent Cal."

But in order to be honest with themselves, in order to be honest with the martyred dead, they must also turn their backs upon all those who give support to these political instruments of the ruling class.

The hands of every trade union official who urges support of capitalist party officials, all allies of "the murder crew," drip with the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti just as much as the hands of Elliott, the executioner, or Thayer, the judicial assassin, or their many associates.

All labor must watch well the sessions of the American Federation of Labor, that open Monday, October 3, in Los Angeles, California. At this convention the American Federation of Labor officialdom must provide the program on which it intends to wage its part of the fight in the national presidential election next year, 1928.

It was within the strength of the American Federation of Labor, thru using its economic power, to free Sacco and Vanzetti. But the Greens, the Wolls and the Tobins, refused to use this power and thereby became the blood-brothers of those who put Sacco and Vanzetti to death.

The power of the masses who toil must develop sufficient strength in all sections of the nation to bring into existence an irresistible movement for independent political action. This movement must even engulf the American Federation of Labor.

The American labor movement must be cleansed of the guilt for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti that the Greens, the Wolls and the Tobins have brought upon it.

There must be no support in the ranks of American labor for those who shake hands with the executioners of our martyred comrades; and these executioners include all who support the capitalist social order that spawned the present United States government, the real assassin, the actual murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti.

No effective voice was raised in any city council, in any state legislature, nor in the national congress of these United States, demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed. They were all the legislative bodies, exclusively controlled by the ruling class.

Even under capitalism large numbers of workers must be sent into the city councils, the state legislatures, to the congress in Washington. But they must be sent as representatives of the working class fighting for their class.

As labor approaches the 1928 national elections it must look well for those who have the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti upon their hands. All such are the enemies of those who labor.

SACCO AND VANZETTI HAVE JOINED THE HAYMARKET MARTYRS

Statement of District Eight of Workers (Communist) Party.

The statement of the District Executive Committee of District Eight follows:

"With the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the legal murder has been completed. Two more working class fighters have joined the ranks of those sacrificed through the Haymarket frame-ups, those who laid down their lives in the struggle for the working class in Homestead, Lawrence, Ludlow, West Virginia and the mourned working class fighters the world over.

"The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti is another outrage against workers to be redeemed through future working class struggles.

"Thousands of Chicago workers have clearly stated their conviction in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti. Thousands have protested this frame-up murder. The Chicago workers hold a great heritage in the tradition of the Haymarket martyrs; nor have they forgotten the attempted murder of Mooney and Billings.

"It becomes clear to Chicago workers that Sacco and Vanzetti as well as the Haymarket martyrs were soldiers of the class struggle who fell at their posts fighting the common enemy. As it becomes thus plain that the common enemy is the capitalist class and all it stands for, then, Chicago workers will understand how to more effectively close their ranks and fight on not only to redeem the struggles of their fallen comrades but also to secure freedom from capitalist oppression and exploitation.

"The spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti, the spirit of the Haymarket martyrs is still living amongst us. In that spirit we must act.

"JAS. P. CANNON, Sec'y."

How Shall We Pay Tribute to the Memory of Our Martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti

Murdered in cold blood our heroes died with the note of defiance on their lips and unwavering devotion to the cause of the working class in their hearts. How shall we express our deep sense of loss! How shall we give vent to our undying hatred of the system, which so heartlessly takes the lives of the truest and bravest in our midst?

No tears will serve us now. The iron fist of the ruling class has steeled us well against such softness. By its brazen defiance of millions of voices, raised in the name of simple justice, to stay the execution of this horrible crime, the capitalist class has demonstrated, so that even the blind can see, its ruthless disregard for even the most elementary standards of human rights. It has dared to do this thing because it has felt its power to see it through, without let or hindrance. And we, the working class have learned the lesson, which the electric current that charred the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti, has seared deep in our hearts. We shall crush the rule of the tyrants. We shall challenge the power of the ruling class which has dared to commit this infamous deed. We will build up our strength until the day when the oppressors will be overthrown and labor shall be enthroned as the ruling class.

We shall build up our organs for the struggle, build and strengthen The DAILY WORKER, guard it well from its enemies, who yesterday murdered Sacco and Vanzetti and today raise their hands against our paper. This shall be our lasting tribute to the memory of our fallen fighters, Sacco and Vanzetti.

Strikes, Boycotts, Mass Protest Over Murder

End in Boston either today or tomorrow, it was learned at the headquarters of the Defense Committee.

Condolences To Mrs. Sacco.

Miss Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, 80 East 11th street, sent the following telegram to Mrs. Rose Sacco, wife of the executed radical. It read:

"On behalf of hundreds of thousands of sympathizers in New York I send my most heartfelt condolences in your hour of grief. Your murdered husband and his comrade-in-arms will live forever in the hearts of his fellow-workers. We feel deeply for you and your fatherless children, Inez and Dante."

Miss Baron also sent a wire to Miss Luigia Vanzetti. It read:

"In your grief for your murdered brother be consoled in the knowledge that he and his dear comrade, Nicola, died as martyrs to the cause of millions of toilers thruout the world. We grieve with you and ask you to remember that you are not alone in your grief. Millions mourn with you."

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—One hundred public schoolhouse janitors, their assistants and other men employed around institutions of learning in this city, were this afternoon sworn in by chief of police clerk, Capt. Joseph Harriman, for guard duty.

The men were given a badge, a revolver and a club and will be stationed at school houses and other public buildings for duty in preparation for Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations.

An additional hundred will be sworn in tomorrow.

BOSTON, Aug. 23. Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are dead.

They were murdered by order of "The Commonwealth of Massachusetts" in the electric chair at the Charlestown state prison a few minutes after midnight.

Each was pronounced dead a few seconds after the electric switch was thrown by Robert C. Elliott, Sing Sing executioner, and their bodies were laid on the stone slabs brot into the death chamber.

The two innocent workers, who have been tortured for the past seven years, died with the greatest bravery. Both made short speeches protesting their innocence, but little opportunity was given them as they were hurriedly rushed into the death chair.

"Farewell my wife and child and all my friends," shouted Sacco as the warden Hendry gave the signal to the executioner.

As Vanzetti was led into the death chamber he turned to the two guards and shook hands with them. He sat down in the chair, almost willingly and said calmly:

"I am Innocent!"

"I wish to tell you I am innocent and never committed any crime. I thank you for everything you have done for me. I am innocent of all crime, not only of this one, but all. I am an innocent man," Vanzetti said.

"I wish to forgive some people for what they are now doing to me," he concluded.

Celestino Madeiros, 25-year-old Portuguese who confessed that he was a member of the Morelli gang of Providence which committed the murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti were framed, was the first to be electrocuted, he being pronounced dead at 12:05.

At 2 o'clock in the morning a wagon drove into the prison yard. The lifeless bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti were lifted into the wagon and driven away to a mortuary two miles away in the East End. It was here that Mrs. Rose Sacco, Miss Luigia Vanzetti, and members of the defense committee claimed them.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 23. Hope for the five missing Dole fliers and their two would-be rescuers, Capt. Billy Erwin and Alvin Eichwaldt, had all but vanished with the coming of dawn today—one week after the ill-fated "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran," hopped off on their disastrous attempt to reach Honolulu.

THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

By JAMES P. CANNON,
(Sec'y., International Labor Defense)

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead but their names will live forever and become a shining banner for the upward striving toilers of the world. They have been murdered by the assassins of the capitalist class. Their execution was a cynically brutal defiance of the world-wide demand of the millions of people that they be liberated or at least be given a new trial to prove over again their innocence. It was a legal lynching, a fiendish act of class vengeance, cunningly prepared and planned and violently consummated by the willing tools of the capitalist class.

Sacco and Vanzetti died for the working class. Like their immortal comrades of Chicago's Haymarket they died as martyrs to the cause of labor. This was known or felt by tens of millions of workers in every corner of the globe who fought bitterly to the very last moment to vindicate the two martyred labor fighters. Their admirable loyalty and devotion to the cause of labor was the only crime they were guilty of, they were innocent of the crime charged against them by their executioners.

The last words of Vanzetti uttered a minute before the current of death silenced his voice were the echo of the deep convictions of the people "I wish to tell you that I am innocent and have never committed a crime, but perhaps sometimes sins. I am innocent of all crimes, not only of this one but of all. I am an innocent man."

The Massachusetts executioners have put to death two glorious spirits. These two fighters living for seven years in the shadow of the electric chair unceasingly tortured by their suspension between delay and death, calmly watching the relentless net of the capitalist lynchers closing about them, showed by their heroic conduct how the revolutionary fighters of the working class can die at the hands of their class enemy.

The noble dignity and courage which sustained them throughout the seven years remained with them to the end. They went to death calmly and bravely without fear or embarrassment. It was their murderers, the governors and the judges who hid their faces in fear and shame. Their determined loyalty to the cause is at the same time a mark of shame on the heads of the cowards and the prophets of respectability who could never make common cause with these clear eyed fighters.

Yes, their names will live forever for the electric current that killed them has burned their names permanently into the hearts of the toilers of the world. Their miserable executioners will be buried in oblivion while the names and struggles of Sacco and Vanzetti still remain a shining guide to the masses, an inspiration to the oppressed everywhere. They are our noble and heroic martyrs. Their conduct up to the very last moment was in that spirit. The fight of the working class has already made their names immortal and for us their memory is imperishable. Their voices are stilled but their silence thunders around the world. The workers of America who fought to free Sacco and Vanzetti must pay tribute to their heroic memory in every section of the country. The workers must gather at memorial meetings to pledge themselves to keep alive the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti and their fight, to pour their hatred upon the heads of the murderers to build our strength to prevent new Sacco-Vanzetti cases and to obtain freedom for the class fighters who are also victims of the frame-up and still in prison.

The International Labor Defense will continue its work for that cause in the spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Honor and respect to our fallen comrades. Remember Sacco and Vanzetti. Remember labor's deathless martyrs!

NANTICOKE, Pa., Aug. 23.—While Sacco and Vanzetti were awaiting death last night 2,000 hard coal miners assembled here to protest against the murder of the two innocent prisoners. Resolutions denouncing the "outrageous murder" and demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti were sent to President Coolidge and Governor Fuller.

Build the Labor Party as a Challenge to the Assassins of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IT was the capitalist government of the United States of America that burned Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to death in the human slaughter house, one of the many torture chambers of the Charlestown Penitentiary at Boston, Massachusetts.

This is the most important lesson that the American working class must learn as the lifeless bodies of our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, so courageous in life, so brave in the face of death, are removed from the abbatoir of the New England oligarchs of great greed.

Learning this lesson to the full, that the United States government of the blood-lusting owning class is the real assassin of the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, the working class of this country must inevitably develop its strength along the right path, toward the defeat of that government and the abolition of the social system for which it stands.

American labor must stand aghast at the ease and self-assurance with which the murder crew in Boston, the long-heralded center of "American culture," proceeded with its bloody work.

This brief article will deal with merely one effort,—the struggle of the workers to break away from the political domination of the working class, to turn their backs on the republican and democratic parties, to develop their own independent political action — thru the Labor Party—and unite the forces of the working class to battle the ruling class forces guilty of the assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Where is the worker who would shake the assassin's hand of Robert C. Elliott, the hideous-faced executioner, who threw on the powerful electric current that roasted our comrades alive?

Yet the executioner, Elliott, was merely the servant of the dominant government, getting his $150 for each murder that he committed. It was the capitalist state that paid his Judas gold.

The same capitalist government paid Elliott that pays the puny human, Judge Webster Thayer, who sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti to death, no less the assassin and executioner as he sits, black gowned, holding court at Dedham, Massachusetts.

The same capitalist government that paid Elliott pays Governor Alvan T. Fuller, the chief executive of Massachusetts, who spoke the "NO!" of the American ruling class in answer to the demands of international labor that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed, being innocent of the crime charged against them.

This is the same capitalist government that has carefully selected all its judges, both in the federal and state courts in Massachusetts, as well as its own United States Supreme Court. Many lawyers sought a loophole somewhere for the two proletarians, Sacco, the shoemaker, and Vanzetti, the fish peddler. But they failed.

The murder crew stood solid. The United States Supreme Court Justices, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Louis Dembitz Brandeis and Harlan Fiske Stone, when appealed to, supported Fuller and Thayer, and they were in turn supported by William Howard Taft, the Chief Justice himself, who had new infamy heaped upon his name because of the vicious resistance he offered to the anti-child labor amendment to the federal constitution, that threatens to take children out of the mills of New England and put them in school.

At the very moment that world labor was directing its attack against the United States government, demanding the opening of the files of the department of justice that contained testimony sufficient to furnish a basis for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, the figurehead of the government, Calvin Coolidge, was enjoying himself in the national playground known as Yellowstone Park, in Wyoming.

This is the murder crew that joined in making a Roman holiday, a murder feast, with our two comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti, as the victims, because the strength of the working class was not powerful enough to liberate them.

Labor that is loyal to Sacco and Vanzetti turns its back on the executioner, Elliott; on the judge, Thayer; on the governor, Fuller; on the judges, Holmes, Brandeis, Stone, Taft; on the attorney general, Sargent; on the president, "Silent Cal."

But in order to be honest with themselves, in order to be honest with the martyred dead, they must also turn their backs upon all those who give support to these political instruments of the ruling class.

The hands of every trade union official who urges support of capitalist party officials, all allies of "the murder crew," drip with the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti just as much as the hands of Elliott, the executioner, or Thayer, the judicial assassin, or their many associates.

All labor must watch well the sessions of the American Federation of Labor, that open Monday, October 3, in Los Angeles, California. At this convention the American Federation of Labor officialdom must provide the program on which it intends to wage its part of the fight in the national presidential election next year, 1928.

It was within the strength of the American Federation of Labor, thru using its economic power to free Sacco and Vanzetti. But the Greens, the Wolls and the Tobins, refused to use this power and thereby became the blood-brothers of those who put Sacco and Vanzetti to death.

The power of the masses who toil must develop sufficient strength in all sections of the nation to bring into existence an irresistible movement for independent political action. This movement must even engulf the American Federation of Labor.

The American labor movement must be cleansed of the guilt for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti that the Greens, the Wolls and the Tobins have brought upon it.

There must be no support in the ranks of American labor for those who shake hands with the executioners of our martyred comrades; and these executioners include all who support the capitalist social order that spawned the present United States government, the real assassin, the actual murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti.

No effective voice was raised in any city council, in any state legislature, nor in the national congress of these United States, demanding that Sacco and Vanzetti be freed. They were all the legislative bodies, exclusively controlled by the ruling class.

Even under capitalism large numbers of workers must be sent into the city councils, the state legislatures, to the congress in Washington. But they must be sent as representatives of the working class fighting for their class.

As labor approaches the 1928 national elections it must look well for those who have the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti upon their hands. All such are the enemies of those who labor.

SACCO AND VANZETTI HAVE JOINED THE HAYMARKET MARTYRS

Statement of District Eight of Workers (Communist) Party.

The statement of the District Executive Committee of District Eight follows:

"With the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the legal murder has been completed. Two more working class fighters have joined the ranks of those sacrificed through the Haymarket frame-ups, those who laid down their lives in the struggle for the working class in Homestead, Lawrence, Ludlow, West Virginia and the mourned working class fighters the world over.

"The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti is another outrage against workers to be redeemed through future working class struggles.

"Thousands of Chicago workers have clearly stated their conviction in the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti. Thousands have protested this frame-up murder. The Chicago workers hold a great heritage in the tradition of the Haymarket martyrs; nor have they forgotten the attempted murder of Mooney and Billings.

"It becomes clear to Chicago workers that Sacco and Vanzetti as well as the Haymarket martyrs were soldiers of the class struggle who fell at their posts fighting the common enemy. As it becomes thus plain that the common enemy is the capitalist class and all it stands for, then, Chicago workers will understand how to more effectively close their ranks and fight on not only to redeem the struggles of their fallen comrades but also to secure freedom from capitalist oppression and exploitation.

"The spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti, the spirit of the Haymarket martyrs is still living amongst us. In that spirit we must act.

"JAS. P. CANNON, Sec'y."

SOVIET UNION IN DEFEAT WOULD BE BLOW TO GEORGIA

Intellectuals Declare for Defense

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—In Tiflis a large meeting of Georgian intellectuals has taken place in the presence of ex-members of the Central Committee of the Georgian Menshvist Party and ex-members of the Mensheviks, the national democrats and the social revolutionaries.

The meeting unanimously adopted a resolution containing inte. alia, the following: "The August insurrection of 1921 caused the breakdown of those methods of struggle used by the Georgian emigrants. It became clear that the national and state interests of our country would have to be brought into agreement with that system to which Georgia by the dictates of history is a part. The world is now faced once again with the danger of war. The war, no matter where it may begin, will be of an international character. One of the chief issues at stake will be the question of the existence or non-existence of the Soviet power and the Soviet system, the question of Georgia will not be raised as a separate problem.

No Separate Party.

"The Georgian people can not take any especial and separate part in this war. The Georgian people realize that should the Soviet power in Russia be defeated, then the reaction would ensue which would not be favorable to the national and economic development of Georgia. We consider it necessary to declare with all emphasis that any insurrection or similar action in Georgia would be the greatest crime against the Georgian people. We will resist energetically anyone who dares to attempt to drag the Georgian people into any such adventure."

Bishop Coming to Politics Talk Met By Cruelty Charge

The question of national minorities in the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes continues to rankle. When Bishop Nikolai of Jugoslavia arrived in America to present his lecture to the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, his secretary was handed a letter from the Bulgarian organization known as The Central Committee of the Union of the Macedonian Political Organization in America, which charged that in the bishop's own diocese, Bulgarian schools were suppressed, Bulgarian books forbidden, and Bulgarian names likewise, so that, "he whose name is Petroff must now call himself Petrovitch.

"The smallest sign of the existence of the Bulgarian nationality in your diocese is considered as a criminal act and is punished by cruelly," says the letter, and continues, "History has not registered another instance where a nation wholesale has so mercilessly been put out of the pale of the law."

BRITAIN'S QUARREL OVER AIRPLANE IN CHINA ONLY STEP TOWARDS FURTHER UNITED INVASION

(Chinese Nationalist News Agency)
(Statement to the Press By ERNEST K. MOY, American Director.)

Britain's action in cutting a Chinese railway because the Chinese object to England's violation of China's rights is nothing surprising or new. Force is the only argument a bully can employ when his lawless conduct is questioned or opposed, and, like any other common bully, England takes what she wants by force or intimidation.

Ever since the British military forces first landed in Shanghai early this year, their airplanes have been flying over Chinese territory. There is not a single authority on international law who will deny that this flying over Chinese territory by British military airplanes is a clear violation of the law of nations. The Commissioner of Foreign Affairs has protested repeatedly to the British authorities in Shanghai against this violation, but invariably his protests have been ignored.

On August 16th a British plane while thus illegally flying was forced to land in Chinese territory. The Commissioner took advantage of the occasion to bring about and end to these flagrant violations of law, and retained the wings of the fallen plane. Their return was demanded by the British consul general, and when this was refused, the British general Duncan ordered the cutting of the Shanghai-Hangchow Railroad which he said would remain cut until the restoration of the airplane wings.

It does not take any authority on law to tell that such an act serves only to multiply and aggravate the crimes England, by virtue of brute force, is perpetrating on Chinese soil.

The incident, however, serves a purpose not originally contemplated by the British authorities. In a statement they felt obliged to issue to explain their unjustifiable conduct, it is asserted that the "reasons which justify flights over Chinese territory from time to time by British and other foreign fliers are the same as those which justify the landing in China of the armed forces of these powers." It simply confirms, for it is an admission of, what the Chinese have know all along; namely, that Great Britain proposes military intervention in China in concert with the other powers and will precipitate incidents to lend justification to her fool-hardy program.

It should be held in mind that England and the other powers justify the landing of their troops in China because they are confined within areas which are supposed to be outside of Chinese jurisdiction. In other words they have a supposed right under international law to be there. But during the campaign last spring the British troops guarding the extra-territorial area of the International Settlement in Shanghai moved their lines into strictly Chinese territory, —and act of invasion. The move was justified on the ground that it was necessary to protect the British rights in the International Settlement. It is an indirect and evasive way to say that in order to protect British "rights" in China it is necessary to have foreign troops police the whole country; in other words military intervention.

U.S.S.R. WORKERS ASSAIL PARTY OPPOSITIONISTS

Write Letters, Pass Resolutions

(Special to the DAILY WORKER)

MOSCOW, Aug. 23.—The press continues to publish resolutions adopted by many party organizations in regard to the decisions of the united plenum of the central committee of the All Union Communist Party in regard to the inner party opposition.

All these resolutions approve the decisions of the plenum and emphasize the reprimand addressed to Trotzky and Zinoviev. They declare it to be the last warning to the opposition, and the last attempt to help it return to a Leninist channel.

Workers Write.

Simultaneously there appear in the different newspapers a whole series of letters from different Communist workmen, announcing their leaving the opposition, and denouncing its disorganizational activity.

The Kharkov papers published for example a letter from Fedor Zakharov, a workman in the Kharkov locomotive works, and until recently a member of the opposition. The letter states among other things, that the main factor which compelled him to resign from the opposition is the resolution of the last plenum of the central committee and central controling commission, in which, instead of expelling Zinoviev and Trotzky, the plenum left them in the central committee, confining itself to a reprimand and appealing to all members of the opposition to renounce their erroneous line.

Dislikes Fractionism.

Zakharov declares in his letter that he was particularly indignant over the action of certain Kharkov members who, declaring that they salute the plenum's decision, still the next day held a fractionary meeting with thirteen comrades present with whom two men, expelled from the party also met. Zakharov says: "This meeting proved to me that the opposition is against party unity."

Pravda emphasizes that nearly a fortnight's discussion by the lower party nuclei show as a result the exceptional unity and firmness wherewith the party, as one man, supports the resolutions of the plenum.

Led to Ruin.

The local resolutions, says Pravda, not only refer to the last warning to the opposition, but in accordance with the entire line taken by the central committee and the central controlling commission contain appeals to the rank and file of the workmen in the opposition who still continue to follow their leaders who have failed, to bethink themselves and return to the party's position.

The opposition led these partisans of its thru a blind alley to the very edge of the party.

They were already directly threatened with the prospect of becoming a tool in the hands of hostile class powers alien to the proletariat, which are waylaying the opposition around the corner and calling it from the ranks of the party.

Many workmen in the opposition, recognizing this danger, have already left it.

Tries For Unity.

The party, has done everything possible to turn the leaders of the opposition the party's way, and warrant them a painless return to the party. Now their future fate and political life depend on the leaders themselves.

The party will also do everything to convince the last honest real workman who is a member of the party following the opposition, that he should stand as formerly shoulder to shoulder, brotherly, in the Bolshevist party of Lenin. This is a most difficult moment and tremendous problems are confronting the party, demanding united and unanimous work under the leadership of the central committee. There should be no place in the ranks of the party for fractional dissension and the work of the opposition.

Purcell Declares Again for Unity With USSR Labor

PARIS, August 2 (By Mail).—President A. A. Purcell of the International Federation of Trade Unions has aroused the anger of Leon Johaux, the leader of the French unions affiliated with the Amsterdam International, when the former declared in favor of an all-inclusive world congress of trade unions as a prelude to the restoration of unity, and said that the fruits of the Russian revolution must be conserved.

Johaux In Angry Retort.

Leon Johaux, in an angry tone, insisted that Purcell's statement was made on his own personal responsibility and was disapproved by the rest of the executive with the exception of the two British members, Brown and Purcell.

Ben Turner and George Hicks, other members of the British delegation; declared themselves in favor of Purcell's stand. Brown, who is the British secretary of the I. T. F. U., said that he was entirely in ignorance of the protest made by Johaux, who did not consult the majority in whose behalf he took the responsibility to speak.

Failed In General Strike.

Purcell, who proved a weak "left winger" during the great general strike, was one of the foremost advocates of unity between the Russian trade unions and those affiliated to the I. F. T. U. in an all-inclusive trade union international. He has been severely criticized since then, by the left wing, for his objective support of the right wing leaders, such as Thomas, Bromley, MacDonald. But the masses in Great Britain are feeling the pressure of capitalism more and more and the passage of the Trade Union Disputes Bill is forcing the leaders to use militant language.

The following is the gist of Purcell's speech in reference to the Russian trade unions:

"How miserable are the follies which have kept ourselves and the Russian workers apart!

"We need the young and powerful Russian trade union movement in our International. We need the support of our Russian comrades, we need their freshness of outlook, their boldness, vigor and courage.

Reaction Gaining.

"The world would be a far, far different place today, reaction and fascism would not have obtained the grip on Europe that they have obtained, if, immediately following the Vienna Congress of the I. F. T. U., the Russians had joined with us in strengthening and building up and giving vitality to the International trade union movement.

"The saddest reading of all in the report of the I. F. T. U. is those parts dealing with Russian relations. All those who in any way claim to be leaders of the working class owe it as a solemn duty, a sacred obligation, to the workers, to unite the forces of our movement.

"The conquests of the Russian revolution must be defended at all costs.

Need Russian Workers.

"We need our Russian comrades in our International. We need our American comrades. We need our Mexican comrades. We need our Chinese comrades. We need every organized body of workers in the world.

"The I. F. T. U. must adopt the advice of Danton. It is for the Trade Union International to dare, and dare, and dare again.

"On every hand the inefficiency and decay of capitalism is being made apparent. International capitalism is bankrupt in ideas and in statesmanship. Only organized labor can introduce order and efficiency, the fullest and best use of the highly developed productive forces science and invention have given us, and liberty and human happiness into the world."

The All-Russian Council of Trade Unions has persistently tried to bring about the unity of the workers in one all-inclusive international. All its efforts have been frustrated by the opposition of the continental leaders of the I. F. T. U. with few exceptions.

PRAVDA ANSWERS UNITY ARTICLE OF SOCIALISTS

Should Address Queries to Red International

(Special Cable to Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, Aug. 23. — Pravda writing of the proposal of the social democratic newspaper Het Volk for the formation of a new Russian-European Committee for the realization of trade union unity points out that one must not trust the sincerity of this newspaper, which formerly was an echo of the Amsterdam International, even before Oudegeest's resignation.

The question arises, why form new organizations for the purpose of achieving trade union unity when it would be much easier for Amsterdam to cease sabotaging the true desires of the labor masses who want unity?

The Soviet Union Labor Unons do not need favors from the Vorwaerts nor from brokers. They do not need services from the Dutch reformists who are vainly trying by means of a provocative proposal to oppose the Soviet Union Labor unions and the European trade unions and create the impression that the Red International is a revolutionary movement, solely of the Soviet labor unions.

If Het Volk intends to speak seriously of the relations of the unions on the question of unity it should address itself to the Red International of Labor Unions which is the sole plenipotentiary representative of all revolutionary labor unions.

Trud Comments.

Trud, commenting on the statements of Jouhaux, Hicks and Fimmen, points out that the statement of Hicks illustrates the attitude of the British trade unions in the Amsterdam international, particularly on the subject of trade union unity. It is an attitude lacking firm principles, purpose, or direction. The British delegation advanced no concrete proposals for changing from the existing course of the International Federation of Trade Unions, nor any motion for actually opening negotiations with the labor unions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The British opposition, in the opinion of Trud, arises from the fact that the German unions are taking over more and more authority in the Amsterdam international and weakening the power of the British delegates.

Jouhaux's Hypocrisy.

Jouhaux's pompous utterances on the unity question are full of false pathos and affected friendliness for the Soviet Union and its labor unions. This attitude induces the labor unions of the U. S. S. R. to redouble their wariness towards reformist babble about unity.

If Jouhaux grows eloquent about the Red International of Labor Unions impeding unity, the revolutionary workers must remind him that the split in France in 1920 and the beginning of 1921 before the organiaztion of the Red International of Labor Unions was provoked by the fact that the conservative leaders of the labor federation proceeded to exclude all revolutionary organizations.

Attacked Revolution.

Only two days before the Congress of the Amsterdam International Jouhaux pronounced himself against union with the revolutionary part of the French proletariat.

Now Jouhaux tries to entice the Soviet labor unions by promises of support from France against the anti-Soviet bloc. But support of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is the direct duty of every oragnization and cannot be a matter of bargaining. The re-establishment of unity in the International labor movement may only be the object of a free agreement between the International Federation of Trade Union (Amsterdam) and the labor unions out of its ranks.

Wants Labor Gagged.

Insistence on an acknowledgment by all these unions before any joint congress, that the Amsterdam federation has the correct policy and is the only proper organization, as Jouhaux wishes, cannot be a way leading to unity. The labor unions of the West and the unions of U. S. S. R. all have their own traditions and statutes.

Only by a general congress, without previous "capitulations" may there be created a single united organized labor movement thruout the world, says Trud.

The demands of Jouhaux, the paper continues, show that he does not really desire workers unity, because he desires to retain unity with the league of nations rather than unity of the working class, which is incompatible with the league of nations.

Liberal Professor Really Thinks U. S. To Free Filipinos

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 23. —The United States is so definitely pledged to Philippine independence, "when they are capable of maintaining it and if the Filipinos wish it," that a violation of this promise would never be supported or tolerated by the Americans people, Prof. Ralston Hayden, University of Michigan, declared yesterday at the Institute of Politics.

The fear of many Filipino leaders, however, that economic and political forces may in the end bring about the forcible permanent retention of the Philippines despite all promises of independence is one of the most disturbing factors in the Philippine situation today, Hayden said. Forcible retentionist proposals, therefore, tend to keep alive suspicion and animosity and make American-Filipino cooperation more difficult than it otherwise would be, he added.

Hayden was discussing the proposal of the American Chamber of Commerce in Manila that the Philippines be established as a permanent organized territory of the United States. This proposal, he said, was opposed by a vast majority of Filipinos.

The history of the last 30 years, Hayden asserted, was the strongest possible evidence that the Filipino people possess a high degree of political capacity.

Negro Labor Fights Against Jim Crow Move at Seaside

Because she has accommodated Negroes at her bath house, Mrs. Milhauser, Seaside, L. I., has been threatened with the destruction of her pavillion.

Recently many bath-house owners held a meeting to protest against Negroes using the Seaside beach for bathing. Several speakers stated openly that they would burn the Milhauser Bath House if Negroes continued to go there.

When the American Negro Labor Congress heard of this attempt to suppress the elementary rights of a large section of the working class of this city, it sent Mrs. Hilhauser a letter congratulating her on the stand she has taken. It was signed by William L. Patterson, president.

Federal Reserve Gives Blessing to Mussolini Loan; Mellon Sees Him

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23. — New York bankers have practically been given the Federal Reserve Board's blessing in extending another hundred million to subsidize the weakening regime of Dictator Mussolini. In a special report, the board praises the economic and financial reforms adopted by the Bank of Italy and the Fascist Italian government in the past year.

The Federal Reserve is particularly enthusiastic over Mussolini' method of handling labor through special fascist unions which have enforced 10 per cent wage cuts and outlawed all strikes. "Work has gone on steadily," the board states, "and has not been interrupted by labor disputes. Some few controversies concerning slight adjustments of wages, of vital importance for the industries concerned, were equitably adjusted and the work men showed the highest spirit of cooperation and understanding."

Despite the "cooperation" forced on workers at the point of a bayonet, industry suffered badly during the year, the board admits. A falling off in domestic demand, due to the wretched wages of Italian consumers, unsettled conditions in Italian markets, high priced coal during the British strike, scarcity of capital, difficulty of collecting from Mediterranean customers, increase in unemployment and the instability of the exchange rate contributed to the depression.

New York bankers have been preparing the American investing public for a new Italian loan. The last one was sold with great difficulty and only after the most assiduous puffing of the Italian dictator. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is now cruising Italian waters in his private yacht and will confer with Mussolini during the summer.

TWELVETHOUSAND AWAIT IN SQUARE FOR DEATH NEWS

Guns of Armored Cars Drive Them Away

"Sacco Murdered," read a placard in the second story window of the Jewish Daily Freiheit, 30 Union Square, just after midnight yesterday morning; and "boos" and hisses were heard from more than 12,000 workers assembled there. Soon after that the police clubbed them from the square.

Standing patiently for many hours the workers had watched eagerly for every new bulletin put up jointly by The DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit. Altho they were aware that no hope was left to save the lives of the two framed-up workers they would not go home until they had the official announcement that the electrocution was finished.

Many Fainted.

When the sign appeared in the window, simultaneously more than half of the assembled workers gave voice to their sentiments. The other half were too horrified or overcome either to speak or move. Several women fell into a dead faint, and one after another was carried to a nearby confectionery store that was turned into a temporary hospital, so keen was the anguish of the moment.

When the second sign appeared with the inscription "Vanzetti Murdered," several hundred police and detectives under the command of Capt. Wm. E. Ward and John J. Broderick, head of the industrial squad drove into the crowd and made them disperse. Mounted police and members of the riot squad were most active. The latter carried nightsticks in one hand while the other hand was kept near the revolver holster that was strapped on top of the coat.

Break Up Parade.

Armored motorcycles that had been hidden in nearby side streets then came into view. Driving down Second Ave. they broke up every attempt by the workers to start a parade to City Hall. This was the second time within six hours that such an attempt was made. The afternoon parade Monday had been comparatively successful but the early morning demonstration yesterday was ruthlessly broken up.

For several hours after the announcement of the execution, Second Ave. had the appearance of being under martial law. A member of the Industrial Squad was stationed on every second corner to direct all activities. In addition squads of police were stationed at many points along the avenue. Every five or six minutes several cars would rush past, some going uptown, others downtown. John J. Broderick, was in command of all the forces on Second Ave. Walking along the street with the mien of a conqueror in a captured city, he gave orders to his subordinates.

Whenever a group of workers appeared they were driven apart. Armored cars mounting machine guns followed a short distance behind the foot police and called for assistance when they were of the opinion that the workers were going to reform their lines.

The Struggle Sharpens in the Coalfields

In the coal fields the strike which is now in its fifth month is showing these developments which we have come to expect in struggles of this kind, especially when they take place in a basic industry.

The injunction has made its appearance as in southern Ohio, the mining companies have been authorized to employ gunmen sworn in as deputy sheriffs by obliging officials, officers of the militia are investigating the situation, the coal barons are hiring scabs, state police break up miners' meetings, strikers are jailed, conflicts provoked by scab-herders have taken place, workers have been killed and wounded.

Thru it all the officialdom of the miners' union, Lewis and his henchmen, and the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, of which the United Mine Workers is the most important part, sit apparently unmoved.

No national program for organization work in the non-union fields has been put forward. No program for relief for the strikers and their families has been forthcoming. It seems that the coal barons are being given every reason to believe that the union officials will not lead or even encourage any real struggle.

The rank and file of the miners are fighting as they have always fought—without fear and without complaint. Receiving nothing from headquarters except diatribes against the left wing section of the union, the members have at every opportunity met the offensive of the operators with mass picketing, marches into non-union territory and a solidarity which only the coal miners can show.

But these activities, valuable as they have been, are of too scattered a character to bring much pressure on the coal barons.

The most pressing need in the strike now is a national center and the organization of all these scattered militant actions into one national movement—a movement which can make effective inroads in the unorganized districts and secure and administer the financial relief for which there is now need and for which the need will increase.

The Lewis machine has failed to lead the union in this strike just as it failed to lead into anything but black reaction and ineffectiveness before the strike.

The left wing elements in the union will have to set up a directing center for all strike activity if the union is to live. Winter is coming on and then the coal barons will have both cold and hunger as their allies. The whole labor movement must be mobilized to aid the miners.

Organization of the non-union fields, stoppage of coal production in these districts and the establishment of an efficient relief machinery operating on a national scale—these are the minimum requirements of the strike in its recent phase.

Organizing the Machinery for Mass Murder

The unprecedented preparations made by the police in all large cities previous to the demonstrations in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti afford a clear insight into the primary reason for the organization and maintenance of such forces.

Horse, foot and artillery were mobilized for these demonstrations. We dare say that even in times of revolutionary crisis in European countries there are no such preparations made as were evident, for instance, in New York for the demonstration in Union Square.

The meeting was entirely surrounded by armed police, mounted and on foot. Machine-guns were placed on all buildings commanding the square. Every speaker's platform was surrounded by a ring of policemen. Tear and gas bombs were stored at strategic points. A minimum of 2,000 police were on duty in and around Union Square and the rest of the force was held in reserve—some 12,000 armed men could have been brought into action in a few minutes.

What does this mean?

In our opinion it can mean nothing but a determination on the part of the ruling class to take advantage of the present weakness of the labor movement and upon the slightest excuse give the workers a sample of what its mercenaries can do in the line of mass murder.

Only the broadening of the trade union movement by the inclusion of millions of the unorganized and the establishment of a powerful labor party sending fighting representatives to public offices can hold in check, a ruling class which, by its murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and its warlike preparations to prevent mass action by the workers, shows that it will stop at nothing to establish and maintain slavery in the United States.

Letters From Our Readers

Haskell's Complaint.

Dear Comrade:

Major General William N. Haskell says:

"The employers should support the National Guard because any time the big corporations have trouble they generally call upon the Guard for protection"

It is presumed he means labor troubles and the services the Guard renders in breaking strikes. Is that what the Guard is for?

I always thought a Guard is for the purpose of maintaining order and favoring neither side.

I think you will perform a service to the cause of union labor if you investigate Haskell's record with regard to the "troubles" of corporations.—E. A. Edenberg.

A Japanese Worker's Life in U. S.

Dear Comrades:

I am a slave at the Howard Reed orchard of Marysville, Calif., which employs about 100 men and women.

About two months ago, I was taken sick from the arsenic poison of the spray and asked the boss to take me to a doctor but was refused. After the few days rest at the hospital I recovered. Since then I have been asking the boss for compensation, but he says "this and that." I was obliged to report the case to an attorney. However the case has not been settled yet.

Such is our life.—T. Yani.

learning that American imperialism is more beastly than all other dark forces which have ever threatened to ruthless domination of all peoples and the exploitation of all who toil.

The national government at Washington still attempts to hold before itself the ragged veil of legal form which places the responsibility for this crime solely upon the State of Massachusetts.

But the workers of other countries have already seen what American workers must also see—that the government of the United States, and Calvin Coolidge, the servant of Wall Street in Washington, are fully as guilty of this horrible murder as are the smaller flunkies of the courts and executive mansion of Massachusetts.

Legal forms do not interfere with actions when the big financial powers of the United States have a desire. Coolidge let Sacco and Vanzetti die because Coolidge's masters wanted to strike the working class in the face with this crime.

BUT the loss of the lives of our martyrs also lies at the door of some who have chosen to appear before the working class as Sacco's and Vanzetti's "defenders." It is necessary to speak plainly. Those who have appeared as "defenders" but who have at the same time obstructed the only forms of action which would have and could have saved Sacco and Vanzetti,—have also by their actions served to turn the electric current into the bodies of our working class martyrs. It is plain that nothing but the most powerful mass movement could have saved these men. The executive council of the American Federation of Labor refused to sanction a general strike of protest against the execution. The executive of the A. F. of L. issued just enough words on this case to keep themselves from being branded as friends of the hangman. But they refused to use the most effective means. William Green, the agent of American capitalism in the ranks of the workers, has served his masters again, but in a more hideously cruel way than usual.

ONLY a powerful mass movement could have saved Sacco and Vanzetti. This could not be put into motion except by the united efforts of all possible forces of the working class organizations and such as claim working class character.

The Workers (Communist) Party for that reason proposed to the socialist party and to all other organizations claiming working class character, to form a united front of ALL for the tremendous task of saving our working class heroes under the shadow of death. The Workers (Communist) Party was at the time in a struggle with the socialist party, which was helping the employers to break strikes and destroy trade unions in New York City. But since there are still some workers who blindly think the socialist party a working class body, the Workers (Communist) Party offered to form a united front for the calling out of all working class forces into the field for a demonstration that could have been effective. But the socialist party wanted no mass demonstration, wanted no unity of the working class.

The socialist party is not a party that fights. Its answer to the sentence of death of Sacco and Vanzetti, was to propose a "Day of Mourning." This proposal could only serve to quiet the working class while the execution proceeded. It was merely a following in the wake of the petty-bourgeois liberal elements. This was typical of the present historical role of the social-democratic parties of all countries, and of the Second International to which it adheres. Mr. Morris Hillquit, Mr. James Oneal, Mr. Abraham Cahan and the other leaders of the socialist party thus did their share in forming the screen behind which capitalist justice worked swiftly and surely. With such leadership the working class would have many "days of mourning."

IT is necessary to draw the lessons from the tragedy which has befallen us.

The workers must understand that when the arm-straps and leg-irons of the electric chair are taken loose from the dead bodies of our brothers, Sacco and Vanzetti—THE ATTACK UPON THE WORKING CLASS IS NOT ENDED! We must understand that this is but the beginning of a new intensification of the big offensive of capital against labor. The American capitalist class feels itself powerful beyond all precedent; they proceed with the murder, confident that the working class will offer little resistence; the resistance (insufficient though it was) stirs the capitalist class and all its agencies to even more efforts to suppress working class organizations. The workers must expect more attacks upon their trade unions, and especially upon the most militant sections of their class. It is necessary to redouble every energy now to strengthen the whole working class front.

THE William Green sort of leadership in the trade unions will be driven to repeat in ever worse form their actions as protectors of the capitalist institutions, during the growing offensive and the consequent sharpening of struggle. The workers must learn from the role played by the trade union bureaucrats in the Sacco-Vanzetti case—must learn that only by the energetic building of the left wing in the trade unions, together with the building and strengthening of the trade unions inside of the A. F. of L. and also the independent unions, and by throwing off the leadership of trade union bureaucrats who are agents of capital—only by this means and by taking up the militant struggle of the workers' organizations against the capitalists, can they effectively defend our class—the class for which Sacco and Vanzetti fought and died.

The workers must learn from the part played by the socialist party, that that party is only another one of the agencies which confuse and blind the working class in the interest of the capitalist class, dividing and misleading the workers in the hour of crisis when only unity and militant action under courageous leadership can be effective.

FROM the way in which this case was handled by the "respectable liberals" who gained control of the direction of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, thru the consistently confused and individualistic policies of certain workers enjoying the confidence of Sacco and Vanzetti—the workers must learn not to adopt the methods or the leadership of the petty-bourgeois defenders of capitalism, when they are engaged in a life-and-death struggle with capitalist hangmen. The workers must learn the bitter lesson that it is not by the individualistic methods of the anarchists, nor by the only slightly different "respectable" methods of the liberal reformers, that the great mass movements can be set in motion which can save the lives of our class martyrs and win its battles.

The workers must learn to distrust and to hate the courts of the capitalist government, and to rely upon their own organized working class strength outside of and opposed to the institutions of the capitalist state. Only the organized mass power of our class can win concessions from the ruling class as a by-product of class struggle, and only this same organized mass power win the ultimate victory of our class of which Sacco and Vanzetti dreamed, and for which they died.

Earl Browder Speaks On China in Philadelphia, Clayton Hall, August 24

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 23.—Interest in the Chinese revolution amongst the Philadelphia workers has received a stimulus in the announcement that Earl Browder will lecture on that subject, Wednesday, August 24th at the Clayton Hall, Hutchison and Girard Ave. (near 9th and Girard). The lecturer is well qualified to explain the Chinese revolution, having been an eye witness to many of the changing scenes of the Chinese revolution, had close contact with the Chinese labor movement and its leaders, and in his capacity as Secretary of the Pan-Pacific Labor Congress has accumulated much knowledge.

The Chinese revolution in its latest phase, which because of its temporary recession and its class realignments, is not so well understood by the workers, will be interpreted by a member of the Kuomintang, P. T. Lau, formerly secretary to the mayor of Canton.

Those interested in understanding the significance of the Chinese revolution and its world-wide effects cannot afford to miss this lecture. Admission 10 cents. Proceeds for Chinese relief.

Labor Accepts the Challenge

THE death of Sacco and Vanzetti is a challenge to the toilers of all countries, to everyone who is not a slave of the imperialist bankers and big interests that dominate the world.

By the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, capitalism has affirmed its domination, it has demanded and obtained its pound of flesh, but at the same time it has exposed the hollowness of American justice, the show and hypocrisy of American democracy.

Sacco and Vanzetti have been murdered by the bloody hands of capitalist justice which have crushed out the lives of these two valiant fighters for the cause of the working class.

Sacco and Vanzetti died as they lived—uncompromising enemies of capitalism and the capitalist state, unwavering champions of the cause of labor, appealing to the last moment to the workers of the world to fight on for a new and better order of society, and have told the workers of this country that capitalist-dictatorship rules, and labor can obtain no justice.

Labor accepts the challenge. It knows that the case of Sacco and Vanzetti does not stand apart from the class struggle. It knows that the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti will be followed by new repressive laws, renewed attacks upon foreign-born workers, new frame-ups and new attacks upon the wages and working conditions of all labor.

The working class will fight against these violent onslaughts upon its rights. It will draw courage and determination from the brave stand of Sacco and Vanzetti and from the heroic and unexampled fight of the workers of the entire world for their freedom. Labor will not be cowed by this foul and ghastly murder. It will answer this blow against the cause of the working class by organizing many and powerful unions, by organizing the unorganized workers, by establishing a mass labor party, by waging an unceasing class struggle against capitalist rules, by helping to build up a strong Communist Party in this country that will lead the workers to their emancipation.

Sacco and Vanzetti are not dead. Their cause lives in the hearts and minds of millions. Long live the unity and solidarity of the working class in its struggle against capitalism. — District Executive Committee, District No. 2 (New York) Workers (Communist) Party, William Weinstone, General Secretary.

WASHINGTON, August 23.—Twenty-five agents in the New York prohibition office will be dismissed, Seymour Lowman, Assistant Secretary of Treasury, announces.

Lowman said that an examination of the books of Chester T. Mills, former New York Administrator, revealed that his payroll was $84,000 higher than his allotment.

Needle Trade Defense

A conference of 45 Workmen Circle branches held at the Jewish University, 126 East 16th St., N. Y. C. went on record in support of the Joint Defense. A resolution was read on the present situation in the needle trades, and unanimously adopted, and financial and moral support to the Joint Defense and Relief Committee which is at present the ammunition center of the cloakmakers' and furriers' fight was pledged. The resolution especially stressed the importance of the present campaign to organize a strong militant Workers' Self Defense that will supply the necessary funds weekly for the fighting cloakmakers and furriers. The conference also decided to call upon all members of the W. C. branches to join the Workers' Self Defense and help win the struggle of the needle trades workers against the reactionary betrayers, the Sigman clique.

Sigman Injured It.

The needle industry must be healed of the wounds inflicted by the Sigman band. The work of the defense is very important in the present fight. Concerts, balls, carnivals, are the means by which thousands of dollars are raised with which to further the struggle and repel the attacks of the Sigman gang. An army of several thousand workers and sympathizers that will bring in ammunition weekly will assure a successful outcome of the fight. Every worker a member of the Workers' Self Defense. Every class conscious worker must help exterminate the blood-hounds of the labor movement. The campaign of the Workers' Self Defense must reach all workers' organizations, Workmen Circle branches, T. U. E. L., workers' clubs, local unions and other organizations. The Sigman attempt to hinder the August 28th Starlight Jamboree must be answered. Sigman knows very well that a successful affair will bring in thousands of dollars and will help us in our fight. He therefore seeks to hinder the success of the Jamboree, but his attempt was a failure because a day later with the help of the workers, new furniture was brought in.

Opera In Evening.

In the evening the opera "Carmen" will be produced in the great open air Arena. Prominent singers are in the cast which will be accompanied by a full symphony orchestra. The entire program is to be broadcast by Station WKBQ. Admission to the opera is $1.00. Reserved seats are $2.00 and $1.50. To be sure of hearing the opera buy tickets at once as there are only a limited number of tickets printed. A 50 cent ticket is good for admission to the park, a reduced rate on bathing and free dancing, just admission to the park is 25 cents.

Maurer, in Leningrad With Labor Delegation Sees 'New World' There

(Special to the Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, Aug. 23.—The American labor delegation has left Leningrad going to different towns of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Before leaving, James Maurer, chairman of the delegation, stated that not only himself but the whole delegation is convinced that a new world is being built in the U. S. S. R., whereas the old world is dying.

Maurer said: "I would like to come here again after five or six years. I am sure that by that time you will obtain the same results in the way of technical achievements as America does. It is like a miracle, but American workmen are unaware of the wonderful things going on here."

Workers of Geneva Continue to Protest Against the Murder

GENEVA, Aug. 23.—Drastic police precautions were taken today to guard the United States consulate building following the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration last night when one person was killed and [illegible] wounded, including five policemen.

Fourteen arrests were made.

A demonstration of 5,000 that had gathered in Plain Palais—the Central Park of Geneva—marched through the streets. Hotels and stores were attacked and all the windows in the United States consulate were smashed. There was considerable pillaging.

After charging the mob three times the police finally dispersed it. There was much shooting with revolvers.

Further violence on the part of the police was feared this afternoon when the Communists planned another demonstration.

Cops Trample Crowd In Detroit Protest; Labor Will Boycott

DETROIT, Aug. 23.—One worker is under arrest today and three policemen and a civilian are recovering from slight injuries suffered when the police attacked a gathering of 10,000 persons who met in Cadillac Square last night in a final protest against the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

George Mo[illegible], [illegible], was arrested after a cop had beat him and struck back.

At the conclusion of the meeting the huge crowd surged toward City Hall with cries of "life for Sacco and Vanzetti." In the battle waged by 250 policemen against the mob, Sergeant Edgar Lewis and Patrolman James W. Gill were injured slightly. A spectator, Barney Dicenzo, 41, was struck by a missile. His injuries are not serious.

Shouts of assent rose when the orators urged a boycott of all Massachusetts products as a retaliation against the execution of the two radicals. Under plans being made all union labor in Detroit will unite in the proposed boycott.

Buffalo Gathering, Hugest in History, Hears Wicks Speak

BUFFALO, August 23.—Twenty thousand workers and sympathizers took part in the monster Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting here, the biggest demonstration ever staged in Buffalo.

While police circled the meeting and every precaution was taken against any kind of demonstration, Harry Wicks of the Workers Party told the masses of workers that only the word of Fuller, the agent of capitalism, stood between Sacco and Vanzetti and death. The speaker urged the workers to organize so that a repetition of the crime might never again be possible. He urged the building up of a mass Labor Party, of the Communist Party and the International Labor Defense, and the strengthening of the trade unions against the bureacracy which had failed in its duty.

[illegible] C. Campbell, secretary of the Moulders' Union characterized William Green as a criminal as great as Judge Thayer and Governor Fuller.

The Rev. H. J. Hahn, who was recently arrested for picketing in Boston, asserted that the Massachusetts authorities had plotted the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The meeting which was under the chairmanship of Dr. Benjamin of New York, was orderly and gave the police no opportunity to interfere.

FULLER OFFERED D. OF J. FILES; REJECTED THEM

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—Working desperately against time, three attorneys of international fame were in Washington but a few hours before the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti, seeking to pry open the lid on the department of justice files. They were Frank P. Walsh, who gained renown as chairman of the industrial relations commission; Arthur Garfield Hays, New York attorney for the Civil Liberties Union; and Francis Fisher Kane, former U. S. district attorney at Philadelphia.

Put it up to Fuller.

Following a three hour conference with Acting Attorney General Farnum, they wrung from him consent for Governor Fuller, President Lowell or Attorney General Reading of Massachusetts to inspect the department's files relating to the case. An entire room in the department's building is devoted to the storage of files concerning the deportation deliriums of 1919-1921.

Telegrams were dispatched immediately to Governor Fuller and to President Lowell, asking them to inspect the files and appealing for a respite. The statement of the defense counsel with the telegrams were released to the press associations through Federated Press.

Governor Fuller's laconic refusal to do anything that might interfere with the electrocution of innocent men is now known to the world.

The department, through J. Edgar Hoover, chief of its bureau of investigation, on the same day permitted the release of an inspired story by William Hard explaining what it choose to regard as its attitudite toward Sacco and Vanzetti. Hoover, although not quoted directly, adopts the same attitude he held in an interview obtained recently by Federated Press. It is that:

Sacco and Vanzetti were under surveillance as members of the Galleani group of anarchists. The department already had Salsedo and Elia, other members, in custody. Salsedo was either murdered or committed suicide while in jail. Elia was deported.

Found Only Innocence.

The department placed a spy, Carbone, in a cell next to Sacco to gain information.

The department had operatives stationed in the court room during the trial to report on Sacco and Vanzetti and on anarchists visiting the court room.

The department spied on members of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee in Boston.

The New York office spied on members of the Galleani group to see if they had received moneys suddenly after the South Braintree holdup.

The spy Carbone discovered nothing. No action was taken against the anarchists visiting the trial. No action was taken against members of the defense committee. No money was traced to any members of the Galleani group. Thus despite the efforts of a score of agents, the departments admits it was never able to trace criminal activities of any kind to any members of the Galleani group.

Hoover Embarrassed.

The department, according to Hoover, is anxious to have its files inspected by Fuller or Lowell. The world, which cannot differentiate between the United States and Massachusetts any more than we can between Great Britain and Warmickshire or France and the department of the Seine, believes that the department of justice is largely responsible for the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti.

And whatever the fine legal niceties of the case are, it is indisputable, Hard declares, that the deportation deliriums are an outstanding feature of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. That delirium was engineered by the department of justice under A. Mitchell Palmer. That delirium was responsible for the "consciousness of guilt" which Sacco and Vanzetti are said to have shown when arrested; but it was consciousness of radicalism, not murder. Judge Thayer told the jury however that their consciousness of guilt was the outstanding evidence against Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco and Vanzetti Bodies To Be Cremated; Prepare For Memorial Meetings

BOSTON, Aug. 23.—Sacco and Vanzetti will be cremated in about three days.

Vanzetti's ashes will be taken back to Italy by his sister, Luigia. Sacco's ashes will be kept by his wife.

This was announced here this afternoon after several other plans for disposing of the bodies had been considered by friends and relatives. Nevertheless monster memorial meetings will be held thruout the country.

The present plan is for the bodies to lie in state here for two or three days prior to a big public funeral and the cremation. Among the numerous plans considered for disposing of the bodies was the suggestion of taking them on a tour of the country and holding the bodies in state in several cities including New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

Dead—They Live!

Their spirits march to no slow drums of death.
Let fall no tear! Their bodies have been slain—
Their spirits, freed by one hot, blasting breath,
Now march with those who have not died in vain.

Unloosed from narrow prison cells they go
With giant strides through all the earthly lands.
Red banners flaunt about them, and to show
The way bright torches flame in mighty hands.

They're marching, marching in the night.
Unshackled now they move with steady tread
And eyes that glance neither to left nor right
Within the ranks of labor's martyred dead.

Lift high the crimson banners! Lift the torches!
Two staunch recruits have joined this army brave
To shining goals that ever steadfast marches,
Defying now the prison and the grave!

HEAR NEWS OF MURDER

Men and women fainted by the score in Union Square early yesterday morning where more than 12,000 workers learned of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. The news was flashed from The DAILY WORKER and Freiheit bulletin board at 30 Union Square.

TICKETS FOR GIANT OPEN AIR JAMBOREE ARE GOING RAPIDLY

The rush on the sale of tickets for the opera Carmen, which is being produced by a splendid cast in the great open air amphitheatre at Starlight Park, on East 177th street, is becoming so great that the managers of the affair are beginning to worry about their ability to find seats for the thousands of anxious workers who expect to be present.

It will be remembered that at the last huge affair arranged by the Joint Defense Committee at Coney Island, a tremendous crowd turned out in spite of the inclement weather. A record crowd is expected next Sunday, August 28, greater than ever before.

The committee announces further a number of side-splitting and startling attractions in the park itself, before the performance of the opera. New York's Bolshevik army will be treated to the sensation of riding on the Giant Roller Coaster, The Lover's Reel, The House of Nonsense, The Gold Mine, The Skooter and the Ferris Wheel.

Tickets for this tremendous affair, which has been arranged by the Joint Defense Committee, are on sale at the office of The DAILY WORKER, 108 East 14th street, the Jimmie Higgins Book Shop, the Freiheit, and the Joint Defense Committee, 41 Union Square. A limited supply of tickets is still on hand.

The Soviets demand also that Chaliapin come to Russia for a concert tour of two or three months.

Miss Paula Halliday, of Provincetown, was arrested as a parade was being organized at the state house for a march to the state prison. The protest parade was broken up.

Fine State House Pickets.

With the arrests of the pickets early this morning, the number of demonstrators arrested by the police in the past two weeks was brought to more than 250.

One hundred and fifty-four pickets who marched in front of the state house yesterday were fined $5 each by Judge William Sullivan in Municipal Court today. The technical charge against them was "loitering and disturbing the peace." When a number of pickets declared that they had not been loitering their fines were increased to $10. A number of demonstrators appealed their fines.

Appeal Fines.

Among those who appealed $10 fines were "Mother" Bloor, William L. Patterson, Negro lawyer, John Howard Lawson, playwright, Edna St. Vincent Millay, poet; Ellen Hayes, former professor at Wellesley College. Arthur Garfield Hayes, New York lawyer, defended the picketers.

Delay Rockaway Boardwalk.

Plans whereby further delay in construction of the first section of the new seven and one-half mile boardwalk in the Rockaways may be avoided were outlined yesterday at a conference in the office of Michael J. Shugrue, commissioner of public works for Queens, in Long Island City.

WILL NOT ALLOW SACCO, VANZETTI TO LIE IN STATE

Openly aligning itself with the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Tammany Hall, police department here has prohibited their bodies from lying in state.

A prominent police official yesterday said that a permit is necessary but none would be granted. He further said it would be refused to "prevent riots" and therefore would be legal. He also raised sanitary "regulations."

At the health department it was stated that certain embalming technicalities would have to be adhered to.

Many observers are of the opinion that the city administration is preparing a series of excuses to prevent the local workers from paying their last respects to the murdered workers.

Chicago Acts Likewise.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—The bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti will not be permitted to lie in state in Chicago, Chief of Police Hughes announced today.

"Chicago has an ordinance against the public exhibition of anything pertaining to crime," was his excuse. "If it doesn't work, the health department, coroner, corporation counsel and all other necessary agencies will be invoked," he threatened.

The Purpose of the Pan-American Federation of Labor

By MANUEL GOMEZ.

(This is the sixth of a series of articles analyzing the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor and its recent convention at Washington)

Undeniably, President Green's "keynote" address at the opening session of the convention at Washington contrasted in an important respect with the inaugural addresses that Gompers used to deliver.

Gompers always made it a point to ignore entirely general questions of international relations unless specific events forced them upon his consideration. Green's speech, on the other hand abounded in phrases such as:

> "We believe in the self-determination of nations. . . ." "The people of every country have a right to handle their own domestic problems. . . ." "We are irrevocably opposed to the use of arms or declaration of war in any dispute with our neighbors of Latin America. . . ."

The "Green Doctrine."

These phrases by no means indicated that the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor was actually to become the defender of Latin-American national sovereignty against U. S. imperialism. They were merely a recognition of the fact that the orthodox Gompers method has failed to get results for the P. A. F. of L. in Latin America and that some pretense of approach to the point of view of the Latin-American labor movements must be made if anything like a bona fide international trade-union federation is to be created.

The essential content of the Gompers and Green policies is the same of course. And Green's bland hypocrisy, no less than Gompers' lofty preoccupation, has operated to serve the ends of Monroe-Doctrine imperialism.

"The Green Doctrine," as one of the Nicaraguans termed it at Washington, fits neatly into place with the whole past direction of the Pan-American Federation of Labor and actually reveals the aims of the organization more clearly than ever before. Thanks to the opposition of Martinez of Venezuela, Green was obliged to elaborate his "doctrine" at the Washington convention in such detail that the abstract generalizations of his inaugural address took on flesh and blood. Indeed their features stood out so sharply that no one who caught a glimpse of them at Washington can fail to recognize them again.

What is the purpose of this "labor instrument of the Monroe Doctrine" which goes by the name of the Pan-American Federation of Labor?

The character of the organization, its methods and some of its secondary aims have been dealt with already in the course of these articles. The present article is an attempt to set forth the central purpose of the instrument which we have been describing.

The Panaman Treaty.

Considerable illumination is provided by the action of the Washington convention with regard to the pending treaty between the United States and Panama. Readers of The DAILY WORKER will remember that the new treaty which the United States Government has been trying to fasten upon the already mutilated "Republic of Panama" would destroy all serious pretense of Panaman sovereignty and is so abhorrent to the people of Panama that even the servile Panaman legilature has thus far refused to ratify it. The Pan-American Federation of Labor convention—in which delegates from Panama were supposed to be participating—took up the question of the treaty and passed a resolution upon it.

Here is the resolution:

> "WHEREAS, a new treaty is pending between the United States and Panama, negotiations concerning which are still in progress; therefore be it
> "RESOLVED, that we express our earnest desire that the new treaty may help to cement the fraternal friendship between the two peoples, leaving untouched the sovereignty of the Republic of Panama; and be it further
> "RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be sent to BOTH governments, asking that THEY take it into consideration when negotiating a new treaty." (Emphasis mine.—M. G.).

Equal Responsibility.

No protest is registered here against the outrage which Wall Street and Washington have proposed to perpetrate against the people of Panama. There is not a hint that the United States government is to blame for the treaty that was drawn up. The fiction is maintained that the United States and Panama are on an equal basis in this matter, and BOTH governments are asked to work out something satisfactory in the future!

In other words, instead of taking steps to defend Panama against imperialism the P. A. F. of L. covers up the crime by a hyprocritical assumption of joint responsibility, and, with a pious wish that everything may be all right, leaves tiny Panama to the mercy of the United States government. The crime is not only covered up but it is excused in advance, for are not both governments negotiating on an equal basis?

In much the same way, the P. A. F. of L. expatiates in general on the necessity "of peace and friendly relations on the western continent"—as if international peace in this part of the world were something dependent on the attitude of all nations in equal measure.

"Let Us Have Peace!"

"We must sound the note of peace," said Green at the Washington convention.

The following paragraph from the report of the executive committee at the third convention of the P. A. F. of L., held at Mexico City, is characteristic:

> "The collective action of the national labor movements of all the American countries thru the medium of the Pan-American Federation of Labor will be an important obstacle to the enthronement of militarism on the American continent, WHEREVER IT MAY ARISE, and will contribute much to the realization of that noble desire which has been manifested on all sides since the 'European' war—the conservation of peace in the western hemisphere and the establishment of the most cordial relations between the American countries."

Is there any suggestion here that there is a specific menace to peace in the Americas—American imperialism—and that this menace must be resisted energetically? On the contrary, the report goes on to hint that the main trouble in this part of the world is caused by the fact that imperfect and dictatorial governments exist in Latin America (which is the excuse given by the imperialists themselves for their interventions "to restore order"). The real reason for imperialist intervention is hidden, while it is slyly intimated that the one fundamental guarantee of justice is the "democracy" of the United States, which our Latin-American brothers are advised to confide in and emulate.

Here is the language of the report itself, skillfully refraining from mentioning the United States or any other nation by name but nevertheless leaving imputations which are so plain that no one can mistake them:

In Praise of Democracy.

> "But in order to make this influence (for peace) more effective, it is necessary to impress upon the peoples that they should demand of their governments the application of the modern principles of true democracy. . . ."

As a matter of fact the point of view put forward in every statement of the P. A. F. of L. on international relations,—expressed sometimes in the mere turn of a phrase, or insinuated in the general tone of address—is that the United States government is the loving elder sister of the Latin-American nations who should be looked to for guidance and leadership. Sister may make mistakes in her treatment of her wards, she may administer too harsh a thrashing now and then, occasionally she may exhibit a fleeting egoistic tendency, but she is essentially good-hearted and generous.

Naturally the elder-sister attitude does not jibe very well with the theory of "equal responsibility" expressed in the resolution of the Washington convention regarding the Panama treaty—but it is only another aspect of a uniform general method which the P. A. F. of L. uses without particular regard to outward consistency.

Those "Unfortunate Blunders."

The P. A. F. of L. does not simply ignore the manifold aggressions of American imperialism. That would be impossible. It endeavors to explain them away, always avoiding the course of laying responsibility at the door of imperialism or of the United States government as an imperialist instrument. At best such incidents as the massacre of 300 Nicaraguans at Ocotal are presented as the result of a "mistake," or "the recklessness of a subordinate," or "bad and interested advice."

The effect is to conceal from the workers in the United States as well as those in Latin America that it is not mere "excesses" which must be combatted but a systematic course of imperialist development in which these "excesses" are by no means accidental.

Told to Shut Up.

"While the Latin-American representatives may feel that they are suffering from many injustices," declared President Green in a rebuke to delegate Martinez at Washington, "the Pan-American Federation of Labor is not a clearing house for all the political grievances of the Latin-American countries."

And further along. . . .

> "Never would the people of the United States support any administration IF AT ANY TIME IT ATTEMPTED to seize one foot of territory from any Latin-American nation. But the American people will support our government in protecting Peru, Venezuela, Guatemala, NICARAGUA, etc., against aggression on the part of any European nation. . . . But instead of denouncing our government it seems to me that the representatives of every weak nation in Latin America should say that they want the United States government to stand firmly and squarely behind the Monroe Doctrine. . . . We have many wrongs that must be righted of course. We have not reached the milennium."

To Disarm Latin-America.

I think we can now answer the question posed at the outset of the present article.

The purpose of the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor is to disarm the Latin-American workers in the face of American imperialism,

Minnesota Federation of Labor on a Spree

Held in Most Northern and Wettest Town in State, State Convention, While Sacco and Vanzetti Awaited Death and War Danger Grows, Dominated by Reactionary Officials, Spent Its Time in Making War on Progressive Section of the Labor Movement—High Point of Hysteria Was Reached When William Mahoney, Editor of "The Union Advocate" of St. Paul Was Branded a "Russian Agent."—But Minnesota Labor Is Waking Up.

(By a Worker Correspondent)

BEFORE I take pains to show that the convention of the Minnesota Federation of Labor held at International Falls on August 15, 16, and 17, was a travesty on the labor movement, I will quote, to create the proper atmosphere, that hilarious poem by Comrade Jim Waters, "An Administration Delegate Reports":

* * *

"Well brothers,
I got back from the convention last night,
And I sure want to thank you for the trip,
We all had a good time . . .
Most of the boys spent their time in. . .(Fort Frances)
That's sure some town . . .
They don't have keys in that town . . .
Whiskey . . . two dollars a quart . . . good stuff . . .
Plenty of beer . . .
We sure had plenty to drink . . .
And women . . . a man's a hog that wants better variety. . . .

Also refer to the three brilliant cartoons by Bob Minor entitled, "The Slave Auction at El Paso," "Gompers at the Gates," and "The Dead Hand."

JUST the fact that the convention was held at International Falls, almost the most northerly point in the state, is an indication of the calibre of these labor lieutenants of imperialism.

Bear in mind that Ontario, across the line, has just repudiated its prohibition laws, and that beer, wine, and whiskey are in abundance. Not long ago a local Elmer Gantry, attending a convention of Baptist Rain-makers, referred to International Falls as the wickedest town in the state, abounding with brothels, blind-pigs, speakeasies, and other immoral stamping grounds of the devil.

I[illegible], the large paper mill, 100 per cent organized, but used as a pliable tool by E. W. Backus (I am not here attempting to brand the local leaders of dishonesty — they are probably honest enough, but thoroughly ineffectual, since they do not know the least thing about the class-struggle) gave some justification for the choice, but remember that even labor fakers must present a respectable front.

AT a previous convention the conservatives pushed thru an enactment that virtually excludes all militant labor members. This enactment was aimed primarily at Hathaway of the Machinists Union and his band of "borers from within," but all progressives are of course, in the eyes of the Federation's chief fascist, Hall, in the pay of Moscow. The enactments are becoming stricter each year.

THE only way a Communist Union man, for instance, can take his seat, is if he disavows, before the entire delegation, his party membership. Fifty-nine progressives, a few of them Communists, did gain seats, and these fifty-nine progressives were responsible for most of the militant resolutions. They introduced a strong condemnation of Governor Fuller and asked for the immediate pardoning of Sacco and Vanzetti, this resolution was accepted at the first draft.

They also introduced a strong protest on the high-handed way the "strong and silent cowboy" was conducting affairs in Nicaragua, Mexico and China, which was also accepted. Before adjournment, however, the conservatives woke up to the fact that the "Reds" (including brother William Mahoney) had put one over on them, and they proceeded to tone down the resolutions in the best Green style.

THE Sacco-Vanzetti resolution became in the final draft, a very humble plea for clemency; the "strong and silent cowboy" resolution became a futile watery and craven "protest." This you understand, was done primarily as a slap at the radical minority. The Sacco-Vanzetti case concerns, at this time, more than anything else, barring war on Soviet Russia, the workers vitally, yet these political and labor shysters castrated the resolutions of all effectiveness simply because they were "engendered by the 'Reds.'"

THE greater part of the convention was spent in attacking the "Reds." The Duluth delegate, very white, broke into a bitter diatribe against the "Reds," Emme, and Mahoney, when they began to criticize Hall for his class-collaboration policy, declaring that "there you go, boring from within, attempting to destroy our party."

THE affair became a comedy when even "comrade" Mahoney was declared to be subsidized by Moscow, and that his labor journal "The Union Advocate" was used by the Communists to further their "boring from within policy.

It is only necessary to recall the part Mahoney played in the Farm-Labor Convention at St. Paul a few years ago. And in the current issue he devotes the columns to the agonized appeal by the Sigman-Hillman clique to be true to the old "union," denouncing the handful of paid Russian agents, always referred to as ridiculously small in numbers in one paragraph, and in the next, what a hell of a lot of trouble these Lenin agents do cause? Mahoney in an editorial rather gloomily comments on the dark disruptive head (unnamed) that has destroyed the equanimity of the old Minneapolis gang.

Yet this Mahoney was labelled as a Red agent! ! !

ON Monday a mass meeting was held at the local theatre, addressed by the venerable Farmer-Labor congressman, Carrs, espouser of the Watson-Parker Law, on what Congress would do to Cal when they got to Washington. By God! he would show him!

You understand of course Congress has the "sole" right to declare war; and what riles most of them is not that this peaceful (?) war is one of the foulest events in United States history, but that Cal didn't consult them about it. If slaughtering is to be done, Congress wants to at least hold the pail to catch the blood in! ! !

MURPHY, somewhere from the Minnesota steppes, made an impassioned plea for the McNary-Haugen bill, declaring that it was the greatest bill yet created, that the farmers were aroused, and that any man who stands for Coolidge had better go back and tell Cal what we think of him.

I WILL excuse Murphy's evident idealization of the McNary-Haugen bill, but I wish to have publicly congratulate him on his bitter raking of Cal and Wall Street. Murphy's economics are a bit weak, he seems to forget that the farmer is suffering because of the "fine old institutions of our gov'ment," over which he waxed eloquent in praise. All of the administration delegates praised our "fine old institutions" in the same breath that they attacked the force that created these institutions.

BURKE, president of the International Brother of Pulp and Sulphite workers, bitterly attacked child labor, and bitterly denounced the legislators that failed to ratify the child labor amendment. He spoke in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, tho very briefly. He further declared that the greatest historical event in labor's history was the rise to power of the workers in . . . England, evidently referring to the labor premier of old, MacDonald. He burst into an epilepsy of eloquence when he spoke of Sam, good old Sam Gompers. (Here he paused for applause, but the audience was strangely unresponsive, until Hall, who presided began to clap). (See the three cartoons mentioned above, especially "Gompers at the Gates.")

THE state of labor must not be judged wholely by the Minnesota Federation of Labor. Labor here is undergoing a painful process of waking up.

AN Anti-war and Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration was held in the city hall, well attended. Lundeen, partner with "Lindy's" father during the egg-rock-and brick throwing period of the world war, gave a powerful speech on the present war trends. Mahoney made a speech that was passable and aroused the ire of one local 100 per center who demanded if Mahoney was in the pay of Russia. Duncan, ex-mayor of Butte, talked on Sacco and Vanzetti.

SO passed another convention. (The Anti-war demonstration was not, I believe, sanctioned by the Federation—it was a radical offshoot of the same body). The administration tion—it was a radical off-shoot of the good beer in Fort Frances; the wild women in International Falls and Ranier, and of the drubbing they gave the Reds, especially that Russian agent, Mahoney.

On War and Danger of War

Theses adopted at the Plenum of the E. C. C. I. on May 2?, 1927.

4. The epoch of relative equilibrium, both between the imperialist powers themselves on the one hand, and between the imperialist powers and the Soviet Union together with the liberation movement of the semi-colonies (China) on the other, is interrupted by open military conflicts which mark the approach of the conclusion of this epoch and the development of conditions for a new imperialist war. In all parts of the world inflammable material is being accumulated ready at any moment to explode on contact with the first spark that reaches it. The Italian-Yugoslav conflict, the aggression of Italian imperialism in Albania, its menance to Turkey, the strained relations between Italy and France, the economic war between Poland and Germany, Anglo-French antagonisms in Asia Minor, Great Britain's struggle for the road leading to the African colonies, for domination in the Mediterranean, the aggressive role of imperialism of the U. S. A. in the Pacific, its suppression of Nicaragua which clears the road for the subjugation of Mexico and South America, the menace of Japanese imperialism to the peoples of Asia—all these are but separate pages in the sanguinary history of approaching wars.

But without doubt the factor representing the greatest menace to peace at the present time is Great Britain. The new feature of the international situation is the fact that Great Britain has again acquired the hegemony in European affairs. It holds the initiative in international colonial policy, it dominates the League of Nations, it leads the united capitalist front against China and the Soviet Union.

China and the Soviet Union As the Key Positions of the War.

5. All the antagonisms among the capitalist states themselves recede into the background before the dividing line that divides the whole world into two camps: one, the Soviet Union and revolutionary China, the other, the whole of the capitalist world. China and the Soviet Union are the key positions of the whole international situation. It is at these points that the clouds of war are gathering most thickly. China and the Soviet Union, occupying the greatest part of the territory of Asia and half of Europe with their unexploited economic resources and hundreds of millions of population, represent two inexhaustible reservoirs of raw material and two enormous markets. The fight for these two immense markets is a life and death struggle for international capitalism and will proceed continuously until the world proletariat overthrows the international bourgeoisie.

Decline of Chinese Agriculture

By EARL BROWDER.

ARTICLE III.

In such slight attention as has been given to the plight of the Chinese peasant in the American press, it has been customary to blame his ills upon the militarists and upon the civil war which has raged intermittently since 1911. The trouble, however, is much deeper than this. Militarism and civil war have simply intensified a tendency already existing. Chinese agriculture entered into a deep-going crisis simultaneously with the final breakdown of the self-sufficing economy of the countryside under the impact of foreign machine-civilization. This may be dated somewhere in the last quarter of the 19th century.

Data on Crops.

It is very difficult to get reliable statistics on any phase of Chinese economy; this difficulty is especially great in case of agriculture. But enough is known to trace the broad outlines of this, and of most of the major problems. We know definitely that Chinese agriculture has been breaking down for more than thirty years. This can be most clearly traced in the export crops, because customs statistics are the most comprehensive and reliable.

The Tea Export.

Tea has long constituted one of the chief agricultural products of China. In 1880, 45% of all China's exports was tea; by the end of the century it had dropped to 18%; in 1919 it was further reduced to 8%, while by 1921 it was but slightly more than 2%. Great Britain purchased 16% of her tea from China at the beginning of the century; in 1925 her purchases dropped to slightly more than 2%. The money value of tea exports, average per year for 1923-25, was less than half what it had been in the years 1907-10. China is thus rapidly losing one of her principal agricultural markets—the world tea trade.

The second most important agricultural export commodity was silk, product of mulberry cultivation. At the beginning of the century China was the greatest silk producer, exporting twice as much as Japan. By 1915, Japan had taken over so much of the silk trade as to equal China. By 1918, Japan supplied 44% of the world silk supply, while China had dropped to 31%. China's loss of the silk market had catastrophic effects in the Province of Kwantung, contributing materially to the growth of the revolution in the South, from whence it has flooded over all China.

The Food Staple.

And now consider the basic product of the land—rice. China is predominantly agricultural, 85% of her people living directly upon the land. Yet she cannot produce enough rice to feed her own people. Not only that; the shortage is increasing year by year. Rice production is declining. In 1910, China was already importing rice to the amount of 24 million taels per year; in 1925 this had increased to 62 million taels.

The cause of this decline of agriculture lies in the fact that for years, since the invasion of foreign economic forces broke up the old economic balance, the peasant has been more and more robbed of all his surplus and accumulations, which has step by step taken away all his incentive to produce more than barely enough to exist upon. The forms of this robbery have been peculiar to China. In the next article I will explain how the peasantry have been stripped by their native exploiters.

paralyze their resistence and have the way for complete subjugation—not only to Green and Woll but to Wall Street and Washington.

Green's closing speech at the Washington convention told the handpicked Latin-American "delegates" there what was expected of them in this regard. Instead of being a clarion call to struggle against American imperialism it insisted in the most deliberate way, on the necessity of disarming Latin-American suspicions!

Green's Final Instructions.

This last word of Green's so clearly betrays the purposes of the so-called Pan-American Federation of Labor that I shall let it be the final word of the present article also:

> "What is needed most of all is confident trust and faith among the peoples of Latin America and the United States. A large percentage of Latin-Americans have a suspicion and distrust of the United States. That suspicion, that distrust should be removed. If we are to develop commerce trade, understanding and confidence among the peoples of the continent, it must be removed. The Pan-American Federation of Labor can serve in a wonderful way in removing suspicion and creating a common understanding. . . .
> "May I suggest that ON YOUR RETURN HOME YOU REMEMBER THE SENTIMENTS EXPRESSED HERE, and inspired by those sentiments, YOU BE AMBASSADORS TO PROMOTE THE SPIRIT OF COOPERATION TO WHICH I HAVE REFERRED IN THESE REMARKS. Let us raise the standard of citizenship in all nations on the American continent. For all this we can unite, we Americans laying aside our prejudices and you Latin-Americans your suspicions."

FRENCH WORKERS URGE WAR ON AMERICAN LEGION; MASS FUNERAL SUNDAY FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

MEMORIAL DEMONSTRATIONS TO BE HELD FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

Bodies to Lie in State Until Sunday; Police Try to Bar Boston Funeral Procession

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—While the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti are being borne thru the streets of Boston, Sunday afternoon, hundreds of thousands of workers thruout the United States and in other countries will meet at memorial demonstrations to honor the murdered workers. A call for mass memorial demonstrations at 2 o'clock Sunday the world over has been issued.

Altho Boston police are threatening to break up any mass funeral demonstration plans are being made for a mass "march of sorrow" Sunday afternoon.

The bodies will lie in state in the chapel of undertaker Joseph Lagone in the north end from Saturday morning until 2 p. m. Sunday, when the caskets will be taken to the North End Park to lead the procession across the city to the Forest Hills Cemetery for cremation.

The caskets will be borne by sympathizers, with Miss Luigia Vanzetti and Mrs. Rose Sacco, sister and widow of the murdered workers, and other mourners following in automobiles.

The personal belongings of Sacco and Vanzetti were brought from the state prison today by Attorney Musmanno. They were wrapped in two small bundles.

Musmanno opened the packages at defense headquarters and took out two volumes of "The Rise of Civilization in America," which Vanzetti had left him.

PLAN MEMORIAL MEET AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

Remains of Murdered Workers Here Monday

Following the arrival of the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti here late Monday afternoon, a huge mass memorial meeting for the two murdered workers will be held at Madison Square Garden, according to plans of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

Unless police interfere with the plans of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee the ashes of the two workers will be borne from the railway station to the Central Opera House where a meeting will be held at six o'clock. The meeting at Union Square will take place at eight o'clock.

Plans for the memorial meetings will be made at a conference called by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee for this evening at the Labor Temple, 244 East 14th St.

MILLIONS MARCH IN USSR PROTEST AGAINST MURDER

Call Labor to Struggle As Sacco, Vanzetti Die

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 24.—News of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti has provoked the deepest indignation of the toilers of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Populous meetings which were later turned into impressive demonstrations, took place in Moscow, Leningrad, Kharkov, Kiev, Dniepropetrovsk and many other towns. In many cases news of the execution brought tears to the eyes of those present.

In the Moscow squares the broadcasters, after having transmitted the news of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, played a funeral march. Telegrams of condolence for the tragic death at the hands of civilzed barbarians were sent to the families of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Guilty of Revolution

Numerous resolutions from the Moscow proletariat express its indignation at so abominable a trial in a "civilized country." "Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty only of being revolutionists," says the resolution, and declare that the execution of the two workers will unite still closer the revolutionary ranks of the international proletariat in its fight against capitalism.

The resolutions also appeal to the toilers to enter in thousands into the ranks of the International Red Relief Society in order to struggle for a better future for all humanity, under the leadership of the Comintern and its Communist Parties.

Never Forget Aug. 23.

The Kiev proletarians declare that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is a threatening forerunner of the impending relentless struggle against

GERMAN WORKERS GATHER TO JEER AT JAMES WALKER

His Entertainers Black Reactionaries

BERLIN, August 24. — Because the friends of Mayor Walker of New York are the blackest reactionaries, labor killers, and jingo nationalists in the whole of Germany, his reception here is developing some complications entirely apart from the decision of class conscious labor to demonstrate against him as a representative of the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Aren't Republicans.

The big hotels of Berlin are willing to fly the American flag in honor of Mayor Walker's visit to Berlin, but they are not willing to fly the German republican flag.

This was definitely decided upon today at a special meeting of the managers of the principal hotels. And as a result of the decision it is virtually certain that Lord Mayor Boesse of Berlin will decline to attend the dinner being given in Mayor Walker's honor tomorrow by the American Club, at the Kaiserhoff Hotel. The lord mayor has refused to patronize any hotel which does not fly the flag of the German republic.

COMMUNIST DEPUTIES PROTEST MEET AFTER MURDER OF FRAMED WORKERS

Mayor of Lille Refuses to Join in Any Move to Welcome American Fascists

Demonstrations Go on in Many French Cities Despite Numerous Arrests

WORKERS OF PARIS PLAN TO SPOIL FESTIVITIES OF THE AMERICAN LEGION IN FRANCE SEPT. 19

PARIS, Aug. 24.—P. Vaillant-Courturier, who is acting editor of L'Humanite, the French Communist daily, while Marcel Cachin is in La Sante prison serving a term because of his anti-militarist activities, wrote today that:

"We can be sure, at least, that on the occasion of the American Legion holiday on September 19, Paris will not dance on the corpses of Sacco and Vanzetti."

This carries the very evident threat of the Parisian working class that labor will not allow any planned festivities to take place on September 19th in Paris.

Shows Legion Supported Executioners.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The American Legion favored the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, declares L'Humanite today, citing as proof the Tampa Tribune of August 10.

L'Humanite publishes an extract from the Tribune in which the Kirby Stewart Post is reported as having voted a resolution expressing confidence in Governor Fuller and other Massachusetts officials, "for their fine conduct in the Sacco-Vanzetti affair in the face of opposition by foreign elements."

"What further proof is needed of the Legion's attitude?" asks L'Humanite.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The opposition of French workers to the American Legion convention, scheduled to open here on September 19th has been whipped into a storm of protest by the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Following a huge demonstration near the American embassy, in which more than 150,000 workers participated, labor leaders have announced their intention of preventing the opening of the convention or of the legion parade.

Deputies Cachin, Marty and Doriot, Communist leaders and members of the Chamber of Deputies now in jail for opposing French imperialism in Morocco, have informed the president of the Chamber of their opposition to the congress.

OPPPOSITION THRUOUT FRANCE.

Popular sentiment created by the execution of the innocent workmen, Sacco and Vanzetti, is so profound that the organization of such rejoicings during a period of mourning would with reason be considered a challenge.

The mayor of Lille has already informed the minister of interior of that city that he will not participate in any friendly demonstration for the Legion on September 19th, while the socialist party at Lyons has voted a resolution asking the socialist members of the council who are in a majority to refuse to vote appropriations for a reception.

Lille is a large industrial city in northern France and was in the war area. The refusal of the mayor to participate in any welcome to the Legion is regarded as significant of the united front protest against the convention of the American fascists.

Police Injure Many Demonstrators.

Alexander Fels, a leader of the Independent War Veterans Association, has announced his decision not to participate in any demonstration for the American fascists because of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

TORONTO TRADES COUNCIL ATTACKS GREEN'S POLICY

Asks Him to Withdraw McGrady From N. Y.

The Toronto Trades and Labor Council, at its last meeting passed a resolution appealing to the American Federation of Labor to withdraw its special committee, headed by Edward F. McGrady, which now administers the International Fur Workers' Union, and to restore rank and file control and thus establish peace in the entire union.

Word of this action by the Toronto labor body was received yesterday by the New York Furriers' Joint Board, from H. Englander of the Toronto Unity Conference.

Englander explains that the resolution of last week followed a lengthy discussion of the situation in the International Fur Workers' Union which began on July 22nd when a letter from President William Green of the A. F. of L. was read at a Trades and Labor Council meeting.

A Lying Attack.

President Green had sent one of his lying attacks upon the New York Joint Board, and had urged the Toronto workers, as he has urged all trade unionists thruout the country, not to help their brothers who were striking and going to prison in New York City in the struggle to save their union from destruction.

After a heated controversy over this letter, it was, upon motion, laid on the table until the New York Joint Board had an opportunity to tell its side of the story. This was done in a detailed statement of facts given

Moscow Press Declares U. S. Bourgeoisie Acted From Fear of Reckoning

MOSCOW, Aug. 24.—Under the headlines, "Last night American executioners murdered Sacco and Vanzetti," papers here are flaying the class justice of Massachusetts which planned and committed the crime against the two workers.

"The unprecedented challenge by the American bourgeoisie to the workers," says the Moscow press, "proves that the execution means class murder carried out in cold blood. Such a cynical affair could only have been done by exploiters blinded by fear of the inevitable day of reckoning."

tion as well, thanks to the Soviet Union were also embodied in the resolution.

Using his power as chairman, W. E. B. DuBois prevented yesterday's session from acting on resolutions proposing to place the congress on a broader mass basis.

Moore Refused Floor.

When Richard B. Moore, of the American Negro Labor Congress rose on a point of order, DuBois refused to recognize him and continued to read an unimportant announcement to the delegates.

While the congress has been in session for the last four days only one hour in yesterday's session was devoted to business. The rest of the time is devoted to lectures, most of them delivered by college professors.

Moore had made a motion that all resolutions be reported back at the end of the conference so the delegates could decide whether it expressed their views or not. DuBois opposed it most strongly. Moore then rose on his point of order but was not recognized.

At Tuesday's session a committee consisting of A. W. Hunton, D. Bellegrade, W. E. B. DuBois, Mrs. Carmady and Bishop Ransom were appointed as a resolution committee. Yesterday they were elected as a tentative international executive committee to call the next congress and coopt other members.

To Add Two Members.

When the motion was passed William Pickens moved that F. E. Corbie and Otto Huiswould be added to the committee, making it more representative. DuBois ruled that they should meet with those elected who would decide their status.

Delegate Moore then rose and made a speech for a broader representation in the international executive council. All Negroes including laborers and peasants to be considered. This was also referred to the committee.

DuBois then read the resolution that he had drawn up. Its central theses was: Africa for the Africans.

Withdraw Troops.

It demands the withdrawal of United States forces from Haiti. Also that an election be held there in 1928. It also condemns imperialism in Africa and calls for a change.

Referring to Liberia it opposes the amount of power enjoyed by the Firestone rubber interests.

It urges the American Negroes to use their political power and join trade unions. Also to organize as consumers.

The resolution devotes a section for demanding freedom for China, Egypt and other countries under imperialist bondage. The Soviet Union is given a vote of thanks for the help it has given the Negro workers of that country.

After DuBois finished reading the resolution, Delegate Corbie spoke against referring the resolution and all amendments to the committee.

Wanted Anti-Imperialist Report.

Pickens moved that Moore be added to the committee to give a special report on the Brussels Anti-Imperialist Conference. Also that the congress endorse its work, especially that part referring to the oppressed Negroes.

Rev. Walker of Cleveland moved that the congress go on record for clemency for Marcus Garvey now a prisoner in a federal prison.

Delegate Thompson of New York roused his listeners to enthusiasm when he told how the Negroes are used as cannon fodder in time of war and as beasts of burden in peace time.

Moore then made his motion for referring the principal resolution and all admendments back to the congress for final action. DuBois ignored him and introduced Prof. H. H. Philips to lecture on the Political Partition of Africa. DuBois said that the congress should not devote its time on business but trust to the committee to speak for it.

The lecture by Philips, was followed by talks on the same subject by Prof. Rayford W. Logan and Dr. Y. Hikada. This was the closing session of the congress.

Canada Will Try Two.

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 24.—Doris Palmer, alias Doris McDonald, and her husband George McDonald, held in Denver, Colo., and Fred Palmer, held in Butte, Mont., will be brought here to be tried for the murder of Adelard Bouchard, taxi driver, under extradition proceedings being arranged today by the Canadian authorities. Bouchard was killed on a lonely road near Huntington, Quebec, early in July.

THOUSANDS HURT AS PARIS POLICE TRAMPLE CROWDS

Swords and Clubs Meet March on U.S. Embassy

PARIS, Aug. 24.—250 workers were arrested and more than 2,000 injured as the result of the merciless attacks of the French police on the demonstrations of the Paris workers in their protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Americans Terrified At Workers.

The police began their assault when the crowd of more than 50,000 workers who had intended to march to the United States embassy started a demonstration in front of the Cafe Tortoni, a popular resort of Americans who are spending their money in Paris. Scores of fashionably dressed American women and well-groomed American men sought refuge by running into the buildings as the threatening faces of the French workers began to form in platoons before the cafe.

Police Charge Rear.

Suddenly the police charged into the street bearing down upon the workers in the rear. Swords and the butts of revolvers were beaten over the heads of the demonstrators and tables were overturned and windows smashed as the crowds surged across the terrace. Several shots were fired but no one was wounded.

After the police outrage at the cafe Tortoni the workers reformed and began to gather from all parts of Paris. The police who had orders from Chiappe, the prefect, that they were to stop at nothing in preventing protests for Sacco and Vanzetti, met resistance at every cross-street as the thousands strove to form their columns and aproach the American embassy.

Trees Torn Up in Police Battle.

The worst clashes occurred at the Porte St. Martin, where the police trampled a demonstration as it was forming, and on the Boulevard Strassbourg and the Boulevard Sebastopol and the Arcade Tromphe. Here the police made their most desperate attacks, riding into the masses who were filling the boulevards in thousands, and beating them with clubs and their swords. Many windows were demolished and automobiles wrecked in the battle. Even young tress along the streets were broken by the force of the charging police and the resistance of the demonstrators. Hundreds of workers were injured here and 45 police were sent to the hospital.

U. S. Embassy Guarded For 6 Blocks.

All approaches to the American embassy, the objective of the demonstration, were massed deep with police for six blocks on all sides. 2,500 police and the entire mounted Garde Republicaine surrounded the building. And all pedestians and automobilists stopped, searched and turned away. Guards were also placed along the routes which Americans in Paris are in the habit of traveling, along the winding, uphill roads to Montmartre, where thieves, prostitutes and wealthy American men and women mix in the night-life of Paris. Police were stationed at all American resorts.

Papers in the French capital continue to lament the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. 'Humanite is taking measures to make sure that the members of the American Legion when they visit Paris may know that the murder of the two workers in Massachusetts was a crime against French as well as against the American working class. Sacco and Vanzetti are everywhere spoken of as martyrs in the Paris newspapers.

Zinich Gets Stay; Government Trying to Send to Serbia

CHICAGO, August 24. — Stephen Zinich, who was to be deported today by order of the immigration authorities has obtained a stay thru the efforts of Isaac Ferguson, attorney for the International Labor Defense, which is in charge of the case.

The defense attorney has applied for a writ of habeas corpus and Zinich has now been released on bond supplied by the I. L. D.

A hearing on appeal against the deportation will take place Sept. 13.

Zinich, who is the editor of Radnik, the Jugoslav organ of the Workers (Communist) Party, is being charged by the authorities with illegal entry into the country.

Is a Class Case.

It is clear, however, that the action taken against him is an official reply to his activities among the Jugoslav workers in America for an American labor government, and is intended as a blow at the work he and his colleagues have conducted in opposition to the propaganda of the reactionary Monarchist Jugoslav rulers.

Every effort will be made to prevent deportation of Zinich to Jugoslavia where repression and persecution of radical workers is still at feverish pitch. The defense attorneys will maintain Zinich's right to remain in the United States.

DISTRICT TWO CONVENTION CALLS ALL TO BUILD UP DAILY WORKER

New York District Has Special Duty, Says Convention in Resolution

The establishment of The DAILY WORKER in New York City places before the Party in District Two far-reaching opportunities and important responsibilities. Although the DAILY WORKER is our national organ, the New York district is in a position to utilize its powerful influence more effectively than any other district in the Party. At the same time our district must assume the major part of the responsibility for the financial support and the general building up of the paper.

Worker Must Reach Broad Masses.

The DAILY WORKER in this city becomes the chief organ and spokesman for the left wing of the labor movement, which finds its center and chief battle front in New York City. It serves to orientate this struggle out of the narrow limits of the needle trades to the broad masses of American workers in all fields of industry. More than this, in view of the absence of any other labor daily in the English language, the DAILY WORKER must shoulder the responsibility of serving as the single English expression of the struggle of the workers of New York against their employers. In particular it offers an effective means of reaching the decisive English speaking elements in the largest and most important city in the United States, which is today the center of world imperialism. The DAILY WORKER is in a position to establish itself furthermore as the chief political expression of the workers of this district. It is the most powerful Party builder and Party weapon.

Resolutions Adopted.

The attack of the reactionaries and the tremendous financial burden of the paper places before district two the chief responsibility for solving the difficult problem of financial support. This District Convention therefore calls upon the Party membership in district two to take concrete steps toward the support of the DAILY WORKER in these forms:

1. In the future every Party unit meeting should have on its order of business the DAILY WORKER including both the question of raising funds and the building the circulation of the paper. The Sustaining Fund and the Guard the DAILY WORKER Fund should be an integral part of every meeting.

2. To increase the effectiveness of the organization behind the paper, DAILY WORKER Builders Clubs and readers conferences should be established to devise ways and means of raising money for the support of the paper and to build up its circulation. Large sections of non-party elements should be drawn into this work.

3. Definite steps should be taken to make the DAILY WORKER a more intimate expression of the Party by the utilization of its columns for reports of Party activities and by building up a network of active workers correspondents so that the paper should intimately reflect the party life and work.

Millions March In USSR To Protest Murder

the working class by the bourgeoisie which has committed this unheard of brutality. "The night of August 23rd will remain forever in our memory."

The executive committee of the International Red Relief Society and the executive bureau of the International Red Labor Unions have published appeals to the world proletariat.

Reformists Also Murderers.

The appeal of the International of Red Labor Unions points out that the leaders of reformism under pressure from the masses did not act with sufficient energy to defend Sacco and Vanzetti, and thus actually impeded and kept back the might of the elementary movement directed against the bloodthirsty American bourgeoisie.

The executive committee of the Red International of Labor Unions appeals to the workers to protest against the murders of Sacco and Vanzetti by preparing a determined struggle against the damned bourgeois order.

For Real Struggle.

The Academy of Sciences, at an extraordinary meeting, declared its protest and expressed its indignation against the execution and joins its voice to those who are for struggle against all who are attempting to substitute for real freedom only phrases about freedom.

Lesson For Workers.

The crime committed in America is an act of cruel class vengeance on the part of the bourgeoisie. Proletarians of all countries and the proletariat of America above all, have received a most memorable lesson. This lesson shouts to all the world: "Proletarians, organize yourselves! Struggle for victory!"

Judge Infected; Case Held Up.

Federal Judge Jacob Trieber, of Little Rock, Arkansas, was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital here today because of a spread of the infection in his hand from which he has been suffering for several weeks.

Because of the jurist's condition the government's case against the Journeymen Stone Cutters Association of America was indefinitely postponed today.

Zaghloul Pasha Dies At Last; Killed By Imperialist Cruelty

CAIRO, Egypt, August 24. — Zaghloul Pasha, for forty-five years an opponent of British rule in Egypt, has finally died as a result of hardships incurred during his several exilings to distant and inhospital lands. English militarists and imperialists breathe easier, for Zaghloul, whatever his faults, for he occasionally wavered towards the Free State idea, was a symbol of the young nationalist, independence movement in this country.

His party has held since 1923 a majority of the seats in the Egyptian chamber of deputies. He should have been Premier, but England forbade, except for a short time in 1924.

For 45 Years.

Zaghloul began his struggle with the conquerors of his country in 1881, when, at the age of 21, he took part in an armed insurrection. After that he entered political life, held several cabinet posts, fought with the British-dominated Khedive, and was dismissed.

At the Versailles peace conference, he walked into the den of imperialists and pleaded for independence for Egypt. He didn't get it, instead England exiled him to Malta, along with his whole mission.

Rebellion Clouds.

Rebellion simmered in Egypt, with occasional riots and assassinations, and finally the British government in 1921, hoping Zaghloul was subdued by this time, released him. He immediately assumed leadership of the fight for independence, and was as immediately exiled to the unhealthy Seychelles Islands. Here he nearly died, but was released when renewed rebellion in Egypt forced the granting of a fake constitution in 1923.

Defied Imperialists.

At the first general election, following this constitution, Zaghloul became prime minister, with a strong majority back of him. England ousted him a few months later because he refused to agree with the British militarists' humiliating demands for reparations for the death of the Sirdar, General Lee Stack.

Zaghloul has been aided thruout his career by his wife, the leading feminist of Egypt.

Strengthen the Unions for New Struggles with the Sacco-Vanzetti Slayers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE ruthless murder of Sacco and Vanzetti in the after-midnight hour of last Tuesday morning, was but the beginning of a new offensive against labor by the ruling class assassins in anticipation of the dark days of industrial depression ahead.

There is no dispute that there are many storm signals indicating that the much-advertised republican "prosperity" of the Coolidge regime is on the wane. As unemployment develops, as jobless workers grow hungry and homeless, unrest increases, discontent mounts and the owning class faces new difficulties.

The exploiting class, that ordered the lighting bolt of death shot thru the warm, living bodies of our comrades, believes in "preparedness." No worker has forgotten the elaborate program of "preparedness" that was carried out in 1916, on the eve of the American entry into the world war. Workers were conscripted to march thru the streets of the nation's great cities. They were taught to believe in "the war to make the world safe for democracy." If they did not walk the chalk line of cringing servitude and insane jingoism, they were faced with the hangman's noose dangling over the heads of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, framed up incidental to the holding of the "preparedness day" in San Francisco, California.

Preparing for the sending of millions of workers into the European death trenches of the world slaughter in 1916, the ruling class planned to hang Mooney and Billings "by the neck until death," as a warning to thinking workers not to seize this occasion as an excellent one to strengthen their unions. The crime of Tom Mooney was that he tried to organize the street carmen of San Francisco.

Similarly today, the profit takers are faced with a new crisis, an industrial depression, during which it will again attempt to force the working class to keep its place,—millions to starve, millions to walk the streets looking for jobs, millions of homeless to sleep in the open places, many to die of hunger, many to become early victims of ravaging diseases that spread death wholesale, in times like these, thru the poorer working class districts.

The great capitalists do not attempt to meet the crisis with unemployment insurance or other social legislation provided by their kept government. There is no thought of the interests of those who labor. Instead of protection against the evil of recurring periods of idleness, which is inherent in the capitalist social order, the workers are faced with the brutal spectacle of two of their bravest done to death in the electric chair. This is the "WARNING!" that the workers, in the days ahead, must submit to hunger, homelessness and death, IN SILENCE, or meet the fate provided by the murderous capitalist law that took the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The oppressors have already admitted that their "prosperity" is on the wane. It was Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, vice-president of the Cleveland Trust Company, who said on Monday, August 15, midway between the last reprieve granted and the final day of execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, that:

"Our prosperity seems to be getting tired. It is showing signs of fatigue. It may recover its earlier vigor later on, but just at present IT IS UNMISTAKABLY SLOWING DOWN."

The warning issued by Ayres is directed to the big bankers and the great industrialists to prepare for the stormy days ahead. The New England bankers and the textile mill and shoe barons of Massachusetts were among those most insistent that "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die!"

The Monthly Labor Review, August, 1927, issued by the United States Department of Labor, under the direction of its secretary, James J. Davis, confesses in its review of "Employment in Selected Manufacturing Industries in June, 1927," that:

"Employment in manufacturing industries decreased 0.7 per cent in June as compared with May, and payroll totals decreased 2.4 per cent. This is the third successive month of decreased employment.

"Employment in June, 1927, was 2.4 per cent lower than in June, 1926, and payroll totals were 2.3 per cent lower."

On Page 137 of the same report we find this statement:

"The following groups of industries were much less favorably placed as to employment in June, 1917, than in June, 1926: iron and steel; lumber; stone, clay and glass; metal, other than steel; and vehicle.

"Each of the separate industries making up these groups has sustained noticeable losses in employment."

Almost daily the capitalist press is forced to admit that the number of poorest workers forced to seek aid from the various professional charities is rapidly increasing. Among these are to be found an ever larger number of disabled war veterans and their families, unable to keep alive with the doles provided by the government that permitted the parasite few to take billions in war profits, while it fought for years against giving the smallest bonus to the cannon fodder prepared for the murder feast.

The New York Times, on Tuesday, August 23, the morning that capitalist greed took the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti, gravely discussed in its editorial columns the statement of United States Senator Reed Smoot, in Washington, that "It is unreasonable to assume that prosperity is going to last forever."

Senator Smoot comes from Utah, the state that ordered out a firing squad in 1915 to pierce with bullets the heart and brain of Joe Hill, the writer of revolutionary songs. The workers are still singing, in increasing numbers, the songs of Joe Hill, just as their enemy, Senator Smoot, continues to sing the song of greater profits for the capitalist class.

Senator Smoot urges that taxes be lowered so that profits may be increased. Nowhere does he urge that the wages of the workers be increased so that they might save a few pennies against the day when the plague of industrial depression will again sweep the land.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzeti by the capitalist rulers must therefore act as a storm signal for all workers. It is a signal of sharper struggles ahead.

There is no better way for the workers to prepare for these oncoming days of industrial storm than to strengthen their trade unions thru the adoption and carrying into effect of militant programs, the placing of loyal class leaders at the heads of the various organizations, the bringing in of vast hosts of new members until it may truly be said that the industry is 100 per cent organized; the amalgamation of the many small craft unions into huge industrial unions, and the linking up of the economic organizations — the trade unions — in the developing drive for the Labor Party.

The capitalist assassins prepare. Labor must also prepare. Otherwise there will be many more Sacco-Vanzetti cases. Otherwise labor will face a growing oppression.

German Labor Gathers to Jeer Walker

In an interview with the press Walker announced he had slept during the train ride through Germany, and that he hadn't "seen a thing." His alarm clock this morning, he said, was a telegram from the railroad company urging him to alight at one of the suburbs to escape the crowds of workers who came out to boo and hiss and tell him what they thought of American "justice" in the Sacco and Vanzetti case.

Newspapers throughout Central Europe continued today their denunciation of capitalist United States as a result of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Some editorial writers hold up the United States as "barbarous and dollar mad."

A few of the papers suggested a boycott of American goods, especially moving picture films and automobiles.

Theodor Wolff, writing in the Tageblatt, denounced Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti; Governor Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, and Chief Justice William H. Taft, of the United States supreme court, as "cowardly, cruel and pitiless; subservient to the 'money bag,' and combining the barbarism of the middle ages with modern inventions and additions." Editor Wolff said he found it necessary to warn against a "moral boycott of the whole American people."

Fire In New York Hospital.

Several hundred patients at New York Hospital, slept peacefully early this morning while employees successfully fought a fire in the basement laundry. Although smoke had made its way to the various floors through airshafts few of the patients awoke, and they were reassured by the nurses, who remained on duty as though nothing unusual was happening.

MILITARIST BLOW AT COMMUNISM STARVINGHANKOW

Famine Follows Tyranny of Reactionaries

ing received information to the effect that numerous Canton revolutionaries are hiding among them.

• • • •

Wuhan Troops Mutiny.

HANKOW, Aug. 24. — The local press contains reports of a number of uprisings and mutinies of the Wuhan governmental troops in the provinces of Hupeh and Hunan. These reports have caused great confusion in the ranks of the butchers who head the Wuhan government and carry out the assassinations of the militarists. Reports of mutinies have been current for a number of days, but only recently have they been admitted in the columns of the press. The peasant movement is gaining power and is assuming truly widespread proportions that may involve the strategic points of China and set in motion a deep-going peasant revolution that will be victorious over the Wuhan agents of the bourgeoisie as well as the feudal militarists and the imperialists.

Economic Crisis in Wuhan.

HANKOW, Aug. 24. — The political and economic situation of the bloody Wuhan government grows more menacing day by day. A grave food crisis exists and on Saturday thousands of people stormed the rice stores in a suburb here. Military guards were ordered out to disperse them, but the soldiery failed to fire into the great mass. All food stores not pillaged were confiscated by the soldiery which is itself growing desperate because of the inability of the government to feed them.

Money Is Worthless.

Government money is completely devaluated and the peasants who have tried to buy cattle from tradesmen were rebuffed, creating increased unrest among the peasantry who have been selling their produce for the now worthless coin.

A severe order from the garrison chiefs proclaiming all tradesmen who shut their shops to be revolutionaries and enemies of the government failed to produce desired results.

The departure for Kuikang of all prominent functionaries of the government from whence they will probably proceed to Nanking after conference with Nanking leaders increases the alarm of the population.

Meanwhile the systematic mass murders continue. Persecutions, torture and executions of Communists continues unabated. Lei Chun-Tang and Li Ho-Wung were recently executed. The latter was only 20 years of age. Dozens of specially organized groups of propagandists agitating daily in the streets of the cities within the Wuhan government against the Communists enjoy no success, but meet frequently with stern opposition from the masses, so much so that the police and military authorities have to throw heavy guards arounds these hirelings.

Attempts to Seize Arms.

According to reports from different districts many military institutions have been attacked by mysterious groups trying to seize armaments. For the purpose of trying to avoid such incidents in the future the military authorities have worked out a detailed plan to "exterminate the Communists."

These attempts to seize arms and ammunition while part of the program of the Communists to turn the revolution in the direction of organizing Soviets as organs of power for the rule of the workers and peasants are not all organized, but are in many cases spontaneous outbursts of the population aided in some cases by the disillusioned military units who have revolted. The economic and political condition of the Wuhan outfit grows more dangerous for them and the basic conditions are ripening for the unleashing of the peasant insurrection.

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

HANKOW, China, August 24. — With military in control and all strikes illegal the food crisis in Wuhan has reached an extreme acuteness, because of the reduction of the supply due to the complete depreciation of treasury notes.

The shadow of famine is threatening even the foreign concessions. During the last few days it has been nearly impossible to obtain meat or vegetables. Crowds broke into a number of shops selling vegetable oil which locked their doors.

The situation in Wuchang, over the river, is still worse than in Hankow. All the shops are closed, making it impossible to get even a pound of rice.

Torture Communists.

The Hankow papers are full of descriptions of the persecution of the Communists. The Wuhan central committee of the Kuomintang has decreed that the Wuhan garrison must punctually fulfill the order prohibiting the activity of mass organizations not yet reorganized so as to place reactionaries in control. All strikes have been declared illegal. Bookstores selling Communist literature have been closed and sealed, the owners arrested.

The Wuhan central committee in its declaration for removing the government to Nanking also calls simultaneously for attack on the northern militarists, and for continued persecution of the Communists.

(Special To The Daily Worker.)

SHANGHAI, Aug. 24.—The electricity fails, and some of the public services are suspended, the latest report from Shanghai is that the city is not particularly damaged by the shelling of Sun Chuan-fang's artillery. Order prevails. The Nanking troops are concentrating south of the Yangtse, and are expecting arrival of 60,000 reinforcements from Wuhan.

The army of Sun Chuan-fang, after one unsuccessful attempt to cross the river twelve miles below Nanking, have concentrated at Fukow on the north bank of the Yangtse, and are said to be awaiting the result of a war council in Peking. It is known that serious differences of opinion exist between Sun Chuan-fang, his ally, Chang Tsung-chang, and their nominal superior, Marshall Chang Tso-lin.

British Pacifists Biased.

MOSCOW, Aug. 24. — Pravda points out that the European bourgeois press is silent about the anti-Communist terror in China. It emphasizes that the New Leader, directed and edited by those three pillars of pacifism, MacDonald, Lansbury and Brockway (who protested thru a special telegram addressed to Rykov any execution of British spies and white-guardist murderers by the Soviet Union) now prefer to keep silence regarding the cruelties committed in China.

These soft pacifists are ready at any moment to protest against violence when committed by revolutionary justice towards enemies of the working classes, but as "true Englishmen", they consider the acts of violence committed towards colonies and semi-colonies and their inhabitants as quite ordinary facts.

The Pravda considers it unnnecessary to add that the Daily Herald, edited by the former pacifist Parson Harlow, assumes the same attitude towards the terror in China as his teachers on the Lansbury MacDonald organ.

But Pravda declares that for this very reason, it is necessary for true revolutionary proletarians to raise their voices still louder against the crimes committed by British militarists and their Chinese lackeys in China.

PARIS CONGRESS SEES AMSTERDAM CHIEFS GRASPING

Fight for Plunder; No Labor Policies

MOSCOW, (By Mail).—The following article has been supplied to the correspondents of the "Imprecorr" from well-informed trade union circles:

The Paris congress of the International Federation of Trade Unions showed the complete bankruptcy of the Amsterdam International, it shows how completely baseless are the declarations of its leaders that this international is really an international organization of the working class. In reality the Amsterdam International is nothing but the arena for the squabbles of various leading cliques fighting for the right to mislead the workers in their own way. Their clique interests always come before the interests of working class solidarity in the struggle against the capitalists.

The exposure of the dirty manoeuvres of Oudegeest to sabotage the movement for International Trade Union unity and the desperate endeavours of the other Amsterdam leaders to whitewash him were very instructive.

The isolation and the defeat of the British leaders is the result of their characterless policy in the last few years by which they declared lip-service to the cause of international unity, but sabotaged unity in practice.

This of course is especially true for their relations to the Anglo-Russian Committee. Although the Anglo-Russian Committee was founded on the principle of mutual assistance, the British leaders refused the assistance of the Russian workers during the General Strike, refused to discuss joint measures for the assistance of the British miners, refused to send delegates to the Russian Trades Union Congress, refused to discuss the danger of war in the Anglo-Russian Committee and signed the offensive resolution of the Labor Party protesting to the Soviet Government on account of the shooting of twenty proved counter-revolutionaries. This attitude leads of course directly to the disruption of the Anglo-Russian Committee and to the strengthening of the positions of the Amsterdam leaders in their own countries thus strengthening the movement against the Russians and against International Trade Union unity.

No phrases of the British delegates in Paris can remove the consequences of these two previous years. They meant that the British leaders were not able to appear in Paris with a clear and definite program and that in consequence their conflict with the majority degenerated simply into a fight for seats and positions.

These lessons of the Amsterdam International Congress in Paris can only be applied if the most active elements of the working class realize the real significance of the British defeat and if mass pressure is brought to bear upon the General Council to force it to put its words in Paris about solidarity with the Russian workers into action in an immediate campaign for International Trade Union unity without waiting for the Edinburgh congress which in any case would certainly prefer to hear of such an action than of attacks upon Russia. An obviously necessary step is the conveneing of the Anglo-Russian Committee to discuss joint action against the danger of war which is threatening the workers of all countries, and in particular against the attacks of the British imperialists upon the Soviet Union. The conference of the Minority Movement in Great Britain which is to take place this month will give a splendid opportunity for a tremendous demonstration of the will of the British proletariat to unity.

Revolt in French Indo - China May Spread to India

HONGKONG, Aug. 24.—Details of a workers' revolt at Haiphong, in Indo-China, reported in dispatches from Canton.

Early advices said that the workers were seizing the shops and ships in the harbor.

Insurrection has long been threatening openly to break out in French Indo-China. Thruout the Far East where the Chinese revolution and the uprising of the Indonesians in the Dutch East Indies has had a powerful repercussion, unrest is extreme and it is believed that the situation of European imperialism is critical. The Cochin Chinese movement is only part of the revolutionary wave which is spreading from China to India.

During his journey thru China Jacques Doriot, a leader of the French Communist Party, discussed the specific problems of the Indo-Chinese revolution with the native leaders.

Red Aid Helps Victims Of Viennese Massacres

VIENNA, Aug. 24.—Nearly 2,000 Vienna workers, men, women and children were sacrificed to the rage of the Viennese police during the massacre in June, part were killed, part wounded and part thrown into jails. Hundreds of women and children have been deprived of their support and are reduced to extreme need. The Vienna Red Aid which has organised a system of doles for the destitute, is doing its utmost to support the victims and families of the fallen Viennese workers.

Marines Murder Two Nicaraguan Liberals; Cooperate With Diaz

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Two Nicaraguan liberals were killed in a fight between Nicaraguan liberals and American marines joined by members of the constabulary of that country, according to advices to the navy department from Rear Admiral David F. WARSAW, Poland, Aug. 24.—Extra guards were placed about the American legation today following an attempt on the part of workers to stage a demonstration before it. The crowd was dispersed by a strong detachment of police. No one was injured.

Thousands Denounce American Justice In London Meeting

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Over 12,000 workers assembled in Hyde Park to hear Ben Tillett and other prominent speakers in the British Minority Movement protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the capitalist courts of Massachusetts.

"Never since the sentence of crucifixion was ordered by Pontius Pilate has, such a terrible verdict on human beings been given by law and authority," Tillett said in his speech. He declared that Sacco and Vanzetti will stand out in history not only as the martyrs but as the heroes of the workingclass.

A resolution was offered stating that the twelve day respite granted Sacco and Vanzetti had been a deliberate trick on the part of the Massachusetts blood hounds to calm the world wide agitation in favor of the two innocent victims so that the crime might be perpetrated safely later. The resolution was adopted with a shout.

All police leaves of absence had been cancelled and the meeting was encircled by bobbies, with swords and special service revolvers. Ambulances and police wagons on the scene, but found nothing to do.

Chicago Terrorized As Cops Ban Sacco-Vanzetti Meetings

By THUBER LEWIS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24. — Police terrorism of a kind not witnessed in Chicago since the Hay Market days has marked the last few hours before the death of Sacco and Vanzetti. At a late hour Monday afternoon six thousand police were still on their unbroken duty begun three days ago.

The mass meetings announced for Monday afternoon at Vernon Park, Sibley and Taylor were prevented by the presence of hundreds of police who did not permit a soul to stand for a minute in the vicinity of the park. Squad cars equipped with riot guns and tear gas bombs stood in rows.

Monday morning some fifteen of the forty-five people arrested in the various Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations during the past week appeared at the Clark street police court for a hearing.

The only case continued among them was that of George Maurer, secretary of International Labor Defense of Chicago, who was rearrested and held without bail when he left the court room.

The district convention of the Workers Party which was held Sunday night at Workers Lyceum was entered by twenty police who thought it was a Sacco and Vanzetti rally. The police stayed throughout the session.

President Coolidge Observes Yellowstone As Two Workers Burn

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. — As last minute efforts were being made to snatch Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair, President Calvin Coolidge was touring the Yellowstone Park, observing the geysers, the petrified trees, the tremendous power falls and all of the scenic beauties that the park has to offer.

Workers in Minneapolis Decry Death of Sacco and Vanzetti

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 24.—Minneapolis went emphatically on record in opposition to the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. In answer to the question: "Should Sacco and Vanzetti Die?" Fifteen hundred citizens, massed in the court house assembly room thundered: "They Should Not Die."

Paul Crouch, recently released class war prisoner, called upon the workers whose solidarity rescued him from the jail's living death to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the chair by a general strike. Walter Liggett, field secretary of the National Citizens' Committee, presented a completed history of the case and vigorously rebuked the kept capitalist press for its conspiracy of silence since the granting of the last respite. He called attention to Thayer's ca. and monstrous tactics with the condemned men and Fuller's unspeakably prejudiced decision urging all fair minded persons to demand Coolidge's intervention and the opening of the department of justice files.

Hundreds Meet in Hall When Cops Deny Permit

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 24.—When the police here refused permission to hold an open air Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting, hundreds of workers and sympathizers met in a local hall and heard prominent speakers describe how the Massachusetts bosses had railroaded Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair. The meeting was held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, the Workers Party and the Italian Progressive Club.

"Zenith of Everything Monstrous," Says Rome Paper of Massachusetts

ROME, Italy, Aug. 24—The Italian press which hesitated to attack the Massachusetts murders openly finally thru aside its fears as the end seemed hopeless. The Impero, a large Rome organ, makes the following charge against the executioners of Sacco and Vanzetti:

"Where the insensibility of the American judges reaches the zenith of everything that is monstrous is in having kept these two men on the threshold of death for seven years, making them dance a kind of funeral hesitation waltz syncopated with hope and despair without realizing that they have already died a thousand times."

Class Vengeance Uses Personal Ambitions.

Governor Fuller, the Massachusetts butcher, knew as did millions of workers that Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent of the crime for which they were tortured to the point of death many times during the seven years that preceded the final, culminating the shattering of their bodies with high-voltage electricity.

The ruling class of which Fuller is a member used him as one of its instruments for wreaking vengeance upon these two martyrs who had tried to the best of the abilities to arouse the workers to a struggle against the awful blight of slavery that demands its yearly toll of lives of men, women and children. These two men were martyred as a warning to other workers not to dare to challenge the greed and avarice of the plundering plutocracy of decadent Boston Back Bay aristocracy. That was the local aspect of the case. Nationally, the United States government, thru the medium of its notorious department of justice, aided in the frame-up in order that the industrialists might strike terror into the hearts of the foreign-born workers who comprise the majority of slaves in heavy industry in America.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti was a class challenge to the working class of the United States. Their bodies were contemptuously and defiantly hurled at the feet of the workers. But this bestial act will inevitably evoke retaliation. The monsters who committed this crime may think the "incident" will be closed after a few indignant and impotent protests. But the steadily rising mass fury of the workers will convince them that, this challenge has been accepted and that from henceforth every ounce of energy will be devoted toward creating organizational machinery that will make a repetition of this crime impossible in the not distant future.

The ruling capitalist class, as a class, is responsible for this crime—let us never forget that fact. In class war certain individuals are used to carry out cretain policies. The individual who was most conspicuous during the last months against the fight for the liberation of these workers was Alvan T. Fuller, governor of Massachusetts. One does not sink to such depths as Fuller has sunk without promises of some sort of reward. And Fuller expects his reward at the next national convention of the republican party. At the last moment, after the main performance of selecting a candidate for president is over the backers of Fuller hope to run him in, as vice-presidential candidate. That is how his predecessor, the strike-breaking governor, Cal Coolidge, slipped in at the 1920 convention.

Already the reptile press of the nation is trying to create the myth that this low murderer, this cowardly assassin of innocent workers, is another powerful, silent, determined yankee, who does his duty as he sees it regardless of consequences. With the most servile abasement the journalistic prostitutes who know Fuller to be nothing other than an immensely wealthy exploiter of non-union labor suffering from delusions of grandeur describe him quite differently. Some of them even go so far as to sympathize with him because of the "difficult task" imposed upon him. It does not take a high degree of intelligence to explode that myth. Any poltroon, surrounded by the armed power of the state, can sit in safety and order the murder of two fortured workers.

It is essential that the role of Fuller be definitely established, because he is to be made the personification of a period of frightfulness on the part of the ruling class of this country against the workers, beginning with an attack upon the foreign-born workers and extending to the working class as a whole. Class vengeance in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti used the personal ambitions of Fuller as its medium of murder. That he was promised political favors is clearly revealed by the comment of the New York Times, which denies any such intent on Fuller's part. Says the Times:

> "The insinuation, to which a certain publicity has been given, that Governor Fuller was actuated by political ambition is too mean and crawling for notice."

Not all the cheap sneers at those who properly brand the conduct of Fuller as that of a murderer trying to win the applause of his class in order to achieve further distinction in his chosen political role will change the damning facts in this case. The working class will place the responsibility where it belongs, at the door of the capitalist class and at the same time remember the tools they used to achieve their murderous purpose.

Only the most determined and relentless activity to create weapons of struggle for the working class—a labor party, powerful industrial unions, the building of the mass defense organizations—will assure the workers against a repetition of such foul murders of workers.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, WORKER:—

All radical, labor and political meetings of any description were prohibited yesterday. The cops oven went as far as to stop the business meeting of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, Inc., located at 107 Marchessault St. (Opposite the Plaza.)

Machine guns were placed in a hotel room overlooking the Plaza, and from 350 to 750 patrolmen, plainclothsmen and detectives—to say nothing about an army of "stools"—prevented the holding of a meeting. Everybody was told to "move on" or go to jail. Well, they made jailbirds out of 5 more Communists—the most feared brand of radicalism in connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Protest Against Discrimination.

Editor, WORKER:—

Considerable indignation was aroused in one of the working class residential districts recently, by the discriminatory attitudes of public officials in providing free public band concerts.

As tho the fact that only one-third of the band is assigned to play in working class districts is not sufficiently insulting to the intelligence of the workers, those in charge of this form of "mind fixing" recently substituted the customary coronet or vocal solo with a prize fighting match between two small boys.

In a letter of protest to one of the local papers, a worker who seems to be on the verge of becoming class-conscious, among other things expresses himself thusly: "I can appreciate that it is too expensive for the city to furnish more than one-third of the band to play for he residents of the slums. But it certainly seems unjust and discriminatory to have a soloist, (instead of a coronetist or a vocalist as they have in the so-called respectable neighborhoods), a couple of boys with boxing gloves.

As one of the residents of the viciniy in which the concert occured I protest against being placed musically on a plane where a boxing match can be expected to satisfy my appreciation for solo music.

"Faith in American Institutions" and What Can Be Done About It

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE frame-up now takes its place with the injunction against the labor unions as a legal weapon in the arsenal of American capitalism.

Sacco and Vanzetti have been murdered by the capitalist rulers of the United States while millions, convinced of their innocence, unable to believe the awfulness of the crime they witnessed, looked on with staring eyes.

The mute but undeniable evidence of the crime is now the charred bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti—two loyal and militant members of the workingclass murdered by their class enemies, the enemies of the labor movement, the executioners in the pay of the bosses of Massachusetts.

TO the workers of America the corpses of our murdered comrades says:

> "Our deaths at the hands of class enemies, yours and ours, accomplished by the frame-up, proves that every honest and militant spokesman of the working class in the United States, every active organizer, every agitator and teacher, every writer and speaker, who urge the solidarity of labor, powerful union organization and effective struggle for wages and working conditions and a workers and farmers government, faces our fate."
> "Hatred and fear of the mass strength of organized workers, backed by the power of American capitalism and its government, sent us to the electric chair."
> "A fearful procession of the best fighters in the ranks of the American working class will follow us to the grave soon unless American labor reads aright the warning we give—and acts."
> "American capitalism fears but it does not respect the American labor movement. Only power will force respect."
> "Begin at once to organize the unorganized millions, lay the foundations for a labor party to fight for the masses in the strongholds of capitalism, shatter the paralysing belief in the impartiality of American capitalist justice, set the feet of American labor upon the straight path of the class struggle."
> "Do this and our seven years of torture ending in our murder will not have been in vain."

THE defiance of the American labor movement, the contemptuous gesture with which the capitalist flunkeys have hurled the dead bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti into the face of the American workingclass, brings into sharp relief against the towering background of capitalist institutions the weakness of the American labor movement.

The labor movement is weak numerically, it is weak in class consciousness, it is weak in structure.

ABOVE all, the shamefully proven before the whole world, the reaction and cowardice of its official leadership stands out as the chief reason for its failure to prevent the legalized frame-up and murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Forced by mass pressure to make some sort of gesture, President Green, in the name of the executive council of the American Federation, asked Governor Fuller for clemency but in the same message said:

> "These working men and women for whom I speak are loyal to our government and have faith in American institutions. . . ."
> "While the personalities of Sacco and Vanzetti may mean little, faith in the integrity of our courts and the instrumentalities of government is of transcendent importance. The success of government depends upon the confidence which its citizenship manifests in governmental institutions. . . ."

NOR more craven utterance has ever been made by a labor union official.

At the exact moment when "our courts and the instrumentalities of government" were murdering two innocent workingmen, President Green, the head of the organized labor movement, announces that labor is "loyal to our government" and has "faith in American institutions."

His only appeal is that Governor Fuller act to strengthen and not to weaken these instruments of oppression and murder. He asks only the Massachusetts executioners stay their hands so that his task of betraying the labor movement will not be made harder.

Green speaks as one murderer arguing with another as to method.

THE burned bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti show that the leadership typified by Green must go if the trade union movement is not itself to become the executioner of the working class.

The same machine of capitalist class justice which murdered Sacco and Vanzetti is smashing Green's own union—the United Mine Workers of America—by means of the injunction, deputised gunmen and military police.

IN coal-fields the strike is entering an acute phase—picketing is prohibited, union miners are being jailed, sheriffs and militia turn the mines into fortresses, the various government agencies are organized for the coal barons and against the miners.

As the struggle continues the frame-up will make its appearance in the coal-fields.

There will be not one but dozens of cases differing from that of Sacco and Vanzetti only in detail.

ENCOURAGED by the refusal of A. F. of L. officialdom to fight for Sacco and Vanzetti, exultant over their failure to make one single effort to crystallize the tremendous mass protest into a nationally organized movement, the coal barons and their government will not fail to intensify the drive on the miners' union.

Composed largely of foreign-born workers—there are thousands of miners who are Italians as were Sacco and Vanzetti—every active member of the United Mine Workers of America is in danger from the frame-up.

Green's "faith in American institutions" serves only to increase their danger just as it aided the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti.

WE ask President Green if his "faith in American institutions" includes faith in that other typical American institution—the injunction, the twin brother of the frame-up.

In southern Ohio the United Mine Workers of America, officers and members, has been enjoined from carrying on the strike. In West Virginia the union has been enjoined from organizing. Police and troops enforce these injunctions which, if not broken, mean death to the union.

TO express "faith in American institutions" in the face of such developments is to surrender unconditionally to American capitalism, and to follow that surrender by enlisting in its anti-labor forces.

If the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti does not teach us that such leadership must be defeated and driven from the labor movement we are incapable of learning anything.

How is this to be done?

FIRST, by such a thoro and convincing exposure of its treacherous acts that its influence and authority will be destroyed among the working class—organized and unorganized.

SECOND, by making a clear distinction between the labor movement and its official leaders so that the labor movement, as the instrument of the working class, will not suffer by their acts but will attract the unorganized masses and be able to draw upon the loyalty of those organized workers who want a fighting and effective labor movement.

THIRD, by the initiation of organization campaigns in the basic industries which will bring into the unions, in spite of official opposition, great bodies of workers who are not corrupted by the worker-employer co-operation propaganda of the official leadership.

THE refusal of the Greens, Wolls, Lewises, etc, to recommend a strike for Sacco and Vanzetti, their public declarations of faith in the very institutions utilized to murder two innocent workingmen, their inability or unwillingness to see in the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti a challenge to the whole labor movement, their failure to inform the labor movement that this murder is part of the coming offensive against the labor movement and the whole working class, brands them as too reactionary, too smugly loyal to the class enemies of labor, too fearful of the power of a conscious and well-organized working class, too completely a part of the machinery of American imperialism, for their leadership to be anything but a grave danger to the labor movement and an aid to the enemies of labor.

TWO workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, murdered while the official leadership of the labor movement held the workers in check and allowed the executioners to complete their seven-year task, constitute an indictment of American official labor leadership against which it has no defense.

LET these leaders continue to declare their "faith in American institutions!"

To hundreds of thousands of American workers, reading of the unfaltering courage of Sacco and Vanzetti as they went to their deaths as a result of the relentless operation of these institutions by the class for which they are built, there will come inevitably the determination to see that those who express "faith in American institutions" as workers are murdered openly by them, shall no longer speak in the name of labor.

THE resentment and disgust which an army of American workers feel for a labor officialdom which dares not strike a blow for Sacco and Vanzetti for fear of offending their capitalist murderers can be organized into something much more concrete—it can be made an organized force whose first task will be to clean out of the labor movement the traitors and rascals which keep it so impotent that, unable to prevent what the whole world knows is the murder of two workingmen by their class enemies, it is forced to stand and watch the execution while labor officialdom strokes the hand of the executioner.

THE capitalist class of Massachusetts, backed by its kindred thruout the United States, has murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, but at the same time it has presented the Communists and the left wing in the labor movement with a weapon which can and will be used to smash the agents of capitalism at the head of the labor movement.

FOR the safety of the labor movement, for the sake of those workers whose activity in behalf of their class has brought down on them the wrath of the rulers, in order that capitalist robbery bulwarked by murder may not drown the labor movement in its own blood, in order that the electric chair may not become the symbol of industrial feudalism, the tools of American imperialism in high places in the labor movement must be driven out and unions built which will not cower before the death the arts of the capitalist spokesmen.

A LABOR movement embracing the millions of workers now unorganized, a labor movement with its own political party, a labor movement freed from the treacheries of imperialist agents, a labor movement which knows "American institutions" to be the instruments of its class enemy, a labor movement with the will to power—this is the way to avenge Sacco and Vanzetti and prove to the world that they did not suffer seven years or torture and die in vain.

Don't Forget To Lock Your Doors.

When you leave your home to come to the mass carnival at Starlight Park next Sunday you must be sure to lock the doors tight. One can't tell if the Sigman clique is planning to come and take away your furniture.

From various sources we have learned that Sigman is badly in need of furniture and is preparing to make pogroms to get same. However don't stay home to watch. On Sunday his gang won't work. So don't worry and come to the mass carnival at the Starlight Park, East 177th St. subway station.

The many entertaining features of the park will be in full swing from 10 a. m. and will last to 2 the next morning. The opera Carmen will be produced in the evening at 8 o'clock in the great open air arena. The cast consists of famous opera stars, and they will be accompanied by a full symphony orchestra. Admission to the opera is $1. Reserved seats are $2 and $1.50. A special feature of the Jamboree will be the open air and indoor dancing. Two well known jazz bands will supply the music.

Lenox Hill Players Plan Five Productions

Have you bought your tickets for the big Jamboree next Sunday? A special performance of "Carmen," with well known singers, will be one of the chief features that day.

Two plays of Sam H. Harris are now in rehearsal. They are "The Man-Eating Tiger," the Ben Hecht-Rose Caylor farce which opens in New York October 3rd, and Maurine Watkins' comedy, "Chicago," starring Francine Larrimore due at the Sam H. Harris theatre in Chicago on Sept. 11th.

Clarke Painter will produce "The House in the Woods," a mystery play by Martha Stanley and Adelaide Matthews. Frank McCormack will direct the production and the play will open out of town the latter part of September.

The new operetta "Bonita," which is based on "Arizona," will have its first presentation next Monday evening, at the Garden Pier theatre, Atlantic City. The score of "Bonita" is by Sigmund Romberg, composer of "My Maryland," and "The Student Prince." Another Shubert opening in Atlantic City next Monday will be their new "Artists and Models" revue.

Two other plays which may see Broadway under the Woods banner are: "Mademoiselle Flute," the Verneuil-Berr comedy, and a melodrama, "Thou Shalt Not," by H. S. Mitchell.

The Lenox Hill Players are planning five productions next season at the Cherry Lane Theatre, which is to be their permanent home. Among the plays mentioned are Strindberg's "The Father," Gogol's "The Inspector General."

The new Gallo theatre which is now nearing completion in Fifty-fourth Street, west of Broadway, is to serve as a theatre of the Broadway stamp and also will house opera, concerts and recitals, according to Fortune Gallo, manager of the San Carlo Opera Company.

"Enchanted Isle," a musical production, with book music and lyrics by Ida Hoyt Chamberlain, will be placed in rehearsal by the American Allied Arts, Inc., in a fortnight for a future showing on Broadway.

TO AID OF S ARRESTED ESWICK, PA.

RGH, Pa., Aug. 24.—The rallying to the defense five striking miners ar- the Cheswick Sacco-Van- ing where state troopers rode down and maltreated men and children. There is er of a murder charge in this , because one of the victims of police attack defended himself, shot a cossack. The man was unidentified, and the troopers will try to frame somebody in the crowd for the shooting.

A mass meeting to protest these brutalities of the state police and in memorial of the murder in Massachusetts of Sacco and Vanzetti will be held at Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Pittsburgh, on Sunday, August 28, at 8 p. m. It will be under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, and the principal speaker will be James P. Cannon, of the I. L. D.

NANT-Y-GLO, Pa., Aug. 24 (FP).—Three gunmen employed at one of the Peale mines are held on $2,000 bail after a battle with Nant-y-Glo police. One of the gunmen was being rounded up by the local officials for throwing a tear bomb at the house of a striker. With shotguns and revolvers he and two associates defied arrest, saying:

"You are not going to take anybody out of here." The state constabulary came to the aid of police and now the gunmen are charged with attempt to kill.

Nant-y-Glo has several burgesses elected by the union miners on a labor party ticket.

Son of Postman in Feud With duPonts For Control of Son

Harold S. Glendening, son of a Norwalk, Conn. mail carrier and his former wife who divorced him a year ago, Alicia Maddox du Pont, heiress to the $100,000,000 A. I. du Pont powder fortune began on Saturday the fight for possession of their five-year-old son.

Glendening, a lawyer, a former Rhodes scholar met Miss du Pont in 1918 when he was at work in the chemical department of the du Pont plants.

No Poor Relations.

He has just attacked the divorce which his former wife got in Reno, Nevada last year as "fraudulent, invalid and worthless." That the romance would end on the rocks was anticipated by those who declared that it interfered with the plans of the du Ponts for building up not only a financial but also a social dynasty in the United States by inter-marriages in the families of American financial rulers.

The du Ponts, besides controlling the powder industry, a dominant factor in the General Motors Company, are now striving for control in the U. S. steel and automotive industries.

Contamination of City Water Supply Is Feared

NORTH CASTLE, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The Board of Water Supply of New York City was taking all possible steps today to prevent the contamination of the Kensico Reservoir from the overflow of three ponds near the dam.

These three ponds, each 300 feet deep, were formed by abandoned stone quarries—the quarries from which was dug the stone with which the dam was built. Water flows from them into the reservoir.

But the ponds now contain colon bacilli, according to T. Del Kaufman, department engineer for the board, and Peter Higgins, superintendent of the Kensico property. Samples of the water from the three ponds, from the three streams, and from the reservoir near the mouth of the three streams, were sent for analysis to the laboratories at Mount Kisco, and Dr. George Clark, health officer of North Castle, helped Kaufman and Higgins to disinfect the water in the ponds with chloride of lime.

Guide Who Would Have Died for Sacco Fired

WASHINGTON, Aug 23 (FP).—Because she declared she was willing to die for Sacco and Vanzetti, Mrs. Leonora H. Jones, guide in the capitol building, has been indefinitely suspended from duty. Mrs. Jones wrote to Governor Fuller offering to lay down her life if thereby the two Italian workers would be spared from the electric chair.

"If my little life could prevent the harm which may come to our country through the execution of these two men," she wrote, "I would gladly offer it." Mrs. Jones, a motherly woman of 59, has been supporting her invalid husband and daughter thru her earnings as instructor to the senate pages and guide to capitol visi-

Woll Attacks Trade Union Militants at State Labor Meet

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Addressing the sixty-fourth convention of the New York State Federation of Labor in session here, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the National Civic Federation, launched a vicious attack against militant elements in the trade unions.

He used the Moscow "bogey" as a basis for his attack.

The convention will nominate officers at the afternoon session and will probably close its business tomorrow.

Opposes Injunction.

The State Federation of Labor convention here has gone on record in favor of a change that makes it impossible for injunctions to be issued in time of strikes. It also opposes the proposed amendment to the state constitution under which the terms of the governor and the state senators would be four years and assemblymen two years.

President Sullivan outlined the federation attitude towards injunctions and asked for support in enacting legislation opposed to it.

Toronto Trades Council Attacks Green's Policy

in a letter from Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, which was read at the next meeting of the Council, and in accordance with the procedure of the council this communication was referred to the Executive Board for consideration. The recommendation of the Executive Board, brought in at the August 18th meeting, was that both the President Green and the Gold letter be filed as "information"; but this dodging of the issue was not acceptable to the council delegates.

Adopt Resolution.

The following resolution was introduced from the floor, and it was carried by a vast majority of the meeting:

"Whereas, the Toronto Trades and Labor Council has heard the letter of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, concerning the existing situation in the International Fur Workers' Union and the reply of the Joint Board of New York, comprising Locals Nos. 1, 5, 10 and 15. And

"Whereas, we are decidedly convinced that the only reason for the unwarranted interference of the A. F. of L. and the Executive Board of the Fur Workers' Union, is the fact that the workers in New York City chose for their leaders and officials, militant, radical and aggressive members, whose policies were at variance with the present leadership of the Furriers' International and the A. F. of L. executives, especially those of President William Green. Be it therefore

To Withdraw Committee.

"Resolved, that this regular meeting of the Toronto Trades and Labor Council appeals to the A. F. of L. and the executive of the Fur Workers' International to withdraw the special committees and bogus and artificial locals that have been set up and to restore complete autonomy to the New York district, thereby restoring rank and file control, which is in our estimation the only method of re-establishing peace and unity in the Fur Workers' Union in New York City."

The passage of this resolution is without a doubt due to the good work of the Toronto section of the Unity Conference Committee of the Furriers' Union, which was organized at the close of the so-called convention at Washington and which is steadily carrying on its drive to end the struggle which is so weakening the Furriers' Union and to bring about peace and unity within its ranks.

DELAY HANDS OFF CHINA MEETS FOR MASS MEMORIALS

Compare Sacco-Vanzetti Murder With Nanking

The "Hands Off China" mass meetings scheduled to be held in Brooklyn and New York City on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week have been called off and all supporters of the struggle of the Chinese people for freedom and unity are urged to join in protest against the cruel murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, two valiant fighters for the cause of freedom and justice, the "Hands Off China" Committee announced in a statement issued yesterday.

"The workers, peasants and students of China will fight on with renewed determination, realizing that the power which so cold-bloodedly killed these two innocent workers is the same which is mobilizing thousands of troops and hundreds of gunboats in China and shooting down our workers and students," declared Mr. L. H. Peng, acting president of the Chinese Student Club of Columbia University in announcing the calling off the "Hands Off China" meetings which his organization was arranging in conjunction with the Student "Hands Off China" Committee, and the "Hands Off China" Committee of New York City.

Capitalism In Action.

"We in China have often appealed to American justice and fair play which we were taught to admire," said Mr. Peng. "But what answer did we receive — gunboats, marines, airplanes, submarines — Nanking massacres and death. The brutal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti reminds us of our own experiences. How can we have faith in America's protestations of justice and liberty?"

Earl Browder, secretary of the Pan-Pacific Labor Conference, P. T. Lau, former professor at Sun Yat Sen University, Canton, Paul Blanchard, secretary, League for Industrial Democracy, and Stanley High, leader of the Christian student movement were scheduled to have addressed the meeting at the Central Opera House on Friday.

Home Work In Tie Line Ended By Agreement of Union With the Bosses

At a conference held recently between the Neckwear Makers' Union and the Neckwear Association, at the Half Moon Hotel, Coney Island, it was agreed that home work will be done away with.

Slip stitching will become a union operation and will be "conducted on the premises" according to the conference committee. The agreement will now go to the bosses' association and the union for ratification.

Other points on which the committee agreed were the wage increases for trimmers and boxes, a two year contract dating from September 1, 1927, and a provision that all prices become effective September 1.

The question of hours still remains unsettled. The workers want a 40 hour week. To this the bosses are opposed.

LARGE SPORTING PROGRAM SUNDAY AT THE JAMBOREE

Baseball Games, Races and Soccer on Tap

The big Jamboree which will take place Sunday in Starlight Park, will be given over entirely to sports between the hours of ten till two. One of the outstanding features and sport events will be the soccer game played by two Hungarian working women's teams. The first time in the history of New York labor movement will such an event take place. Also there will take place a return game of baseball between Passaic Workers Sport Club and the baseball team of the Workers Party.

There will be many events which everybody can participate in. Such as three legged race, potato race and sack race. These events will be for men and women separately.

There will be a 100 yard dash and a 400 yard real race. A great deal of fun is expected from the 100 yard dash in which only men over 200 pounds can particpiate. One of the big attractions will be the gymnastic exhibition given by the International Workers' Gymnastic Association.

There will be a booth at Starlight Park assigned for registration of those who wish to participate. Prizes will be given to the winners.

SUPPORT JAMBOREE AT STARLIGHT PARK, SAYS DISTRICT TWO OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY

The workers of New York City are called upon by the District Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, to support the defense of the needle trades workers by attending the affair to be held at Starlight Park on Sunday, August 28th.

The struggle of the needle trades workers in behalf of their union and for the freedom of their political prisoners is known to all workers. It is not merely an internal union affair, it involves two fundamental rights of organized labor. It involves the fundamental issue whether the needle trade workers are to have a union or whether the open shop is to be established in the trade. It involves the issue of democracy in the union and the right to select militant leaders to conduct the class struggle against the employers.

The victory of the left wing in the needle trades means a victory for stronger unions, for organizing the unorganized workers, for maintaining the standard established after decades of sacrifice and for the right of the rank and file to select its leaders.

All workers of all trades will come in masses in support of this affair.

ternoon passed thru the undertaking rooms of Joseph Langane in the West End, where the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti have been held while unsuccessful attempts were made to secure a hall where they could lie in state.

Police activities prevented the defense committee from securing a hall. The committee tried labor halls but none could be secured, one woman owner having a carpenter erect a barricade.

Meanwhile, attempts to hold a "death march" across the city was meeting with opposition from the police.

A senatorial investigation of the department of justice and the setting up of a commission to inquire into the decision of Governor Alvan T. Fuller and his advisory committee will be the object of a national Sacco-Vanzetti committee to be organized at a national conference in New York on Saturday and Sunday.

Powers Hapgood, young militant miner and former Harvard track athlete, who was committed to the psychopathic hospital to keep from participating in the protest against the murder was released and today was planning court action.

SAY THEY GOT THE HOLY GHOST

Proof that in the nooks and corners of industrial life in America our rulers still manage to keep alive some of the old superstitions is proved by the assertions of John Roach Stratton that he and his wife, pictured above, were visited by the holy ghost, cured of diseases and saved, in a New York church. Stratton is the recognized leader of the fundamentalists, and a great opponent of modern science, particularly the theory of evolution.

FIGHTING CIGARMAKERS OUSTED IN DISPUTE; DEMAND REINSTATEMENT

Local 100 of the Cigar Makers' International Union, which has just been expelled from the International for alleged deficit in funds, is making a stirring appeal to all organized workers to assist them in gaining reinstatement. This local which was formerly the independent "Amalgamated Tobacco Workers' Union", has always been a fighting organization and the labor fakers have only awaited this opportunity to expel these workers.

The cigar makers make the following appeal:

Brothers and Sisters:

We, the progressive local of the Cigar Makers' International Union, Local 100, New York City, were recently suspended by the president shortly before the International convention, which is to be held in August.

The reason given for the suspension of our local is that it is deficient in funds to the amount of $142.60. A closer examination of the facts leading to our suspension will reveal some interesting facts.

Once Independent.

Until about 6 months ago local 100 was an independent organization known as "The Amalgamated Tobacco Workers' Union." This organization had, for the past several years, to fight for its existence on the picket line not only against the bosses, but also against the International bureaucrats. Our local realizing the necessity for unified action in the industry in order to better defend the interests of the workers, agreed to confer with the International Cigar Makers' Union, upon the initiative of Santiago Iglesias, with the idea in view of the joining the A. F. of L. organization.

After a series of conferences between the two organizations the following main points were agreed upon: (1) Conditions and prices prevailing in the Amalgamated shops before affiliation be maintained. (2) Immediate organization campaign be started. (3) That the "Amalgamated" receive a charter as a separate local. All these points were granted and the former Amalgamated Tobacco Workers' Union became known as Local 100, Cigar Makers' International Union.

The Old Game.

At the time of the granting of the charter as a separate local a strike was in progress in one of the biggest cigar shops in New York, Bloom's shop. The International took over this strike and agreed to do its utmost to carry it to a successful conclusion. But instead a shameful settlement was effected by International Organizer Simons and even this disgraceful settlement was broken by the firm as soon as it started to operate. Local 100 thru its delegates to the Joint Advisory Board demanded that the terms of the settlement be recorded in the minutes of the J. A. B. and that the firm be made to live up to it. Mr. Simons flatly refused to state the terms of the settlement stating that it was not he, but the International president who effected this settlement and signed the agreement without the knowledge of the strikers. This was a revelation to the J. A. B., as it was not known that the president was holding secret conferences with the firm. Local 100 demanded that the secret agreement be disclosed. The Joint Advisory Board by aunanimous vote instructed its secretary to demand of the president a copy of the agreement. This agreement was never received by the J. A. B. and one week after, as punishment for the audacity of our local to know the contents of the agreement, was suspended by the International president.

Unorganized Condition of the Industry.

The deplorable unorganized state of the cigar industry is appalling. Out of about 12,000 cigar makers only 1,800 are organized, a good portion of whom are not working at the bench, but are holding membership because of sick and death benefit. This condition calls for an aggressive organization campaign.

How the International Conducts Organization Campaigns.

As per agreement between our local and the International officials to organize the cigar industry in New York the local proposed the following plan: (1) The calling of shop chairmen meetings to organize a live rank and file organization committee. (2) The calling of a series of general membership meetings to enlist the members for active work amongst the unorganized. (3) After preparing the membership a series of mass meetings to be called.

How did the International carry out the above plan to organize the industry? During the six months of the existence of our local the Joint Advisory Board called one shop chairmen meeting where an "organization committee" was elected. This committee was never called to a meeting. They also called one membership meeting during the entire six months, the membership not being notified. With this "wonderful" preparation a "mass meeting" was called, about as well prepared as the membership meeting. Only a few active members came down to this meeting. This was the end of the organization drive for the whole six months. Again it was apparent that the International officials would not do anything to let the New York organization grow for fear of radical ideas.

Forced To Fight In Defense.

Our local became outraged at this conduct on the part of the International officials and put up a consistent fight in the New York Joint Advisory Board for the rights of the membership and insisted that the agreement for unity be lived up to. The fear of exposure of the bureaucrats of the International by our local at the coming convention caused the president to issue an edict dissolving our local to prevent our delegates from exposing their treacherous conduct at the coming convention. And as there must always be some excuse the flimsy pretext given for dissolving our local was that we spent $142.60 above the amount allowed by the constitution.

The Official "Excuse" for Suspension.

The official Journal of April 1927 discloses the fact that there are about 160 local unions that had a deficit on January 1, 1927 of an amount of close to $35,000. Some of these sums are substantially above that of our local. For example: Local 14, Chicago, where the international president no doubt is at present a member shows a deficit of $4,261.85; local 148, $1,442.52; local 350, $1,478.05; local 501, $1,125.55; local 251, New York, where international organizer Simons is president, $1,939.77.

The above is only a partial list of those locals who have a deficit. Considering the above facts taken from the official Journal, can the membership accept the flimsy excuse that local 100 has been dissolved because of a deficit of $142.60? If according to the constitution locals are to be suspended for deficiency in funds why were not the 160 locals listed in their own official report suspended? The reason is obvious. These 160 locals the officials are considered as safe, whereas our local will put up a fight for the real interests of the workers in this industry.

The Chinese Peasant Union

By EARL BROWDER.

ARTICLE IV.

The tremendous growth of the Peasant Union in China has attracted attention of the entire world, and shown the peasantry as the chief force of the Revolution. The land problem is the chief problem. But the entire peasant population is not, of course, revolutionary. Therefore, to form a judgment of the future of the revolution, it is necessary to know how strong are those sections of the peasantry who are revolutionary, who make up the Peasant Unions. The following classification is made by Mo Chek-tung, a leading Chinese agrarian scholar ("Chinese Peasant," Jan., 1925):

The landlord class, numbering over two million persons, is the main reactionary force in the villages. It is led and organized principally by the big landlords, numbering about 300,000, and by the village "gentry" and officials.

The main body of the peasantry number about 320 millions. Of these, the most conservative are the yeomanry (working farmers owning their own farms), 120 millions strong. But not more than 10%, or 12 millions, have an economic surplus, and only this number have hopes of becoming landlords and therefore tend to support the reaction. About half, or 60 million, are just holding their own and making a living; these are timid, trying to avoid struggles, and help neither side much. The remaining 40%, or 48 million, of the yeomanry are farmers who are losing each year, and rapidly going into bankruptcy. These latter, although unreliable, definitely tend to support the revolutionary struggle.

The Revolutionary Poor.

The main force of the revolutionary peasantry consists of the semi-yeomanry, the tenants, and the village poor. These total more than 170 millions. They carry the main burden of village exploitation, rents, taxes, etc. Their conditions are the most miserable of all who still have any place in economic life. For them the revolution in the village (overthrowing the landlord administrations, reducing or abolishing rents, establishing their own armed forces) is a necessity for their continued life. It is from them that comes the organizers, the fighting forces of the Chinese peasantry.

Then there are the "lumpen proletarians" of the village. These are people who have been squeezed off the land, unable to migrate to the already-overcrowded cities, and who starve and rot in idleness and crime. They are the soldiers, bandits, thieves, beggars, and prostitutes. They number about 20 millions. It is mainly from this degenerated mass that the landlords recruit their fighting forces, which they use to crush the revolution.

Peasant Unions.

If this classification is approximately correct, and it is borne out by other studies which I have read, then we can say that not less than two-thirds (about 220 million) of the peasantry have a definite material interest in the success of the peasant union movement. About 60 millions are wavering elements, and certainly not more than 40 millions (including the criminal and idle classes) are actual or potential reactionary forces.

When I left China in June, ten million of the revolutionary peasants were already enrolled in the peasant unions. Since that time, the province of Hupeh has reported an increase of two millions, and Hunan of another million. The movement for organization is sweeping like wildfire over China. For the first time in history, the masses of China are exercising a little practical "democracy." Through their peasant unions they taste, for the first time, the joys of "having something to say" about their own life.

Figures Destroy Oil Propaganda Put Out by Shell

Figures of Russian oil industry recently given to the press by Sir Henri Deterding of the Royal Dutch Shell Group, in order to back up his statement that there is a shortage of oil products in Russia, are declared incorrect and entirely misleading in a statement by Saul G. Bron, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

According to Mr. Bron, the quantity of kerosene and lamp oil made available for internal consumption last year was 60 per cent larger than the average for the last three pre-war years. Sir Deterding, in his estimates, is said to have failed to make important corrections necessitated by the secession of large territories from Russia. Mr. Bron's statement follows:

"Sir Henri Deterding, in a new statement, attempts to present some statistical data to prove his previous declarations that Soviet oil export 'is maintained at the expense of curtailing the requirements of the population of Russia.' The figures of Sir Henri Deterding are not only faulty in themselves, but are compiled in such a manner as to prevent a decidedly perverted picture of the oil situation in the Soviet Union. Sir Henri Deterding's statistical method consists of comparing the yearly average for three pre-war years, when production was stable, with the average for the years 1923-4, 1924-5, and 1925-6, during which oil production in the Soviet Union grew by leaps and bounds. This method obviously gives a wrong picture of the position of the oil industry during the last of these years. As a matter of fact, the quantity of kerosene and lamp oil made available for internal consumption of 1925-6 was 1,421,499 metric tons, a large increase, and not a decline, as compared with Deterding's pre-war figures.

"Production and exports for 1911, 1912, and 1913 were as follows, in tons:

	Kerosene & Lamp Oil	Liquid Fuel	Other Products	Total
1911
Production	1,558,300	5,028,000	1,543,300	8,129,600
Exports	449,000	85,200	290,900	825,100
Available for Internal Consumption	1,109,300	4,942,800	1,252,400	7,304,500
1912
Production	1,586,300	4,180,000	1,686,400	7,452,700
Exports	396,600	56,800	386,200	839,100
Available for Internal Consumption	1,189,700	4,123,700	1,300,200	6,613,600
1913
Production	1,562,200	4,126,000	1,822,300	7,510,500
Exports	440,000	116,800	390,900	947,700
Available for Internal Consumption	1,122,200	4,009,200	1,431,400	6,562,800

"The above official statistics are different from those presented by Sir Deterding. Not only are Deterding's figures inaccurate, but, what is much more important, they do not take into account the decrease in the territory and population of Russia since the war. The pre-war figures refer to the territory of the former Russian Empire. However, the present Soviet Union population is nearly 20 per cent smaller than the population of the Russian Empire in 1913. The share of Russian kerosene production consumed before the war by the now seceded territories was probably even larger than the 20 per cent, since those territories were of an industrial and urban character. In order to make possible a fair comparison with the present situation in the Soviet Union, the pre-war figures should therefore be reduced by at least 20 per cent. The resultant figure, showing the average quantity of kerosene and lamp oil available for home use in 1911, 1912, and 1913 is less than 900,000 metric tons.

"Production, exports, and the quantity of oil products made available for internal consumption for the years 1924-5 and 1925-6 are given by the Chief Statistical Administration of the Soviet Union as follows (in tons):

	Kerosene & Lamp Oil	Liquid Fuel	Other Products	Total
1924-5
Production	1,427,700	3,068,900	2,496,600	6,993,200
Exports	452,578	399,032	519,430	1,371,040
Available for Internal Consumption	975,122	2,669,868	1,977,170	5,622,160
1925-6
Production	1,860,700	3,754,900	2,628,600	8,244,200
Exports	439,201	358,354	675,656	1,473,211
Available for Internal Consumption	1,421,499	3,396,546	1,952,944	6,770,989

"The above table shows the quantities of kerosene and lamp oil made available for internal consumption during 1924-5 and 1925-6 as 975,122 and 1,421,499 metric tons, respectively.

"Both figures exceed the pre-war average, the latter by as much as 60 per cent.

"It must be stated that while during 1924-5 and 1925-6 total oil production in the Soviet Union was still below the pre-war level, during the present year oil output it running higher than before the war. Therefore, Sir Henri Deterding's concern for the Russian consumer of oil at the present time will be even less appreciated than before.

Use Electricity Now.

"The statement that the Soviet Union would need to import oil from abroad in order to maintain its pre-war level of oil consumption, when made in the face of production greater than ever before, of lesser requirements on account of a decrease in population and, incidentally, in the face of a gain of about 150 per cent in the production of electric current, is obviously misleading.

"Sir Henri Deterding takes great pleasure in mentioning an official Moscow newspaper in support of his claim regarding a shortage of kerosene in the Soviet Union. The item in the "Economic Life" is shown, upon analysis, to refer principally to the shortage of salt brought about by certain difficulties in the distribution system. Regarding kerosene is states that 'kerosene is not being sold on the Moscow bazaars on account of the fire hazard. However, in local stores it is being sold without any increase in price.' No special committee to investigate the causes of the shortage was created. What actually took place was that the Moscow Trade Department was urged to make an investigation of the quantity of kerosene on hand and of the compliance with standard prices in village stores.

"It is perfectly obvious from the above that Sir Deterding's so-called 'shortage of kerosene' refers to certain local and temporary breaks in the distribution of kerosene in village stores around Moscow, and not to any permanent shortage of kerosene caused by excessive exports, as Sir Henri Deterding is at pains to show.

"In conclusion it is only proper to state that, whatever Mr. Deterding may say, the Soviet Union is in a position, in virtue of its tremendous oil resources and large investments in the industry to continue increasing both the exports and the internal consumption of oil products."

BOOKS

CIRCUS PARADE. By Jim Tully. Illustrated by William Gro and Charles Boni, New York City. $2.50.

A STORY of Jim Tully's experience with a small circus. Tull ered one of our best hoboes but the die-hards who scorn t rooms of liberal high society speak lightly of his hoboism. Yet I opinion that Tully tells of the road, graphically, interestingly a fully. Artists rarely speak well of each other, particularly whe hungry. The competition is too keen and unless an artist loves for its own sake, he must be an expert trombone tooter to get b beans and maintain his artistic soul in its pristine purity.

The great majority of the populace that hews to the three-square- and-a-bed diet, must have their little vices by proxy and the clever un ventionalist who knwos his mulligan can afford an apartment in the Vill by catering to the demand. Tully's book contains as fine a collection rascals as one would not like to meet except in front of a cannon.

One day voluntarily spent with the outfit would be enough for any romantic appetite. Of course the animals were there. But even the animals did not seem to be any better than the circus folks from the boss down. The boss got most of the gravy but once in a while a fellow, bolder and dopier and quicker on the draw cleaned up on the boss and walked away with his money. Just like the big gyps in the more legitimate business world!

The most interesting feature of any book is the author. Tho one does not see as much of the author in a book of tales as in a novel where somebody is laboriously trying to picture the emotional reactions of a couple engaged in struggling with each other in the holy bonds of wedlock. In a book on a circus even the poorest of authors can make a good showing by letting one of the lions kill his trainer or having an elephant get a colic and roll over the strong woman. Most of those stories look alike to me. It seems that I heard them from my mother when I was ten years old and the beasts were performing in Ireland. But what is to stop a lion or an elephant from doing the same thing in the United States, particularly when the trainer is unusually drunk and the strong woman's lover ran away with her dough?

But whether things happen or not if they are recorded interestingly and plausibly what's the difference to the tired customer?

Tully gives one the impression of being tired of life tho I understand he publicly admitted his admiration for Pola Negri and anybody who can summon up enough energy to admire that Volcano is not liable to be mistaken for a graveyard deserter. He is too intelligent to hug bourgeois society as a whole but it is more pleasant to figuratively hug some of them in their chosen haunts than to be obliged to patronize Dan O'Brien's "Tub" on the Bowery.

Tully's father was either a bricklayer or a hodcarrier or something in the building trades line. Tully ran away early in life and being a lazy fellow naturally followed a circus. His present status is further proof that a crop of callouses on your palms or warts under your skull are not necessarily a diploma to success. I have rarely seen a hardworking, conscientious youth amount to much except as a wage slave.

"Circus Parade" is dedicated to: "H. L. Mencken; George Jean Nathan; Donald Freeman; James Cruze and Frederick Palmer, civilized comrades in the circus of life." This looks to me like a neat bit of back-scratching. Some of those "civilized comrades" are big literary guns and others are in the moving picture game.

Those fellows regard life as a circus and take substantially the same attitude towards the working class that a circus boss takes to the yokels who are inveighled in to see a nude woman dance in the sideshow. They are to be fleeced since they can be fleeced. But there is more fun in the teaching them how to fleece the fleecers than merely sitting back and describing the show.

ANOTHER MAGAZINE WITH A MISSION.

FREE VERSE, is a little quarterly magazine of what it says it is with a home address at 185-a Vernon Avenue, Brooklyn, New York. Elsie Shwarcz, at the above address will gladly accept contributions to this little adventurer. It contains poems by several poets of repute including Henry Reich Jr., who contributes frequently to The DAILY WORKER.

It would be a pleasant and easy to get funny with this little magazine by quoting from it but we have had a few unprofitable experiences with the bovine-minded sleuths who look after the public morals, so we shall refrain. But we make the suggestion free of charge that many of those young poets who send contributions to The DAILY WORKER should try their stuff out on "Free Verse." All are cordially invited to contribute, it says. In conclusion we quote the noble purpose of the magazine: "This quarterly will try to be a medium for the experimental, a laboratory for the unusual and a gesture to save the youngest generation from conventional strangulation."

This is the third installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committe of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

6. The Chinese revolution is of enormous significance for the world proletariat. The victory of the workers and peasants in the Chinese revolution would serve as a mighty stimulus in revolutionizing the world labor movement and especially the working class of Great Britain. It would, as a result lead to the movement rising to as yet unknown heights in the chief capitalist countries. The objective, revolutionary conditions would be created for profound mass movements through the world. At the same time if the proletariat proves powerless to extricate revolutionary China from the imperialist noose, then the victory of imperialism in China would imply, firstly, a fresh temporary consolidation of the capitalist system throughout the world, secondly, extreme reaction against the working class in the imperialist countries, thirdly, and finally, the onslaught of the imperialist bloc upon the Soviet Union. The fight against imperialist suppression of the Chinese revolution is therefore at the same time a war of self-defense of the European, American and Japanese working class against the capitalist offensive and a fight against war in Europe and for the victory of social revolution in these countries.

7. The new phase of imperialist policy is characterized by the fact that capitalism is about to pass over from the stage of "little" wars to that of great wars. The war in China, although at the moment recalling in its form the intervention in Soviet Russia of 1918-19, opens up a new period of great wars. In its international significance the intervention of the imperialist forces in China is already a great war. It is a great war because it is being conducted by the great capitalist states under the leadership of Britain against 400 million toilers of China. With it is connected the fate of four continents—Asia, Europe, America and Australia. It will inevitably develop into fresh wars, unless it is suppressed at the very outset.

This war is already developing into a war against the Soviet Union. The language employed by the British conservative press against the Soviet Union recalls the language of a country already at war. In international capitalist relations such acts, like the raid on the Soviet Embassy in Peking, the arrest of diplomatic couriers, the raid on the Soviet Union Delegation in London, are met with repressive measures pregnant with war. It is only the peace policy of the Soviet government consciously bent towards this end, that has so far saved the toiling masses of Great Britain and the Soviet Union from this anti-Soviet war, in spite of the systematic provocation of Great Britain.

8. But this war, like a patch of oil on the water, threatens to spread to the whole of Asia and the Pacific coast:

(a).—It is quite evident that the victory of the workers and peasants in the Chinese revolution would give rise to desperate attempts on the part of the imperialists to crush the victorious movement of the toiling masses of China, and those revolutionary movements which would be called forth in India, French Indo-China, Indonesia, in the Philippines and Korea. This would be a prolonged great war of the combined bloc of the imperialists of the great capitalist countries against the insurgent toiling masses of Asia, under the leadership of revolutionary China.

(b).—On the other hand, a defeat of the Chinese revolution would stimulate the antagonisms between Britain, Japan and the United States in China and would inevitably lead to a war between these imperialist powers in the Pacific.

9. Closely connected with the war in China are also the efforts to encircle the Soviet Union at other points on the European and Asiatic continents. British diplomacy is incessantly striving to create a united anti-Soviet Baltic front, stretching from Finland through Poland to Roumania. It endeavors to draw in Lithuania by organizing a fascist coup d'etat. Through the medium of fascist Italy it is striving to strengthen its position in the Balkans and to draw Hungary into the anti-Soviet coalition. By this it calculates on establishing a sufficiently wide anti-Soviet front on the Danube. One of the most active roles in this anti-Soviet front is to be played by Poland, but it must, in the event of war, secure its rear. Therefore British imperialism is exerting every effort to include Germany in its sphere of influence and to regulate German-Polish relations for the purpose of a joint attack on the Soviet Union.

WORKERS OF PARIS PLAN TO HONOR ASHES OF VANZETTI AT ANTI-LEGION DEMONSTRATION

PLAN MASS MEMORIAL FOR SACCO, VANZETTI AT BOSTON ON SUNDAY

Thousands of Workers to Follow Bodies of Labor's Martyrs to Crematory

BOSTON, Aug. 25.—The bodies of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will be carried thru the streets of Boston on the shoulders of friends next Sunday afternoon prior to their cremation.

Thousands of workers are expected to follow the coffins at that time despite the fact that only 200 "official" mourners are permitted by a city ordinance in the absence of a permit to parade.

Police Bully Hall-Owners.

Police here have succeeded in intimidating owners of halls from renting a place where the bodies of the two murdered men could be viewed. Meanwhile, a constant stream of workers gathered at the little undertaking shop of Joseph Lagone on Hanover street today to pay tribute to the framed-up victims.

Scores of workers were from nearby cities and towns, and hour by hour the gathering grew in size.

Guards of Honor Chosen.

Police were called to the little funeral chapel to keep workers from demonstrating.

Day and night guards of honor were chosen from among workers to stand at attention at the head of each bier.

Can't Get Hall.

The little funeral parlor had to be used because the committee in charge was balked by the Massachusetts murderers in every attempt to hire a hall for the purpose.

The bodies will remain in the chapel until Sunday afternoon. At that time a speaker of national prominence will deliver a funeral oration.

Workers Pour Into Boston.

From the chapel the bodies will be conveyed to North End Park, from which will start across the city a "march of sorrow."

Later, following cremation, the ashes of Sacco will be turned over to his widow. The ashes of Vanzetti will be carried to New York and thence home to Italy by his sister, under present tentative plans. A tour of the country by a delegation carrying the ashes of both was still under discussion.

Extra police details today were ordered out for Sunday afternoon as a large influx of workers from surrounding cities and towns was expected to view the funeral procession.

It was announced today that the Harvard Medical School has the brains of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Writes to Prof. Dana.

In a letter to Prof. Dana of the new School of Social Research in New York city, Vanzetti, just twelve hours before he died, said the thing he wished more than all else was that "our case and our fate may be understood in their real being and serve as a tremendous lesson to the forces of freedom—so that our suffering and death will not have been in vain."

"CLASS STRUGGLE INTENSIFIED BY MURDER," PRAVDA

Attacks on Meetings Sharpen Conflict

MOSCOW, Aug. 25.—Pravda points out that after the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti the campaign of protest against this cruelty of the American bourgeoisie not only did not weaken but its strength actually increased.

The Paris events have exceptional political international importance, representing as they do the greatest revolutionary street conflict of workmen and bourgeoisie that has occurred in France many years.

The movement of protest is ever penetrating reformist circles, the intellectual petty bourgeoisie and the rank and file of the population.

Communist Leadership.

The motives of this protest are sometimes quite different. Many circles are participating in it out of purely pacifist motives. But its large proportions and the variety of elements composing it prove that in bourgeois countries there is discontent with the terrorist tendencies of capital in its war on workers and has the deepest social roots extending itself not solely in the proletarian ranks. But the hegemon of the movement belongs of course to the revolutionary proletarian Communist elements.

International Class War.

The bourgeoisie of all countries are advancing therefore in a more or less united front against the movement: in some places with great energy. This results in class warring against class on an international scale.

Such is even now the chief result of the campaign of protest carried on against the execution.

Communists must not for one single instant relax this movement. The latter is and will later on become in a yet more serious stage the way of leading to a victory of the international revolution.

Portugese Workers to Hold Protest Meetings

LISBON, Aug. 25.—The Workers' Syndicate has passed a resolution denouncing the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and is preparing to hold a demonstration. The government is trying every means to prevent action by the Portuguese workers.

U. S. FLAGSHIP SHELLS CHINESE TOWNS ON RIVER

No Attempt to Discover How Many Killed

SHANGHAI, Aug. 25.—American naval officers, who have been having a dull time since their slaughter of Chinese at Nanking, had a little recreation yesterday when the U. S. S. Isabel, flagship of Admiral Hough, deliberately ran into a battle between the Nanking army and the army of Sun Chuan-fang. These two bodies of troops were firing across the river, and bullets hit the Isabel, which then fired into densely populated villages on both sides with its heavy armament. The number of Chinese killed is not known. No investigation was made. One American sailor is said to have been wounded.

Northerners Advance, May Attack Shanghai.

With the northern troops of General Sun Chuan-fang only 50 miles from here today, a battle for the possession of Shanghai, prize customs-collecting port in China, appeared imminent, with both land forces and the Chinese navy participating.

Tungchow, a river port on the Yangtse River, 50 miles from Shanghai, was captured today by General Cheng Chun-yeen, commander of Sun Chuan-fang's eleventh army, who is now reported to be planning an attack on Liuho as the start of his advance overland on Shanghai.

The Nanking forces have 9,000 troops concentrated at Liuho, and were rushing reinforcements there today.

Admiral Sells Out.

General Chow Feng-chi, former Sun Chuan-fang commander who turned Nationalist, has switched sides again and so has Admiral Yang Shu-chwang, commander of the nineteen Nanking warships. Yang Shu-chwang is reported to have sold out to the northerners for $500,000.

Another Earthquake.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Ten persons were killed and a hundred or more were injured today by an earthquake which damaged a section of the city of Tsinan, China, accordnig to a Central News dispatch from Tokyo.

Chinese Ask Boycott Of United States for Sacco-Vanzetti Murder

SHANGHAI, Aug. 25. — The Chinese Federation of Revolting Youths today attacked the United States for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Pamphlets were distributed along the Nanking Road denouncing "the unreasonable execution of two of the proletariat," and urged "the proletariat of the world to rise up and avenge the death sentences."

The pamphlets called upon the Chinese workers "manifest their feelings by boycotting United States goods."

Japanese Get Realism Into War Practice; Kill 118 Naval Men

TOKYO, Aug. 25.—One hundred and eighteen Japanese sailors are missing in the smash-up of four warships during night maneuvers, official bulletin disclosed today.

Ninety members of the crew and the commander of the Destroyer Warabi were officially reported lost when the Warabi sank to the bottom after colliding with the Cruiser Jintsu. Twenty-seven hands on the Destroyer Ashi were also unaccounted for and are feared to be dead in the collision of the Ashi with the Battleship Naka.

On board the Naka was Imperial Prince Fushimi. He was saved.

The double collision is believed to have occurred during maneuvers in a smoke screen early today. The disaster halted the naval exercises off Mihozeki.

Kellogg Insists There Is No Naval Agreement Between Britain, Japan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The state department today issued the usual official denial that there is any foundation for the report of a secret navy agreement existing between Great Britain and Japan, as exposed today in a story printed in the Washington Post.

Byrd Leaves for Toronto.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Commander Richard E. Byrd, accompanied by Maurice Bokanowski, French minister of commerce and aviation, hopped off from here at 8.15 o'clock this morning for Toronto.

WALKER DODGING ABOUT BERLIN TO AVOID PROTESTS

Workers Remind Him of Murdered Sacco

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—Heavy police guards, many of them in plain clothes so they can mingle with the crowds and thus avoid embarrassing the government by their numbers, are assigned to Mayor Walker during his stay in Berlin.

The German proletariat is so determined to show its resentment over the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti that if it were not for the ingenuity of the mayor's guides and guards in dodging him around thru back alleys, and up side streets when he wishes to leave his monarchist hotel, he would probably get a shower of bricks as a welcome.

Hid In Menagerie.

One clever trick practiced on the entry of the mayor into Berlin was to have him avoid the reception committees at the main station on Friedrichstrasse by getting off at the zoo. In the zoo the mayor seems to have been quite safe, and waiting automobiles rushed him from there to the American embassy, and then during the dark, to the Hotel Ehre.

Monarchist Friends Attacked.

The flag war continued to rage about Mr. Walker unabated today. As a result of the big hotels persistent refusal to fly the German republican flag, and the refusal of the lord mayor of Berlin to attend any function in a hotel which does not fly the republican flag. The Prussian state government joined with the Berlin city authorities today in boycotting the dinner to be given to Mayor Walker at the Kasier-Hoff Hotel this evening by the American Club of Berlin.

The German National Government, however, will be represented by Secretary of State Schubert, officially representing Foreign Minister Stresemann. President Hindenburg and his officials are more than suspected of monarchism, anyway.

U. S. Ambassador Dodges.

The "flag war" brought a suggestion from the republican newspapers today that American Ambassador

MEMORIAL FOR MARTYRED WORKERS URGED AGAINST FASCIST FESTIVITIES

Drive to Bar Legion Spreads Rapidly in Spite of Poincaré Government's Edict

PARIS, Aug. 25.—The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of France has asked that the ashes of Vanzetti be brought to Paris September 19th, the date of the opening of the American Legion convention.

September 19th has been announced by the committee as a day of mourning for the murdered men and the ashes will be used in the demonstrations against the American Legion, which has repeatedly applauded the murder of the two workers.

L'Humanite this morning says: "The working classes of Paris never will forget that the American Legion, after congratulating Fuller for his crime, caused the blood to flow of several hundred Parisians."

PLAN TO BAR LEGION.

Plans to prevent the convention of the American Legion on September 19th are going ahead despite the Minister of Interior Sarraut's intention to permit both the Legion parade and convention. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has crystallized anti-American as well as anti-capitalist feeling and the campaign to bar the Legion from Paris is rapidly gaining support from all quarters.

The yelp of approval arising from American Legion posts thruout the country when the two framed-up workers were murdered, described in L'Humanite, Communist paper, has accelerated the move to keep the Legion from parading in Paris. The resolution adopted by the Kirby Stewart Post praising Governor Fuller and other Massachusetts officials "for their conduct in the Sacco-Vanzetti affair in the face of the opposition by foreign elements" is quoted in L'Humanite.

South Africans Burn U. S. Flag as Murder Protest; Will Boycott

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 25.—The American flag has been burned here on the steps of the City Hall by a meeting of hundreds of workers who had gathered to protest against the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti. Boycott of all American goods is urged as the expression of the solidarity of the South African working class with the American workers.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE IN GREATER ORGANIZATION CAMPAIGN

Calls Attention to Mooney Case, Centralia Case; Warns of Cheswick Frame-up

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—The nation-wide campaign of organization to fight the frame-up system of which the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti was a part, was called for today in a manifesto issued by the Executive Committee of the International Labor Defense which played a leading part in the protest movement in behalf of the two labor leaders.

The manifesto draws attention to the case of Mooney and Billings and other class-war prisoners who have been victimized under the frame-up system, and warns against the preparation of new persecutions against the workers. Particular attention is called to the arrests of more than twenty miners in Pennsylvania in connection with the breaking up of a protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti when more than a score of workers were wounded and one state trooper was killed.

Reciting the work done by International Labor Defense, the manifesto shows the part it has played in providing legal defense for hundreds of workers, in organizing protest movements, giving publicity to cases and providing material support for class-war prisoners and their dependents. It calls for the broadening and exten-

HAMBURG LABOR HALTS ATTACK ON SACCO MEMORIAL

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 25. — Workers erected barricades across street car lines here late last night when police attempted to break up a huge Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration.

One policeman was killed and a number of workers wounded as the result of the police attack. A shower of stones greeted the police when they moved on the demonstration wielding their clubs.

Opening fire on the demonstrators with their pistols, the police wounded many of them.

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—More than 40,000 workers demonstrated before the imperial castle here last night to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

I. L. D. ARRANGES SACCO-VANZETTI MEMORIAL MEETS THRUOUT NATION

CHICAGO, Aug. 25. — Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meetings thruout the country are today announced by the national office of the International Labor Defense. Hundreds of thousands of workers are expected to attend meetings on Sunday and Monday.

Memorial meetings so far arranged by the International Labor Defense or united front committees will be held at Milwaukee, Monday; Philadelphia, Sunday; Cleveland, Saturday; Pittsburgh, Sunday; Buffalo, Sunday; Grand Rapids, Sunday.

Other meetings are being arranged for New York, Monday, Chicago, Detroit, Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul. Prominent speakers will address the meetings.

WORKERS OF SOVIET UNION AROUSED OVER MURDER OF SACCO, VANZETTI

Resolutions Link Up Boston Execution With Capitalist Drive On Workers' Republic

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 25.—The protest movement in the different towns of the Union of Soviet Republics against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti has been a powerful manifestation of the international solidarity of the proletariat and an imposing demonstration of its loyalty towards the Comintern and the Communist Party of the U. S. S. R.

Call Workers to Organize.

At new meetings in Moscow, Leningrad and other towns, numerous orators gave a due estimation of the monstrous crime of the bourgeois hangmen and called the masses of toilers to join the ranks of the International Red Relief Society in order to take an active part in its work of defending the U. S S. R.

These slogans found a clear expression in the resolutions passed. Each factory found its own particular words for branding the murderers and calling all the workers of the world once more to raise a new storm of protest and to rally all ranks under the banner of the Comintern in the fight against the reformist traitors of all tendencies and ranks who took no steps whatever for the purpose of releasing Sacco and Vanzetti from their masters' clutch.

Thousands Demonstrate.

Over 200,000 workers took part in the Leningrad demonstrations. Posters called the international proletariat to an "unanimous strong protest against the cowardly murder and to the creation of a united front of the world proletariat."

On all ships and detachments of the Baltic fleet general meetings of the red sailors and their chiefs were held. All the Leningrad trading port had their flags lowered in sign of mourning.

Sadistic Torture.

An article in Pravda dealing with the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti says: "With the sadism characteristic of a degenerating class, Sacco and Vanzetti have been imprisoned seven years awaiting the tortures of the electric chair.

"Sacco and Vanzetti are partisans of anarchist views. But nothing can better refute their theories than their own fate. The revolutionary movement which is actually threatening capitalism does not consist of anarchist 'negation' of power, is no individual terror and is no passive 'refusal to deal with the state,' but is an unceasing struggle of the proletariat for power.

International Significance.

"Those who see no connection between the execution of these two American workers and all international reaction, as well as the present phases of the reactionary offensive against the proletariat, against the first labor state, and the Chinese Revolution, will never understand the political importance of the case of Sacco and Vanzetti, nor the political meaning of the struggle of the working class around the case.

There is only one conclusion to be drawn from it: the indignation of the proletariat must express itself not by declamation about the injustice and lack of objectivity of the American judges. The indignation of the proletariat must be directed into the channel of real proletarian struggle against the basis of capitalist domination.

Not the Last Martyrs.

"Sacco and Vanzetti are not the first martyrs for the proletarian cause. The future will show us still fiercer samples of bourgeois terror. To be ready to fight against this terror means to forge unceasingly the international unity of the proletariat on the basis of the struggle against the capitalist offensive, against the war danger, and the treachery cultivated by the leaders of the decayed Amsterdam and Second International.

"The impudent cruelty of the bourgeoisie will not meet due resistance if the forces of the international proletariat remain disunited, if the workers remain under the direction of the brokers and lackeys of the bourgeoisie who made no real step for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, but only screamed frantically when the defense blow of the U. S. S. R. descended on the white guardist heads.

War Danger.

"The proletariat of the U. S. S. R. which defended itself in the bloody struggle against the bourgeoisie well knows by experience what is the terror of the bourgeoisie when it is mad with fury.

"The proletariat of the U. S. S. R. feels the approaching thunderstorm of the imperialist war. It considers therefore that this execution in America is a link in the chain of the offensive by world capital

Walker Dodging About Berlin, Fears Workers

Schurmann invite Mayor Walker to live at the embassy while in Berlin and thus avoid stopping at a hotel which refuses to show the national flag. The embassy however, immediately denied any intention of following this suggestion.

There is something more than the mere pursuit of pleasure in Mayor Walker's dancing in the clubs and cabarets of Europe until the early hours of the morning, say the members of his troupe. The dapper mayor admitted as much today, asserting he is making a "scientific study of things" in Europe. Whether these things were all in the night life of the countries he is visiting, he did not say.

Asked what he thought of Berlin's "great white way," the mayor answered: "Well, I am in Europe to study things scientifically. I haven't had time yet to form a judgment."

"How do you like the speed and rythm of German jazz?" he was asked.

"Oh, that depends on what street you are on," Mr. Walker replied.

Mayor Jimmy slept until noon today, keeping a crowd of newspaper reporters waiting for several hours to interview him. He seemed to be a little under the weather, anyway, and during the afternoon rejected all hard liquor to drink copiously of lager beer instead.

Secretary of War Threatens Chicago With Water Famine

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Major General Charles P. Summerall, acting secretary of war, today virtually served notice on Chicago that its permit to divert Lake Michigan water would be cancelled if the city council ratifies the finance committee recommendation that the water meter ordinance be repealed.

"The position of the department in regard to metering and for failure to make provision therefore is expressed in the withdrawal permit of March 3, 1925 and has not been changed," said a telegram from General Summerall to Alderman Ross A. Woodhull.

The permit specifies Chicago will be forbidden the use of lake water unless it follows instructions, and puts in meters. Those who have to pay the increased price for water which always follows in every city the installation of meters sees collusion between General Summerall and meter manufacturers, perhaps also with the city government.

I.L.D. DEFENDS FOURTEEN MINERS FROM CHESWICK

Some Released; Punish Some With Heavy Bail

OAKMONT, Pa., Aug. 25. — Fourteen workers, mostly striking miners, one with a broken arm, another with a bandaged eye, appeared before Justice of the Peace Blair here last night on charges growing out of the attempt of the state police to break up the Sacco-Vanzetti protest meeting in Cheswick.

The defendants were represented by Allen Davis, attorney for the International Labor Defense. All of the workers were charged originally with "unlawful assembly" and "inciting to riot."

Five thousands dollars bail was demanded for each. Several hundred sympathizers gathered outside the police station while the cases were heard. A heavy guard of state police was thrown around the station.

Peaceful Until Police Attack.

Attorney Davis questioned the state troopers as to the methods used to disperse the Cheswick meeting but they refused to answer. It was established, however, that no written orders to stop the meeting were issued and that it was entirely peaceful until the police began using tear-gas bombs and clubs.

Charges against a number of the workers were dismissed after seven hours of legal wrangling. The rest were held for trial and released on bail which was furnished.

Heavy Bail.

John Bernbei was held in five thousand dollars bail because he had asked police: "Why cannot taxpayers and citizens hold a meeting?" Steve Kurepa was held in three thousand dollars bail and Ercole Morreti's bail was fixed at two thousand because he said that he had been wounded in the world war and saw no reason why the meeting should be stopped. All others had bail fixed at five hundred dollars.

I. L. D. Organizes Meetings.

Several other workers are held in county jail in default of five thousand dollar bail which will be furnished today.

The International Labor Defense is arranging several protest meetings. One is to be held in East Pittsburgh Saturday night, at the Workers Home, one in Pittsburgh Sunday night at the Labor Lyceum and others will follow.

Club and Arrest Women Pickets.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Aug. 25 — The picket line established by wives and daughters of striking miners here around the Florence mine was charged by deputy sheriffs led by Sheriff Hardesty and a number of the women pickets clubbed and arrested when they tried to persuade fifteen scabs from going into the mine.

Parade To Pomeroy.

ATHENS, Ohio, August 25. — Reports here from Glouster state that about 500 locked out union miners gathered early today and started an automobile parade to Pomeroy, where mines are trying to work with scab labor.

It is reported here that Ora L. Daugherty, president of the Buchtel subdistrict tried to stop the parade because of the heavy machine gun armament which the operators have accumulated in the Hocking Valley district, and the probability that there will be an attack on the miners. The men believed it to be their duty however, to make an attempt to stop the scabbing in Pomeroy.

PENN WORKERS TO ATTEND FOREIGN BORN CONFERENCE

Preparations for the Pennsylvania state conference of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers to be held at Harrisburg Sept. 4-5 indicate that many trade unions will be represented, according to Nina Samordin, national secretary when interviewed yesterday at her office, 41 Union Square.

"Credentials are being received from scores of local unions," she said. "Many locals of the United Mine Workers, cigarmakers, building trades workers and steel workers have already sent in their credentials. Several large central labor bodies will also be present. Sept. 4 when the first session starts will see present a most representative group of delegates.

Will Last Two Days.

The conference will last two days, Sept. 4 and 5. It will close with a large mass meeting. Among the speakers at the meeting will be James E. Kelly, secretary of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor and Charles Kutz, president of the Pennsylvania Labor Party. Joseph Dean, national president of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers will preside. According to Miss Samordin, a dinner for the delegates will be held on September 4.

Workers Must Understand Role of the Socialists in the Sacco-Vanzetti Martyrdom

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IT is certain that the working class of the United States did not do enough in its struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair. The fact that our two comrades are dead is proof enough.

There will be, and should be, much discussion as to whether much more could have been done with the militant forces at present available, and with the working class of this country in its present state of mind.

The immediate goal of this struggle was set forth in the slogan, "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Be Freed!"

Mass demonstrations, short strikes, petitions, adoption of resolutions by the various labor organizations over the land, the sending of protest telegrams to Governor Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, and other members of the crew of official murderers, in addition to the wide distribution of literature, constituted the program of liberation. It was not an over-ambitious program. It was one around which all thinking workers could mobilize, drawing in hosts of less class conscious elements.

Any organization or individual that cried "Enough!" before the sum total of that program had been carried out, must stand convicted as allies of the executioners of our two comrades.

The mass demonstrations and the short strikes were, to be sure, the most ambitious parts of this program. It was on the edge of both of these efforts that the Socialist sector of labor's battlefront for Sacco and Vanzetti crumpled up and melted away.

The actual words, "It is enough to hold a meeting in the Scenic Auditorium. It is not necessary to hold another demonstration on Boston Common," came from the lips of a prominent socialist in Boston, on the Sunday preceding the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti.

This socialist, let his name be forgotten, evidently felt that the face of the socialist party, if not of the working class, could be saved with an indoor meeting, even tho our two comrades went to their doom.

Here one finds contrasted very clearly the two views in the struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the grip of their official murderers:

FIRST:—To do everything possible, within the means and the power of the working class in its present stage of development.

SECOND:—To do just "Enough!" so that an argument can be advanced against any charges that not enough was attempted or accomplished.

Foremost among those who were carefully doing just enough to save their faces, as they thought, were the officials of the American Federation of Labor, Green, Woll, Tobin & Co. But they never did come out as champions of Sacco and Vanzetti. For this they will have to answer.

But the socialists really tried to parade themselves as the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti. Yet from the start they revealed their duplicity. They refused to join the united front of labor, instead causing everywhere a divided front of the workers. They turned their faces against mass demonstrations, the instance of last Sunday on Boston Common being only one among many. They opposed the strike.

It may be said that the demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti took on greater proportions than anything of the kind yet attempted in the whole history of American labor. Repeatedly the workers in New York marched to the city hall in the face of police attack. Elsewhere they did the same, especially in Detroit, where the open air demonstration in Cadillac Square was held under the direction of the Detroit Federation of Labor. Socialists oppose such struggles in the streets, substituting instead the polite forms of indoor gatherings.

Instead of joining the strike movement on the day that Sacco and Vanzetti were condemned to burn at midnight, they sent another committee to plead with Governor Fuller, cynical spokesman of the capitalist class that fears but one attack,—the threat to its economic power. Instead of aiding this attack on the capitalist class, the socialists denounced the strike as a Communist effort, thus playing into the hands of the black reaction.

The traitor role of the socialist party in the Sacco-Vanzetti case stands in startling contrast to the courageous fight led by Eugene V. Debs in the drive for the liberation of Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood, officials of the Western Federation of Labor, whom the great mine owners more than twenty years ago sought to drag upon the gallows of the state of Idaho, there to put them to death.

Debs bitterly excoriated every yellow traitor in the Moyer-Pettibone-Haywood fight, hitting hard at "labor leaders that cringe before the plutocracy and do its bidding."

Debs made his appeal to the American working class, on March 10, 1906, in an article entitled, "Arouse Ye Slaves!" that appeared in the Appeal to Reason, not an organ of the socialist party. In fact, at that time the socialist party had no central organ. Debs declared:

"The governors of Idaho and Colorado say they have the proof to convict. They are brazen falsifiers and venal villains, the miserable tools of the mine owners who, themselves, if anybody, deserve the gibbet."

And again:

"Personally and intimately do I know Moyer, Pettibone, Haywood, St. John and their official co-workers, and I will stake my life on their honor and integrity; and that is precisely the crime for which, according to the words of the slimy 'sleuth' who 'worked up the case' against them, 'they shall never leave the state alive.'

"Well . . . if they don't the, governors of Idaho and Colorado and their masters from Wall Street, New York, to the Rocky Mountains had better prepare to follow them."

Another extract was as follows:

"Nearly 20 years ago the capitalist tyrants put some innocent men to death for standing up for labor. They are now going to try it again. Let them dare!

"There have been 20 years of revolutionary education, agitation and organization since the Haymarket tragedy, and if an attempt is made to repeat it, there will be a revolution and I will do all in my power to precipitate it."

In conclusion Debs urged:

"A special revolutionary convention of the proletariat at Chicago, or some other central point, would be in order, and, if extreme measures are required, a general strike could be ordered and industry paralyzed as a preliminary to a general uprising. If the plutocrats begin the program, we will end it."

Here Debs expressed his great faith in the fighting qualities of the working class. It is not to his discredit that he overemphasized the power of American labor to struggle in 1906, more than 21 years ago. Suffice it to say that Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood were freed.

In contrast is the utter lack of faith in the workers, shown today by the small coterie of socialist leaders, especially those who have a slippery foothold in the trade unions as they hang onto the coat tails of the worst reactionaries.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case has again shown that the Communist movement has fallen heir to all the revolutionary traditions of the American working class, that the best revolutionary elements are joining its ranks. Rallying thus, American labor will be better able to battle for the Saccos and the Vanzettis in the dark days ahead that lead to the dawning day of final victory.

Warsaw Workers Try To Free Communists; Cops Smash Protest

WARSAW, Aug. 25.—Mounted police yesterday beat of an attempt of the workers to liberate the Communists who are imprisoned in the Pawiak jail. The workers resisted but were unequal to the armed police. Later the police attacked a huge crowd which was holding a demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti in front of the American legation here. As the marchers filed past the United States official building the police guard charge with swords and clubs

SCORES HURT AS PARIS DRAGOONS FIRE ON CROWDS

GunsTurned on Throngs Who Dared to Protest

PARIS, Aug. 25.—Paris police terrorism reached a high point last night when the gendarmes fired on a column of several hundred marching workers in the Boulevard Sebastopol. The unarmed workers dispersed under the fire from the cops and the police charge. Many are reported injured. This was the last of the outrages committed last night by the government against the workers for their protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Huge Crowds Orderly.

But thousands of police continued to patrol the boulevards of Paris and thousands more thrown about the United States embassy and the Arc de Triomphe, the French government did everything it its power to terrorize the huge mourning crowds which again surged thru the streets in ominous protest for the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

But there were no further outbreaks in the course of the night since the police did not attack and the masses quietly demonstrated in thousands along the streets, gathering as on the night before at the Porte St. Martin and the Boulevard Sebastopol. The lines of silent mounted Gardes Republicaines drawn up on either side of the boulevard failed to intimidate the marching throngs.

Altho excitement is still at fever heat while the surging crowds make Paris at night like daytime Paris, no further violence is anticipated if the police do not attack.

The French bourgeoisie is making every effort to capitalize the workers' resistance to the police brutality and M. Chiappe is demanding that police equipment be strengthened as the present force has been proved insufficient to terrorize the workers into submission. He has demanded new motor lorries as the quickest means of transporting police reserves for action against the workers. "Next time," said Chiappe in his official statement, "we shall be ready for them in every way."

Americans Fleeing.

American tourists in Paris are becoming terrified at the workers' demonstrations and are reported streaming out of the City. American officials are still in hiding behind the police guns and swords as the French constabulary continues its vigil at the United States embassy.

Communists Appeal From Jail.

Doriot, Marty and Cachin, leaders of the French Communist Party who were imprisoned recently in the white terror raids on the French Party have demanded from prison that Poincare allow them to interpellate the government upon the impossibility of holding a national fete in Paris Sept. 17 when the American Legion will be in the city.

St. Louis Police Slug and Arrest Woman at Meeting

(By Daily Worker Correspondent.)

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—Hundreds were beaten and slugged when police here charged a Sacco and Vanzetti meeting which was being held in the Labor Lyceum at 1243 N. Garrison Ave.

The meeting followed a parade which, beginning at Grand Street and Washington Avenue, passed thru the center of the city, hundreds joining it during the procession.

In front of the old courthouse the crowd attempted to hold a meeting which the police dispersed but the marchers went on to the Labor Lyceum.

Three Loads of Police.

While the meeting was in progress here, three wagons of police rolled up and the officers charged into the hall beating men and women with their clubs. The speaker was pulled off the platform and when the crowd resisted, the police brutality increased. Women were slugged to the floor and beaten on the ground. Mary Scriftman was beaten unconscious for protesting against the actions of the police and when she revived was arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace.

'END OCCUPATION,' SAYS GERMAN TO PARLIAMENT CLUB

French Senator's Pious Nothings Tested

PARIS, Aug. 25. — The twenty-fourth annual conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Union opened at 10 o'clock this morning in the Luxembourg Palace, with Paul Doumer, president of the French senate presiding.

President Doumer greeted the delegates in the name of France and expressed the hope that their labors at this conference would rebound to the benefit of all man-kind.

The delegates had scarcely become seated when Paul Loebe, president of the German Reichstag made a plea for immediate evacuation of the Rhineland by the troops of occupation.

"Two peoples can not continue to live in good relations to each other if one exercises a military domination over the other," Herr Loebe declared, adding the hope that January 1, 1928 would not find a single French soldier remaining on German soil.

Four other important questions are on the agenda for discussion. They are: International drug traffic; creation on an European customs entente; disarmament; and methods for the codification of international law.

Today's sessions were devoted to a discussion of the report of the general secretary. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held daily until next Tuesday, with the exception of Sunday, which most of the delegates will devote to sightseeing.

Among the delegates present were several women, members of the parliaments of their respective countries.

Protest Strikes Tie Up Mexico City By Day and Night

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25.—Bells tolled and whistles blew at eleven o'clock yesterday as the signal for the hour general strike in protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Busses, coaches, trains and street cars ceased running and not a wheel turned in the factories as the workers unanimously responded to the call of the Mexican Federation of Labor (Crom) and downed their tools

The general strike of night workers occurred at eleven p. m. and lasted till midnight. The strikers gathered in huge crowds together with thousands of Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers while speakers described how the two innocent workers fell victim to American capitalism.

Our Letter from Australia

Anti-Labor Cabinet Falls.

MELBOURNE, Australia.—Arising out of the general elections, held in the State of Victoria on April 9, the anti-Labor party was unable to form a government to meet parliament. The Labor Party thereupon formed a government headed by Mr. E. J. Hogan as premier. It has the support of some Farmer Party members. One of the government's first actions when sworn in on May 21 was to start finding work for the unemployed.

Industrial Unions.

Summing up the work of the All-Australian Trade Union congress, held in Melbourne during the first week of May, it seems that the method of industrial organization to be adopted in Australia will be organization on the lines of class and industry. The policy of the organization will be controlled and directed by an annual conference and in the interim by a national council, representing the industrial organizations throughout Australia.

Fear was expressed by many delegates at the conference that this method of organization would place too much power in the hands of a few, but this was replied too effectively by other delegates who pointed out that the power in the hands of a few was not nearly as great a danger as the lack of power and coordination which existed under the present form of industrial organization. It was pointed out also that the annual all-Australia Industrial Conference would decide the policy of the Labor movement from year to year and this policy would have to be carried out by the national industrial councils.

There is a definite determination on the part of the industrial organizations to obtain some control over the political party. Possibly this will be the battleground of the Australian labor movement in the near future.

The most important decision of the congress was the motion, carried almost unanimously to establish One Big Union in Australia.

MEXICAN AND ARGENTINE LABOR PLAN U. S. BOYCOTT TO PROTEST MURDER

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25. — A boycott of goods produced in the United States as a protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti was urged in a resolution introduced last night at a session of the Mexican Regional Federation of Labor. The resolution was introduced by the Vera Cruz delegation.

Street car, telephone and taxicab service were completely tied up in Mexico City last night for one hour when labor declared a general strike to protest against the murder.

More than 7,000 workers participated in a demonstration at Puebla last night, according to reports received here.

BUENOS AYRES, Aug. 25. — A nation-wide boycott of American goods is being organized by labor federations here to protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti execution.

Despite the law which prohibits the advertisement of boycotts, the movement is growing rapidly. Organized labor is solidly back of the movement.

The anti-American feeling here stirred up by the murder is greater than it has been at any time in the history of Argentina.

Anti-Imperialists Greet Pan-African World Gathering

Anti-Imperialist organizations of the world meeting at Cologne, Germany, have sent a cablegram to the Pan African Congress that closed its congress here on Wednesday. It was transmitted to William Pickens one of the most militant delegates present.

The cablegram reads as follows: "In name of Negro organizations of French and British colonies, the executive committee of the International League against Imperialism in session in Cologne conveys greetings of wholehearted solidarity to the Pan African Congress. We pledge support to the historical fight for world-wide emancipation of Negroes and against race discrimination. We hope that the Pan African congress will affiliate with us. Long live the solidarity of all oppressed and exploited!

London Crowds March On U. S. Embassy; Sing Red Flag to Royalty

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Hundreds of demonstrators for Sacco and Vanzetti succeeded in eluding the police vigilants and massed in front of Buckingham Palace singing the Red Flag. Hundreds of police charged the demonstrators 300 feet from the palace gates and many were injured in the sharp fighting which ensued. The royal family is now at Buckingham palace.

Some of the marchers reformed after the fight at the Palace and succeeded in slipping thru the police which were drawn up around the United States embassy but the mounted police after repeated charges in which men and women were ridden down cleared the streets.

Hyde Park was like a field before a battle when the huge Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting opened here. Platoons of police encircled the crowds determined that there should be no repitition of the march on the United States embassy of two weeks ago. Heavily armed reserves were stationed at hand ready for instant action should an attempt be made to march. But the meeting was orderly and the police did not care to attack it.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE INSTITUES DRIVE TO ORGANIZE RESISTANCE OF WORKERS

sion of the organization as an instrument to fight the frame-up system, warning against illusions in regards to capitalist "justice."

The manifesto says: "Only the organized resistance of the working class can prevent the imprisonment of labor fighters who are framed up by the class enemy. Only the organized power of the working class can open the prison doors and release our brothers from the living death of the cell. Every ounce of efforts must be exerted now to enroll new members in the I. L. D. Thousands of sympathizers who have supported the movement must be invited to join its ranks as active members. New Branches must be built throughout the country wherever they do not exist so that every city has a fortress for labor defense."

The manifesto is as follows:

Build a Wall of Labor Defense Against the Frame-up System!

Sacco and Vanzetti were working class victims of the infamous American frame-up system. They were condemned—not for the crime with which they were charged and of which everyone now knows they were totally innocent—but because they were two foreign-born workers, two radicals.

Many working class fighters have been murdered and imprisoned thru this system and more are caught in its cogs every day. Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings were victims of the frame-up system, and while a whole world knows of their innocence they are still obliged to serve a life term in prison. In California and Washington there are still many workers who rot in prison because of their activities in the labor movement. Indictments are now pending against many Communists in several states. In Passaic, the textile workers who struck so courageously have had to yield up some of their members to the vengeance of the mill owners who demanded and obtained prisoners. In New York, it is the clothing workers and furriers who suffer from the frame-up system for having struck for better conditions.

Cheswick Case.

And now, there is being prepared in Pennsylvania another case in which innocent workers, of whom twenty have already been arrested, will be selected to be "charged" with the crime of having killed one of the state troopers who charged into a protest meeting with clubs, bombs and shotguns.

The workers who are still in prison, and those who are daily endangered by the frame-up system, or the anti-labor "criminal syndicalism" laws, must be defended. Theirs is the cause of the whole working class. Among them, in most cases, are to be found the most energetic and courageous fighters. They are paying the penalty for having fought well for the labor movement, and it is the task of the workers to lift this penalty and enable them to rejoin actively the movement out of whose ranks they have been snatched by the enemy of the workers. The families and dependents of the imprisoned workers must be given aid, for they are often the greatest sufferers.

In Vanguard.

International Labor Defense, a non-partisan, working class organization, has been in the forefront of the struggle for the class war prisoners since its inception. International Labor Defense has worked for the release and freedom of hundreds of workers, regardless of political or economic opinions. It has defended them in court, aided them in obtaining bonds, prevented the deportation of foreign-born workers active in the labor movement. It has aided the men in prison, and their families at home. Every strike that has yielded its quota of frame-up victims, as in Ziegler, in Buffalo, in New York, in Chicago, has found the International Labor Defense ready to help with legal defense, publicity and material support.

In the new struggles that are coming, and in the work of obtaining the release of the remaining class war prisoners, the need for such a movement as International Labor Defense must be made clear to all workers. The task of the hour, particularly in the face of the fiendish assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti, is to build a broad movement of labor defense. The Executive Committee of International Labor Defense calls for a nation-wide campaign of agitation in behalf of the class war prisoners coupled with a campaign of organization to build the movement into a mighty force against the frame-up system.

Must Organize Resistance.

This task requires the united support of all class-conscious workers. Only the organized resistance of the working class can prevent the imprisonment of labor fighters who are framed up by the class enemy. Only the organized power of the working class can open the prison doors and release our brothers from the living death of the cell. Actual participation in the work of labor defense, the movement of solidarity, is the first need for the fight to free our brothers.

Every ounce of effort must be exerted now to enroll new members in the International Labor Defense. Thousands of the sympathizers who have supported the movement must be invited to join its ranks as active members. New branches must be built thruout the country wherever they do not exist so that every city has a fortress for labor defense.

New attacks are being planned against the working class and we must be prepared to meet them effectively. The lesson of the fight for Sacco and Vanzetti must be learned by every worker. The fight against frame-ups must be organized on a broader and stronger basis. Organization for labor defense is the duty of the hour.

Remember the labor martyrs—Sacco and Vanzetti!

Build a wall of labor defense against the frame-up system!

Free the class war fighters from prison!

National Executive Committee,
International Labor Defense.

Crowds Throng Vienna As U. S. Flags Vanish

VIENNA, Aug. 25.—While huge crowds gathered in the streets here despite the efforts of the Social Democratic government to prohibit Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations, the American flags were lowered from all hotels and other buildings.

The Vienna "Stunde" has observed editorially that "behind the indignation of Europe lies the abhorrence of old world culture for the thin varnish of civilization with which America covers its cruelty and materialism."

MEXICANS STILL MOP UP REMNANTS OF CHURCH ARMY

Calles Assures Election Will Be Fair

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 25. — Volunteer forces dispersed a rebel detachment near Nautla, state of Vera Cruz, killing three rebels, according to word from Vera Cruz today.

These are fragments of the clerical forces raised some months ago to overthrow the government. They have remained in the field after the offer of amnesty closed, in order to live by brigandage.

Reyes Executed.

Manuel Reyes, a clerical rioter, and his secretary were executed in Toluca, after trial in which it appeared that Reyes organized an armed band on secret orders from the Catholic hierarchy to overthrow the constitutional government and set up a military rule with the Church as the power behind the throne.

Reyes did not get much response to his call to arms, and his small band was chased about the state until finally captured. The men were shot for brutal murders they committed upon the unarmed population of several villages they were able to enter during the height of their career. Reyes went under the alias of "El Cojo".

A modern pirate ship which had been operating against small craft in the gulf of Cortes for the past six months, has been captured off the coast of lower California and the crew arrested, said a dispatch from Mazatlan today. Several bootleggers were found on board.

Calles Says Fair Election.

President Calles issued a formal statement to the press today giving assurances that the executive branch of the government will maintain absolute neutrality in the national political campaign and the presidential election next year.

President Calles pointed out that he was pledged to obey and enforce the constitution when he took office and declared that this pledge could be carried out to the letter, not only by himself but by officials under him.

Army Neutral.

Regarding the attitude of the army, president Calles said he could vouch for the loyalty of the military officials. He deprecated assertions made by some political orators who had questioned the loyalty of some of the military chiefs.

The attitude of the state governors and other state officials is outside of the national executive's control and the president did not assume any responsibility for their actions. Under the constitution the president has no power to supervise the governors of states.

Some Clerics Still Loose.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Miss Florence Anderson of Los Angeles was seriously wounded and 15 others, all Mexicans, were killed or wounded, when bandits attacked a southern-pacific train in the state of Nayarit, Mexico, yesterday, according to dispatches received by the state department today.

Miss Anderson was the only American of a party of 11 who was wounded.

Kellogg Really Responsible.

The state department at Washington has sent a note to the Mexican government asking for vigorous action against the bandits who shot Mrs. Anderson. However, no notice has been received here of any reversal of the state department's policy of tacitly consenting to the smuggling of arms and ammunition from the U. S. A. for use of bandits and anti-constitutional armies in Mexico.

Sydney Workers, After Silent Death March Resolve to Boycott U. S.

SYDNEY, Aug. 24.—Bare-headed, silent, marching at a funeral pace, thousands of workers, many of them seamen, made their final death march for Sacco and Vanzetti here. The workers wore mourning bands and filed in complete silence between the lines of hundreds of men and women who filled the Sydney streets. A demonstration which followed in front of the United States consulate was orderly and at its conclusion resolutions were adopted to boycott American goods. The whole demonstration and the resolutions were calculated to make plain the inexpressible loathing which the Australian workers feel for the murderous American bosses.

Woll at Syracuse Urges War on the Left Wing but Does Not Mention the Coal Strike, Industrial Depression or the Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and acting president of National Civic Federation, addressing the sixty-fourth annual convention of the New York State Federation of Labor now in session in Syracuse, told the delegates that combatting the inroads of Bolshevism and Sovietism is the most important task before the American labor movement.

Woll is the premier red-herring dragger of the executive council of the A. F. of L.

Precisely at the time when the federal government has granted the southern Ohio coal barons a sweeping injunction which is the forerunner of similar edicts against the miners in other sections of the coal fields where the largest union in the A. F. of L. is on strike, at the time when it is clear that the coal barons and the government are out to smash the United Mine Workers of America, at a time when Secretary of Commerce Hoover issues a report which despite its careful wording pictures a serious decline in many departments of basic industry, iron and steel, automobiles, railroads, building, etc.) at a time when even many of the conservative building trades unions are under attack, Woll can find no alarming manifestations for the labor movement except the activities of the Communists and the left wing.

It is noteworthy in this connection that there has been furnished the delegates in connection with the report of the Federation Bank and Trust Company a copy of the section of the recent resolution of the Communist International dealing with the question of "labor" banks and trade union capitalism in general.

This document is headed: "Read carefully for it relates to instructions given Communists for an attack on Labor Banks."

Like Woll's speech this document is designed to distract attention from such debacles as that which overtook the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' banking and investment schemes and place the administration of the Federation bank in a position to forestall criticism of its financial adventures by yelling "Moscow."

If at the convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, oldest and largest in the United States, held a few months before the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, Woll has no analysis of the present situation and no program to propose based on what such an analysis would show i. e. decreasing industrial activity and preparation for a new drive on the unions, it is unlikely that at the A. F. of L. convention he will have anything to propose except war on the militant elements in the labor movement.

Woll, however, spoke at Syracuse as the representative of the xecutive council of the A. F. of L. and this body therefore has nce more disclosed its bankruptcy. It is still waging war on the ommunists and the left wing as a major task and is thereby eakening the labor movement in a period when militant organ-ation of the workers in basic industry is imperative and when e United Mine Workers union is facing the most powerful at-ck in its history.

It is also to be noted that Woll did not mention the murder Sacco and Vanzetti nor call upon the convention to register its otest against this blow at the labor movement.

With such leadership the American labor movement is pass-g into a period when it, like the miners' union, will have to fight r its life.

Against such leadership every ounce of strength in the la-bor movement must be concentrated.

It must be exposed and driven from power.

The Press Conference in Geneva.

The conference of Press Associations beginning at Geneva under the auspices of the league of nations furnishes further evidence of the development of fascist methods in the principal capitalist countries.

The major issue before the conference is the role of the great press services in relation to the governments of their respective countries. The question is:

Are all press services to become government organs, giving only news officially sanctioned by the departments of foreign and domestic affairs, or are those still partially independent of their government to retain their independence?

The "executive committees of the capitalist class," the imperialist governments, feel that in this critical period the ordinary capitalist bias of the press services is not sufficient. The governments are trying to establish a strict censorship. News is to be suppressed or colored to meet the needs of the rulers.

As a matter of fact this procedure is already established in a number of instances. The Reuter service is controlled by the British government, the Havas agency by the French government and in the United States the Associated Press, as shown by the exposure of its relations with the state department in the Mexican issue, is more or less an official news agency of the federal government.

The growing imperialist conflicts and the conspiracy against the Soviet Union undoubtedly exert great pressure in determining the various governments to embark upon this drastic course in Geneva. War is in the air and censorship on the cards.

The Geneva conference furnishes concrete evidence of the great need for a powerful working class press and a worldwide press service devoted to the cause of the class struggle.

Only by unswerving support of its press can the working class prevent all its channels of information being poisoned at the source. In variety and technique the working class press can never compete with that of the capitalist class. But its shortcomings in this respect must be overlooked (altho corrected as far as possible) in the interest of the struggle against the worldwide conspiracy to make of ALL news services official agencies of imperialism.

American Institutions in the Coal Fields—The Government Begins Strikebreaking

Federal Injunction in Southern Ohio Puts U. S. Machinery at Disposal of Coal Barons.—Left Wing Program Sole Hope of Union.

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE United Mine Workers of America, its officers, District 6 of the union, sub-district 5 of District 6, Ohio, 60 local unions, the officials of the district and sub-district and the local unions, and various members and sympathizers mentioned by name, by an injunction granted the coal operators on August 15 are restrained from doing the following things:

1. "From interfering with, obstructing, or preventing in any way or attempting to do so, the carrying on of the business of the plaintiffs or any of them . . ."

2. "From making any threats to or in the hearing of employees of any of the plaintiffs or persons seeking employment by any of the plaintiffs . . . . and against any of the members of the families of any of the agents or employees of any of the plaintiffs . . ."

3. "From gathering or loitering in groups, crowds, assemblages and picket file formation or any other formation in, about or near the mines . . . . of the plaintiffs . . . . or upon any or along any of the public roads, railroads, railroads rights of way, etc. . . ."

4. "From intimidating, theratening or in any manner interfering with any of the agents or employees of any of the plaintiffs or contractors or employees . . ."

5. "From blockading any of the public highways leading to said mines of the plaintiffs . . ."

6. "From the use of vile and opprobrious names or insulting words, and from the use of the words "scab" or "rat" and from the use of profane or vulgar language, toward, concerning or in the presence of any person in the employment of any of the plaintiffs . . ."

7. "From interfering in any way or manner with the plaintiffs or any of them, or their officers or agents . . ."

8. "From damaging the plant, equipment or property of any of the said mines . . ."

9. "From trespassing upon or unlawfully entering upon any of the said mines or any of the lands owned by any of the plaintiffs, and from entering upon or trespassing on any of the fields or lands near or in the vicinity of any of the said mines . . ."

10. "From doing of any act or acts whatsoever in the furtherance of any combination or conspiracy heretofore/or hereafter formed for the purpose of hindering, delaying or interfering with plaintiffs or any of them in the mining, shipping and sale of coal . . ."

FROM the brief extracts quoted (the injunction as a whole, enumerating in detail the persons and corporations protected and the acts forbidden, covers 6½ pages of the customary legal size) it is obvious that if the injunction is obeyed the strike is broken.

But still more important is the fact that clause 14 of the document instructs the armed forces of the state to put themselves directly at the service of the coal barons. In other words, the injunction is a mobilization order to what Engels called "the special bodies of armed men:"

CLAUSE 14 says:

> "The marshal is outhorized and directed to call to his assistance such persons, either as deputy marshal or otherwise, as he may deem necessary, and is empowered by law to do, for the purpose of securing early and prompt obedience to the provisions hereof; and for that purpose, THE MARSHAL, WITH SUCH ASSISTANTS AS HE SHALL DEEM NECESSARY AND SO APPOINT, SHALL ATTEND THE PREMISES OF THE PLAINTIFFS FROM TIME TO TIME, AND ESPECIALLY AT SUCH TIMES AS PLAINTIFFS SHALL BE READY TO ACTUALLY BEGIN MINING OPERATIONS . . ."

THE United States government, acting thru the federal court of the southern district of Ohio and the office of the United States Marshal, has taken over the job of breaking the strike of the United Mine Workers in that territory.

More than this, as the injunction plainly states, it has placed at the disposal of the coal barons, for strike-breaking purposes, all the armed forces the marshal "shall deem necessary" and has further authorized him to turn the coal breakers, tipples, etc., into fortresses. This the real meaning of the phrase "shall attend the premises of the plaintiffs from time to time and ESPECIALLY AT SUCH TIMES AS THE PLAINTIFFS ARE READY TO ACTUALLY BEGIN MINING OPERATIONS . . ."

WILL President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who said in 1919 that "we cannot fight our government", please explain why any worker should support a government which functions openly as a strike-breaking agency and is prepared to shoot down workers "especially such time as plaintiffs shall be ready to actually begin mining operations?"

Will the two great patriots mentioned above explain their vociferous loyalty to "American institutions" in the light of the federal injunction against their own union in Southern Ohio?

ONE thing is certain.

The continued denunciation of the Communists and the left wing of the union, the expulsion of militant members, the destruction of inner union democracy, truckling to the patriotic capitalists, slander of the Soviet Union, worker-employer cooperation speeches delivered in frock-coats before chambers of commerce and sabotage of convention decisions for a labor party, failure to declare a national strike, advocacy of district agreements, failure to launch an energetic organization campaign in the non-union fields, have not served to prevent the coal capitalists and their government from making war on the union.

WHAT price patriotism now?

Either the United Mine Workers, backed by the rest of the labor movement, will fight "our government" by violating the federal injunction and defeating it and the coal barons, or the labor movement will witness more injunctions issue to cover every field where the coal barons desire to start operations, import scabs and smash the United Mine Workers of America.

IT is clear that in the decisive sections of the Union fields the coal barons intend to destroy the union outright unless it accepts the coal barons' terms merely another way of destroying the union.

It is also clear that the injunction in Southern Ohio marks the entry of the federal government into the union fields in behalf of the coal barons.

IN the West-Virginia non-union fields the United Mine Workers are appealing to the United States supreme court against a blanket injunction prohibiting them from organizing, but failing any other action on the part of the union the strike will be over and the union defeated before the case is decided.

FACED with a crisis in which the life of the union is at stake the official leadership of the United Mine Workers does nothing but pay lawyers fees and rail at the "reds" who are undermining as best they can such American institutions as injunctions against labor unions.

THE Ohio injunction with its sweeping prohibition of even routine union activity fully upholds the contention of the left wing of the United Mine Workers, reiterated time and time again in pamphlets and leaflets and speeches in conventions, to the effect that the struggle of the United Mine Workers of American is a struggle to save the union; that the government is behind the coal barons; that the drive on the United Mine Workers of America is part of a general offensive against the whole labor movement.

The program placed before the union by the Save the Union bloc at the last convention offers the only means of combatting the drive on the union.

THE support of Coolidge by John L. Lewis, the offer of partial surrender to the coal barons in the form of district agreements and efficiency unionism made at Miami, the obvious desire on the part of the Lewis machine to avoid irritating the coal barons in any way, are answered by a federal injunction under cover of which the coal barons are opening up their mines with scab labor.

The influx of coal from the non-union fields which remained unorganized while the Lewis machine made war on Communist miners and the left wing is depended upon—and will if not stopped—to supply the markets where union-mined coal was sold formerly.

IN every local union the miners must be informed of the sinister meaning of the Ohio injunction. They will support the program of the Save the Union bloc and only by rally the support of the membership of this program organization of the non-union fields, a national strike, no district agreements, nationalization of the mines, support for a labor party—can the union be saved from destruction and the basis laid for a return to the former militant policy followed by the United Mine Workers of America before its officialdom surrendered to American imperialism.

Sacco-Vanzetti Murder Lesson to Workers.

Dear Comrade:

The headlines of the daily papers this afternoon state that the Supreme Court of the State of Massachusetts has ruled against Sacco and Vanzetti.

This is not any different than we expected all along. The Imperialists will use the Courts to murder radical workers, they have done so many times.

Of course it is hard for working people to bear up under such a horrible affair, but Sacco and Vanzetti will not have died in vain. The workers do not need any better or more convincing organizers than Fuller and Thayer. They will give great impetus to the movement toward industrial solidarity and a united Labor Party—W. L. Cogley, General Secretary-Treasurer, United Association of Railroad Employes of North America.

New Playwrights Theatre Find New Home in Greenwich Village

The new Playwrights' group, who were responsible for "Loud Speaker" and "Earth," two of the most interesting plays of last season, have found a new home for their plans of the coming season. They have taken over the little theatre at 40 Commerce Street which is in Greenwich Village, and which was formerly known as the Cherry Lane theatre. The Playwrights theatre will begin their season sometime next month with "The Belt," by Paul Sifton a New York newspaper man. Other plays to be presented include "Singing Jailbirds," by Upton Sinclair; "The Centuries," by Em Jo Basshe, and "Suburb," by John Dos Passos.

The Shuberts latest in the line of operettas, "My Maryland," by Sigmund Romberg and Dorothy Donnelly is announced to open at Jolson's theatre on Monday, September 12.

Demaris Dore has replaced Lillian Roth in "Padlocks" at the Shubert theatre.

Only two more days to secure your tickets for the Grand Festival and Jamboree, which the Joint Defense Committee is giving Sunday at Starlight Park. Get yours today at the DAILY WORKER office.

The Civic Repertory Theatre's road company "Cradle Song" includes Mary Shaw, Harry Davenport, Phyllis Rankin, Mary Hone, Zita Johann, Fanny Davenport, Alexander Kirkland and Virginia Gregori. The tour opens in Hartford Labor Day.

MRS. COBURN

Is appearing with Mr. Coburn in a condensed version of "The Better 'Ole," at the Palace Theatre.

On the Screen

"Chang," that remarkable and interesting film which had such a long run on Broadway recently, and which caused so much comment, will begin a short run at the Cameo theatre starting tomorrow. Charlie Chaplin in "The Rink' will be the comedy feature.

Monte Blue's latest starring vehicle "The Bush Leaguer" will have its premiere at Moss' Broadway theatre beginning Monday. Clyde Cook and Leila Hyams play principal roles in the picture.

The Warner's announce four important releases for September. These include: "Slightly Used" starring May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel; George Jessel's first starring picture this year, "The Broadway Kid," "Jaws of Steel," another Rin-Tin-Tin picture and a comedy co-starring Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook, titled "A Sailor's Sweetheart."

The Mayfair Theatre on West 44th Street, is undergoing a complete process of renovation preparatory to its change of policy from a legitimate playhouse to one of pictures. After housing such productions as O'Neil's "Emperor Jones," "Juno and the Paycock" and "The House of Usher," the tiny playhouse will assume a policy of almost entirely presenting foreign photoplays.

King's Crazy Brother Has a Try at Suicide

BELGRADE, Aug. 25. — Prince George Kara Georgevitch, elder brother of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia was in a serious condition today as a result of what was reported to be an attempt at suicide. Prince George had been declared insane some years ago, following a violent attack on a servant, whom the prince kicked to death, and a subsequent attack on his brother, king Alexander. He also had been publicly involved in numerous love affairs.

ORONTO TRADES COUNCIL ATTACKS GREEN'S POLICY

Asks Him to Withdraw McGrady From N. Y.

The Toronto Trades and Labor Council, at its last meeting passed a resolution appealing to the American Federation of Labor to withdraw its special committee, headed by Edward F. McGrady, which now administers the International Fur Workers' Union, and to restore rank and file control and thus establish peace in the entire union.

Word of this action by the Toronto labor body was received yesterday by the New York Furriers' Joint Board, from H. Englander of the Toronto Unity Conference.

Englander explains that the resolution of last week followed a lengthy discussion of the situation in the International Fur Workers' Union which began on July 22nd when a letter from President William Green of the A. F. of L. was read at a Trades and Labor Council meeting.

A Lying Attack.

President Green had sent one of his lying attacks upon the New York Joint Board, and had urged the Toronto workers, as he has urged all trade unionists thruout the country, not to help their brothers who were striking and going to prison in New York City in the struggle to save their union from destruction.

After a heated controversy over this letter, it was, upon motion, laid on the table until the New York Joint Board had an opportunity to tell its side of the story. This was done in a detailed statement of facts given in a letter from Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, which was read at the next meeting of the Council, and in accordance with the procedure of the council this communication was referred to the Executive Board for consideration. The recommendation of the Executive Board, brought in at the August 18th meeting, was that both the President Green and the Gold letter be filed as "information"; but this dodging of the issue was not acceptable to the council delegates.

Adopt Resolution.

The following resolution was introduced from the floor, and it was carried by a vast majority of the meeting:

"Whereas, the Toronto Trades and Labor Council has heard the letter of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, concerning the existing situation in the International Fur Workers' Union and the reply of the Joint Board of New York, comprising Locals Nos. 1, 5, 10 and 15. And

"Whereas, we are decidedly convinced that the only reason for the unwarranted interference of the A. F. of L. and the Executive Board of the Fur Workers' Union, is the fact that the workers in New York City chose for their leaders and officials, militant, radical and aggressive members, whose policies were at variance with the present leadership of the Furriers' International and the A. F. of L. executives, especially those of President William Green. Be it therefore

"Resolved, that this regular meeting of the Toronto Trades and Labor Council appeals to the A. F. of L. and the executive of the Fur Workers' International to withdraw the special committees and bogus and artificial locals that have been set up and to restore complete autonomy to the New York district, thereby restoring rank and file control, which is in our estimation the only method of reestablishing peace and unity in the Fur Workers' Union in New York City."

The passage of this resolution is without a doubt due to the good work of the Toronto section of the Unity Conference Committee of the Furriers' Union, which was organized at the close of the so-called convention at Washington and which is steadily carrying on its drive to end the struggle which is so weakening the Furriers' Union and to bring about peace and unity within its ranks.

Professors Advance Designing Methods.

James R. Griffith, Associate Professor of Civil Engineering, Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, Ill.; Anthony Hoadley, Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering, Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.; and Frederick L. Plummer, Assistant Professor of Civil Engineer, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio, who have worked through the summer vacation in the Designing Department of the Weschester County Park Commission at Bronxville, are returning to resume their college duties.

The advance in designing methods which has been made has resulted in large economies on the construction cost.

Detectives Pursue Old Man.

After a zig-zag chase along subway tracks and third rails and between passing trains an elderly man, charged with possession of a large bundle of criminal tools, weapons and a list of prominent persons, was sent to Bellevue today for observation.

The prisoner said he was John N. Netzei, a night watchman, of Brooklyn. He was arrested by detectives who pursued him a distance of about half a mile at one point directly under Police Headquarters.

Woll Attacks Trade Union Militants at State Labor Meet

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Addressing the sixty-fourth convention of the New York State Federation of Labor in session here, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and president of the National Civic Federation, launched a vicious attack against militant elements in the trade unions.

He used the Moscow "bogey" as a basis for his attack.

The convention will nominate officers at the afternoon session and will probably close its business tomorrow.

Opposes Injunction.

The State Federation of Labor convention here has gone on record in favor of a change that makes it impossible for injunctions to be issued in time of strikes. It also opposes the proposed amendment to the state constitution under which the terms of the governor and the state senators would be four years and assemblymen two years.

President Sullivan outlined the federation attitude towards injunctions and asked for support in enacting legislation opposed to it.

Passaic Workers Defy Police in Protest as Strike Days Come Back

PASSAIC, Aug. 25.—An angry mass of workers thronged the Workers' Home at 27 Dayton Ave., Passaic, Monday evening, loudly demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Thruout the previous week the meeting was advertised to be held at Belmont Park in Garfield. This meeting, called by the Italian society, S. M. S., Camillo Finochehariaro, and indorsed by a great number of large organizations, including the District Council of Textile Workers of Passaic and vicinity, held promises of becoming a "big gun" affair.

The Garfield authorities who, during the famous textile strike, had shown their teeth and savagery toward the workers, once again on Monday night proved their contempt for the workers by closing Belmont Park at the last minute.

Workers Recall Strike Days.

In answer to the call to the meeting, in the form of handbills, passed out at quitting time in front of the big woolen mills, many workers began to gather at Belmont Park. Great was their dismay at finding it closed to them, and in heated words they recalled the civic oppressions and gangsterism of strike days. The workers demanded a meeting and when told by a committee that the meeting would be held at the Workers' Home in Passaic, they immediately streamed across the trestle into Passaic.

Passaic Police Ready.

Crowds swarmed on lower Dayton Ave., and at the entrance to the Workers' Home. The Passaic police were there, all set for action; the patrol wagon looming darkly at the curb.

In the huge crowd, the word, "cossack" whisped constantly as the cops tried to "scarem" by their bullish appearance at the entrance.

The Workers' Home was packed; barely any standing room left in the hall. The meeting was going on; local leaders speaking: Gus Deak, Felix Panerisi, John Di Santo, and Eli Keller — real leaders, former textile strikers. And the huge mass of workers cheered them and roared in a mighty thunder for the immediate and unconditional release of their two fellow-workers, Sacco and Vanzetti.

At the opening of the meeting the "cossacks" entered the hall thinking that their uniforms would strike terror in the hearts of the workers. But in truth, these staunch worker-fighters of Passaic had seen too much cossack uniform—enough of it to make them amusing. The police realizing this, sheepishly withdrew to the air where they remained until the end of the meeting when the workers filed out singing the International.

A live demonstration, certainly. For in Passaic the spirit of the fight is still alive and going onward—ever on.

They All Loot Charley.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 25.—Efforts of receivers in the case to collect $45,000 in fees today threatened to delay Lita Grey Chaplin's final decree of divorce from Charles Spencer Chaplin.

W. I. Gilbert and Herman Spitzel, appointed to take charge of the Chaplin properties ending the divorce trial, were awarded $45,000 for their services. Chaplin was directed to pay the bill.

When attorneys for Chaplin informed the court that the property settlement released the comedian from paying any more than $10,000, the receivers sought to have the order for the payment of their fees written into the interlocutory decree.

SIGMAN ON RETREAT, JOINT DEFENSE WILL WIN; WORKERS RALLY

Now is the time to strike the final blow at Sigman, Beckerman, Woll, Frayne and the other fakers, who are using all the means at their disposal to crush the militant working class.

For months the struggle has been carried on in a most ruthless fashion. Workers were brutally beaten and thrown into prison. The Joint Defense of Furriers and Cloakmakers rose to the occasion and fought back at the reactionaries. Thousands of dollars were raised, not from the bosses, but from the pennies of the workers. So great was the response that Sigman and Woll became panicky and plotted with the bosses and police to have more and more workers arrested so that the demands upon the Defense would be severe.

The courage of the workers has had its effect. Sigman, Shiplakoff and the other fakers have commenced fighting among themselves.

Now Is the Time to Strike the Final Blow.

A final jamboree of all militants is to be held in Starlight Park, 177th St., Bronx, Sunday, August 28, for the specfic purpose of supplying the necessary dollar bullets with which to storm the last stronghold of reaction.

Sigman's Pleasure Park makes cash for Sigman personally. Starlight Park on Sunday, August 28, will make the cash necessary for carrying the militant needle trades workers to victory. A regular good time is assured. Be one of the militant army mobilized for the final onslaught.

Comrades, rally on to the final victory! Make this affair the most powerful demonstration ever.

BRITISH WORKERS CALL MODEL HOMES "LENIN ESTATE"; TORIES IN A RAGE

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The London subways are different to those in American cities. There are first class cars and "no class at all" cars, where the proletariat and the near proletariat may stifle and pursue their newspapers.

A morning newspaper describes the horror of a monocled bespatted, "hoity-toity" sprig of the elderly idle rich enroute for the city, when a pair of powerful, bronzed workers entered the first class car in which he was the solitary traveller. The sons of toil sank back luxuriously on the velvet cushions, and deposited their dinner pails on the floor. One lit up a cigarette, the other an ancient clay pipe. Soon an aroma like nothing on earth arose, and drifted to the already lifted nostrils of the aristocrat.

"Dont you know this is a first class carriage? he spluttered.

"Certainly, we do" answered the worker with a pipe, blowing a suffocating blast in the face of the questioner. "My mate and I feels first class this morning and that's why we thought we'd travel with you."

"The Lenin Estate."

Some days ago a notice of motion was placed before the Bethnal Green Borough Council (in the poorest part of London), to the effect that a large area which is being rebuilt, from former slums, into model worker's dwellings. Should be named the "Lenin Estate."

The matter came up for decision on July 22. The resolution was carried by the labor majority on the council. The conservatives were furious but were defeated. Councillor Boyce in speaking in favor of the motion said, "Among the great names of history that of Christ comes first. Marx second and then Lenin."

The "Observer" a Sunday liberal organ suggests "That now Bethnal Green is to have it Lenin Estate—Moscow cannot do less than give us a Quartier Joynson-Hicks."

UNION LEADERS AND EDUCATORS GATHER TO DISCUSS PHILADELPHIA UNEMPLOYMENT

PHILADELPHIA, (FP) — Under the auspices of the Philadelphia Labor College trade union leaders and educators met recently on the Bryn Mawr College grounds to discuss unemployment and its remedies.

Speakers will include Harry Jenkins, Intl. Pres. the Glass Bottle Blowers; Elias Reisberg, Intl. Vice-Pres. the Ladies Garment Workers; Otto S. Beyer, consulting engineer for the railway shopcraft organizations; A. J. Muste, dean of Brookwood Labor College; Edward E. Hunt, secretary to Herbert Hoover; Sam A. Lewisohn of New York and Dr. Summer H. Slichter, member of the Institute of Economics.

Unemployment is a serious problem in Philadelphia. Israel Mufson, secretary of the Philadelphia Labor College, says that unemployment is inevitable. The unions must find a way out.

Ohio WorkerTakesWalk On Boss Who Offered to "Give" $2.75 for 9 Hours

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 25.—How prosperity is lightening the daily load of the Ohio workers is effectively disclosed in the following account of the high wages offered one of them for nine hours' labor.

Needing a job very badly, I responded to an "ad," asking for men to distribute advertising matter. I showed up bright and early but not so early as several other men. In due season the boss appeared on the scene and smiled with evident satisfaction as he noticed the army that had showed up.

A large department store was having a great big slashing sale where shoes, pants and window curtains could be bought for a dime or so cheaper. This advertising agency had the job of distributing several thousand leaflets in order that the public might not continue in ignorance so far as this monster was concerned. Several new men were needed to assist the regular crew in pestering the long-suffering housewives with this printed matter.

The boss would select six men, give them each a sack in which to carry the bills, and take them into another room and make a little speech. I learned later that the speech was a plea to the men to be square and place every bill smack in the door.

Finally the scene reached the stage where one more man was needed with about 20 to select from. The mantle fell upon me and in a little while we were hauled up to North Columbus ready to start up the avenues, each man with a sack full of bills, and a truck loaded with more stood near.

Now I am interested in what we term "human interest stuff" and I had been observing the faces, talk and action of my fellow workers and had plum forgot to ask the boss what the wages and hours were. I placed the inquiry and was informed that we would work nine hours and the wages were $2.75. Making sure, by asking again, I found that my hearing was O. K. and that for walking up and down steps for nine hours carrying the message, "The sale is coming," a man collected $2.75. As though it were a hot biscuit I dropped my sack on the street and took a stroll down the river.

Thus it goes. I do not know how much the girls received who presided over the bargain counters at the sale nor do I know how many customers were unaware of the great sale due to the circumstance of a Communist's strolling down the river in the early morning. —HOBART SCOTT.

Equity Calls Screen Folk to Organize in Movie Union Fight

By ESTHER LOWELL.

Moving picture stars, who led the lesser lights from Actors Equity Ass'n. last month may soon find themselves eclipsed. Reports from Los Angeles indicate that the movie producers are going to let the high salaried stars go at the end of present contracts. The producers propose to feature new stars thereafter—at lower pay.

Producers Cut Screen Wages.

The whole trouble arises out of the producers' desire to lower costs without cutting their own profits. When the 10 per cent wage cut was posted early in summer, the movie actors rushed indignantly to Actors Equity and called for the establishment of standard contracts. The cut was withdrawn hastily.

Then some of the highly paid stars urged the not so brights to desert the Equity, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and join the "company union"—Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Douglas Fairbanks is head of the Academy.

Wallace Beery Stands By Union.

Wallace Beery was one of the shinier stars who stood out for forcing Equity contracts in all studios to protect the big and little lights alike. But Conrad Nagel, Milton Sills, Ricchard Barthelmess, Douglas Maclean and a few others won the crowd with their acceptance of the producers' promise to give a standard contract through the Academy fake union. Equity, organ of the actors' union, tells the story.

Equity's executive secretary, Frank Gillmore, is meanwhile awaiting another call from Hollywood's film folk to unionize the industry properly. He told the last meeting that he had heard producers' promises before and knew how poorly they were kept. But to save the bright and less brilliant stars from splitting, he advised against immediately demanding Equity closed shop in the studios.

To Boycott Scab.

Equity hasn't proposed a boycott of films made by the union deserting stars. But organized labor could cooperate by favoring its friends in the films instead of its enemies when it picks the movie for the family to see.

Bureaucrats Lose A Decision to Berlin Coop In Court Case

The administration of the Berlin Consumers' Cooperative Society carried out a number of measures infringing the statutes against which the opposition appealed to the bourgeois court. After the county court had passed judgment against the authorities, the sentence was confirmed also by the court of appeal. Thereby the expulsion of members who did nothing but exercise their members' rights—although not as the bureaucrats would like them to do—has been branded as an unjustifiable arbitrary action. Moreover, it has also been established by this judgment that prolongation of the mandates of the delegate meeting decided upon the strength of an alteration of the statutes brought about by the authorities has no retrospective power, which means that the new elections, whcih are already long due, must be decided upon.

But these defeats in the bourgeois court have not made the bureaucrats revise their attitude. In order to keep their prestige intact and to preserve as long as possible their present three-quarter majority in the delegate meeting, they are endevoring to bring about delay, and have therefore appealed to the national court as the supreme authority.

In the meantime elections have taken place in a number of newly established distributive centres. The result of these elections has shown that the opposition vote is growing, although the seven districts in question are not very favorable to Communists in their social structure. The Social Democratic list polled 464 and the Communist list 300 votes. The votes polled by the Opposition constitute 39.26 per cent. of the total vote, whereas at the last general elections in March, 1925, the percentage was only 33.97 per cent. This result shows that in the event of general elections the Opposition has every prospect to succeed, provided, of course, that the Party activity in the sphere of cooperative work, which has certainly increased lately, will continue to do so.

At the delegate meeting of the Berlin consumers' cooperative society on 31st of March a number of opposition seakers gave their opinions on the court proceedings and criticized severely the attitude of the authorities as inimicable to the interests of the members. A proposal to withdraw the revision appeal lodged with the national court was rejected against the votes of the opposition.

No Prosperity For Farm and Factory Workers Is Farmer Labor Claim

(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Labor and the farmers are the victims of the new prosperity since 1920, declares Senator Shipstead, farmer-labor representatives from Minnesota, as the result of a three month speaking tour which has taken him thru important parts of the country. The prosperity so boastetd of, he finds, is confined to industrial corporations, which have enjoyed tremendous increases in income and valuation while farmers and workers continue to battle adverse conditions.

Unemployment On the Gain.

"Farm incomes," Shipstead asserts, "have decreased 42 per cent in six years and labor in the mill and factory is producing 34 per cent more of the finished product than it did seven years ago. The average monthly payroll has decreased more than 30 per cent since 1920 and employment has decreased more than 18 per cent since 1920.

"Due to new machinery, I find industry is getting a much larger production with less employment of labor and as a result income and value of industrial corporations have increased 70 per cent in four years, as revealed by the statistics of the Department of Commerce.

Corporation Prosperity.

"Consequently we have this situation — less employment, smaller monthly total average payroll, but 34 per cent more production by labor, farm income 42 per cent less than in 1920, farmers feeding the industrial sections of the country for less than the cost of production with an increase in income by the leading corporations of an average of 70 per cent. This shows that the farmer and the laborer in industry are not sharing in the industrial prosperity of the country.

"This maladjustment in the social fabric is to a large extent due to legislation that has been passed favoring industry at the expense of labor and agriculture. This information should definitely kill the propaganda that has been spread charging labor with the cause of the high cost of living."

Danish Police Hurt Hundreds in Attack On Protest Meeting

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 25.—Hundreds were injured when the Danish police attacked a meeting held here to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. The workers were packed into a local hall and huge crowds were drawn up outside unable to get in when the police made their charge. Heads and backs were beaten as the police swung their clubs and drove among the masses of defenseless workers. Windows and automobiles were demolished during the struggle when the workers attempted to resist the police attack and force their way to the United States legation.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 25. (FP).—Director Gillen of Parks and Public Buildings is not satisfied with setting himself up as censor of Sacco-Vanzetti meetings and czar of free speech and assemblage. He is now attempting to gain control of the jobs of farm carriers in the Newark farmers' market.

Farm carriers, the workers who carry produce in the market from the farmers' trucks, fought Gillen's move with an attack on Gillen's motives by attorney Michael Brietkopf. The carriers charged the director with attempting to gain control over their destinies by his proposed permits and badges so that he could exact extra-legal bribes from them.

Organized labor in Newark is preparing to fight Gillen's re-election next year. A labor man will likely be proposed as his opponent.

Winchendon Y.W.L. Has Many Activities, Worker Correspondent Reports

I am writing to tell you how the students of the Young Workers Training School spend their free time.

A great deal of our time is given over to sports such as swimming, baseball, track, hiking, games and numerous other field events.

Reading also claims a great deal of our time. Among the books we read are Oil, King Coal and other novels as well as books on theory such as the A B C of Communism, Elements of Political Education, Draft Program of Y. C. L. and others. We read the DAILY WORKER, Young Worker, Young Comrade, Eteenpain and the New York Times.

In the evening when our lessons are over we gather into a group and our pianists and other musicians play while we sing.

Wednesday and Saturday evenings those of us who are fond of dancing go to Dennison or to Holmes Park.

Every Saturday afternoon a number of the students go to Gardner or to Winchendon for subs to the Young Worker, Young Comrade and The DAILY WORKER. One Saturday a number of us went after petitions for Sacco and Vanzetti and others went to distribute The DAILY WORKER. This and other kinds of League work keep us very busy.

"Press Experts" in Geneva Conference Consider Monopoly

GENEVA, Aug. 25. — The International Conference of Press Experts, meeting under the auspices of the League of Nations, opened here today, with news services of 36 nations represented.

Lord Burnham of the British delegation, who is acting chairman, made the opening address.

The morning session was taken up with discussion of questions of procedure. The first preliminary skirmish took place over the question of whether the steering committee should be elected by direct vote of the conference, or appointed by the chair. After several ballots the election by direct vote was decided upon.

While the conference was getting under way many preliminary private conferences were going on outside the conference hall. Most of these dealt with proposals in the conference agenda, particularly the draft of a resolution concerning property rights in news. The independent, non-official news agencies, who bitterly oppose the draft, on grounds that it would create a monopoly in news, are seeking a solution of the question.

They are evolving a substitute resolution which would reaffirm American and British court decisions that news, as news is public property, and that quasi-rights can only be established as between competitors engaging in unfair competition.

Indiana Miners Will Ask Donations to Keep Off Starvation

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—A long chain of reverses piled up in the last 5 years have brought the Indiana coal miners, Dist. 11 of the United Mine Workers, to the point of seeking donations from fellow trade unionists in other states to keep their families from starvation.

Indiana Mining Declines.

Fred Dixon, mine committeeman of Local 134 in the Clinton field, is in Chicago on the relief mission. He tells a depressing story of the decline of the industry in Indiana. It is a combination of natural causes, conspiracy in high places and desertion of leadership. As a result some miners, eager to work, have had only 22 days on a mine payroll in the entire period since 1924. In 1926 Indiana miners averaged 117 days work and $785 wages for the entire year. Many mine communities in the state now consist of old men and the very young. The ablebodied adults have pulled out of the withering industry so far as possible.

Indiana union coal, though nearer the Chicago market, has yielded supremacy to Kentucky and West Virginia non-union coal. In part this is due to the better quality of the southern seams, in part to the unfair freight advantages given by them by the interstate commerce commission. Since 1915, according to District 11, the freight to Chicago on Kentucky and West Virginia coal has gone up only 60 per cent while the rates on Indiana coal to the same market have gone up 107 per cent. Soon after the 1922 coal strike the Indiana manufacturers boycotted the coal of their home state and bought non-union southern coal as part of the national openshop drive against the miners union that is now nearing success.

Yellow Leaders.

Being newer developments, the Kentucky fields got the benefit of the most up-to-date mining machinery, which offset the superior skill of the union miners and enables the operators to employ inexperienced labor at the 1917 scale of $5 a day, (now raised for a time to $5.85), which is $2.50 below the Jacksonville scale of the union.

The Indiana district president, John Hessler, went over to the operators and is now superintendent for the Coal Bluff Mining Co. at Terre Haute, Dixon says. About 7000 out of 35,000 miners are at work under the Jacksonville scale with the onset of the winter demand. A few small Indiana mines across the river from Kentucky are operating openshop under the 1917 scale. The so-called cooperative scheme for undercutting the union scale petered out when the district started expelling members who aided in that attempt to put it out of business.

Dixon asks that donations in aid of the miners be sent to Joe Lyons, treasurer, Central Labor Union, Clinton, Ind.

U. S. LOATHED BY WORLD LABOR FOR BOSTON MURDERS

Boycott of U. S. Goods To Be First Reprisal

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—America entered a new era as an assassin of radical working men with fear marked on her features, but no remorse. Although the Statue of Liberty, inanimate and insensate, still stood on its pedestal in New York harbor, in Washington there was no pretense that America still held high the regard of the world as in the days when Bartholdi's monument was presented.

Kellogg's Desk Buried By Protests.

Instead instructions were being cabled to all American envoys abroad on the renewed need of protecting themselves against the hatred engendered by the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti. A desk was piled high in Secretary of State Kellogg's office with the eleventh hour cables from every nation pleading for commutation of sentence. The pleas, unheeded, served as formal notification that America has sacrificed the good will of the world.

Officials were sullen and silent. In the state department there was nervous apprehension that the next cable to be delivered might tell of violence abroad. Violence seemed to be the one fear; beyond feelings of humanity, sympathy or remorse, the functionaries understood but one form of reprisal; that is the form which meets assassination in kind.

U. S. Loathed By World.

The world over America is regarded with emotions ranging from hatred to contempt. Among workers there is hatred against the cruel insatiable industrialism that demands absolute submission from its working slaves under threat of death. Among liberals there was loathing of a government which fails to hold in equilibrium the scales of justice between capital and labor. And among employers and tories there was contempt for an assassination so crude and brutal that it had inflamed the world.

Washington cannot see the end of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Certainly the grim tragedy in the electric chair did not terminate the case. Rather it has entered a new phase; a phase in which labor and liberals will have something to say. The stage has been held so far by the Thayers, Fullers and Lowells, but from now on the world's opinion will be the dominant factor.

World Boycott of U. S.

That opinion will plague America for a generation. State and commerce department heads fear to think of what may be the cumulative result of the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. But they see a steady and unrelenting warfare against American goods in foreign markets; they see an unending prospect of physical protection for all American representatives abroad; they see for years the prospect that American citizens abroad will be subjected to insult and ostracism unless they can prove that they tried to prevent the Charlestown state prison horror.

At the last meeting of Washington workers and liberals on behalf of their tortured comrades, employers and their government were told what to expect in the way of reprisal from American workers. That threat was that a campaign would be renewed with hundredfold force for the organization into unions and labor party of the millions of toilers in the great mass industries of steel, coal, transportation and textiles. With the creation of vast organizations of labor controlling the economic life of the nation and transforming it into a system for the protection and advancement of labor's interests, there could never be a repetition of the foul murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Even Boss Press Appeal Unable to Halt Murders

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25.—Two appeals were sent to Governor Fuller, in the name of humanity, to reprieve Sacco and Vanzetti, by the editor of the Baltimore Sun shortly before the scheduled double electrocution. One appeal asked that a committee of nationally known lawyers, such as Charles Evans Hughes and Elihu Root, be permitted to go over the evidence in the case. Neither Governor Fuller nor the Lowell commission in their reports, had settled the grave legal doubts concerning the trial, the Sun insists. Only trained lawyers can speak authoritatively on the charges of prejudice raised against Thayer.

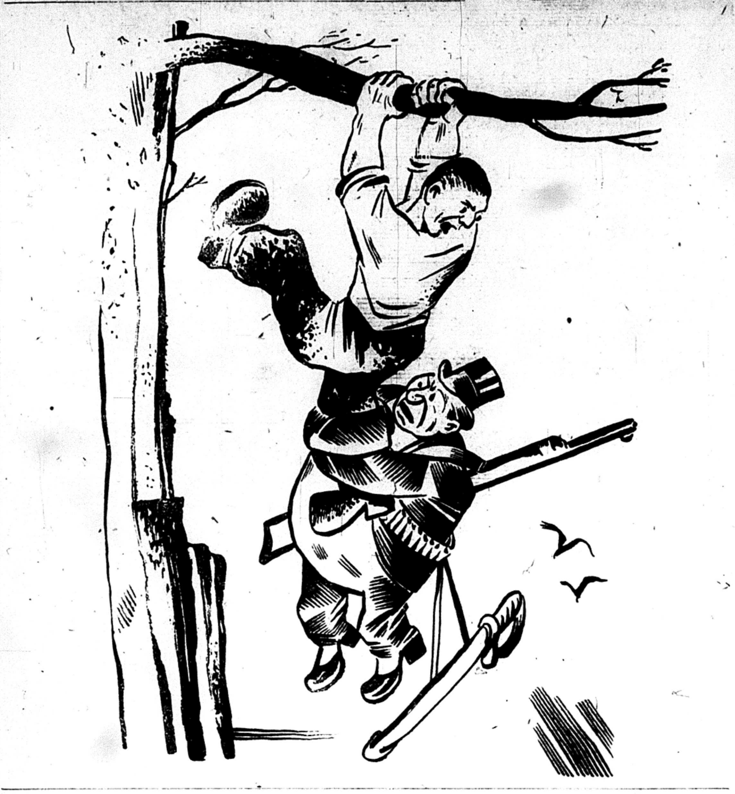
THE WEIGHT OF MILITARISM THAT BRING S DISASTER —Drawing by Wm. Gropper



More on the Railway Executives Report for the Ten-Hour Day

By V. Q.

II.

OUR fight against the "stabilization of employment" report of the railway executives was based on that part of the report dealing with the extension of the working day to ten hours. We quoted that part of the report, as it appeared in "Labor," the weekly organ of the standard railway unions. This was correct, since it was the kernel of the entire report. Since then, however, a more elaborate summary is available in the "Commercial and Financial Chronicle" of New York, dated July 9th.

Added Points in the Report.

THE report claims the following:

1. It is desirable to bring about as great stabilization of employment as possible.

2. The limits for this stabilization of employment are set by railway income, traffic and climatic conditions.

3. The more dependable character of service of railroads in the last 2 or 3 years promoted stability of traffic to a very considerable degree. Also, greater stability in earnings, and more satisfactory net returns, on account of greater economy in handling a uniform flow of business.

4. For greatest practicable degree of stabilization, sufficiently liberal margin is needed between operating revenues and operating expenses.

(a) To eliminate as far as possible temporary or emergency expenditures.

(b) To enable carrier to spread maintenance program over the year regardless of current montly revenues, and to initiate broader policies as to maintenance program.

5. The most influential single factor is question of net earnings.

6. The railway managers as a whole have shown a real desire to bring about the greatest possible stabilization of employment, but however their sympathies may run, their action will necessarily be governed to a very considerable degree by the financial condition of their company.

7. It is not now suggested that the present rate of return as fixed by the Commission is inadequate or would be insufficient if earned to permit such well-considered practices as might be necessary in order to continue the policies of stabilization thus far inaugurated. But it is simply pointed out that this depends on a sufficient basis of net income.

Report Admits Large Profits.

THE above extracts from the report (practically word for word) show that the railway companies could provide more weeks of work in the year, if they were willing to sacrifice some profits. Point 3 admits "more satisfactory net returns," due to "greater economy." Surely, this is due mainly to increased exploitation of the workers.

Point 4 pretends the need for large net income in order to stabilize employment, and spread maintenance work throughout the year. In the face of the banner dividend year of 1926, surpassing all previous records, this claim is pure buncombe. The companies can stand the expense.

Point 6 expresses the companies' desire to do something about stabilization of employment. But results show that practically nothing has been accomplished. On the contrary, increased productivity of the workers due to increased exploitation aggravates the problem of unemployment, makes employment less stable.

Point 7 hints that it may become necessary to demand higher rates. This may be a bid to labor leaders to assist the companies in a demand for higher rates, on the promise that the ten hour day will be postponed. But if it is, it would be merely to get the unions' help in raising rates; the ten hour drive would continue.

SO far, this angle has not been raised by the unions. Nor is it uppermost in the minds of the railway executives, for "Railway Age," the mouthpiece of the railway executives, centers on the ten hour day. However, should the union leaders join in a demand for raised rates, and should this fail, the executives would then insist on the alternative, the ten hour day. The unions, should of course refuse to be roped into this scheme, but should fight against the ten hour day and fight for increased wages.

However, the report seems not to make overtures to the labor leaders. It tries to discount all other possibilities, in order to prove the main burden of the song, that labor must give up the 8 hour day, and work 10 hours.

Who Started This Thing, Anyhow?

THE railway executives to shift responsibility for this report, by claiming that the study was made at the suggestion of a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Since the Interstate Commerce Commission is a part of the government machinery which serves as the executive committee of the capitalist interests, it is clear that the Interstate Commerce Commission does the bidding of the railway executives, and it does not matter whether the suggestion comes from the Commission or from the Railway Executives Association. But for those who do not see the connection, and who are impressed by the disinterestedness of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Railway Executives following the suggestion of the Interstate Commerce Commission prove themselves as faithful public servants.

"LABOR" of July 2nd, by stating that the committee was appointed, "at the suggestion of the Interstate Commerce Commission" (mind you, the entire commission), helps to give this impression. As a matter of fact, the report itself says the study was made at the suggestion of only one member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The conclusion to be drawn is that the railway executives have inaugurated a drive for the ten hour day on the railroads, and that labor must make all preparations for a counter-offensive for increase wages and better conditions.

British Labor Swears Never to Forgive This Crime Against Toilers

LONDON, Aug. 25.—More than ten thousand workers gathered in Hyde Park yesterday to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. A. J. Cook, the leader of the miners during their long strike, and many other prominent speakers addressed the throngs. When a speaker called on the workers "Never to forgive or forget" thousands of arms shot above the crowds in a mighty affirmation.

Police were present in hundreds drawn up around the crowds and in the streets leading to the park. Mounted reserves were also in readiness but had no opportunity to attack.

Hundreds of Hartford Workers Denouncing Fuller Class Justice

By A. H. WOLFSON.
(Worker Correspondent.)

HARTFORD, Aug. 25.—Five hundred Hartford workers joined in the mass meeting here to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Altho Mayor Stevens had refused permits for two other meetings the workers thronged to the gathering to hear Jack Rosen and G. Crisofi discuss the frame-up of the two workers.

Rosen made a striking appeal for building up the International Labor Defense as the workers' one safeguard against repetitions of the Massachusetts outrage. Crisofi spoke in Italian.

On War and Danger of War

This is the fourth installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committe of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

* * *

In Central Asia, in Afghanistan, Persia, in the Near East, in Turkey and in the Far East the evil arm of British imperialism is weaving a network of complicated intrigues against the Soviet Union. British diplomacy is striving to utilize the International Economic Conference for the purpose of establishing an economic blockade of the Soviet Union. Simultaneously feverish prepartions for war are being made in the countries contiguous to the U. S. S. R., particularly in Poland and Roumania.

Strengthening the Rear for War.

10. Since the last Enlarged Plenum of the E. C. C. I., events have occured in a number of countries which give an extreme illustration of the atmosphere of war preparations in which all the big capitalist countries now exist. In all capitalist countries we now witness increased reaction, the internationalizing to a greater or less degree of terrorist fascist methods of suppressing the working class. Domestic reaction marches in step with foreign aggression. In order to be able to conduct war, capitalism must have "peace" in the rear. The nature of modern warfare demands in addition to masses of men at the front an enormous industrial army to feed the gigantic war machine. These men must become mere cogs in its machine, they must be deprived of all will to fight, their trade unions must be converted into the principal levers for setting the whole mechanism of the war into motion. This gives rise to the attempts to "nationalize" and militarize the trade unions and to deprive them of the elementary rights they have won by decades of stubborn fighting.

11. Here attention must first of all be drawn to Great Britain, which, at the present time, stands at the head of world reaction. By its suppression of the miners' strike, British capitalism has given the signal for the offensive to the whole international bourgeoisie. The war in China, the attack against the Soviet Union, the attack upon Nicaragua and the defeat of the British miners are all links in the one chain. In Great Britain the right to strike is practically being destroyed. The anti-trade union bill deprives the proletariat in the event of war, not only of the weapon of the General Strike against war, but of the weapon of the strike as a whole. The government may declare illegal any strike, even in peace time.

In Italy, in an atmosphere of savage terror against the working class, "nationalization" of the trade unions, which in reality is tantamount to complete liquidation of the independent class organizations of the toiling masses, is being carried out with the support of the reformist leaders (D'Aragona and Co.). Before our very eyes, Italian fascism is doing what the bourgeoisie did not dare to do during the world war. The practice of "social peace" is being carried to its logical conclusion.

Finally, in France, the "Armed Nation" law has been passed, the essence of which is a monstrous militarization penetrating every pore of political and economic life. Accoring to this law, in the event of war the entire population regardless of age or sex will be mobilized at home as well as in the colonies. The workers in the factories will be converted into soldiers; the trade unions and all other associations will be militarized; the right to strike will be abolished. Anyone who takes part in a strike is liable to be court-martialled.

In Japan schools are militarized and penalties against strikes introduced in the event of war.

Germany abolishes one of the achievements of the German revolution—the eight-hour day; new legislation is being contemplated against strikes. The fascists are gradually penetrating the state and administrative apparatus.

In Poland the methods of the reactionaries used against the working class surpass any of the methods of the former tsarist regime. The national organizations of the White Russians and of other national minorities are being destroyed. By means of bribery and corruption Pilsudski's agencies are established whose business it is to secure a rear among the "national minorities" for the war against the U. S. S. R.

Similar methods are employed by Roumania to strengthen its rear in Bessarabia.

All these measures are but links in the chain of the war mobilization plan.

12. In this plan, no small place is provided for the armed detachments of the bourgeoisie. Prior to the world war of 1914, this form of a purely class counter-revolutionary army was not so wide-spread.

Capitalism in its fight against the mass movement utilized the organs of the "state," the standing army, the police and the gendarmerie. The growing acuteness of the class struggle after the war divested the bourgeoisie of the last remnants of "democracy." Everywhere the capitalists are organizing their fighting organizations, which in several countries exceed numerically that of the standing army. The function of these organizations is to support reaction at home in "peace time" and in war-time:

(a).—To form a permanent reliable service to be used for the suppression of the revolutionary movement that may arise during the war or at its conclusion.

(b).—In the event of mobilization to drive the masses to war at the point of the bayonet.

(c).—To form ready prepared cadres in the existing armies in the event of imperialist wars.

A serious factor in strengthening the capitalist rear guard in case of war is also the work carried on amongst women by the nationalist parties and fascist organizations, which take into account the women's role in the economic machine in case of war (i.e., in the munition factories, agriculture, transport, administration, etc.).

13. Every imperialist war is primarily war against the working class and the toiling masses. It abolishes all liberties, strengthens immensely the apparatus for exploitation and the machinery for the suppression of the working class struggle. But the war against the Soviet Union will be a special war. It will be a war directed against the working class and Communism all over the world and primarily in Europe. The emergency laws against the Communist Parties which the bourgeoisie is already enacting are calculated to clear the way for war, and to give the bourgeoisie a free hand. The bourgeoisie will endeavor to exterminate the most active sections of the proletariat.

This is clearly proved by the fight which is already in progress against Communism. By the hand of Chang Tso-lin and Chiang Kai-shek, it is strangling and shooting Communists in the most barbarous manner in China. It is assassinating them in Italy in Latin-America. It is shooting them down in the Balkans, in Roumania, in Bulgaria and in Poland and Lithuania. It brings charges against Communists for espionage in Czecho-Slovakia. In France it brings charges against them of being agents of a foreign government and is preparing a new campaign of persecutions against them. Scores are being sent to penal servitude in Germany and Hungary.

If in imperialist wars the bourgeoisie tramples under foot all "international agreements" which set a limit to barbarous methods of war, then in a super imperialist war, the class war against the Soviet Union and the insurrectionary colonial peoples, it is sure to make use of the most terrible means for the extermination of the toiling masses. The masses of the workers must now by this time clearly realize the counter-revolutionary character of the war preparations of the bourgeoisie

The Growth of Militarism.

14. Simultaneously with the measures being taken to strengthen the rear, the mobilization has taken place of all resources for the war front. Militarism is growing from day to day. War budgets are increasing (expenditure on armaments has almost doubled). The war industry has grown to monstrous dimensions. Having exhausted its resources of man power, modern capitalist armies are concentrating all attention upon the technical perfection of the war machine. The number of machine guns per unit, the range of artillery fire, the carrying capacity of aeroplanes, the effective radius of exploding bombs have all increased; one-man tanks have been introduced, new poison gases are being invented. Special inflammable material is being invented, which when projected is capable of destroying whole regiments and divisions; preparations are being made for the so-called germ war for spreading contagious diseases among the enemy troops, etc.

15. Future war will be a mechanized war. Every country will be converted into an enormous factory for the manufacture of the means of extermination. The motor will occupy the decisive place in this murder machine. But precisely because military technique has reached such a high stage of development the capitalist states will be obliged to throw enormous numbers of men in the theatre of military operations. For these aims the capitalist states are reorganizing their armies through the militarization of the entire population, in addition to the extensively developed permanent cadres. Owing to the extensive employment of aviation, the destructive power in modern bombs, the extensive range of artillery, the line of demarcation between the front and the rear will be obliterated. The future war with all its consequences will exceed in horror all that which the toiling masses were obliged to suffer in the war of 1914-18.

But as a consequence of this very character of the war, the role of the working class and its organizations, primarily the trade unions, without whose participation the conduct of war is impossible, will increase. Its resistance to war together with the revolutionary struggle in the army will be fatal for the imperialists.

Young Hill Flees.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Harry D. Hill, 21, wayward son of a prominent Streator physician, kept a jump ahead of police today as they combed Chicago for him in connection with the murder of his mother, Mrs. Eliza Hill, 55, whose body was found in a shallow grave in her home last Monday night.

"AUGUST 22"

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

The date of August 22 we commit to our memory. It becomes an historic. Capitalism got its pound of flesh. The working class got its lesson. August 22nd becomes a calarion call to struggle. August 22nd becomes our banner.

Capitalism is strong enough in America to deal the working class a brazen blow. But capitalism is not sure enough of its powers to be magnanimous. If there were a wave of revolutionary unrest in America, they would not dare to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. If there were no revolutionary unrest in the world at large, they would have been shown "clemency" and "fairness." As it is, their murder was decided as a lesson and a warning to the working class.

Sacco and Vanzetti were placed in jail in 1920 in consequence of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. Sacco and Vanzetti were murdered in 1927 in consequence of the peasant and workers revolution in China. American capitalism says to the American workers, "Beware!. If you are influenced by revolutionary ideas, you will have many Saccos and Vanzettis." American imperialism says to the imperialists of the world, "Look up to me! The thing you are afraid to do at home I do before the eyes of the whole world. Follow my example!"

American imperialism is a leader of world imperialism. (The world rulers are envious of their American brethren, though ostensibly protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti—in the interests of national rivalry!) American imperialism has more means to bribe the Socialists and the union leaders who, at the crucial moment, came to its aid by rejecting the general strike, and by a weak-kneed demeanor. But the tens of thousands who quit work on that memorable day of August 22nd to crowd Union Square, the tens of thousands who struck and demonstrated in other cities,—they understand the meaning of the murder, they have accepted the challenge, they, on their side have given a strong and solemn warning.

Shoulder to shoulder and arm to arm they stood at Union Square. It had not been so easy to quit work at 3 o'clock. One risked one's job, one risked one's bread. The watchful eye of the official union machinery followed every striker, noted the names of the rebels, put them on the blacklist. Tomorrow they may find themselves on the street. Today they could not withstand the call to strike. Today they are burning in feverish anguish at Union Square.

And what are the words that meet with the greatest acclaim? What are the slogans that kindle the hottest flames? It has long been known that the victims are innocent. One has learned to see the guilt of the Thayers and Fullers, the Lowells, Brandeises, Holmeses. One has paid them the tribute searing contempt. One has not the slightest hope of favorable action on the part of the State. One is tried of compassion, exhausted by pain, poisoned by hate. What else can be said? Where is the way out?

But something has happened. Relief has come. An avenue of release has been opened: a line of work appears to beckon!

"We shall build up the labor organizations," the speakers says, "in the first line the labor unions; we shall turn them into instruments of struggle against capitalist exploitation; we shall turn them into instruments of power to be able to halt the hand of the assassin in cases like that of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We shall build up a labor party to represent the laboring masses. We shall utilize the labor party as a united front of all the toiling and the exploited against the power of their exploiters. We shall create a political weapon to frustrate such attacks as the frame-up on Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We shall build up a mass Communist Party to march at the head of the entire labor movement and to unify all its activities by one clear aim along a cleary defined road—the abolition of capitalism."

There is a new meaning to those familiar words. New sparks kindle in the eyes of the assembled. A stone weights melts in their souls. "We shall work," "We shall struggle," "We shall build today and tomorrow," "We shall strengthen our ranks and steel our wills," the speakers say, and it is in the hearts of the masses that they read those words. It is like an oath. But still, the most wonderful, the actually liberating word has not been uttered. Now it comes.

"Only when the working class will hold the power of state will such trials against working class fighters become impossible." With power in the hands of the working class just punishment will be meted out for such crimes." "Proletarian justice will secure freedom for the working class!"

Waves of approval are surging from the human sea. Eyes sparkle. The ideology of class struggle, hitherto a set of thoughts, becomes a live emotional experience. Every drop of the workers' blood feels that they need working-class courts, working class laws, working class rule, a working class state! They life their eyes and see mounted policemen above their heads, machine guns on the sidewalks, armed motorcycles ready for action, revolvers and clubs everywhere, and they say to themselves, "This is the same power that has already dressed Sacco and Vanzetti in the garb of death. This power is a servant of our masters, it has been created to secure their domination. We cannot rely on it. We must have our own power in order to live like human beings."

The future has touched the assembled thousands with the fingers of a message. They felt clearly that it is there, that it is not a work of imagination. Thousands of workers of a sudden realized that they were citizens of a new world, for which they must fight, for which it is worth to suffer. In the light of this new world the death of Sacco and Vanzetti assumed in a new aspect. They do not die in vain. Their work is not lost. Their spirit lives. We will march on to that goal where they were driven by their impetuous souls. We shall arrive.

And that evening in front of the Freiheit,—was it not an oath of class unity, a merging of thousands of spirits in one spirit of revolt?

Nobody had called, nobody had organized the vigil. They came in thousands, many-tongued, many voiced; Italians, Greeks, Russians, Yanks. They stood in the dark while their spirits glowed. They stood in silence while cries pierced the dark sky overhead.

They lived with Sacco and Vanzetti. They went with them through the last hours of their lives, through the last agonies. A miracle happened. Fifteen—twenty thousand became like one as if in a prayer,—but not to god. Fifteen—twenty thousand vowed something which they will carry in their souls to the very grave,—but not a word was uttered. Only eyes spoke in the dark. Only hearts hammered in a heavily laden atmosphere. There was pain akin to a curse. There was sadness as gripping as trumpets. Tears in the eyes—steel in the blood. A lump of suffering in the throat—lightnings overhead.

Night vigil. Night light. Union square trees made heavy with dew. Night-cool iron railings. Broken up figures in the Freiheit windows. Engine throb of armed motorcycles nearby. White light over the news sheet in the Freiheit window, like a lone, forgotten tear. Green, red, yellow and blue auto lights in the streets. Black, thick serpents of human bodies—one line, another, a third. Closeness of strangers, mutual understanding without words, glances of friends who are afraid to speak lest they burst in a howl. Dark building walls all around. The sky sinking lower, heavier, darker, almost touching our heads. Tension, bated breath. Uncontrollable tremor. Then the news in the Freiheit window:

SACCO MURDERED.

A wail, a shout. A storm-tossed forest. Sharp cries are cutting the thick howl, knife-like. Man weep. Old, hardened men weep. Thousands curse.

VANZETTI MURDERED.

The Square is a storm-lashed ocean. Human waves rise, clash, wind, thunder. Lights flare. Horns shriek, engines vibrate. The walls sway. The ground underfoot shakes. Everything moves in a circle, around and around. Only the forlorn light in the Freiheit window shines in vain. There is nothing more to say.

Out of the chaos, the "International" is born. The song grows. The song gains momentum. This is the answer.

"ARISE YE PRISONERS OF STARVATION"

We will come. We will not forget. We have gained something on the date of August the 22nd. We will make it bigger, ~~deeper~~. Sacco is alive, Vanzetti is alive—in us, with us.

We will come.

We write down the date: August 22, 1927. We write down the names: Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco, Vanzetti Will Not Be Forgotten

By ALEX BITTELMAN

The rulers of America have gone through with the murder of our two brothers. Despite the demands of the toiling masses the world over, despite the demands of the workers of America Sacco and Vanzetti were killed to satisfy the class hatred, the interests and "prestige" of the American capitalist class.

Sacco and Vanzetti will not be forgotten. Already their suffering and martyr deaths have moved to protest and struggle against imperialist capitalist reaction in the United States large masses of workers all over the world. Already millions of workers are opening their eyes to the shame and hypocricy of capitalist class justice. Already the oppressed working masses are beginning to realize the menacing implications of the developing capitalist offensive upon the labor movement.

As far as the working class is concerned the martyr deaths of Sacco and Vanzetti must mark a fresh concentration of effort for strengthening the struggles of the workers against the capitalists. The American labor movement must draw all conclusions and learn all the lessons from the action of the American capitalist class in murdering Sacoo and Vanzetti. More organization, more consciousness and more militancy—this must be the answer of the working class to the challenge of American imperialism.

Sacco and Vanzetti will not be forgotten. Already they have become a living part of the struggle of the oppressed masses all over the world. Already they have become symbolic of the suffering and misery of the millions of unskilled and semi-skilled workers oppressed and persecuted by American capitalism. Already their death is becoming the rallying cry for struggle against capitalist oppression with renewed efforts in all parts of the world.

The attack upon the labor movement must be resisted and working class power must be mobilized to repel the capitalist offensive. The working class militants against whom this attack is directed in the first instance must redouble their efforts towards the awakening and molization of the American working class. Only in this manner will we fullfil our duty to the working class and to the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Political consciousness and political struggle must rise in scope and intensity. The masses must learn—and are learning—that reliance can be placed upon anything else but the organized power of the exploited masses. Intensify the struggle for the organization of the unorganized. Push forward with greater vigor the strengthening of the trade unions and their radicalization. More efforts must be invested in the struggle against imperialism, militarism and war. And more energy must be devoted to the promotion of independent political action by the workers in the struggle against the capitalist dictatorship and for the rule of the working class.

"CARRY ON!"

By ROSE BARON

Sec'y Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

The fight is not finished. It has merely begun. The memories of our martyred comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti must be perpetuated. The heroic efforts of the many comrades who voluntarily aided us in our work must not be in vain, nor must the gallant deaths of our glorious dead be in vain.

Soon the Emergency Committee will no longer exist. It has served its purpose. We were beaten by sheer force of barbaric power.

We appeal to all those who aided us in the fight not to give up hope. We ask them to remember the heroism of Sacco and Vanzetti. We ask them to think of their revolutionary ideals.

The work of rescuing class war prisoners will go on. The International Labor Defense, the creator of the Emergency Committee, will continue to function for framed-up workers in the prisons and courts of this corrupt country.

We have just witnessed a titanic episode in the age-old war of the classes. We have made many new friends. To those friends as well as to our old comrades we ask that this harrowing experience be made a bond of sympathy which will enable us to meet our enemies in the future with unbroken front ranks.

To the hundreds of thousands of workers who struck and demonstrated in Union Square we say that their efforts were not in vain. You are the spearhead of the militant working class. Carry on.

What are we to do so that the struggle may not be in vain?

Build the International Labor Defense. Read the Labor Defender. Take an active part in freeing all class war prisoners. Urge your fellow-workers to do the same.

Help to build The DAILY WORKER. When all other newspapers either ignored or falsified the facts on the issue the WORKER pointed to the correct path. It exposed criminal Thayer, the reactionary Fuller and the murder-bent Advisory Committee.

We have been asked to tell of the work which we did in the effort to burst the bars of Charlestown Prison and bring Sacco and Vanzetti back to the ranks of our fighting army. There is little we can say. Let us not talk of what we have done but to what lies ahead of us.

Build the I. L. D.

Build The DAILY WORKER.

Build a wall of Labor against the frame-up system.

In this way only can we carry on the class war effectively. Only in this way can we avenge the death of our dear comrades who died gloriously with revolutionary messages upon their lips.

"It's a Fine Day"--Said Governor Fuller

By MICHAEL GOLD

Someone must write a play about Sacco and Vanzetti. This is now one of our great proletarian legends—it is a perfect epic of the new America.

I suggest Governor Fuller as the villain of the piece. Capitalism is the real villain, the impersonal profit machine.—Capitalism, punishing its two rebels.

But on the stage one must have flesh and blood—not abstractions. Governor Fuller will do as a perfect symbol of capitalism in this great play yet to be written.

It is the day of the execution. The morning sun glitters on the dirty gold dome of the State House in Boston. It is a hot stifling day, a day of swamp mists and heavy breathing. A hundred thousand clerks clatter meekly to work, sweating under their straw hats. The cops suffer in their blue woolen suits and choker collars. It's a fine day for swimming, but the Governor comes to the State House at 10 o'clock.

He greets the newspaper boys with his usual wholesome smile. They immediately write for the first editions:

"The Governor looked rested, as if he had had a good night's sleep. His eyes were clear and friendly, his rosy face beamed. It's a fine morning, isn't it, he said to the newspapermen. I'll be here at my desk until midnight, boys, doing my duty."

He is a tall, handsome man, the Governor, with the strong face of a Roman senator. He is a portly magnifico of the New American Empire, the stern, hard-boiled, genial, ignorant type ruler we are breeding in this country. He was once a trick bicycle rider, this Governor; then he owned a bicycle repair shop; then, when automobiles came in, he was shrewd enough to take to selling them instead of bicycles; now he has about 13 million dollars in the bank, and firmly believes every American boy can rise like himself from trick bicycle rider to Governor of Massachusetts.

He enters ~~his office. Four hard-boiled~~ looking men take chairs about him. They have the iron faces and gimlet eyes of detectives; but they are a little higher than that in the social scale; they are the Governor's political advisers.

They are here to help him do his duty, the duty for which he gave up a pleasant holiday at the beach. All day delegations are to arrive, to plead with the Governor for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

In the narrow crooked streets of Boston the mobs of worried clerks rush about their business. The cafeterias are crowded. Taxicabs carve their way through the traffic. The cops sweat and worry. Everyone is tense. Buying and selling goes on as usual—nothing must ever disturb this in America.

But the newsboys are shouting, in a chant like the chorus of a mad futurist play:

"Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die, Must Die!"

And everyone mutters, converses, comments, worries. They agree that Sacco and Vanzetti must die—aren't they Italians? aren't they anarchists? But the clerks worry—the city worries.

Governor Fuller doesn't worry. He is genial as the delegations are ushered in. He takes the offensive. A liberal woman poet timidly tries to convince him that capital punishment is both wicked and inefficient. He puts her through a cool smiling catechism. What does she know about criminals? What does she know about law? She flounders and stutters, and then retreats in tears. The Governor smiles at his "political advisers"; they smile at him.

A labor delegation from New York arrives. They are right wing leaders in the needle trades who refused to call a protest strike against the execution, believing that friendly words with the Governor would be as effective.

The Governor regards them with a smile of pleasure. Before even that word-hero Judge Panken or that A. F. of L. poet Shiplacoff can utter a sound, Fuller has begun attacking them with questions. How do they know Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent? How do they know Judge Thayer was prejudiced? Were they present at the trial? Do they live in Massachusetts? They try to put in a few feeble arguments, but this irritates the Governor, so they desist.

They do not wish to offend him—it may prejudice him—they still believe there are stirrings of mercy in the chill millionaire's heart.

Two clubwomen arrive from Newport, R. I., women with important husbands. They are pink liberals, and they think the poor Italians should be given another chance, or at least life imprisonment, and they have had tea and dinners with the Governor's wife in the past, and they know Mr. Fuller is a good man. He listens to them, assures them politely he will ponder and pray over their fluttering words, and bows them out. They are rather confused, but hopeful.

Whitefaced liberals with big names troop in all day. They have followed this case, and until the last minute will not believe the fair name of America is to be sullied by the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. They believe in the pure white abstraction they call "Justice." They are sure one need only present the "facts" to the Governor. They believe in "reason." They believe that there are no classes or class war in America, but that this case is simply a miscarriage of "Justice."

Now they are bumping head first against the stone wall of the capitalist dictatorship and class justice. They are puzzled, alarmed, sickened by the Governor's smooth determination. They repeat whole pages of the "Nation" and the "New Republic" at him. They utter the thousand and one phrases dear to liberalism, but the Governor sheds them like a duck's back, and he politely teases the liberals. He is a realist, this governor; he is class-conscious, he despises liberals. But he is always polite.

They stagger out into the street, their world shattered. Liberal phrases do not soften a class-conscious Governor's heart. They can't understand it at all. And the Governor is smiling at his "advisers" and they are smiling at him.

From every corner of the world thousands of telegrams poured in on the Governor. They were last-minute, desperate messages from mayors, congressmen, labor organizations, churches, writers, Japanese, French, Italian, American, African. A whole world was pleading for mercy to two innocent men. It was the biggest event in recent history—this first international protest on a labor issue.

The telegrams arrived, but the newspapermen told their friends later something that they had not the courage to print, namely:—

That These Telegrams Were Never Read!

They were tossed into huge wastebaskets, and then taken away and burned by the janitor. They were on the floor, they were in the corners, they were cynically walked upon by the class-conscious Governor of Massachusetts—the electric-chair Governor.

Justice For Labor In Massachusetts

By Fred Ellis

"It's a Fine Day"-- Said Gov. Fuller

The test of his humanity came when Mrs. Sacco and the sister of Vanzetti were ushered in. He listened to them long and politely, but with a set face. He catechised them, too, on the crime, and pointed out various facts that had "convinced" him of the workers' guilt.

This was at nine o'clock in the evening. The two women were too sad and nerve-wracked to argue with the Governor. They repeated pitiful unanswerable humiliating words; they asked for mercy.

The Russian Soviets have granted mercy to thousands of White Guardists who threw bombs, who invaded the country, who burned villages and slaughtered babies and old men. When one's enemy is no longer dangerous, one must be merciful. Revolutionsits are not sadists; revolutionists do not believe in murder; revolutionists kill only in defense of the workers' cause; revolutionists have a great faith that some day there will be a red dawn on the world, and in the skies will be written the beautiful "word over all": Reconciliation.

But Governor Fuller was faintly annoyed at the two women, and would not discuss the matter of mercy. It is not a word in the legal books; it is not a word in the lexicon of capitalism.

He sent the women out in tears. He said: "I am afraid I will have to go through with my duty."

There is a pious legend among the voter-boobs of Massachusetts that Governor Fuller "is a good man." John Howard Lawson, in his satirical play, "Loud Speaker" strangely previsaged this by having his Babbitt hero run for governor on a platform with the single slogan: "Harry U. Collins Is a Good Man." It sounds like a joke, but in Massachusetts it is not a joke. Nearly everyone there believes that Governor Fuller is a good man, and that's why they vote for him.

It is a legend that has been carefully built up. Plumbers, paupers and policemen of Boston will tell you with tears in their eyes how Governor Fuller has never accepted a cent of his salary since he has been Governor; how kind he is to his wife; how he loves his children; how genial he is to his workers; how democratically fond he is of poker and beer; what a firm churchman he is; how much he gives to charity every year.

But this "good man" has for several years persisted in his determination that Sacco and Vanzetti must die. And he has whipped up a storm of newspaper prejudice against the men; he has schemed and plotted and framed careful publicity campaigns; he has followed his murder plan through like an expert criminal, he has slept on it month after month.

His mind was made up years ago. His investigation was a piece of political sadism. He knew he would find the men guilty; but he called in witness after witness, and taunted them, and jeered at them. One woman witness for the defense, it is said, left in tears. The Governor had hinted that she was the paid mistress of one of the lawyers for Sacco and Vanzetti.

On this last day Fuller enjoyed torturing the desperate friends of Sacco and Vanzetti who came before him. Someone who went to see him said the Governor was radiant; his "mental attitude was that of a rooster flapping its wings." He really enjoyed this last day, when sobbing women came to him and knelt for mercy.

At precisely midnight Francis Fisher Kane, former Federal Distreit Attorney in Pennsylvania, was in the Governor's office. He was telling the Governor of the tactics of the Department of Justice and its agents provocateurs, a situation he knows from the inside. He begged the Governor to reprieve Sacco and Vanzetti until this federal angle of the case had been cleared up, and the files showing the part the Department of Justice had played in the Sacco case examined.

The Governor went on listening with his polite, satisfied smile. He pretended to be affected by these pleas, impressed by Mr. Kane's logic. He promised he would take the matter under advisement. A humorous murderer he is, a Massachusetts wit, an electric chair clown!

For when Mr. Kane came into the street, his heart beating with a wild, last-minute hopefulness as a result of the Governor's friendly smile, he was startled by the shouting of the newsboys.

They were shouting:

"Sacco Executed at 12.19."

The execution had been going on a few miles away in Charlestown, all during those minutes when the Governor was politely pretending to listen to Mr. Kane's appeal. The Governor had known all the time that the juice was being released into the electric chair. The Governor had been baiting Mr. Kane. The Governor, that good man, had been having his last delightful thrill of sadism.

Yes, Governor Fuller is a good man. Yes, Massachusetts is a good state, and America is a good country. And all over the world there are millions who will never forget Sacco and Vanzetti, nor forgive the good people who murdered them.

MURDER AT MIDNIGHT

By A. B. MAGIL

In Memoriam Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Betrayed and Murdered In The American Class War, August 22, 1927.

I.

"Both are dead."

Dead.
Press the button. Turn on the juice.
Dead.
Waiting, waiting.
For what?
Two wops to sit down in a chair
And be dead.
Show's over.
Time to go home, go to bed.
Time to forget, put it out of your head.
Dead.
(Death. Grim Reaper. Symbolic. Cloak. Hood.
Scythe. Skull.)
Dead.
Both.

I walked out into the huge soft night.
No light.
Someone had strangled the stars.

II.

Seven years to make a shroud.
Seven years to make it strong enough
To hold the whole of life.
(Wonder how long it takes to make an electric chair?)
Seven years for two wops.
Dying.
Dead.
"Massachusetts is too proud——"
Seven years to make a shroud

IV.

Three men in frock coats playing dice.
Three men and a fourth playing with skulls.
Fingers weblike and precise,
Caressing calmly the fluttering dice.
Harvard accents glide like gulls
From lips like nooses hard and strong.
What are the stakes? How long, how long?
Four men in frock coats playing dice.
Dice. Are they loaded?.
Loaded. Bloated.
Four bloated frock coats playing with skulls.

V.

And on two faces hangs the mask
Of the immobile anguish of the years.
This is the honorable task
Of those unbitten by subtle doubts or fears.
Climb, you lousy wops, into your holes.
The god of the Fullers and Thayers will care for your souls.

VI.

Nights are made black for deeds like this.
Nights are made black, muffled and secret.
Press the button. Turn on the juice.
Show's over.

And the corroding dawn,
Waiting,
Steals like a thief, trembling and ghastly white,
Through the thick, bolted night.

The job is done.
Whistles shriek in factory and mill.
And the implacable sun,
Climbing,
Hangs splendid and terrible and still.

VII.

Go back, slaves, go back.
Go back to the factories, the dancing machines.
Go back, dancing slaves.

Noon.
(The sun is a big round brass spittoon).
Life seethes, blown up.
Collapses like a pricked balloon.
Night.
"Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves."

VIII.

Too intolerably blue, empty, shining, remote the sky.
Too intolerably serene, calm the tall, greatwinded
trees.
Too green every leaf, every grass.
Seared by no sadness, no blight even of the cool
keen panting autumn.
The brown stain of the taking away.
Nothing to mar, no hunger of stamped-out growing,
no cry
Out of denial.

Trees lift strenuous leanness, raise petulant hands, drag darkness
To them.
Nothing, nothing to mar.

IX.

Each sound is their sound
Life demands life.
Beyond the pathos and the pain
That humans martyr humans with
Their blood shouts over all the earth
Blood, red blood.
My brothers' blood is on my hands.
My brothers' agony burns my flesh.
Agony. Blood.
On my hands.

X.

Pity the wretches that will sit in the cells
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails.
Pity the poor stiffs that will come after
To live a while in those exquisite hells.
To live and hear always two voices, always the tread
Of feet always, always dead.

Pity the fellows that will scrub the floors and walls
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails.
And never be able to wash away
The great trembling stain
Of Sacco's and Vanzetti's pain.
("The men of this dying old society they brutally have pulled me away from the embrace of your brother and your poor mother.")

Pity the rats that will gnaw the moldy crumbs
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails.
And smell the smell of their blood
And gasp.
("I would not wish to a dog or to a snake, to the most low and misfortunate creature of the earth—I would not wish to any of them what I have had to suffer for things that I am not guilty of.")
Pity them, pity them all.

XI.

Saeco And Vanzetti Must Not Die!
Shrill signs hurl the workers' cry.
Strike. Protest. Telegram.
Massachusetts doesn't give a damn.
A million-throated workers' crying.
Sacco and Vanzetti dying, dying.
Sacco and Vanzetti dead.
Dead.

WE SHALL NOT SOON FORGET!

XII.

Hang up your justice on the sour-apple tree of your pride.
Hand it up, I say, for vultures to feed on,
For soft worm fattening, for the gladdening of all gnawing, ravenous things.
Hang it up where its resonant stink will fill every corner and crack of the earth.
Swing it, swing it.
Hang up your justice on the sour-apple tree of your pride.

other tendencies in the labor movement. He did valiant work in the defense and we marched together on the picket line, went to jail together, united our forces in a common effort to make the Boston strike successful, etc. Some day men like Alfred Baker Lewis and Upton Sinclair and others who believe in labor unity not labor division and in fighting capitalism not Communism will realize that the socialist party officialdom believes otherwise, that it cannot be removed, that it uses the Baker Lewises and Sinclairs as fig leaves to cover its reactionary nakedness and they will break with the party which serves capitalism by dividing and weakening the labor movement.

9. "PROGRESSIVE" CAPITALIST POLITICIANS PROP UP THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM IN TIME OF CRISIS. Brandeis's refusal to intervene on the silly pretext that he had "personal relations with people interested in the case" and Borah's shameful declaration that no self-respecting government would yield to "the opinion of mankind" or demonstrations of popular will—are outstanding evidences of the fact that the so-called progressives are props of capitalism who in time of crisis find "progressive" justifications for reactionary acts.

10. WE MUST BUILD A LABOR PARTY AND FIGHT FOR A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT. The necessity for labor to unite its forces politically, clean out the agents of the capitalist political parties from leadership in its own ranks and sweep the boss-controlled judges, legislators and executives out of power is an obvious lesson from the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

11. WE MUST FIGHT FOR THE ABOLITION OF THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM. It is not merely a Thayer or a Fuller or a Katzmann but the system that breeds Thayers and Fullers and Katzmanns, that exploits workers and persecutes them for activity on behalf of their class—it is the capitalist system that has murdered our two comrades.

12. THE WORKERS' MOVEMENT CANNOT BE DESTROYED BY TERROR. History is on our side in the class struggle. All the forces of social development lead to the strengthening and ultimate triumph of our movement. An act of class brutality and terror, such as the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, in place of frightening the workers into desertion of our movement has the opposite result. It arouses and awakens countless fresh hosts of workers. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has disillusioned millions of workers with the capitalist courts, has stirred up their militancy, driven them to the left, put them in a fighting mood. It has weakened the ruling class by unmasking it. It has strengthened international proletarian solidarity by teaching the workers of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and North and South America to act together in a common cause. It has brought new sympathy and support to the labor movement from intellectuals still under the sway of belief in capitalism and its institutions. Those who already sympathized have become more actively sympathetic. The Heywood Brouns and Edna Saint Vincent Millays, the Lawsons and Dos Passos and innumerable other writers and artists have been brought closer to the workers' movement, had their sympathy aroused and some breath of our struggle and our cause must necessarily pass into their writings, serving to undermine capitalism ideologically and prepare the way for a better social order. Sacco and Vanzetti fought for the organization of certain unorganized workers and against capitalism. A little handful of workers followed them and knew of them. Today they have been made into martyrs and heroes and millions follow them into a struggle for the organization of the unorganized and against the capitalist system. In life their voice reached only handfuls. In death their voice is heard round the world. Sacco and Vanzetti are taking their own vengeance. That which was weak in them has perished. That which was strong has been magnified into a powerful force that makes the mighty tremble in their places of power. Ours is the task of keeping alive the memory of their struggles and sufferings, their heroism and their martyrdom. Of carrying on the cause of labor for which they died, of organizing the unorganized workers, of unifying labor's forces, of putting an end to the frame-up system. Of abolishing capitalist justice, capitalist control of courts and governors, of abolishing the system whose enemy and whose victim they were. Let us pledge ourselves that they shall not have died in vain. Let us pledge ourselves to carry on the cause for which they fought and died until the workers are free and capitalism no longer exists on the face of the earth. That is their wish. For that they died. For that we must live and fight. And in that manner will the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti be avenged.

The Labor Movement and the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By WM. Z. FOSTER

THE American ruling class has dared to execute our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. In the face of a world-wide protest of the workers and notwithstanding the condemnation of everybody with even a tinge of liberalism in their makeup, the exploiters, throwing aside even the pretenses of legality, have ventured to do away with these two loyal champions of the working class. It was a brutal act of terrorism, which will bring no profit to the capitalists. It was a cynical example of class justice which will waken masses of workers to the hypocrises and horrors of capitalism.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case far transcends in significance the framed-up charge of murder which furnished the technical basis of it. It is a political issue of the most vital importance. The workers in other countries understood this infinitely better than here. Hence, their monster demonstrations. The capitalists, strong and arrogant in their profits of imperialism, wrung from the exploited workers all over the world, saw in the Sacco-Vanzetti execution an opportunity to deliver an attack at the labor movement, through its most advanced section, the left wing. Hence, the tryants struck their deadly blow.

In this great class drama what a sorry role was played by the men who stand at the head of the trade unions. Once again they have acted as agents of the employers. Instead of trying to save Sacco and Vanzetti and thus check this offensive of the employers against the workers, they have facilitated their execution. Great mass strikes, militant demonstrations of all kinds were all that could have saved Sacco and Vanzetti. But these labor lieutentants would have none of such movements. They blocked every effort at real struggle against the executioners of our comrades. Their long course of treachery was climaxed in their last minute statements admitting the guilt of Sacco and Vanzetti (statements of A. F. of L., Chicago Federation of Labor, etc.) and asking that their sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

The betrayal of the workers by their false leaders evidenced by such treacherous policies as support of the old capitalist parties, refusal to organize the unorganized, establishment of the B. & O. Plan, etc., receives just one more expression in their shameful failure to support Sacco and Vanzetti. It was such treason by the so-called leaders of labor that jailed Mooney and Billings and that has kept them imprisoned for all these years.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead, but the cause for which they died goes on, fertilized by the blood of these new martyrs. It is our duty to make the capitalists pay as dearly as possible for these cold-hearted murders. Millions of workers all over the world are aroused and indignant at this attack upon their leaders and their organizations. It is our big task to point out to them the full political meaning of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, to teach them that the same forces that murdered our comrades are those that oppress the workers in the shops and subject them to the bitterest of exploitation.

The Sacco-Vanzetti execution must be the signal for a renewed struggle against capitalism on every front. One phase of this must be a drive to free all political prisoners. To the eternal shame of the labor movement such men as Mooney, Billings and others remain year after year in jail.

Every trade union, every shop must be made to ring with protests against the assassinations of their comrades. The masses of workers must be turned out to great memorial protest meetings in all industrial districts. August 22nd must be set aside as a day upon which the proletariat all over the world demonstrates against the murder of our comrades and for the emancipation of the workers.

WITHOUT THE BOSSES

Tune of America.

"--SHALL NOT HAVE DIED IN VAIN"

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

MONDAY at midnight they were murdered. The working class was not strong enough to stop it. Our shame, our grief and our indignation are fused in a universal desire to avenge their death. But how shall we do it?

1. INDIVIDUAL VENGEANCE IS IMPOTENT. Certain individualists who see society and its processes only as the work of good individuals and bad individuals have tried to concentrate their hatred upon Fuller or Thayer or Katzmann. They are hateful, contemptible, despicable creatures. Some day, when the working class has won power in America, our tribunals will call them to account for the murder of our comrades. But today the execution of individual vengeance upon them would not move the working class one step forward, would not weaken the frame-up system one iota—would rather strengthen it in the wave of reaction that would follow. There are a thousand Thayers on a thousand judicial benches, a thousand Katzmanns functioning as district attorneys. If we were to execute one of them thru individual action it would only serve to delude our class into forgetting the frame-up system, into believing that Sacco and Vanzetti have been avenged, into forgetting the real culprit, the capitalist system and the capitalist control of government. Remove Thayer or Fuller or Katzmann from the scene and the system that created them and placed them in positions of power over the lives and destinies of their fellow men would create fresh tyrants to take their places. Judge Gary died last week but the steel trust continues to coin the sweat and the blood of workers into solid gold. If every individual directly connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up locally and nationally were to die tomorrow, the frame-up system would remain unshaken.

2. WORKERS CAN EXPECT NO JUSTICE IN THE CAPITALIST COURTS. If we think it is only because the judge happened to be Webster Thayer that Sacco and Vanzetti have been murdered, then we have learned nothing from our bitter experience. But there is a lesson that every worker must learn. It is taught by the Mooney case, it is taught by the Centralia case, it is taught by the Anita Whitney case, it is taught by the Milk Wagon Drivers' case and the Stone-cutter's case, it was taught by the Haymarket case, it is taught by every injunction, every verdict of guilty against a picket, every violation of free speech, press or assemblage rights. That these dead comrades of ours shall not have died in vain, every worker in our land must be made to understand it. "Workers can expect no justice from the capitalist courts."

3. OUR GOVERNMENT IS SO CONSTRUCTED AS TO THWART THE POPULAR WILL. The Declaration of Independence speaks of a "decent respect for the opinions of mankind." Mankind thruout the world voiced the opinion that these two men were innocent and must at least get a fair trial. But all agencies of government involved showed an indecent contempt for the opinions of mankind. And they also showed contempt for the opinions and will of the American people. The distinguished "progressive" Senator Borah even thot it would be "cowardly" to yield to popular demand. Yet judges and senators and governors are supposed to be "public servants" and express the will of the people. But our government is so constructed that the very opposite is true. Setting aside the fact that wealth controls press and pulpit and school, the big political parties, individual politicians, appointments, nominations and elections, courts, executives and legislatures—considering the question purely from the standpoint of abstract democracy, —it is evident that our government with its system of checks and balances, of judicial legislation and contempt proceedings, of precedent, of "independent" judiciary, of growing executive power, of appointment, of two-party system, etc., etc. is not responsive to popular will. Now Senator Borah the "progressive" makes a boast of this fact.

4. OUR RULING CLASS WILL NOT GIVE UP ITS POWER WITHOUT A STRUGGLE. Socialists and liberals have tried to promote the illusion that America is "different." Altho history shows no single instance of a ruling class that has relinquished its power and privilges without a struggle, America is supposed to be a democracy responsive to popular will where a majority opinion will be sufficient to destroy the capitalist system and institute a better social order by just voting it in. The American master class is supposed to be ready to give up its privilges without a struggle. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, proves the opposite. Every frame-up case, every strike, every injunction, every use of police or troops in strikes, proves the opposite. When steel workers fight for an eight-hour day—not to abolish capitalism but just to live a little more decently under it—the troops are called out. When miners fight for steady employment or a living wage—not challenging the system but fighting for a small additional share of the wealth they produce—barbed wire and machine guns are set up, mine guards and militia called out, meetings broken up, speeches forbidden, pickets slaughtered, leaders arrested and local unions smashed by force. If the American ruling class uses all the power of wealth and government, of courts and armed force against a mere fight for a living wage to what lengths will it not go against the workers if they attempt to abolish the capitalist system? Any one who cannot see the character of the American ruling class and its use of government must be blind indeed. American labor history is full of bloody pages and it has not yet challenged the capitalist system in serious combat. The Colorado massacre, Centralia, Homestead, McKeesport, Gary, West Virginia, Lawrence, Ludlow, Lowell, San Pedro, Everett, Butte, Calumet—to name any industrial center is to call up visions of a bloody battle in which workers were attacked by armed force not for challenging the capitalist system but merely for asking for the right to organize or to receive something approximating a living wage. Our ruling class is more arrogant and more brutal than most and will never surrender its privilege and power without a struggle.

5. WHILE USING EVERY LEGAL RECOURSE WE MUST BUILD UP A MASS MOVEMENT FOR WORKERS' DEFENSE. Our admiration for the devotion and self-sacrifice of the men and women who made up the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston must not be permitted to blind us to one fatal and fundamental mistake that they made in their conduct of the case. We must draw all the lessons so that such tragedies will be combatted more effectually and prevented in the future. That mistake was a too great and exclusive dependence upon the legal processes of the courts and a deliberate effort at discouraging demonstrations and mass protests in America. They had seven years in which to build up a powerful mass movement which would have terrified the Massachusetts officials and their masters and stayed the hand of the executioner. They did not sufficiently understand the class mechanism involved, did not see the lesson of the Mooney case, the Centralia case and a thousand other frame-ups. They confidently counted upon an abstract classless "justice" and nourished too many illusions in the legal processes of the capitalist courts. They kept the workers believing that the courts would give justice, that the governor would give justice. For seven years when they might have been building a powerful mass movement to save Sacco and Vanzetti they discouraged the building of such a movement. Only after Fuller's decision a few weeks ago, did they perceive their mistake (or rather exhaust their illusions) when it was already too late and only a few weeks remained to build up a mass movement to arouse the popular will and save our two comrades. It is correct to use and exhaust every legal process that capitalist proceedure allows but militant workers can expect no justice from capitalist courts except where the courts dare not carry thru the act of injustice. The only protection for militant workers is the organized power of the working class and all its allies and sympathizers. It was mass protest that saved Tom Mooney from death. Had we begun seven years ago, we could have built such a movement for Sacco and Vanzetti that they would not have dared to kill them.

6. A PERMANENT DEFENSE COMMITTEE IS NEEDED. The Sacco-Vanzetti case is not an isolated one. Acts of injustice, arrests for labor activity, frame-ups, occur in every strike and in every struggle. Dramatic cases ONCE THEY HAVE BEEN SUFFICIENTLY DRAMATIZED can and no doubt should beget their special committee. But until they have attracted national and international attention? And the cases that never attract national and international attention? Such a permanent defense committee can handle EVERY case, dramatic or undramatic, grow with every case, learn with every case so as to be more efficient, more versed in the ways of courts and lawyers and frame-ups and publicity and protest, build up a continuous and cumulative public opinion against the whole system of class injustice and frame-ups, unite all branches of the labor movement so that anarchists do not have to depend only on anarchists, Communists on Communists, socialist on socialists, trade unionists on trade unionists, or a milliner let us say only on other milliners for defense. Even where a case is dramatic enough to warrant a special committee, a permanent defense organization could build a special defense committee more quickly and more efficiently than a bunch of inexperienced and bungling amateurs. Such a permanent defense organization representative of and open to all shades of opinion in the labor movement and ready to defend all cases of class injustice is the INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE. It must be built and strengthened.

7. WE MUST UNITE THE LABOR MOVEMENT AND STRENGTHEN IT. The weakness of the American labor movement proved fatal in the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti. As long as it is divided, as long as there are innumerable warring groups, as long as militants are expelled and opponents of militant struggle are in control of the official machinery, our master class can afford to laugh at the feeble protest of the working class. That Sacco and Vanzetti shall not have died in vain, we must organize the unorganized, unite the warring unions, strengthen the labor movement, make it all inclusive of every tendency, develop its militancy and fighting spirit, eliminate its corrupt bureaucracy that shows no militancy in fighting capitalism but much militancy in fighting against militant workers.

8. THE SOCIALIST PARTY BY FIGHTING UNITED FRONTS IS WEAKENING THE LABOR MOVEMENT AND SERVING CAPITALISM. The biggest demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti were held in New York in Union Square. In these demonstrations the International Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the Emergency Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the International Labor Defense, the I. W. W., the Workers Party, various trade unions and other labor organizations united. The socialist party refused to join in the demonstrations. A strike was called for August 22nd, the day set for the execution. The socialist party condemned the strike and instructed its adherents not to participate. Business agents of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers under socialist control instructed bosses in various shops to fire any worker going out on strike. When the Workers Party wrote a letter to the socialist party saying: "However great our differences may be we must set them aside and unite our forces in this hour of need," August Claessens threw the letter on the floor in the presence of the messenger who gave it to him. Thus the socialist party did its share to weaken the movement to save Sacco and Vanzetti and to perpetuate division and dissension in the labor movement. Notable exception must be made in the case of Alfred Baker Lewis in Boston who was actively engaged in united front activities with Communists, anarchists and

Our Murdered Comrades

By HARRY MEYERS.

So you've left us Nicola Sacco—
And you too, Bartolomeo Vanzetti—
You've sampled American democracy as it is understood in Boston.
Boston, the hub of culture.
Here they grind out the blood of the workers
So that some be-spectacled, anemic, knock-kneed young idlers might stay.
That they might acquaint themselves with the prophets of the past
  while stoning the prophets of the present.
That they might admire the art of Dante, Boccaccio and other
Italians of the past and slaying the Italians of the present.
You have left to join the other fighters of the class-struggle.
The Chicago anarchists who paid with their lives for the 8-hour day.
Ling the impetuous, Parsons the studious, Fisher the warm-hearted,
Engels the fiery one, and Spiess the scholar, torch-holders of the future.
You have left to join the other fighters of the class struggle.
Joe Hill, the singer divine who fell before a firing squad in Utah.
Wesley Everest, unsexed and lynched by the 100%'s of Centralia.
Frank Little, the I. W. W. organizer lynched by the forces of smug re-

Farewell, Sacco, Vanzetti—fighters, supreme heroes magnificent
We'll never forget.
THE DEATH WATCH

American Workers Must Learn!

By W. W. WEINSTONE

Despite the fact that the history of the class struggle in America is filled with the brutality of the capitalist class, with violence and murder against individuals and masses of workers, there was a widespread illusion among a great number of people that Sacco and Vanzetti would not be executed.

This illusion affected not only the liberals and humanitarians in whose hearts "hope springs eternally," but the petty-bourgeois socialists as well. So brazen has been the frame-up, so threadbare the evidence and so profound the protest that these people believed the Massachusetts Bourbons would not dare go through with the sentence. But these petty-bourgeois liberals, humanitarians and socialists refuse to recognize the period in which we live —a period of sharp and decisive class struggle and of imperialist reaction.

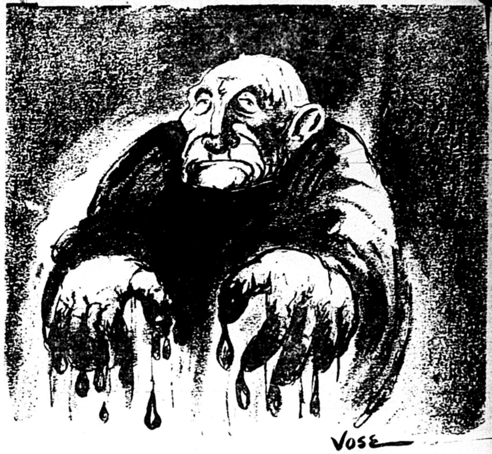
These people failed to aid in mobilizing the masses of labor because they do not understand the position of American capitalism today and the transformation of America from a period of so-called "liberalism" and "democracy" to the stark reactionary country which it is today. The American capitalist class has always been vengeful and despotic toward the workers. Yet 1887, knew a Governor Altgeld who, still bearing the traditions of the pre-monopoly period, freed the remaining victims of the Haymarket outrage. The Fullers of today are the products of the monopoly period in which a despotic financial oligarchy rules with an iron hand over industry and government. It is this reactionary, imperialist oligarchy that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti.

Justice under American imperialism today is the justice of a Mussolini that knows no law but force and no weapon but murder toward the working class. In the days of Altgeld, American capitalism still found use of fine phrases and democratic gestures to delude the American masses. But that epoch was drawn to a close with the imperialist war when the governor who expounded the "New Freedom," Wilson, became the president who plunged America into the world slaughter, the author of the treacherous League of Nations and the collaborator of the enslaving Versailles treaty.

The Sacco-Vanzetti murder is the bloody seal that affirms the period of imperialist domination of America, the period of capitalist reaction, the period of raids and deportations against foreign-born workers, the period of imperialist war and decisive class struggles. This period knows no more of the America, an "asylum" for foreign-born workers. This is a period when America has become instead a huge penitentiary for all labor! What does this American imperialism care for the protest of international labor? It feels strong! Its treasuries are overflowing with the riches of the world. It feels and knows it is the banker to the world. With the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti it hurls a challenge to the working class. As the Caesars of old crushed the protest of their slaves and confirmed their power by stringing the limbs of their victims along the Appian way that all might see and tremble, so the American Caesars crushed the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti before the public gaze of millions, that the huge masses of workers may see the brutal might of American capitalim and submit unprotestingly to its yoke.

This is the reactionary America that speaks the language of the executioner. This is the America that keeps Mooney in jail, that hangs the Frank Littles, that prepares conscription laws against foreign-born labor, that prepares fresh attacks upon the wages and working conditions of American labor. This is the America that carried through the foul execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Petty-bourgeois illusions regarding this America means paralysis for the working class and in the end a betrayal to the struggle for the defense against reaction—a betrayal of the mobilization of the masses to crush the power of the capitalist class.

In this struggle for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti, the socialist party and its allies, the Wolls and Greens, where they have not given direct assistance to these hangmen (as in the case of Green and Woll), have sewed illusions among the workers to expect mercy from these executioners of the capitalist class. American labor must learn its lesson. Unceasing class struggle! Only power, only might, only the full strength of the working class expressed in mighty industrial unions, in a powerful labor party, in revolutionary leadership of the labor movement by the Communist Party that had no illusions and has no illusions regarding the class enemies of the working class, can prevent future Sacco and Vanzetti cases. Away with the illusions of the cowardly petty-bourgeois socialists. On with a determined, unflinching struggle against capitalist masters—the executioners of our martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti.



A Platform and a Slogan for Governor Fuller -- The Murder Candidate

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE Minneapolis Tribune is another capitalist journal which breaks a lance against those who hold that Governor Fuller, mindful of the kudos which Cal acquired by getting credit for breaking the Boston police strike, decided to send Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair after Coolidge had stated that he did "not choose to run."

The Minneapolis organ of steel, railroad and flour milling capitalism brands such speculation as The Nation indulged in recently "a vile and ghastly insinuation."

WHY all the righteous anger?

Is it something new in the United States that capitalist politicians should try to ride into office with the support of the capitalist and middle classes grateful—for the crushing of a strike or the conviction of agitators and organizers of the working class?

IT is of course a ghoulish business but does not the whole system rest on the ability and willingness of the capitalist class to squeeze the lifeblood from the masses in mine, mill and factory—and in case of resistance to kill enough to make the rest quit?

Fickert, the prosecutor of Tom Mooney was not too squeamish to make political capital out of his attempt to send Mooney to the gallows.

BORAH, the knight errant of middle class Americanism, rose to fame and fortune by reason of his services to the metal mining magnates of the Coesur d'Alene in the prosecution of Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone. It was not his fault that the working class saved them from the hangman.

Senator Walsh of Montana was re-elected largely because of the votes bought and stolen for him by the copper trust as areward for his eloquent and patriotic justification of the murder of Frank Little.

AT least a dozen lackeys of the lumber trust in the state of Washington stabilized their wavering political fortunes by smearing themselves with the blood of Wesley Everest, tortured to death by a white-collared mob in Centralia.

Was not the most famous utterance of Theodore Roosevelt that statement in regard to the Haywood-Moyer-Pettibone caseby which he sought to prejudice the nation against them: "Murder is murder?"

WHO shall number the horde of little minions of coal, oil, steel, shipping, who swept into public office on the wave of gratitude from the rulingclass aroused by the arrests, prosecutions and imprisonment of the I. W. W. during and after the war?

WHO can count the miserable little tools of Wall Street and its subsidiaries who were allowed to dip their hands into the campaign fund of the two capitalist parties by reason of their part in the "red raids" of 1919-20 which caused directly and indirectly the separation of families, unimaginable physical and mental suffering, and uncounted deaths?

WHY does the capitalist press rush to the defense of Governor Fuller?

It is evident that he has right and justice on his side, that in allowing Sacco and Vanzetti to be murdered he acted on precedent hallowed and sanctified by the endorsement it has from the most eminent, as well as the most humble, of American statesmen.

GOVERNOR Fuller should quiet at once all tendency toward "vile and ghastly insinuation."

He should, in a statement marked by the quiet dignity which the issue warrants, announce himself as a candidate on a 100 per cent American ticket with its official insignia an electric chair rampant on the charred corpses of two foreign-born workingmen and the motto: "In hoc signum vinces." (By this sign we conquer.)

THE higher the office he runs for the more support he will get from the lords of finance and industry and his campaign documents, which should be signed by a bloody thumbprint, will make his signature known thruout the world.

Developments in Nicaragua and China make it almost imperative that the next president of the United States should have served an apprenticeship in murder.

But—

No "vile and ghastly" insinuations.

Let us stick to the simple and more horrible truth.

12:20 A. M., AUG. 23, 1927.

By WALTER SNOW.

The clock ticks on
And the electric lights are still burning.
But the minutes that have slipped by so casually since midnight
Have seen Sacco
And Vanzetti
Breathe as well as I do now
And then, like madmen, be strapped into a thing of steel
And have the current that often lit their study books
Run through their bodies
Making them cease to think of their oppressed comrades,
Unable to raise again their voices against tyrants
And to even breathe
Because the bankers, the judges and the priests so decreed.
The clock ticks on
But, starting with this very morning,
Thousands who have been asleep before
Will awaken

THE MURDER OF TWO BRAVE WORKERS

NICOLA SACCO
(1894-1927)

Born in Torremaggiore, Italy. Came to U. S. at age of 17, where he became shoe cutter. Worked in various New England cities. Survivors: Wife, Rose Sacco; son, Dante, 14; Inez, 6, born four months after Sacco's arrest. Active as organizer and speaker for years.

Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston worked ceaselessly to free the two workers. Vanzetti's letters to her from prison reveal in a poignant way his literary and intellectual interests.

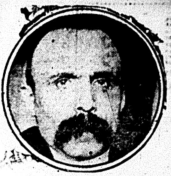
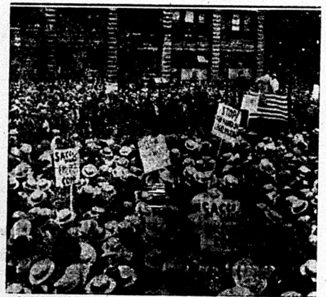
Despite the fact that the American Federation of Labor at five successive conventions demanded a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, its president was silent on the frame-up up to the last moment. Shamed by the tremendous labor demonstrations calling for their release, Green finally sent an apologetic letter to Gov. Fuller urging that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.



BARTOLOMEO VANZETTI
(1888-1927)

Born in Valla Falletto, Italy. Unmarried. Came to U. S. in 1908. Worked as restaurant dishwasher and pastry cook in New York; in cordage mills at Plymouth, Mass. Blacklisted after strike there and began to peddle fish in Plymouth. Was active as speaker, and writer.



50,000 workers crowd Union Square to demand freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti—in the face of machine guns, armored motorcycles, gas and tear bombs, and 2,000 cops.

Webster Thayer, who presided at the "trial" of the frame-up victims. His conduct at that time was violently prejudicial to the defendants, and even Fuller's reactionary committee described it as "indiscreet." When he sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti in Dedham last spring he didn't dare look in their faces once during the entire proceedings.

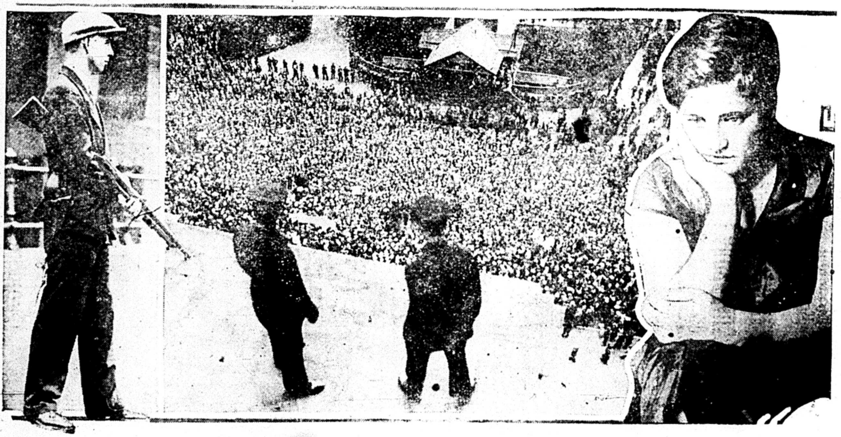
Governor Alvin T. Fuller.

Executioner of the two innocent workers. This manufacturer of Packard cars, his fortune valued at $13,000,000, hopes now to step to a chair in the White House over the shattered bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Fuller's "Advisory" committee: Straton, Lowell, and Grant. They gave the tone of respectability to the bloody verdict of the New England mill owners. Their report is a classic of prejudice, distortion and class hatred.

JOHN SARGENT

John Sargent, attorney general of U. S., who refused to permit examination of department of justice files showing conspiracy to "get" Sacco and Vanzetti because they were radicals.



POWERS HAPGOOD

Powers Hapgood, former Harvard athlete, militant leader of miners. Arrested many times for picketing state house; in desperation police confined him in psychopathic ward of hospital for "examination."

"Mysterious" bomb explosion in Baltimore. Occupants were conveniently out of town at the time. These "accidents" usually occur when agents of capitalism are engaged in some particularly murderous act like framing Tom Mooney or killing Sacco and Vanzetti.

FRENCH LABOR'S WAR ON AMERICAN LEGION GROWS; HUGE SACCO-VANZETTI FUNERAL IN BOSTON SUNDAY

THOUSANDS OF BOSTON WORKERS FILE PAST COFFINS OF MARTYRS

Mass Procession to Follow Bodies to Crematory Sunday Afternoon

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—Thousands of workers are silently filing by the coffins of Sacco and Vanzetti, which lie in a little north end undertaking establishment. More than 30,000 workers have already marched by the coffins in silent tribute to the two working class martyrs. Several thousand of floral tributes from all parts of the country are pouring in for the funeral procession on Sunday.

In an effort to lessen the effectiveness of the procession Boston police have forbidden placards and banners.

"Guard" Funeral Chapel.

With hundreds of workers on hand, an increased police guard today was posted at the funeral chapel.

At the same time workers were planning a drive on the street commissioner's office to hold a monster "march of sorrow" Sunday, as under the city ordinance only 200 can march and thousands have asked for a place in the line.

Before Judge William Sullivan charges of "inciting to riot and advocating anarchy" were brought against Mary Donovan of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee. The case was continued until next Monday. Miss Donovan left for West Brookfield, where Dante Sacco, 14, son of Nicola, has been staying.

Hapgood to Sue Police.

Suit will be brought in Boston against Charles E. Blight, head of the Massachusetts State police, for the false and malicious arrest of Powers Hapgood, young militant mine leader and former Harvard athlete.

Hapgood was arrested and sent to a psychopathic ward for observation during a picket demonstration in front of the state house. His arrest was engineered to keep him from further demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti.

From the chapel the bodies will be conveyed to North End Park, from which will start across the city a "march of sorrow."

Later, following cremation, the ashes of Sacco will be turned over to his widow. The ashes of Vanzetti will be carried to New York and thence home to Italy by his sister, under present tentative plans. A tour of the country by a delegation carrying the ashes of both was still under discussion.

Extra police details today were ordered out for Sunday afternoon as a large influx of workers from surrounding cities and towns was expected to view the funeral procession.

I. L. D. WARNS OF SCHEME TO FRAME CHESWICK MINERS

Broader Organization Needed to Stop Murder

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 26.—The arrest of more than twenty miners in Cheswick, Pennsylvania, arising out of the attack by state troopers upon a peaceful protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti, holds all the possibilities for the creation of another labor frame-up on a large scale.

Thousands of workers had gathered in Cheswick, on the eve of the execution, to urge the liberation of the two martyred labor fighters, when a troop of the state Cossacks rode into the crowd with drawn clubs and guns. Gas bombs were poised for use against the unarmed and pacific workers. Men and women were struck at, right and left, by the Cossacks who have a black anti-labor reputation thruout the state and who have been condemned time and again by the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor and other working class organizations.

Arrest Innocent.

In the course of the attack, many of the participants in the protest meeting were seriously hurt by the brutal and indiscriminate blows of the troopers, and one of the troopers himself was killed by a shot, fired by an unknown person. The police immediately arrested the large group of workers and are searching for the person who is supposed to have fired the shot.

International Labor Defense is in charge of the cases of the men who have been arrested, and is preparing

PRAVDA SEES WORLD PROTEST AS MEANS TO AID CHINA REVOLUTION

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 26.—Pravda points out that August 23rd completely shattered the dreams of Poincaré and his flunkeys that stabilized French capitalism will cope easily and painlessly with revolutionary tendencies. "The great significance of August 23rd for France and the whole world lies in the fact that workers again began the fight and the construction of barricades," says the Pravda.

"The tremendous significance of the Paris demonstration is emphasized by the fact that Paris does not act alone. With Paris workers, workers thruout France demonstrated.

Worked With Chinese Revolution.

"The protest in London also deserves particular attention. The very fact that the London police were unable to forestall this demonstration and that scores of workers were wounded and arrested is the best proof of the revolutionary nature of the demonstration.

"[illegible]ndon is distinguished from Paris in that it has no tradition of street fights. It is for this very reason that every street event in London acquires symptomatic significance.

"The London and Paris events should be considered in connection with the successful progress of the revolutionary troops in China and the successful entrance of these troops into Kwantung.

"Just because of the difficult and complicated stage that the struggle has now reached, every bit of progress made by the revolutionary troops acquires serious political importance. The mobilization of masses in different parts of Europe and America creates favorable ground for the successful progress of the revolution in China.

Mobilization of Workers.

"After a lengthy stoppage we for the first time observe the direct union of the revolutionary movement in China with the class movement of the proletariat of the west under the direct leadership of Communism. We are entering a new phase of strained class struggle. Obscurantists like Fosh, ardently assisted by the servile Vorwaerts, would like to overcome the new wave of proletarian class struggle by a holy campaign against the first socialist country. However, the voices of Fosh and the Vorwaerts are powerless against to stifle the proletarian fighters of the west and the east.

Greetings to World Workers.

The assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti serves a signal for a great mobilization of the forces of the proletarian revolution. The working class of the Soviet Union, now preparing its celebration for its tenth anniversary, sends a revolutionary salute to the revolutionary fighters of the east and the west.

MAKE MEMORIAL MEETINGS FOR SACCO, VANZETTI PROTESTS AGAINST CAPITALISM AND IMPERIALISM, URGES MANIFESTO OF COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 26.—Appealing to workers of the world to make the memorial demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti a demand for the release of all class war prisoners and a demonstration against capitalism and imperialism, the Executive Committee of the Communist International has issued the following appeal to all Communist Parties:

"Sunday, August 28, will take place the interment of the victims of "democratic" justice of the American executioners. The execution of Sacco and Vanzetti who imagined the possibility of the overthrow of capitalism by individual attacks on the representatives of capitalism is convincing proof that the road of emancipation lies through fighting for the revolutionary power by the proletariat.

"The Executive Committee of the Communist International appeals to all Communist Parties to transform the day of interment of the victims of class justice into a day for the mobilization of the working masses at meetings and demonstrations for struggle, against bourgeois justice. For emancipation of all prisoners of capitalism. Against capitalism and imperialism. For power by the proletariat of all the world.

DETROIT POLICE SMASH WORKERS PARTY OFFICES

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

DETROIT, Mich, Aug. 26.—The Workers Party office here was raided last night and 13 members of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers (Communist) League were arrested. They are being held incommunicado. For the last 15 hours all efforts to obtain their release has been fruitless.

When the police entered the office under the orders of the district attorney's office they destroyed all the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial decorations, pictures, and a bust of Lenin and whatever else they could place their hands upon.

1350 LEGIONNAIRES SAIL FROM NEW YORK FOR FRANCE; MUST FACE SACCO-VANZETTI PROTEST OF LABOR

Two contingents of American Legion members sailed yesterday afternoon for their convention at Paris. Six hundred sailed on the United States Liner President Roosevelt and 750 on the Cunard Liner Lancastria.

Among those sailing to attend the convention are General Leigh R. Gingnilliat, former department commander of the Legion in Indiana. Herbert Mooney, department commander in Ohio, Frank McHale, department commander for Ohio, and other leading American fascists.

Plan Deportation for Worker Who Protested Sacco-Vanzetti Murder

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. — Rudolph Gole, Austrian worker, will be deported for protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti in letters to Massachusetts authorities.

The deportation of Gole is part of the campaign that Secretary of Labor Davis is waging against foreign-born workers with liberal or radical tendencies.

Two Thousand Raincoat Makers in Boston Walk Out for Higher Wages

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—More than 2,000 raincoat makers, a majority of them women, responded to a strike call in sixty local shops today.

The strike was to enforce demands for a wage increase averaging from 20 to 25 per cent and a renewal of the 42-hour week agreement.

"AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION WILL NOT BE TOLERATED," DECLARE FRENCH NEWSPAPERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (FP).—Bitter French opposition to the proposed Franco-American festivities and the American Legion parade through Paris Sept. 19 is revealed in editorials in leading newspapers.

Quotidien: "Let there be no more talk of it. The cruel end of Sacco and Vanzetti rules it out. Such a festival would look like a mockery of universal mourning. It could not be tolerated."

Paris Soir: "Last night's events (mass protests) ought to open the eyes of the guardians of public order. They prove that you cannot defy public opinion without risk. They prove, too, that if the authorities obstinately insist on holding this parade of the American Legion they will be incurring grave responsibilities. The people of Paris, we assert, will not only refuse to make a Franco-American festival of September 19, but will not tolerate this procession of the American Legion. This festival ought not to take place; it cannot take place."

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

PARIS, Aug. 26.—With the meeting of the cabinet council of the die-hard Poincare government to consider plans for the reception of the American Legion here September 19th, French workers have agreed upon a systematic boycott of American goods and films.

Leading the drive to prevent the opening of the Legion convention and parade on the Champs Elysees, L'Humanite, Communist daily, today published a large photograph of a souvenir ash tray representing in bas relief a drunken American soldier dancing with a nude French girl. The ash trays are being widely circulated.

URGE ARREST OF COMMUNIST DEPUTY.

The arrest of Deputy Vaillant Couturier, one of the editors of L'Humanite, is being demanded by die-hard dailies here because Couturier is urging a war on the Legion convention, and the setting aside of September 19 as a "Day of Mourning" in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The anti-Legion drive is growing rapidly despite the opposition of die-hard dailies and of the Poincare government.

French workers are taking a great deal of interest in the opposition on the part of Berlin labor to the visit of Mayor "Jimmie" Walker of New York City. Walker's visit, reports from Berlin indicate, is stirring the same opposition among workers there that the Legion convention is arousing here.

WORLD LABOR MUST UNITE FORCES TO PREVENT MORE CLASS MURDERS

Servility of A. F. L. Leaders Hit in Appeal by Communist International

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 26.—Pointing out that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is one phase of a general attack of capitalism against revolutionary workers of the world, the Executive Committee of the Communist International has published an appeal to all honest revolutionary workers.

The American bankers, their judges, and governors were able to commit the murder owing to the weakness of the revolutionary movement in America as well as the servility of the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, headed by William Green, the Communist International says.

International Struggle.

"The working class of all the world," the appeal continues, "considers the cold-blooded murder as a challenge to the proletariat. The campaign against the American imperialist is growing and turning into a great international class movement. The might of this movement lies in its being developed on a single front in all countries notwithstanding the sabotage of the reformists.

"The revolutionary struggle extended along the front of the international proletariat will succeed only if directed not only against the direct authors of the execution but also against the conscious servants of the executioners and obscurantists.

Warning to Fascists.

"French and English workers, with their powerful demonstrations as well as the revolutionary workers of America, Australia, Germany and Poland gave their first warning to the rejoicing fascists and obscurants of all countries. It is imperative to continue the struggle by all means.

"The revolutionary struggle is boiling in different parts of the world. The revolutionary troops of China are continuing to fight against the imperialists, northern militarists and traitors from Wuhan and Nanking. The French workers again, after a lengthy interval, began the revolutionary street struggle. The memory of the July insurrection is alive in the hearts of the Viennese workers.

"German workers remember the solemn pledge of half a million troops fighting fearlessly under the banner of the revolution. English workers are recuperating from the heavy defeat following the treachery of the general strike and have begun street demonstrations.

Prevent Future Murders.

"The next and pressing problem of the vanguard of the working class is to unite all of these revolutionary streams for a decisive combat against bourgeois justice and the torture and [illegible] of working class fighters."

FRENCH LABOR'S WAR ON AMERICAN LEGION GROWS; HUGE SACCO-VANZETTI FUNERAL IN BOSTON SUNDAY

THOUSANDS OF BOSTON WORKERS FILE PAST COFFINS OF MARTYRS

Mass Procession to Follow Bodies to Crematory Sunday Afternoon

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—Thousands of workers are silently filing by the coffins of Sacco and Vanzetti, which lie in a little north end undertaking establishment. More than 30,000 workers have already marched by the coffins in silent tribute to the two working class martyrs. Several thousand of floral tributes from all parts of the country are pouring in for the funeral procession on Sunday.

In an effort to lessen the effectiveness of the procession Boston police have forbidden placards and banners.

"Guard" Funeral Chapel.

With hundreds of workers on hand, an increased police guard today was posted at the funeral chapel.

At the same time workers were planning a drive on the street commissioner's office to hold a monster "march of sorrow" Sunday, as under the city ordinance only 200 can march and thousands have asked for a place in the line.

Before Judge William Sullivan charges of "inciting to riot and advocating anarchy" were brought against Mary Donovan of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee. The case was continued until next Monday. Miss Donovan left for West Brookfield, where Dante Sacco, 14, son of Nicola, has been staying.

Hapgood to Sue Police.

Suit will be brought in Boston against Charles E. Blight, head of the Massachusetts State police, for the false and malicious arrest of Powers Hapgood, young militant mine leader and former Harvard athlete.

Hapgood was arrested and sent to a psychopathic ward for observation during a picket demonstration in front of the state house. His arrest was engineered to keep him from further demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti.

From the chapel the bodies will be conveyed to North End Park, from which will start across the city a "march of sorrow."

Later, following cremation, the ashes of Sacco will be turned over to his widow. The ashes of Vanzetti will be carried to New York and thence home to Italy by his sister, under present tentative plans. A tour of the country by a delegation carrying the ashes of both was still under discussion.

Extra police details today were ordered out for Sunday afternoon as a large influx of workers from surrounding cities and towns was expected to view the funeral procession.

I. L. D. WARNS OF SCHEME TO FRAME CHESWICK MINERS

Broader Organization Needed to Stop Murder

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 26.—The arrest of more than twenty miners in Cheswick, Pennsylvania, arising out of the attack by state troopers upon a peaceful protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti, holds all the possibilities for the creation of another labor frame-up on a large scale.

Thousands of workers had gathered in Cheswick, on the eve of the execution, to urge the liberation of the two martyred labor fighters, when a troop of the state Cossacks rode into the crowd with drawn clubs and guns. Gas bombs were poised for use against the unarmed and pacific workers. Men and women were struck at, right and left, by the Cossacks who have a black anti-labor reputation thruout the state and who have been condemned time and again by the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor and other working class organizations.

Arrest Innocent.

In the course of the attack, many of the participants in the protest meeting were seriously hurt by the brutal and indiscriminate blows of the troopers, and one of the troopers himself was killed by a shot, fired by an unknown person. The police immediately arrested the large group of workers and are searching for the person who is supposed to have fired the shot.

International Labor Defense is in charge of the cases of the men who have been arrested, and is preparing Harvard Studies Cerebral Anatomy.

Peter, semi-barbarian czar of Russia, afterwards called "the great," decapitated one of his mistresses, Mary Hamilton, picked her head up in his hands and delivered a lecture on anatomy. Peter was a sadistic fiend who used to swing the axe over the heads of his victims in order to work up an appetite for breakfast. His terror was the abomination of his day. He was specially trained for his job. During his youth, spent in the streets of Moscow among the lowest criminal elements, he learned from his associates all the basest of practices; afterwards he taught them new practices that required the invention of new names to describe them.

But today, even Peter could learn lessons from the refined murder gang that holds forth at Harvard University in Boston, or rather that part of Boston known as Cambridge. President A. Lawrence Lowell was one of the three of the "advisory committee" of capitalist flunkeys who tried to whitewash Governor Fuller, Judge Thayer and the original murder gang that conspired to assassinate Sacco and Vanzetti.

Newspaper reports relate that the brain of Sacco is now in Harvard medical school being "studied." It is useless to indulge in indignant demands as to how it got there; to ask whether it was by legal process or not. Only a dolt expects anything from the hyenas of capitalism but the most outrageous violence. One thing is certain, they can no longer torture Sacco by prodding what was once his brain that was shattered by the bolt of electricity hurled into it by the refined murderers at Charlestown prison and their associates of the Massachusetts state house and Harvard University. Capitalism knows no law but might. All its crimes are covered with the hypocritical cloak of legality.

Perhaps these low prostitutes of Harvard, who conduct an institution for teaching the spawn of the capitalist class how to rob, murder and torture the working class are curious to learn whether the brain of a man with principles that are not for sale to the highest bidder are different from their's and their associates' brains.

Every act of the murderers of Massachusetts, who personify the vindictiveness of the whole capitalist class toward the working class, increase the bitter, burning hatred in which intelligent workers hold the enemy class and its agents. The revolutionists must constantly remind the workers of these atrocities in order to fan into a red blast the flames of fury that must bring crashing to the earth the whole rotten edifice of capitalism, erected upon soil soaked with the blood of the working class.

Wilbur's "100 Per Cent Increase" in Naval Armament.

Secretary of the navy Wilbur has denied that he gave out an interview stating that he would recommend to the coming session of Congress "a 100 per cent increase" in the navy building program. Yet this statement was carried by all of the influential Pacific coast papers and sent out by the press services.

It is probable that Wilbur simply spoke out of his turn and voiced the intentions of the militarists before a sufficient amount of preparatory publicity work had been done.

The Wilbur statement undoubtedly embarrassed the Coolidge administration which is still clinging formally to its economy program and this is probably the reason for the hasty denial but we can be sure that the sharpening of the rivalry between Britain and America disclosed at Geneva will be utilized to the limit to put over a huge naval program.

The more open spokesmen of imperialism are already speaking joyously of the possibility of authorization for 40 more cruisers At a minimum of $12,000,000 each this will involve the tidy sum of $480,000,000.

The cost of world domination is tremendous but the imperialists are able to transfer it to the shoulders of the workers, farmers and the middle class. Both the capitalist parties are committed to the war program of Wall Street, both are instruments of the war mongers and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur merely said what the leaders of both parties are thinking.

Heavy taxation, militarization of the population, further adventures abroad in conflict with other imperialist powers until a crisis arises making war inevitable—this is the future prospect for the American masses.

A labor party based on a well organized and militant labor movement is the best weapon for the struggles against this program. Whoever is against it is an enemy of the masses and gives aid to imperialism.

Cossack Terror in Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania state constabulary, a special corps of vicious thugs and gunmen, recruited from the scum of the earth, are always on the job when it comes to suppressing labor demonstrations of any kind. Supplementing the numerous private armies composed of creatures of a similar calibre maintained by the great corporations, this state police force tries to hold in chains the slaves of the industries of that state. Riding roughshod over all the pretended constitutional safe-guards guaranteed inhabitants of this country, these marauders obey only the law of the coal and steel interests.

Recently this police outfit has been busy suppressing demonstrations against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. The workers in the slave pens of the Pittsburgh district realize that the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti was an attack upon the entire working class and they meet to show their solidarity with the tens of millions throughout the world who are infuriated at the abominable crime of Fuller, Thayer, the eminent university professors and the rest of the Massachusetts assassins. The state cossacks, ever loyal servants of their masters, use the most vicious tactics to break up these demonstrations. They started a riot at Cheswick, Pennsylvania, in the Pittsburgh district the day after the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, during the progress of a demonstration. In their irresponsible rampage one of their own number was shot—probably by another cossack. Guns, clubs and tear-gas bombs were their weapons against peaceful and defenseless workers. They arrested twenty workers and accused them of inciting the riot the troopers themselves had started. It is reported that they are looking for the man who shot the cossack. Evidently they are preparing to frame-up someone.

More than ever is it now imperative that the workers start organizational drives to create weapons of defense and offense against the ever growing viciousness of American capitalism.

The answer to these attacks must be the creation of labor parties to challenge the political power of the oppressors and murderers, strengthen the unions, build up the defense societies of labor, fight for the protection of the foreign born workers in order to put a stop to the offensive against the working class in the United States.

LUIGIA VANZETTI AND ROSE SACCO

Rose Sacco, wife of Nicola Sacco (right), and Lugia Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo Vanzetti. On them the blow falls heaviest.

Effective Defense of Victims of Class War.

The manifesto of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party on the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the voracious bloodhounds of capitalism carries out the best traditions of the revolutionary movement, inasmuch as it not only properly stigmatizes the murder crew in Massachusetts and extends the denunciation to the national government, but also fearlessly criticizes the weaknesses, the hesitations and vacillations and open treachery of the so-called labor and liberal elements who did as much to send the victims of class vengeance to their deaths as did Fuller and his murder crew.

In the front ranks of those alleged spokesmen of labor who serve the interests of the assassins of the working class must be placed the name of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who refused to use his office to aid the two champions of the working class; those valiant Italian workers who without pay or any hope of reward except the approval of the workers among whom they toiled, fought a battle that Green and his ilk would shrink from fighting. Undoubtedly a word from Green would have resulted in nation-wide demonstrations that would have embraced not only the three million organized workers, but millions of unorganized. The executive council of the American Federation of Labor had the power to stay the hand of the executioner, yet it refused to use that power for the reason that its role is that of defender of the capitalist class and assistant executioner of the working class. The manifesto of the Party points unerringly to the destiny of the corrupt labor bureaucracy as sinking ever lower in the service of capitalism as the class struggle sharpens.

Closely akin to this venal bureacracy is the officialdom of the socialist party who resorted to the most pessimistic propaganda such as proposing a "day of mourning" instead of rallying the workers to a determined struggle. This sort of insipid propaganda became, in this case, positively murderous, as it tended to spread defeatism and despair among the ranks of the working class.

Certainly one of the greatest of all handicaps was the handling of the case by the liberal and anarchist elements who gained control of the Sacco and Vanzetti defense committee in Boston, and placed their hopes in legalistic juggling, while endeavoring at all cost to appear eminently "respectable."

The manifesto of the Workers (Communist) Party declares that the only hope of the workers is to rely upon their own mass power to combat the murderous conspiracies of the capitalist governments.

In the long fight for liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti it was the Communists alone who constantly kept before the working class the fact that only their own paper would avail against the murder conspirators. Had the other defenders of Sacco and Vanzetti devoted half as much energy to aiding in stimulating this mass movement and encouraging the working class to unleash its fury against the Massachusetts butchers and the puppets at Washington we would today be celebrating the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti instead of teaching to the working class the lessons of their martyrdom.

To those not actually taking part in the swift moving chain of events revolving around the burning of Sacco and Vanzetti, it would be difficult to comprehend and correctly analyze the complete significance of the distorted and half-told stories which were blazoned in huge headlines in the capitalist press thru the nation.

The kept press of Boston with few exceptions, has gone out of it's way, since Gov. Fuller white-washed Thayer & Co., to whet the appetities of its readers for the approaching execution by placing side by side pictures of the martyred workers and pictures of a juror's house which was "mysteriously" bombed last week.

Police terrorism was complete in every detail, their job being to vigorously suppress every voice, be it ever so meek, that was raised in protest against the carrying out of the last act in this tragic holocaust.

I was one of a group that comprised the second platoon of pickets in front of the State House. The sidewalk was literally swarmed with police both in "harness" and civilian clothes, while mounted police rode leisurely up and down the street. Hordes of newspaper reporters and camera-men made traffic difficult and the crowd which filled the north-west corner of Boston Common was rapidly growing in size and was forced back to the center of the Common by the police repeatedly.

Our picket line was given the usual order to disperse, but being firm in the conviction that we were exercising our rights of peaceful persuasion as guaranteed by law, we continued to move along the curbing in an orderly, determined manner holding our placards high.

A detail of reserves swung around the corner and were loudly applauded by a group of legionnaires, just leaving the State House after going thru some form of ceremonial hocus-pocus, and in a few seconds we were pounced upon and rushed against a stone wall. The police were ordered by their superiors to "take a good look at these people, so you will know them when you see them again," which was followed by the "grand march" to the Joy Street Station. Several times during the long walk to the jail we were cheered and applauded by sympathetic workers and liberals from Beacon Hill.

The noble blue-coat who escorted me was of a questioning turn of mind. He inquired if I believed in god and on receiving an answer in the negative burst out: "That's what the trouble is with all you people, no respect for god's laws and no respect for courts." He suggested that I should read Pope Pious' Encyclical and learn something. I agreed on condition that he familiarize himself with the writings of Marx and Engels, as I believed as two members of the wage-earning class we should share our literary views.

Once lined up in the station house we were searched and booked and I was relieved of my copy of The DAILY WORKER by an understrapper who barked out that "papers like that don't belong in THIS country." While being assigned to our cells we were given a rousing welcome by our fellow-workers of the first picket line. Some one raised his voice to the tune of "Solidarity Forever" and all hands responded with a vigor that made our filthy old cell-rooms ring. Meanwhile the women, particularly those comrades of foreign birth, were herded in the guard-room where they were forced to put up with all sorts of insults and indignities from the cops. These girls were not to be bested, however, and when asked by the "brave officers" when they were going back to "Rooshia" they were quick to reply "When is the Boston police force going back to Ireland?"

More and more pickets were brot in, each new group being given the same welcome cheers. When the cheering subsided the first question asked our newly arrived comrades was: "How many of you were taken in this time and how many more are waiting to go on the line?"

Evidently the thundering challenge of our many voices chanting the "Internationale" was more than our hosts could endure for three cops walked to the end of the cell-corridor where they stopped for a bit and then walked out grinning sheepishly. Our noses soon discovered the meaning of their mysterious mission when the sickening fumes of a "stink bomb" was wafted into our close, damp cells. By the way, this is a crime under Boston "law," but after all weren't we only workers? What difference? The ladies in the smoke-filled guard room were also given a taste of chivalry as practised by Bostons' stink bomb-throwing guardians of law and order. Perhaps this was not enough, for when several of the ladies requested the privilege of using the toilet they were ushered into our cell room section and in plain view of the male occupants of the cells they were told to use the vile accommodations of an empty cell where all the scum of the underworld are confined.

Later in the day Powers Hapgood arrived and was locked up in our section. After hastily outlining the situation "outside" he joined us in singing and cheering until he was suddenly taken from his cell and whisked away to the Psychopathic Hospital where he was held for some time incommunicado.

Perhaps the most interesting part of our sojourn behind the bars was the sifting out of two strange "fellow-prisoners" who were suspected of being stool-pigeons. Just before the last line of pickets was brot in, a roll-call of each cell was suggested. Everyone was asked to give his cell-mates, his name, address, occupation and reason for being on the picket line. All were able to give a satisfactory account of himself excepting one stranger on each side of the jail. These two had been busy thruout the early part of our "visit," while our bail was being arranged, in asking all sorts of trick questions, etc., and had aroused suspicions. One of these fellows was found, I was told by one of the pickets, with a gun on his person and was later observed chatting with an officer before being assigned to one of the cells, which held from four to five prisoners. When he was asked point-blank by his cell-mates, why he was in Boston, he replied, "I was sent by a certain organization to do a certain thing." What the organization was and what the "certain thing" could have been is best answered by the fact that he was nowhere to be seen when the pickets were arraignd in court Tuesday morning.

After being arrested for carrying a placard on the Common, William Patterson, president of the American Negro Labor Congress, was told by the arresting officer that "this is the first I have seen a Nigger bastard who is a Communist." Patterson was singled out by a mounted policeman who tried to ride him down, only the fact that he, (Patterson) dodged around a tree saved him from the sharp hoofs of the horse. After being released on bail Patterson took his place on the State House picket line and soon found his way into jail where once more he was the object of the vicious race-prejudice of thick-skulled police.

These are only a few instances of some of the examples of rabid fascism prevailing in Boston, they are the facts which never see the light of day in the capitalist papers until given the "proper" angle by labor-hating editors. I have also tried to portray the splendid spirit of solidarity of the workers who carried on their unflinching protest in the face of the most ruthless repression known to Boston since the days of the Boston massacre.

COMMON SOLDIERS OF GREAT WAR IN AN ORGANIZATION

Protested Execution of Sacco and Vanzetti

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 26.—The reactionary American Legion attacks Sacco and Vanzetti for their working class actions, and approves of their execution, but the American Legion does not represent the rank and file of the veterans of the World War.

The common soldiers have formed an organization, the United American Veterans, which has as officers none who were officers in the army, and is trade union in its composition. This organization protested the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Organized in the past few months as the United American Veterans these ex-soldiers and sailors comprise chiefly men from the ranks of labor unions who are disappointed at the way the American legion plays in with the politicians against the veterans and also with its unfriendliness to organized labor.

All Union Men.

The Chicago Post, which is No. 1 in the national organization, is commanded by President R. L. Fitch of Local 113, International Association of Machinists. The other offices are also filled by union men, including members of the plasterers, waiters, brick and clay workers, postoffice workers, postal clerks and miners unions.

Other posts have been organized or are under way in the principal cities of the country. Even Mason City, Ia., the home of Assistant Secretary of War Hanford MacNider who is a former national commander of the American legion, is about to appear on the roster of United American Veterans posts.

Service Men Betrayed.

Service men are dropping their membership in such organizations as the legion, the World War Veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Private Soldiers & Sailors legion, and the Disabled American Veterans. The declaration of the new service society, prefaced to its constitution, reads:

"The story of the ex-service men and their dependents is a story of adversity and betrayal. Those at the summit of the political and financial ladder have so maneuvered as to gain and keep control of the ex-service men's organizations, rendering these organizations quite helpless insofar as fighting for the welfare of the ex-service men is concerned. We must organize ourselves into an organization free from political corruption, in which the rank and file shall have full expression."

Jack Bradon Heads Veterans.

The national department of the United American Veterans is being organized by Jack Bradon, former president of the World War Veterans, an order which once gave promise of becoming an effective mouthpiece of the average veterans but which is now on its last legs.

In addition to carefully stated demands for disabled service men and for immediate cashing of the 20-year bonus certificate at its face value, the national constitution of the new organization says specifically:

"We pledge our support to the organized labor movement for all time. Inasmuch as most of the ex-service men work for either wages or salaries, common sense and our own welfare demand that we, the veterans, be most friendly to the labor unions because our welfare, our wages and our working conditions are bound up with the welfare of the labor movement."

The postoffice address of the United American Veterans is Box 1807, Chicago.

Press Experts to Fight Over Right to "Corner" News

GENEVA, Aug. 26.—The fight of the independent, non-governmental or non-official news agencies against what is feared is an attempt by the official or governmental news agencies at establishing a monopoly in news, was brought nearer to a head at yesterday's session of the international conference of press experts when M. Koenigsberg presented to the conference the draft of a substitute resolution concerning property rights in news.

This draft, which the independent agencies entrusted to Mr. Koenigsberg to draw up, is a substitute for one drawn up by the secretariat of the League of Nations, at the instance of the official news agencies and their affiliated agencies. The independent agencies declare the secretariat's draft would create a monopoly in news for the official agencies.

Gale Delays Six Ships and 170 Passengers

Six passenger vessels from European cities were delayed by a gale that swept the coast for 36 hours.

The ships carried a total of 1,700 passengers, and about 500 officers and crew. No mishaps were reported.

N. Y. FEDERATION OF LABOR ELECTS OLD SLATE AGAIN

Will Urge State Pension All Aged Union Workers

SYRACUSE, Aug. 26.—John M. Sullivan of New York City was reelected president of the New York State Federation of Labor at the state convention here yesterday.

The entire slate of officers received reelection, including vice-presidents Thomas J. Curtis of New York City, Emanuel Kovelski of Rochester, Joseph A. Mullaney of Elmhurst, Long Island; John C. Imhof of New York City; C. F. Conroy of Buffalo, Botty A. Hawley of Brooklyn, Joseph P. Ryan of New York City, William E. Brown of Utica, Michael J. Fanning of Schenectady, Albert W. Sherman of Syracuse, William McGrory of Yonkers, Jeremiah Ryan of Binghamton, John M. O'Hanlon of Troy, secretary-treasurer, F. X. Sullivan of New York City; legal adviser, John O'Hanlon, John J. Doyle of Buffalo, Miss Mabel Leslie of Brooklyn, John M. Schilling of New York and John T. O'Brien of Syracuse, members of the legislative committee.

A drive to secure passage of an old age pension law at the next state legislature session will be made by the Federation asking that aged union workers be supported instead of being forced to seek relief in poor houses.

Efforts to limit the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes was urged on the convention by president John Sullivan. An open court hearing with both sides represented before a temporary injunction is granted is asked by the state body, following the proposal of the American Federation of Labor.

Sullivan said: "Legal authorities tell me that the granting of injunctions as it has been done in the past is a usurpation of power on the part of the judges, and our own investigation has shown that a majority of the injunctions have been issued on false affidavits."

Old Party Politics.

Half the members of the state industrial survey commission, all but one of whom are republicans, have addressed the convention. Several tried to swing the labor federation from its opposition to four-year terms for state officials, elections to come in presidential campaign years. The state federation members are predominantly democratic. The survey commission takes credit for the 49 and one-half hour law passed by the last legislature instead of the 48-hour law for women sponsored by the state federation.

Arthur MacDonald asked aid for the organization of upstate mill workers in the United Textile Workers Union. Patrick Shea, organizer for the Amalgamated Assn. of Street & Electric Railway Employes, reported on the New York city subway situation.

Faker Says Cooperation With USSR Is 'Affront' To Yellow Labor Lights

PARIS, Aug. 26.—That the flowery path of reformism is also strewn with nettles becomes more and more apparent as the International Trade Union congress progresses in Paris. The spectre of Communism which is haunting these so-called labor leaders is as fearful as that haunting the governments whose lackeys they are. The only real problem of the session is how to avoid entering into relations with the Red International of Labor Unions and still fool labor into believing that a faker is not a faker.

In the factional struggle between the followers of Brown and those of Oudegeest the accusation of Communism is hurled as the most branding of possible reproaches.

In a recent debate, delegate Caballero from Spain accused Brown of visiting Mexico in August, 1926, for the purpose of meeting a Russian delegation there. The Swiss delegate, Lindley, rushed to Brown's rescue, claiming that Brown had merely answered an invitation of the Mexican trade unions. And Grassman-Deutschland finished off the discussion with the assurance that any suggestion of co-operation with Moscow was to be considered as "a real affront to the Trade Union International."

The question of co-operation with the Red International of Labor Unions is the last thing that the delegates think of taking seriously. But it serves as a concrete brand for faction to cast at faction as the leaders squabble for power, while trade union principles, and the interests of the workers are lost in a torrent of personal recriminations and insults, or under what one delegate with unconscious humor calls the "high moral indignation of Jouhaux."

POLICE CARRY ON TERROR CAMPAIGN AT BIER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—Police last night invaded Langone's undertaking parlor, where the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti are being viewed by hundreds of workers before they will be cremated next Sunday, and arrested Mary Donovan, secretary of the defense forces.

Spies of the police department have been watching every opportunity for provoking trouble, and when Miss Donovan attempted to place a placard on the coffins reading, "Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards—Judge Thayer," police broke into the room and started to drag her away.

Many of the workers who made protests were beaten up by the Boston cossacks.

MEMORIAL MEETING IN NEW YORK SUNDAY FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

March In Procession With Vanzetti's Ashes; Police Commissioner Refuses Permit

Despite the fact that Police Commissioner Joseph A. Warren has refused to grant a permit for a funeral procession for the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti, Mrs. Clarina Michelson of the Sacco-Vanzetti Memorial Committee stated yesterday that the procession would be held in any case. The Memorial Committee was brought into being for the purpose of arranging the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial demonstration in New York.

Mrs. Michelson has issued a call to the various Sacco-Vanzetti committees in the city to take part in the memorial exercises. Each committee will be represented by a delegate who officially will take part in the demonstration.

Union Square Demonstration.

It was announced by the Memorial Committee that the ashes of the two men will be taken to Union Square, where a monster mass meeting will be held. Union Square was chosen because the owners of all the larger halls in the city have refused to allow the memorial services to take place on their premises. Officials of the memorial committee stated that possibly the police department was responsible for the refusal of the hall owners. Consequently, it became absolutely necessary for the funeral exercises to be held out of doors.

Plans for the exercises call for a demonstration in Union Square after which the ashes will be borne to a hall further uptown. A delegation of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers will guard the ashes on the way up and the remains will be followed by a procession of sympathizers. The name of the hall has not been announced.

Appeal for Union Support.

"I have been assured," Mrs. Michelson said, "that there will be more than fifty thousand people in the procession. This is the only way left for us to express our grief for our dead friends."

Labor unions, fraternal organizations, political groups and workers' clubs have been asked to take part in the demonstration.

Each participant has been asked to bring a red carnation to lay before the urns after they have been deposited at the resting place.

Miss Luigi Vanzetti will leave for Italy on Wednesday night, on the Berengaria, and the ashes will lie in state Monday evening and all day Tuesday and Wednesday.

Ashes to Leave Boston.

The party bearing the ashes from Boston will leave early Monday Morning and will arrive in New York in the afternoon in time for the demonstration.

The memorial committee issued the following appeal to all Sacco-Vanzetti organizations in New York:

"We urge all workers and sympathizers to join us in making this demonstration and procession an expression of our grief and horror in protest of the brutal execution of our innocent comrades. Come to Union Square, Monday at five o'clock!"

Will Hold Memorial Anyhow.

In commenting on the commissioner's action Mrs. Michelson said, "Commissioner Warren's attitude in refusing to see us this morning is entirely consistent with his attitude on the Sacco-Vanzetti question throughout. Not only was the commissioner very borrish in keeping us waiting an hour in his ante-room and then not seeing us, but his refusal to comment on the granting of a permit is proof that he is incapable of taking a manly, definite stand in the matter.

"I fail to see how the commissioner could be so brutal as to deny hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers the right to pay their last respects to these two murdered radicals. However, permit or no permit, the procession will be held. I hope the New York police will be decent enough not to disturb an orderly funeral procession, but if they do it will be a sad commentary on the much-vaunted fairness of the police department."

Police Block Meeting.

When informed of the plans of the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial committee for a public funeral procession of the Sacco-Vanzetti ashes Miss Rose Baron, of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee said:

"On behalf of the emergency committee I want to say that we heartily endorse the plans for a demonstration and procession. We are issuing a call to all our affiliated organizations to join us in making this the biggest turn-out that New York ever witnessed."

Miss Baron stated all of her efforts to secure a suitable auditorium for the memorial demonstration were blocked through the express orders of the police department.

Miss Baron said, "It is not surprising that Mrs. Michelson was treated to the humiliating experience down at the police commissioner's office. My experience of some officials of the police department is that they are incapable of making decision unless it benefits them in some way.

Appeal to All Workers.

"The procession will be held whether Mr. Warren likes it or not. Since when has Mr. Warren, a so-called servant of the people the right arbitrarily ride over the peaceful wishes of hundreds of thousands of sympathizers."

Miss Baron announced that she was having an appeal published in all the radical and foreign language press for the workers and sympathizers of New York to turn out in full force and take part in the demonstration.

Miss Baron has issued instructions to her organizations instructing them to notify their membership to bring red carnation and bank them before the urns of the murdered men.

When asked if she thought that police would violently break up the funeral procession, Miss Baron said: "I sincerely hope not. It will be to the everlasting disgrace of New York if the police treat the world to a brutal spectacle. Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers in Europe will be definitely convinced that Mayor Walker's city is allied with the Massachusetts legal hierarchy."

The plates of the SACCO-VANZETTI MEMORIAL EDITION of The DAILY WORKER will be kept for a short time to enable party units and other organizations to order additional copies for memorial meetings which are being arranged thruout the country.

JAMBOREE NEXT SUNDAY FOR THE JOINT DEFENSE

Starlight Park Scene of Big Affair

The greatest gathering of workers ever held in New York will take place Sunday at the Joint Defense Committee Jamboree at Starlight Park, East 177th St., the Bronx.

Starlight Park will open at 10 a. m. Sunday and the Jamboree will last till 2 the next morning. A special feature will be open air and indoor dancing, with two jazz bands supplying the music. Admission to the park is 25 cents. A combination ticket is 50 cents and is good for admission to the park, reduced rate on bathing and free dancing.

In the evening the opera "Carmen" will be produced. Many famous singers are in the cast and a full symphony orchestra will accompany them. Admission to the opera is $1. Reserved seats are $2 and $1.50. The number of opera tickets is limited, and should be bought in advance.

Workers Clubs To Participate.

All the workers clubs of New York will help in the work of the mass carnival. Every club will have its own concessions. The principle concession of the Boro Park Workers Club will be the skooter. The Downtown Workers Club will have the shooting galleries, the Venetian canals and the house of nonsense. All members of these clubs are requested to register at the headquarters if they wish to serve on any committee. All committee members are to be at the park not later than 9 a. m. Sunday morning, where they will be assigned to work.

The Bronx Workers Club will take charge of the entrance to the arena. Other clubs will be announced shortly.

The Employment Bureau.

All workers who want to serve on committees will be able to register at the employment bureau from which all assignments for work will be made.

Among other features at the jamboree will be an athletic carnival to start at 10 a. m. Some of the events that have been arranged are: Potato races, three legged races, sack race, fat man's race, bald headed man's race. Then there will be relay races, a soccer game between two teams of girls. For the first time in New York two girl teams will oppose each other. A great time is assured. The Czechoslovak, Hungarian, Scandinavian, the Young Workers and many other workers' sport organizations will participate.

The many concessions taken over by the Defense Committee will bear a placard of the committee. Everybody is urged to patronize these concessions.

The following named are requested to call at the office of the Defense, 41 Union Square, Room 714 at once: I. Beck, Sam Morowitz, M. Reishowsky, Louis Weiss, H. Fishkin, Sarah Feinstein, B. Weinstein and Frieda Weinstein.

City Housing Bill Passed by Estimate Board After Fight

Despite the opposition of big realtors, headed by Stewart Browne of the United States Real Estate Owners' Association and Edward Boyle, of the Real Estate Board of New York, the municipal housing bill was pushed thru the Board of Estimate yesterday afternoon.

Altho the bill is being backed by "philanthropists" like August Heckscher as a measure to eliminate slums, the bill guarantees investers a high inteerst return. The bill furthermore, as it was drawn up by Mayor Walker, leaves the city without the protection of open bidding.

Big realtors, who rake in profits exceeding those guaranteed by the measure, fought the bill on the ground that it had "not been certificated as an emergency measure."

Eighth Ave. Real Estate Men Start Campaign

Eighth Ave. real estate interests in an effort to boost the value of the property have issued a call for the arrest of all beggers and sidewalk salesmen.

The Eighth Avenue Association has recommended that the Board of Aldermen pass an ordinance that would help them put their program into effect.

Arkansas Mob Lynches Negro Boy of Twenty on Dog's "Identification"

WILMOT, Arkansas, August 26.—Winston Pounds, a negro boy of twenty, was today taken by a mob of the best citizens and hanged to a tree two miles out of this city.

A young white married woman told her husband that a negro had assaulted her. Bloodhounds were sent coursing thru the country, and after chasing several negroes, ran down Pounds.

Deputy sheriffs took him in charge and turned him over to the lynchers.

Workers in Detroit Protest Recapture Flags From Police

DETROIT, Aug. 26.—More than 20,000 workers protested against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti at a huge demonstration held at Cadillac Square.

Recapturing their banners which had been confiscated by the police, workers, after a brief struggle, marched on City Hall, and reached the steps of the building.

The demonstration was finally broken up when after police brutality, wielding their clubs, charged the marchers. Several thousand workers were injured by police clubs and by motorcycles which police drove thru the demonstration. More than 20,000 workers joined in the march on City Hall.

Belgian Police Use Swords and Trample Protesting Workers

BRUSSELS, Aug. 26.—Belgian police with drawn swords charged a procession of 2,000 workers who were protesting against the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti in the center of Brussels Wednesday. The marchers were proceeding from a meeting held under the auspices of the Sacco and Vanzetti Committee when the police made their attack. The defenseless workers, men and women, were trampled or beaten with the swords and clubs, but reformed and attempted to finish their protest during the night.

Walter Hanson, 30, of 60th St., Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, a skilled mechanic, was killed yesterday when the current from high tension wires of the New York and Queens Electric Light Company wire at 90th and Flushing Aves., Jamaica, Queens, passed through his body as a cable he was handling on the roof of the new Y. M. C. A. building at that point brushed against him.

SIGMAN IS TRYING TO JAIL EDITORS OF "THE FREIHEIT"

Carries Out Orders of The Forward

Carrying out the instructions of the Jewish Daily Forward, Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers is bringing criminal libel charges against the Freiheit, Jewish Communist daily.

Sigman claims that his wife has been slandered, therefore he has gone to court. The untruthlessness of the charge is found in the minutes of the Forward Association when at their meeting of July 7th they went on record to sue the Freiheit. Later they dropped the matter. Now Sigman, one of the henchmen of the Forward clique is ordered to attempt to jail the Freheit staff.

Behind Wife's Skirt.

Using his wife as an excuse Sigman has obtained warrants against Melich Epstein, editor and six others connected with the paper.

In the Tombs court yesterday, when Epstein appeared, the case was postponed until Sept. 8th. Samuel Markowich, former assistant district attorney and lawyer for the Forward was not ready to proceed. His representative told Magistrate Dodge that they wanted to serve the other six warrants first. Joseph R. Brodsky, is counsel for the Freheit.

Freheit Statement.

In a statement issued yesterday, the Freheit points out that Sigman has to hide behind his wife's skirts; "that he is trying a new method" to regain the ground that he is losing in the union.

When Sigman claims that the Freiheit slandered his wife in reference to the Sigman "Coney Island" in Storm Lake, Iowa, he is not telling a truth, the Freheit statement says. When the case comes to court not only will the amusement park be discussed but the local union situation will also be taken up. On that basis the Freiheit welcomes the opportunity to air its fight with Sigman.

About a year ago the Freiheit was sued for $100,000 by Harry Lang, former labor editor of the Forward, Mrs. Lucy Robbins, former secretary to Samuel Gompers and ex-Congressman Nathan D. Pearlman. The charge was later withdrawn.

Keep Murder News From Suffering Mother Jones

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Mother Jones, lying helpless in a Washington hospital, will not be told of the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti. For fear that it would hasten the death of the 98-year-old fighter for labor, the grim message has been softened into tidings that the two workers have been granted an indefinite reprieve. "They would never dare!" Mother Jones repeats. "To kill Sacco and Vanzetti would stir up the whole world." Mother Jones is now partly deaf and almost sightless and her physicians hope to keep the dread news from her.

On War and Danger of War

This is the fifth installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

16. The principal function of the Second and Amsterdam Internationals after the war of 1914-18 was to serve as a sort of agitation department for the international bourgeoisie, the business of which was to find the ideological justification for the despicable features of the capitalist system. A division of labor was introduced between the capitalists and social democracy. The capitalists armed themselves and made technical preparations for war—the social democrats made the ideological preparations for it. These prepaartions proceeded along two lines:

(a).—Along the line of justifying war between the imperialists themselves. Hilferding's theory of ultra-imperialism, of a "pacifist" epoch, the characteristic feature of which is the application of cartel methods and "democratic principles" to foreign policy corresponds to the practice of the social democratic parties; propaganda for the League of Nations as an organ capable of preventing war, support for Wilsonism, the Dawes Plan, Locarno, etc., etc. By this policy, the social democrats lulled the watchfulness of the masses, foisting on them the illusion that the epoch of wars had already come to an end.

(b).—But at the same time, the social democrats are actively preparing war against the Soviet Union and the workers in the colonies. Some of the signs of these preparations are: the resolution of the Marseilles Congress of the II International designating "World Bolshevism" (proletarian revolution) as the greatest menace to peace, the lying and infamous propaganda against "Red imperialism," against the "terror" in the Soviet Union, against socialist construction there, the grenade campaign and finally the last resolutions of the E. C. of the II International which issued the slogan that one must put an end to Bolshevism in order to carry on the struggle against fascism.

As treacherous and openly counter-revolutionary is the standpoint of the anarchist and syndicalist leaders, who under the cloak of the struggle against the "dictatorship" of the proletarian leaders, against the economic and political centralization of the Soviet Union are in reality in collaboration with the bourgeoisie in the preparation of an attack on the first Workers' State of the world which is surrounded on all sides by imperialist enemies.

17. This treacherous campaign was intended to justify the position of "neutrality" which the social democrats through the mouth of Breitscheid recommended the workers of Germany to adopt in the event of the capitalist countries declaring war against the Soviet Union.

The adept German social democratic swindlers understand perfectly well that there can be no such "neutrality," that the German chemical industry will most likely supply the states fighting against the Soviet Union with the materials they require, that German transport will transport shells from Great Britain and Italy and that the German worker will be compelled like the workers of other countries to work, to produce the requirements for the war against the toilers of the Soviet Union.

But if the position of "neutrality" is supported by German social democracy, because it coincides with the position of German imperialism, the other parties affiliated to the II International like the Polish socialist party are jointly with their "bourgeoisie and landlords, active pioneers in a war against the Soviet Union. Everywhere the position of social democrats coincides with the interests of their respective bourgeoisie. Nevertheless, something new has arisen in the evolution of social democracy, in recent times, namely, in certain countries the social democrats are proceeding further than the policy of supporting the imperialist policy of their government. They take the initiative for imperialist policy and armaments out of the hands of the bourgeoisie. The position of the French socialists, who, through Paul Boncour, introduced the new war law, is one of the most striking examples of this latest "evolution."

A Beautiful Memorial Book of Sixteen Brilliant Cartoons by Ellis on

Sacco-Vanzetti

With an Introduction by Joseph Freeman.

LONG after the death of the two martyrs of Labor—this beautiful book will be cherished by workers. Here is a collection of sixteen inspired cartoons by the noted proletarian artist Fred Ellis, drawn in the heat of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti. They are beautifully done, brilliant, bitter in their hatred of the system that murdered these two brave workers. They are a call from our martyrs to carry on the struggle. Secure a copy for yourself—get another (or more) for your shop-mate to bring him into the Organized ranks of your class.

Joseph Freeman, noted writer, has written a brief, striking introduction for this beautiful memorial tribute.

The book is sixteen large size pages—on heavy art paper. There is only one large cartoon on each page—every page is suitable for framing. Send for the book today.

DISCUSS USE OF MILITIA IN IOWA TO BREAK STRIKE

Illinois Miners Asking Unionists for Relief

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 26. — The coal operators of Iowa are conducting a campaign to have the militia mobilized and rushed into the mining district, where they plan to start non-union work in the near future.

The province of an armed body at the disposal of the employers in a mine strike or lock-out is to terrorize the neighborhood, and break the morale of the strikers, so that they will begin to drift back as individuals, or at least make no proper picketing of mines importing strike-breakers.

Coal operators in Iowa have complained in the past because the state laws do not provide for coal and iron police, and state troopers, such as are used in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Now they plan to use the national guard for the sort of work ordinarily done by gunmen hired.

Governor Hammill was in conference today, with authorities of Appanoose county, to discuss the question of using the militia.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 26 (FP). "In days gone by the Illinois Miners' Union has always been ready to help all who were in need and at this time we welcome the contributions of those who wish to aid and assist us in maintaining our present wage scale against those industrial barons who would take from us the things that we are rightfully entitled to," reads an appeal to all local unions in the Illinois organized labor movement. It is signed by President Harry Fishwick and Secretary Water Nesbit of the Illinois Mine Workers, District 12 of the United Mine Workers of America. Contributions should be sent to Nesbit at the Illinois Mine Workers' Bldg., Springfield, Ill. The [illegible] also urge that Illinois industries [illegible] Illinois coal.

Burns Agency Bribed Operators to Lie in the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

More evidence of the methods used to frame-up Sacco and Vanzetti is revealed in a letter sent to The DAILY WORKER by a former operative for the William J. Burns Detective Agency, signing himself John Nickelaus, operator No. 14. The letter follows in full:

"I am sorry for Sacco and Vanzetti. I worked for the William J. Burns Detective Agency for 1 year with 3 other inside operatives for "evidence" on this case.

"The agency made us tell lies to convict them. It paid us plenty of money, and gave us whisky. Now they give me money to go away to Europe to stay there for good.

"Burns got $25,000 for this case.

"Am sorry now.

(signed) John Nickolaus."

MEXICAN LABOR PROTEST MURDER BY TAKING MINE

Lock American Bosses In Their Office

MEXICO CITY, August 26. — As a means of enforcing upon the American mining companies, looting Mexico of mineral wealth, their detestation of the capitalist class which in the United States have murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, the "Red Syndicates" of mining workers have occupied the property of the Amparo Company in Amparo, Mexico, and for a while barricaded [illegible] ters 18 American and 11 English bosses used at the mine.

No violence has been offered the staff of the mine, but the American employers are frantically appealing to the Mexican and U. S. government for "military protection." Federal troops came to the mine and the officials were released.

[illegible] can feeling engendered by the Sacco and Vanzetti case, culminating [illegible] mination to a long series of [illegible] tions of workers of Latin blood by the American business men at home and abroad, all Americans are leaving the cities of Piedrabola and Mazata.

U. S. DESTROYER SHELLS CHINESE; FIRES ON TOWNS

More Fighting Around Nanking; Pei Deserts

SHANGHAI, Aug. 26.—The American navy again took a hand in the fighting between the opposing Chinese forces on the Yangtse river between Nanking and Chinkiang, it was learned here today upon the arrival of the U. S. destroyer Noa from Nanking. The Noa reported that while convoying three British merchant ships from Nanking yesterday afternoon she "had been obliged to shell the northerners' position for ten minutes." Many of the shells fell in thickly populated villages along the river.

Kill 300 Northerners.

Three hundred northern troops are believed to have been drowned or killed by rifle and machine gun fire near Nanking today when Nanking troops sank two troop laden boats in the Yangtse river.

The northerners were making an attack against the Cantonese defenders of Nanking, meanwhile trying to force a passage of the river. A violent cross fire from the northerners' artillery and machine guns indicated that they intended to make another attempt to force their way over the river to storm the defences of Nanking. The Cantonese prepared to resist any fresh assaults to the utmost.

Fighting Increases.

Severe fighting between the northern and southern forces was reported from the Chinkiang region as well as from the Nanking sector. Chinkiang has been cut off from Nanking.

[illegible] operating from the northern area cut the railway line near Anting [illegible] from Shanghai, preventing the passage of troop trains and cutting off the retreat of the Nanking [illegible] from Chinkiang.

Cross River.

[illegible] by fog northern forces [illegible] at Pukow toward Nanking attempting to land from river transports at Hsiakwan. The movement was covered by a violent bombardment and fusillades from machine guns and rifles.

Northern troops that advanced from Yangchow, forced a crossing of the Yangtse and occupied Lungtan, cutting the railway line.

The situation is further complicated for the southerners by the defection of three divisions, commanded by General Pei Pao San, a former adherent of Sun Chuan-fang. These troops are stationed at Hangchow.

PRIMO DI RIVERA CALLS POWERLESS CONSULTING BODY

"National Assembly" to Legalize Tyranny

MADRID, Aug. 26.—Premier General Primo De Rivera has drawn up a decree for the king's signature convoking the Spanish national assembly, it was learned today. The decree will be forwarded to King Alfonso on September 1.

The assembly will be only a consultative body.

International News Service learned that the contents of the decree, which have not been published in Spain, provide that the national assembly shall comprise 400 members. These will be presidents of provincial deputations; presidents of patriotic unions; one municipal deputy from the capital of each province and from each important city; university professors; former deputies and senators who have served at least three consecutive terms; representatives of chambers of commerce, industries, agriculture, property owners, labor unions, high government employes, of the ministries.

Little Salary.

The assembly will meet in sections, divided according to government departments. Each member will receive 30 pesetas fee for each session, but the maximum number of sessions in any one year is limited to 200. It is reported the premier is planning an extensive reorganization of the government before the assembly meets.

I.L.D. Warns of Scheme To Frame-up Miners to do all it can to prevent the development of a frame-up which is by no means unknown in Pennsylvania where it has been used very often to break the organizations of the workers there or to cow their spirit. Plans are being made to organize defense conference thruout the district for the arrested workers and every measure will be taken to prevent their imprisonment, since their arrest occurred for no other reason than their participation in a protest meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti.

The International Labor Defense continues its work of building nation-wide organization for the resistance of such frame-up activities as those contemplated by the operators in Cheswick.

It calls, in a special manifesto (Printed yesterday in The DAILY WORKER) for broadening and widening the organization as a instrument to fight against the frame-up system, and says:

"Only the organized resistance of the working class can prevent the imprisonment of labor fighters who are framed up by the class enemy. Only the organized power of the working class can open the prison doors and release our brothers from the living death of the cell. Every ounce of effort must be exerted now to enroll new members in the International Labor Defense. Thousands of sympathizers who have supported the movement must be invited to join its ranks as active members. New Branches must be built thruout the country whereever they do not exist so that every city has a fortress for labor defense."

"AUGUST 22"

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

The date of August 22 [illegible] commit to our memory. It becomes an historic. Capitalism got its pound of flesh. The working class got its lesson. August 22nd becomes a calarion call to struggle. August 22nd becomes our banner.

Capitalism is strong enough in America to deal the working class a brazen blow. But capitalism is not sure enough of its powers to be magnanimous. If there were a wave of revolutionary unrest in America, they would not dare to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. If there were no revolutionary unrest in the world at large, they would have been shown "clemency" and "fairness." As it is, their murder was decided as a lesson and a warning to the working class.

Sacco and Vanzetti were placed in jail in 1920 in consequence of the Bolshevik revolution in Russia. Sacco and Vanzetti were murdered in 1927 in consequence of the peasant and workers revolution in China. American capitalism says to the American workers, "Beware!. If you are influenced by revolutionary ideas, you will have many Saccos and Vanzettis." American imperialism says to the imperialists of the world, "Look up to me! The thing you are afraid to do at home I do before the eyes of the whole world. Follow my example!"

American imperialism is a leader of world imperialism. (The world rulers are envious of their American brethren, though ostensibly protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti—in the interests of national rivalry!) American imperialism has more means to bribe the Socialists and the union leaders who, at the crucial moment, came to its aid by rejecting the general strike, and by a weak-kneed demeanor. But the tens of thousands who quit work on that memorable day of August 22nd to crowd Union Square, the tens of thousands who struck and demonstrated in other cities,—they understand the meaning of the murder, they have accepted the challenge, they, on their side have given a strong and solemn warning.

Shoulder to shoulder and arm to arm they stood at Union Square. It had not been so easy to quit work at 3 o'clock. One risked one's job, one risked one's bread. The watchful eye of the official union machinery followed every striker, noted the names of the rebels, put them on the blacklist. Tomorrow they may find themselves on the street. Today they could not withstand the call to strike. Today they are burning in feverish anguish at Union Square.

And what are the words that meet with the greatest acclaim? What are the slogans that kindle the hottest flames? It has long been known that the victims are innocent. One has learned to see the guilt of the Thayers and Fullers, the Lowells, Brandeises, Holmeses. One has paid them the tribute searing contempt. One has not the slightest hope of favorable action on the part of the State. One is tried of compassion, exhausted by pain, poisoned by hate. What else can be said? Where is the way out?

But something has happened. Relief has come. An avenue of release has been opened: a line of work appears to beckon!

"We shall build up the labor organizations," the speakers says, "in the first line the labor unions; we shall turn them into instruments of struggle against capitalist exploitation; we shall turn them into instruments of power to be able to halt the hand of the assassin in cases like that of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We shall build up a labor party to represent the laboring masses. We shall utilize the labor party as a united front of all the toiling and the exploited against the power of their exploiters. We shall create a political weapon to frustrate such attacks as the frame-up on Sacco and Vanzetti.

"We shall build up a mass Communist Party to march at the head of the entire labor movement and to unify all its activities by one clear aim along a cleary defined road—the abolition of capitalism."

There is a new meaning to those familiar words. New sparks kindle in the eyes of the assembled. A stone weights melts in their souls. "We shall work," "We shall struggle," "We shall build today and tomorrow," "We shall strengthen our ranks and steel our wills," the speakers say, and it is in the hearts of the masses that they read those words. It is like an oath. But still, the most wonderful, the actually liberating word has not been uttered. Now it comes.

"Only when the working class will hold the power of state will such trials against working class fighters become impossible." With power in the hands of the working class just punishment will be meted out for such crimes." "Proletarian justice will secure freedom for the working class!"

Waves of approval are surging from the human sea. Eyes sparkle. The ideology of class struggle, hitherto a set of thoughts, becomes a live emotional experience. Every drop of the workers' blood feels that they need working-class courts, working class laws, working class rule, a working class state! They life their eyes and see mounted policemen above their heads, machine guns on the sidewalks, armed motorcycles ready for action, revolvers and clubs everywhere, and they say to themselves, "This is the same power that has already dressed Sacco and Vanzetti in the garb of death. This power is a servant of our masters, it has been created to secure their domination. We cannot rely on it. We must have our own power in order to live like human beings."

The future has touched the assembled thousands with the fininger of a message. They felt clearly that it is there, that it is not a work of imagination. Thousands of workers of a sudden realized that they were citizens of a new world, for which they must fight, for which it is worth to suffer. In the light of this new world the death of Sacco and Vanzetti assumed in a new aspect. They do not die in vain. Their work is not lost. Their spirit lives. We will march on to that goal where they were driven by their impetuous souls. We shall arrive.

And that evening in front of the Freiheit,—was it not an oath of class unity, a merging of thousands of spirits in one spirit of revolt?

Nobody had called, nobody had organized the vigil. They came in thousands, many-tongued, many voiced; Italians, Greeks, Russians, Yanks. They stood in the dark while their spirits glowed. They stood in silence while cries pierced the dark sky overhead.

They lived with Sacco and Vanzetti. They went with them through the last hours of their lives, through the last agonies. A miracle happened. Fifteen—twenty thousand became like one as if in a prayer,—but not to god. Fifteen—twenty thousand vowed something which they will carry in their souls to the very grave,—but not a word was uttered. Only eyes spoke in the dark. Only hearts hammered in a heavily laden atmosphere. There was pain akin to a curse. There was sadness as gripping as trumpets. Tears in the eyes—steel in the blood. A lump of suffering in the throat—lightnings overhead.

Night vigil. Night light. Union square trees made heavy with dew. Night-cool iron railings. Broken up figures in the Freiheit windows. Engine throb of armed motorcycles nearby. White light over the news sheet in the Freiheit window, like a lone, forgotten tear. Green, red, yellow and blue auto lights in the streets. Black, thick serpents of human bodies—one line, another, a third. Closeness of strangers, mutual understanding without words, glances of friends who are afraid to speak lest they burst in a howl. Dark building walls all around. The sky sinking lower, heavier, darker, almost touching our heads. Tension, bated breath. Uncontrollable tremor. Then the news in the Freiheit window:

SACCO MURDERED.

A wail, a shout. A storm-tossed forest. Sharp cries are cutting the thick howl, knife-like. Man weep. Old, hardened men weep. Thousands curse.

VANZETTI MURDERED.

The Square is a storm-lashed ocean. Human waves rise, clash, wind, thunder. Lights flare. Horns shriek, engines vibrate. The walls sway. The ground underfoot shakes. Everything moves in a circle, around and around. Only the forlorn light in the Freiheit window shines in vain. There is nothing more to say.

Out of the chaos, the "International" is born. The song grows. The song gains momentum. This is the answer.

"ARISE YE PRISONERS OF STARVATION"

We will come. We will not forget. We have gained something on the date of August the 22nd. We will make it bigger, deeper. Sacco is alive, Vanzetti is alive—in us, with us.

We will come.

We write down the date: August 22, 1927. We write down the names: Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco, Vanzetti Will Not Be Forgotten

By ALEX BITTELMAN

The rulers of America have gone through with the murder of our two brothers. Despite the demands of the toiling masses the world over, despite the demands of the workers of America Sacco and Vanzetti were killed to satisfy the class hatred, the interests and "prestige" of the American capitalist class.

Sacco and Vanzetti will not be forgotten. Already their suffering and martyr deaths have moved to protest and struggle against imperialist capitalist reaction in the United States large masses of workers all over the world. Already millions of workers are opening their eyes to the shame and hypocricy of capitalist class justice. Already the oppressed working masses are beginning to realize the menacing implications of the developing capitalist offensive upon the labor movement.

As far as the working class is concerned the martyr deaths of Sacco and Vanzetti must mark a fresh concentration of effort for strengthening the struggles of the workers against the capitalists. The American labor movement must draw all conclusions and learn all the lessons from the action of the American capitalist class in murdering Sacco and Vanzetti. More organization, more consciousness and more militancy—this must be the answer of the working class to the challenge of American imperialism.

Sacco and Vanzetti will not be forgotten. Already they have become a living part of the struggle of the oppressed masses all over the world. Already they have become symbolic of the suffering and misery of the millions of unskilled and semi-skilled workers oppressed and persecuted by American capitalism. Already their death is becoming the rallying cry for struggle against capitalist oppression with renewed efforts in all parts of the world.

The attack upon the labor movement must be resisted and working class power must be mobilized to repel the capitalist offensive. The working class militants against whom this attack is directed in the first instance must redouble their efforts towards the awakening and molization of the American working class. Only in this manner will we fullfil our duty to the working class and to the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Political consciousness and political struggle must rise in scope and intensity. The masses must learn—and are learning—that reliance can be placed upon anything else but the organized power of the exploited masses. Intensify the struggle for the organization of the unorganized. Push forward with greater vigor the strengthening of the trade unions and their radicalization. More efforts must be invested in the struggle against imperialism, militarism and war. And more energy must be devoted to the promotion of independent political action by the workers in the struggle against the capitalist dictatorship and for the rule of the working class.

"CARRY ON!"

By ROSE BARON

Sec'y Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee.

The fight is not finished. It has merely begun. The memories of our martyred comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti must be perpetuated. The heroic efforts of the many comrades who voluntarily aided us in our work must not be in vain, nor must the gallant deaths of our glorious dead be in vain.

Soon the Emergency Committee will no longer exist. It has served its purpose. We were beaten by sheer force of barbaric power.

We appeal to all those who aided us in the fight not to give up hope. We ask them to remember the heroism of Sacco and Vanzetti. We ask them to think of their revolutionary ideals.

The work of rescuing class war prisoners will go on. The International Labor Defense, the creator of the Emergency Committee, will continue to function for framed-up workers in the prisons and courts of this corrupt country.

We have just witnessed a titanic episode in the age-old war of the classes. We have made many new friends. To those friends as well as to our old comrades we ask that this harrowing experience be made a bond of sympathy which will enable us to meet our enemies in the future with unbroken front ranks.

To the hundreds of thousands of workers who struck and demonstrated in Union Square we say that their efforts were not in vain. You are the spearhead of the militant working class. Carry on.

What are we to do so that the struggle may not be in vain?

Build the International Labor Defense. Read the Labor Defender. Take an active part in freeing all class war prisoners. Urge your fellow-workers to do the same.

Help to build The DAILY WORKER. When all other newspapers either ignored or falsified the facts on the issue the WORKER pointed to the correct path. It exposed criminal Thayer, the reactionary Fuller and the murder-bent Advisory Committee.

We have been asked to tell of the work which we did in the effort to burst the bars of Charlestown Prison and bring Sacco and Vanzetti back to the ranks of our fighting army. There is little we can say. Let us not talk of what we have done but to what lies ahead of us.

Build the I. L. D.

Build The DAILY WORKER.

Build a wall of Labor against the frame-up system.

In this way only can we carry on the class war effectively. Only in this way can we avenge the death of our dear comrades who died gloriously with revolutionary messages upon their lips.

"It's a Fine Day"---Said Governor Fuller

By MICHAEL GOLD

Someone must write a play about Sacco and Vanzetti. This is now one of our great proletarian legends—it is a perfect epic of the new America.

I suggest Governor Fuller as the villain of the piece. Capitalism is the real villain, the impersonal profit machine,—Capitalism, punishing its two rebels.

But on the stage one must have flesh and blood—not abstractions. Governor Fuller will do as a perfect symbol of capitalism in this great play yet to be written.

It is the day of the execution. The morning sun glitters on the dirty gold dome of the State House in Boston. It is a hot stifling day, a day of swamp mists and heavy breathing. A hundred thousand clerks clatter meekly to work, sweating under their straw hats. The cops suffer in their blue woolen suits and choker collars. It's a fine day for swimming, but the Governor comes to the State House at 10 o'clock.

He greets the newspaper boys with his usual wholesome smile. They immediately write for the first editions:

"The Governor looked rested, as if he had had a good night's sleep. His eyes were clear and friendly, his rosy face beamed. It's a fine morning, isn't it, he said to the newspapermen. I'll be here at my desk until midnight, boys, doing my duty."

He is a tall, handsome man, the Governor, with the strong face of a Roman senator. He is a portly magnifico of the New American Empire, the stern, hard-boiled, genial, ignorant type ruler we are breeding in this country. He was once a trick bicycle rider, this Governor; then he owned a bicycle repair shop; then, when automobiles came in, he was shrewd enough to take to selling them instead of bicycles; now he has about [illegible] million dollars in the bank, and firmly believes every American boy can rise like himself from trick bicycle rider to Governor of Massachusetts.

He enters his office. Four hard-boiled looking men take chairs about him. They have the iron faces and gimlet eyes of detectives; but they are a litle higher than that in the social scale: they are the Governor's political advisers.

They are here to help him do his duty, the duty for which he gave up a pleasant holiday at the beach. All day delegations are to arrive, to plead with the Governor for the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti.

In the narrow crooked streets of Boston the mobs of worried clerks rush about their business. The cafeterias are crowded. Taxicabs carve their way through the traffic. The cops sweat and worry. Everyone is tense. Buying and selling goes on as usual—nothing must ever disturb this in America.

But the newsboys are shouting in a chant like the chorus of a mad futurist play:

"Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die, Must Die!"

And everyone mutters, converses, comments, worries. They agree that Sacco and Vanzetti must die—aren't they Italians? aren't they anarchists? But the clerks worry—the city worries.

Governor Fuller doesn't worry. He is genial as the delegations are ushered in. He takes the offensive. A liberal woman poet timidly tries to convince him that capital punishment is both wicked and inefficient. He puts her through a cool smiling catechism. What does she know about criminals? What does she know about law? She flounders and stutters, and then retreats in tears. The Governor smiles at his "political advisers"; they smile at him.

A labor delegation from New York arrives. They are right wing leaders in the needle trades who refused to call a protest strike against the execution, believing that friendly words with the Governor would be as effective.

The Governor regards them with a smile of pleasure. Before even that word-hero Judge Panken or that A. F. of L. poet Shiplacoff can utter a sound, Fuller has begun attacking them with questions. How do they know Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent? How do they know Judge Thayer was prejudiced? Were they present at the trial? Do they live in Massachusetts? They try to put in a few feeble arguments, but this irritates the Governor, so they desist.

They do not wish to offend him—it may prejudice him—they still believe there are stirrings of mercy in the chill millionaire's heart.

Two clubwomen arrive from Newport, R. I., women with important husbands. They are pink liberals, and they think the poor Italians should be given another chance, or at least life imprisonment, and they have had tea and dinners with the Governor's wife in the past, and they know Mr. Fuller is a good man. He listens to them, assures them politely he will ponder and pray over their fluttering words, and bows them out. They are rather confused, but hopeful.

Whitefaced liberals with big names troop in all day. They have followed this case, and until the last minute will not believe the fair name of America is to be sullied by the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. They believe in the pure white abstraction they call "Justice." They are sure one need only present the "facts" to the Governor. They believe in "reason." They believe that there are no classes or class war in America, but that this case is simply a miscarriage of "Justice."

Now they are bumping head first against the stone wall of the capitalist dictatorship and class justice. They are puzzled, alarmed, sickened by the Governor's smooth determination. They repeat whole pages of the "Nation" and the "New Republic" at him. They utter the thousand and one phrases dear to liberalism, but the Governor sheds them like a duck's back, and he politely teases the liberals. He is a realist, this governor; he is class-conscious, he despises liberals. But he is always polite.

They stagger out into the street, their world shattered. Liberal phrases do not soften a class-conscious Governor's heart. They can't understand it at all. And the Governor is smiling at his "advisers" and they are smiling at him.

From every corner of the world thousands of telegrams poured in on the Governor. They were last-minute, desperate messages from mayors, congressmen, labor organizations, churches, writers, Japanese, French, Italian, American, African. A whole world was pleading for mercy to two innocent men. It was the biggest event in recent history—this first international protest on a labor issue.

The telegrams arrived, but the newspapermen told their friends later something that they had not the courage to print, namely:—

That These Telegrams Were Never Read!

They were tossed into huge wastebaskets, and then taken away and burned by the janitor. They were on the floor, they were in the corners, they were cynically walked upon by the class-conscious Governor of Massachusetts—the electric-chair Governor.

Justice For Labor In Massachusetts

By Fred Ellis

"It's a Fine Day"-- Said Gov. Fuller

The test of his humanity came when Mrs. Sacco and the sister of Vanzetti were ushered in. He listened to them long and politely, but with a set face. He catechised them, too, on the crime, and pointed out various facts that had "convinced" him of the workers' guilt.

This was at nine o'clock in the evening. The two women were too sad and nerve-wracked to argue with the Governor. They repeated pitiful unanswerable humiliating words; they asked for mercy.

The Russian Soviets have granted mercy to thousands of White Guardists who threw bombs, who invaded the country, who burned villages and slaughtered babies and old men. When one's enemy is no longer dangerous, one must be merciful. Revolutionsits are not sadists; revolutionists do not believe in murder; revolutionists kill only in defense of the workers' cause; revolutionists have a great faith that some day there will be a red dawn on the world, and in the skies will be written the beautiful "word over all": Reconciliation.

But Governor Fuller was faintly annoyed at the two women, and would not discuss the matter of mercy. It is not a word in the legal books; it is not a word in the lexicon of capitalism.

He sent the women out in tears. He said: "I am afraid I will have to go through with my duty."

There is a pious legend among the voter-boobs of Massachusetts that Governor Fuller "is a good man." John Howard Lawson, in his satirical play, "Loud Speaker" strangely previsaged this by having his Babbitt hero run for governor on a platform with the single slogan: "Harry U. Collins Is a Good Man." It sounds like a joke, but in Massachusetts it is not a joke. Nearly everyone there believes that Governor Fuller is a good man, and that's why they vote for him.

It is a legend that has been carefully built up. Plumbers, paupers and policemen of Boston will tell you with tears in their eyes how Governor Fuller has never accepted a cent of his salary since he has been Governor; how kind he is to his wife; how he loves his children; how genial he is to his workers; how democratically fond he is of poker and beer; what a firm churchman he is; how much he gives to charity every year.

But this "good man" has for several years persisted in his determination that Sacco and Vanzetti must die. And he has whipped up a storm of newspaper prejudice against the men; he has schemed and plotted and framed careful publicity campaigns; he has followed his murder plan through like an expert criminal, he has slept on it month after month.

His mind was made up years ago. His investigation was a piece of political sadism. He knew he would find the men guilty; but he called in witness after witness, and taunted them, and jeered at them. One woman witness for the defense, it is said, left in tears. The Governor had hinted that she was the paid mistress of one of the lawyers for Sacco and Vanzetti.

On this last day Fuller enjoyed torturing the desperate friends of Sacco and Vanzetti who came before him. Someone who went to see him said the Governor was radiant; his "mental attitude was that of a rooster flapping its wings." He really enjoyed this last day, when sobbing women came to him and knelt for mercy.

At precisely midnight Francis Fisher Kane, former Federal District Attorney in Pennsylvania, was in the Governor's office. He was telling the Governor of the tactics of the Department of Justice and its agents provocateurs, a situation he knows from the inside. He begged the Governor to reprieve Sacco and Vanzetti until this federal angle of the case had been cleared up, and the files showing the part the Department of Justice had played in the Sacco case examined.

The Governor went on listening with his polite, satisfied smile. He pretended to be affected by these pleas, impressed by Mr. Kane's logic. He promised he would take the matter under advisement. A humorous murderer he is, a Massachusetts wit, an electric chair clown!

For when Mr. Kane came into the street, his heart beating with a wild, last-minute hopefulness as a result of the Governor's friendly smile, he was startled by the shouting of the newsboys.

They were shouting:

"Sacco Executed at 12.19."

The execution had been going on a few miles away in Charlestown, all during those minutes when the Governor was politely pretending to listen to Mr. Kane's appeal. The Governor had known all the time that the juice was being released into the electric chair. The Governor had been baiting Mr. Kane. The Governor, that good man, had been having his last delightful thrill of sadism.

Yes, Governor Fuller is a good man. Yes, Massachusetts is a good state, and America is a good country. And all over the world there are millions who will never forget Sacco and Vanzetti, nor forgive the good people who murdered them.

MURDER AT MIDNIGHT

"Both are dead."

Dead.
Press the button. Turn on the juice.
Dead.
Waiting, waiting.
For what?
Two wops to sit down in a chair
And be dead.
Show's over.
Time to go home, go to bed.
Time to forget, put it out of your head.
Dead.
(Death. Grim Reaper. Symbolic. Cloak. Hood.
Scythe. Skull.)
Dead.
Both.

I walked out into the huge soft night.
No light.
Someone had strangled the stars.

II.

Seven years to make a shroud.
Seven years to make it strong enough
To hold the whole of life.
(Wonder how long it takes to make an electric chair?)
Seven years for two wops.
Dying.
Dead.
"Massachasetts is too proud——"
Seven years to make a shroud

IV.

Three men in frock coats playing dice.
Three men and a fourth playing with skulls.
Fingers weblike and precise,
Caressing calmly the fluttering dice.
Harvard accents glide like gulls
From lips like nooses hard and strong.
What are the stakes? How long, how long?
Four men in frock coats playing dice.
Dice. Are they loaded?
Loaded. Bloated.
Four bloated frock coats playing with skulls.

V.

And on two faces hangs the mask
Of the immobile anguish of the years.
This is the honorable task
Of those unbitten by subtle doubts or fears.
Climb, you lousy wops, into your holes.
The god of the Fullers and Thayers will care for your souls.

VI.

Nights are made black for deeds like this.
Nights are made black, muffled and secret.
Press the button. Turn on the juice.
Show's over.

And the corroding dawn.
Waiting.
Steals like a thief, trembling and ghastly white,
Through the thick, bolted night.

The job is done.
Whistles shriek in factory and mill.
And the implacable sun,
Climbing.
Hangs splendid and terrible and still.

VII.

Go back, slaves, go back.
Go back to the factories, the dancing machines.
Go back, dancing slaves.

Noon.
(The sun is a big round brass spittoon).
Life seethes, blown up.
Collapses like a pricked balloon.
Night.
"Abraham Lincoln freed the slaves."

VIII.

Too intolerably blue, empty, shining, remote the sky.
Too intolerably serene, calm the tall, greatwinded
trees.
Too green every leaf, every grass.
Seared by no sadness, no blight even of the cool
keen panting autumn,
The brown stain of the taking away.
Nothing to mar, no hunger of stamped-out growing,
no cry
Out of denial.

Trees lift strenuous leanness raise petulant hands,
drag darkness
To them.
Nothing, nothing to mar.

IX.

Each sound is their sound.
Life demands life.
Beyond the pathos and the pain
That humans martyr humans with
Their blood shouts over all the earth
Blood, red blood.
My brothers' blood is on my hands
My brothers' agony burns my flesh
Agony. Blood
On my hands.

X.

Pity the wretches that will sit in the cells
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails.
Pity the poor stiffs that will come after
To live a while in those exquisite hells,
To live and hear always two voices, always the tread
Of feet always, always dead.

Pity the fellows that will scrub the floors and walls
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails
And never be able to wash away
The great trembling stain
Of Sacco's and Vanzetti's pain.
("The men of this dying old society they brutally
have pulled me away from the embrace of your brother and your poor mother.")

Pity the rats that will gnaw the moldy crumbs
Of Charlestown and of Dedham Jails.
And smell the smell of their blood
And gasp.
("I would not wish to a dog or to a snake, to the most low and misfortunate creature of the earth—I would not wish to any of them what I have had to suffer for things that I am not guilty of.")
Pity them, pity them all.

XI.

Sacco And Vanzetti Must Not Die!
Shrill signs hurl the workers' cry.
Strike. Protest. Telegram.
Massachusetts doesn't give a damn.
A million-throated workers' crying.
Sacco and Vanzetti dying, dying.
Sacco and Vanzetti dead.
Dead.

WE SHALL NOT SOON FORGET!

Swing it, swing it.

other tendencies in the labor movement. He did valiant work in the defense and we marched together on the picket line, went to jail together, united our forces in a common effort to make the Boston strike successful, etc. Some day men like Alfred Baker Lewis and Upton Sinclair and others who believe in labor unity not labor division and in fighting capitalism not Communism will realize that the socialist party officialdom believes otherwise, that it cannot be removed, that it uses the Baker Lewises and Sinclairs as fig leaves to cover its reactionary nakedness ~~and they~~ will break with the party which serves capitalism by dividing and weakening the labor movement.

9. "PROGRESSIVE" CAPITALIST POLITICIANS PROP UP THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM IN TIME OF CRISIS. Brandeis's refusal to intervene on the silly pretext that he had "personal relations with people interested in the case" and Borah's shameful declaration that no self-respecting government would yield to "the opinion of mankind" or demonstrations of popular will—are outstanding evidences of the fact that the so-called progressives are props of capitalism who in time of crisis find "progressive" justifications for reactionary acts.

10. WE MUST BUILD A LABOR PARTY AND FIGHT FOR A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT. The necessity for labor to unite its forces politically, clean out the agents of the capitalist political parties from leadership in its own ranks and sweep the boss-controlled judges, legislators and executives out of power is an obvious lesson from the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

11. WE MUST FIGHT FOR THE ABOLITION OF THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM. It is not merely a Thayer or a Fuller or a Katzmann but the system that breeds Thayers and Fullers and Katzmanns, that exploits workers and persecutes them for activity on behalf of their class—it is the capitalist system that has murdered our two comrades.

12. THE WORKERS' MOVEMENT CANNOT BE DESTROYED BY TERROR. History is on our side in the class struggle. All the forces of social development lead to the strengthening and ultimate triumph of our movement. An act of class brutality and terror, such as the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, in place of frightening the workers into desertion of our movement has the opposite result. It arouses and awakens countless fersh hosts of workers. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has disillusioned millions of workers with the capitalist courts, has stirred up their miltancy, driven them to the left, put them in a fighting mood. It has weakened the ruling class by unmasking it. It has strengthened international proletarian solidarity by teaching the workers of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia and North and South America to act together in a common cause. It has brought new sympathy and support to the labor movement from intellectuals still under the sway of belief in capitalism and its institutions. Those who already sympathized have become more actively sympathetic. The Heywood Brouns and Edna Saint Vincent Millays, the Lawsons and Dos Passos and innumerable other writers and artists have been brought closer to the workers' movement, had their sympathy aroused and some breath of our struggle and our cause must necessarily pass into their writings, serving to undermine capitalism ideologically and prepare the way for a better social order. Sacco and Vanzetti fought for the organization of certain unorganized workers and against capitalism. A little handful of workers followed them and knew of them. Today they have been made into martyrs and heroes and millions follow them into a struggle for the organization of the unorganized and against the capitalist system. In life their voice reached only handfuls. In death their voice is heerd round the world. Sacco and Vanzetti are taking their own vengeance. That which was weak in them has perished. That which was strong has been magnified into a powerful force that makes the mighty tremble in their places of power. Ours is the task of keeping alive the memory of their struggler and sufferings, their heroism and their martyrdom. Of carrying on the cause of labor for which they died, of organizing the unorganized workers, of unifying labor's forces, of putting an end to the frame-up system. Of abolishing capitalist justice capitalist control of courts and governors, of abolishing the system whose enemy and whose victim they were. Let us pledge ourselves that they shall not have died in vain. Let us pledge ourselves to carry on the cause for which they fought and died until the workers are free and capitalism no longer exists on the face of the earth. That is their wish. For that they died. For that we must live and fight. And in that manner will the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti be avenged.

READ THE DAILY WORKER EVERY DAY

The Labor Movement and the Sacco-Vanzetti Case

By WM. Z. FOSTER

THE American ruling class has dared to execute our comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. In the face of a world-wide protest of the workers and notwithstanding the condemnation of everybody with even a tinge of liberalism in their makeup, the exploiters, throwing aside even the pretenses of legality, have ventured to do away with these two loyal champions of the working class. It was a brutal act of terrorism, which will bring no profit to the capitalists. It was a cynical example of class justice which will waken masses of workers to the hypocrises and horrors of capitalism.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case far transcends in significance the framed-up charge of murder which furnished the technical basis of it. It is a political issue of the most vital importance. The workers in other countries understood this infinitely better than here. Hence, their monster demonstrations. The capitalists, strong and arrogant in their profits of imperialism, wrung from the exploited workers all over the world, saw in the Sacco-Vanzetti execution an opportunity to deliver an attack at the labor movement, through its most advanced section, the ~~left wing. Hence, the tryants~~ struck their deadly blow.

In this great class drama what a sorry role was played by the men who stand at the head of the trade unions. Once again they have acted as agents of the employers. Instead of trying to save Sacco and Vanzetti and thus check this offensive of the employers against the workers, they have facilitated their execution. Great mass strikes, militant demonstrations of all kinds were all that could have saved Sacco and Vanzetti. But these labor lieutentants would have none of such movements. They blocked every effort at real struggle against the executioners of our comrades. Their long course of treachery was climaxed in their last minute statements admitting the guilt of Sacco and Vanzetti (statements of A. F. of L., Chicago Federation of Labor, etc.) and asking that their sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

The betrayal of the workers by their false leaders evidenced by such treacherous policies as support of the old capitalist parties, refusal to organize the unorganized, establishment of the B. & O. Plan, etc., receives just one more expression in their shameful failure to support Sacco and Vanzetti. It was such treason by the so-called leaders of labor that jailed Mooney and Billings and that has kept them imprisoned for all these years.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead, but the cause for which they died goes on, fertilized by the blood of these new martyrs. It is our duty to make the capitalists pay as dearly as possible for these cold-hearted murders. Millions of workers all over the world are aroused and indignant at this attack upon their leaders and their organizations. It is our big task to point out to them the full political meaning of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, to teach them that the same forces that murdered our comrades are those that oppress the workers in the shops and subject them to the bitterest of exploitation.

The Sacco-Vanzetti execution must be the signal for a renewed struggle against capitalism on every front. One phase of this must be a drive to free all political prisoners. To the eternal shame of the labor movement such men as Mooney, Billings and others remain year after year in jail.

Every trade union, every shop must be made to ring with protests against the assassinations of their comrades. The masses of workers must be turned out to great memorial protest meetings in all industrial districts. August 22nd must be set aside as a day upon which the proletariat all over the world demonstrates against the murder of our comrades and for the emancipation of the workers.

“--SHALL NOT HAVE DIED IN VAIN”

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

MONDAY at midnight they were murdered. The working class was not strong enough to stop it. Our shame, our grief and our indignation are fused in a universal desire to avenge their death. But how shall we do it?

1. INDIVIDUAL VENGEANCE IS IMPOTENT. Certain individualists who see society and its processes only as the work of good individuals and bad individuals have tried to concentrate their hatred upon Fuller or Thayer or Katzmann. They are hateful, contemptible, despicable creatures. Some day, when the working class has won power in America, our tribunals will call them to account for the murder of our comrades. But today the execution of individual vengeance upon them would not move the working class one step forward, would not weaken the frame-up system one iota—would rather strengthen it in the wave of reaction that would follow. There are a thousand Thayers on a thousand judicial benches, a thousand Katzmanns functioning as district attorneys. If we were to execute one of them thru individual action it would only serve to delude our class into forgetting the frame-up system, into believing that Sacco and Vanzetti have been avenged, into forgetting the real culprit, the capitalist system and the capitalist control of government. Remove Thayer or Fuller or Katzmann from the scene and the system that created them and placed them in positions of power over the lives and destinies of their fellow men would create fresh tyrants to take their places. Judge Gary died last week but the steel trust continues to coin the sweat and the blood of workers into solid gold. If every individual directly connected with the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up locally and nationally were to die tomorrow, the frame-up system would remain unshaken.

2. WORKERS CAN EXPECT NO JUSTICE IN THE CAPITALIST COURTS. If we think it is only because the judge happened to be Webster Thayer that Sacco and Vanzetti have been murdered, then we have learned nothing from our bitter experience. But there is a lesson that every worker must learn. It is taught by the Mooney case, it is taught by the Centralia case, it is taught by the Anita Whitney case, it is taught by the Milk Wagon Drivers' case and the Stone-cutter's case, it was taught by the Haymarket case, it is taught by every injunction, every verdict of guilty against a picket, every violation of free speech, press or assemblage rights. That these dead comrades of ours shall not have died in vain, every worker in our land must be made to understand it. “Workers can expect no justice from the capitalist courts.”

3. OUR GOVERNMENT IS SO CONSTRUCTED AS TO THWART THE POPULAR WILL. The Declaration of Independence speaks of a “decent respect for the opinions of mankind.” Mankind thruout the world voiced the opinion that these two men were innocent and must at least get a fair trial. But all agencies of government involved showed an indecent contempt for the opinions of mankind. And they also showed contempt for the opinions and will of the American people. The distinguished “progressive” Senator Borah even thot it would be “cowardly” to yield to popular demand. Yet judges and senators and governors are supposed to be “public servants” and express the will of the people. But our government is so constructed that the very opposite is true. Setting aside the fact that wealth controls press and pulpit and school, the big political parties, individual politicians, appointments, nominations and elections, courts, executives and legislatures—considering the question purely from the standpoint of abstract democracy, —it is evident that our government with its system of checks and balances, of judicial legislation and contempt proceedings, of precedent, of “independent” judiciary, of growing executive power, of appointment, of two-party system, etc., etc. is not responsive to popular will. Now Senator Borah the “progressive” makes a boast of this fact.

4. OUR RULING CLASS WILL NOT GIVE UP ITS POWER WITHOUT A STRUGGLE. Socialists and liberals have tried to promote the illusion that America is “different.” Altho history shows no single instance of a ruling class that has relinquished its power and privilges without a struggle, America is supposed to be a democracy responsive to popular will where a majority opinion will be sufficient to destroy the capitalist system and institute a better social order by just voting it in. The American master class is supposed to be ready to give up its privilges without a struggle. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti proves the opposite. Every frame-up case, every strike, every injunction, every use of police or troops in strikes, proves the opposite. When steel workers fight for an eight-hour day—not to abolish capitalism but just to live a little more decently under it—the troops are called out. When miners fight for steady employment or a living wage—not challenging the system but fighting for a small additional share of the wealth they produce—barbed wire and machine guns are set up, mine guards and militia called out, meetings broken up, speeches forbidden, pickets slaughtered, leaders arrested and local unions smashed by force. If the American ruling class uses all the power of wealth and government, of courts and armed force against a mere fight for a living wage—to what lengths will it not go against the workers if they attempt to abolish the capitalist system? Any one who cannot see the character of the American ruling class and its use of government must be blind indeed. American labor history is full of bloody pages and it has not yet challenged the capitalist system in serious combat. The Colorado massacre, Centralia, Homestead, McKeesport, Gary, West Virginia, Lawrence, Ludlow, Lowell, San Pedro, Everett, Butte, Calumet—to name any industrial center is to call up visions of a bloody battle in which workers were attacked by armed force not for challenging the capitalist system but merely for asking for the right to organize or to receive something approximating a living wage. Our ruling class is more arrogant and more brutal than most and will never surrender its privilege and power without a struggle.

5. WHILE USING EVERY LEGAL RECOURSE WE MUST BUILD UP A MASS MOVEMENT FOR WORKERS' DEFENSE. Our admiration for the devotion and self-sacrifice of the men and women who made up the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston must not be permitted to blind us to one fatal and fundamental mistake that they made in their conduct of the case. We must draw all the lessons so that such tragedies will be combatted more effectually and prevented in the future. That mistake was a too great and exclusive dependence upon the legal processes of the courts and a deliberate effort at discouraging demonstrations and mass protests in America. They had seven years in which to build up a powerful mass movement which would have terrified the Massachusetts officials and their masters and stayed the hand of the executioner. They did not sufficiently understand the class mechanism involved, did not see the lesson of the Mooney case, the Centralia case and a thousand other frame-ups. They confidently counted upon an abstract classless “justice” and nourished too many illusions in the legal processes of the capitalist courts. They kept the workers beliving that the courts would give justice, that the governor would give justice. For seven years when they might have been building a powerful mass movement to save Sacco and Vanzetti they discouraged the building of such a movement. Only after Fuller's decision a few weeks ago, did they perceive their mistake (or rather exhaust their illusions) when it was already too late and only a few weeks remained to build up a mass movement to arouse the popular will and save our two comrades. It is correct to use and exhaust every legal process that capitalist proceedure allows but militant workers can expect no justice from capitalist courts except where the courts dare not carry thru the act of injustice. The only protection for militant workers is the organized power of the working class and all its allies and sympathizers. It was mass protest that saved Tom Mooney from death. Had we begun seven years ago, we could have built such a movement for Sacco and Vanzetti that they would not have dared to kill them.

6. A PERMANENT DEFENSE COMMITTEE IS NEEDED. The Sacco-Vanzetti case is not an isolated one. Acts of injustice, arrests for labor activity, frame-ups, occur in every strike and in every struggle. Dramatic cases ONCE THEY HAVE BEEN SUFFICIENTLY DRAMATIZED can and no doubt should beget their special committees. But until they have attracted national and international attention? And the cases that never attract national and international attention? Such a permanent defense committee can handle EVERY case, dramatic or undramatic, grow with every case, learn with every case so as to be more efficient, more versed in the ways of courts and lawyers and frame-ups and publicity and protest, build up a continuous and cumulative public opinion against the whole system of class injustice and frame-ups, unite all branches of the labor movement so that anarchists do not have to depend only on anarchists, Communists on Communists, socialist on socialists, trade unionists on trade unionists, or a milliner let us say only on other milliners for defense. Even where a case is dramatic enough to warrant a special committee, a permanent defense organization could build a special defense committee more quickly and more efficiently than a bunch of inexperienced and bungling amateurs. Such a permanent defense organization representative of and open to all shades of opinion in the labor movement and ready to defend all cases of class injustice is the INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE. It must be built and strengthened.

7. WE MUST UNITE THE LABOR MOVEMENT AND STRNGTHEN IT. The weakness of the American labor movement proved fatal in the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti. As long as it is divided, as long as there are innumerable warring groups, as long as militants are expelled and opponents of militant struggle are in control of the official machinery, our master class can afford to laugh at the feeble protest of the working class. That Sacco and Vanzetti shall not have died in vain, we must organize the unorganized, unite the warring unions, strengthen the labor movement, make it all inclusive of every tendency, develop its militancy and tigthing spirit, eliminate its corrupt bureaucracy that shows no militancy in fighting capitalism but much militancy in fighting against militant workers.

8. THE SOCIALIST PARTY BY FIGHTING UNITED FRONTS IS WEAKENING THE LABOR MOVEMENT AND SERVING CAPITALISM. The biggest demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti were held in New York in Union Square. In these demonstrations the International Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the Emergency Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the International Labor Defense, the I. W. W., the Workers Party, various trade unions and other labor organizations united. The socialist party refused to join in the demonstrations. A strike was called for August 22nd, the day set for the execution. The socialist party condemned the strike and instructed its adherents not to participate. Business agents of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers under socialist control instructed bosses in various shops to fire any worker going out on strike. When the Workers Party wrote a letter to the socialist party saying: “However great our differences may be we must set them aside and unite our forces in this hour of need,” August Claessens threw the letter on the floor in the presence of the messenger who gave it to him. Thus the socialist party did its share to weaken the movement to save Sacco and Vanzetti and to perpetuate division and dissension in the labor movement. Notable exception must be made in the case of Alfred Baker Lewis in Boston who was actively engaged in united front activities with Communists, anarchists and

By HARRY MEYERS.

So you've left us Nicola Sacco—
And you too, Bartolomeo Vanzetti—
You've sampled American democracy as it is understood in Boston.
Boston, the hub of culture.
Here they grind out the blood of the workers
So that some be-spectacled, anemic, knock-kneed young idlers might stay.
That they might acquaint themselves with the prophets of the past
while stoning the prophets of the present.
That they might admire the art of Dante, Boccaccio and other
Italians of the past and slaying the Italians of the present.
You have left to join the other fighters of the class struggle.
The Chicago anarchists who paid with their lives for the 8-hour day.
Ling the impetuous, Parsons the studious, Fisher the warm-hearted,
Engels the fiery one, and Spiess the scholar, torch-holders of the future.
You have left to join the other fighters of the class struggle.
Joe Hill, the singer divine who fell before a [illegible] squad in Utah.
Wesley Everest, unsexed and lynched by the 100%'s of Centralia.
Frank Little, the I. W. W. organizer lynched by the forces of smug respectability in the Anaconda town of Butte.
Farewell, Sacco, Vanzetti—fighters, supreme heroes magnificent—
We'll never forget.
THE DEATH WATCH

American Workers Must Learn!

By W. W. WEINSTONE

Despite the fact that the history of the class struggle in America is filled with the brutality of the capitalist class, with violence and murder against individuals and masses of workers, there was a widespread illusion among a great number of people that Sacco and Vanzetti would not be executed.

This illusion affected not only the liberals and humanitarians in whose hearts “hope springs eternally,” but the petty-bourgeois socialists as well. So brazen has been the frame-up, so threadbare the evidence and so profound the protest that these people believed the Massachusetts Bourbons would not dare go through with the sentence. But these petty-bourgeois liberals, humanitarians and socialists refuse to recognize the period in which we live—a period of sharp and decisive class struggle and of imperialist reaction.

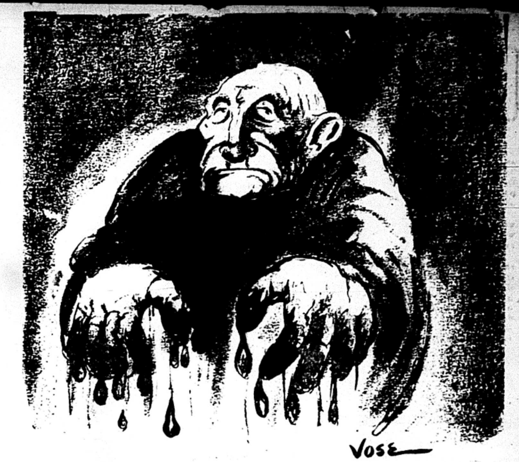
These people failed to aid in mobilizing the masses of labor because they do not understand the position of American capitalism today and the transformation of America from a period of so-called “liberalism” and “democracy” to the stark reactionary country which it is today. The American capitalist class has always been vengeful and despotic toward the workers. Yet 1887 knew a Governor Altgeld who, still bearing the traditions of the pre-monopoly period, freed the remaining victims of the Haymarket outrage. The Fullers of today are the products of the monopoly period in which a despotic financial oligarchy rules with an iron hand over industry and government. It is this reactionary, imperialist oligarchy that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti.

Justice under American imperialism today is the justice of a Mussolini that knows no law but force and no weapon but murder toward the working class. In the days of Altgeld, American capitalism still found use of fine phrases and democratic gestures to delude the American masses. But that epoch was drawn to a close with the imperialist war when the governor who expounded the “New Freedom,” Wilson, became the president who plunged America into the world slaughter, the author of the treacherous League of Nations and the collaborator of the enslaving Versailles treaty.

The Sacco-Vanzetti murder is the bloody seal that affirms the period of imperialist domination of America, the period of capitalist reaction, the period of raids and deportations against foreign-born workers, the period of imperialist war and decisive class struggles. This period knows no more of the America, an “asylum” for foreign-born workers. This is a period when America has become instead a huge penitentiary for all labor! What does this American imperialism care for the protest of international labor? It feels strong! Its treasuries are overflowing with the riches of the world. It feels and knows it is the banker to the world. With the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti it hurls a challenge to the working class. As the Caesars of old crushed the protest of their slaves and confirmed their power by stringing the limbs of their victims along the Appian way that all might see and tremble, so the American Caesars crushed the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti before the public gaze of millions, that the huge masses of workers may see the brutal might of American capitalim and submit unprotestingly to its yoke.

This is the reactionary America that speaks the language of the executioner. This is the America that keeps Mooney in jail, that hangs the Frank Littles, that prepares conscription laws against foreign-born labor, that prepares fresh attacks upon the wages and working conditions of American labor. This is the America that carried through the foul execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. Petty-bourgeois illusions regarding this Amerfca means paralysis for the working class and in the end a betrayal to the struggle for the defense against reaction—a betrayal of the mobilization of the masses to crush the power of the capitalist class.

In this struggle for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti, the socialist party and its allies, the Wolls and Greens, where they have not given direct assistance to these hangmen (as in the case of Green and Woll), have sewed illusions among the workers to expect mercy from these executioners of the capitalist class. American labor must learn its lesson. Unceasing class struggle! Only power, only might, only the full strength of the working class expressed in mighty industrial unions, in a powerful labor party, in revolutionary leadership of the labor movement by the Communist Party that had no illusions and has no illusions regarding the class enemies of the working class, can prevent future Sacco and Vanzetti cases. Away with the illusions of the cowardly petty-bourgeois socialists. On with a determined, unflinching struggle against capitalist masters—the executioners of our martyrs, Sacco and Vanzetti.



A Platform and a Slogan for Governor Fuller -- The Murder Candidate

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

THE Minneapolis Tribune is another capitalist journal which breaks a lance against those who hold that Governor Fuller, mindful of the kudos which Cal acquired by getting credit for breaking the Boston police strike, decided to send Sacco and Vanzetti to the electric chair after Coolidge had stated that he did “not choose to run.”

The Minneapolis organ of steel, railroad and flour milling capitalism brands such speculation as The Nation indulged in recently “a vile and ghastly insinuation.”

WHY all the righteous anger?

Is it something new in the United States that capitalist politicians should try to ride into office with the support of the capitalist and middle classes grateful—for the crushing of a strike or the conviction of agitators and organizers of the working class?

IT is of course a ghoulish business but does not the whole system rest on the ability and willingness of the capitalist class to squeeze the lifeblood from the masses in mine, mill and factory—and in case of resistance to kill enough to make the rest quit?

Fickert, the prosecutor of Tom Mooney was not too squeamish to make political capital out of his attempt to send Mooney to the gallows.

BORAH, the knight errant of middle class Americanism, rose to fame and fortune by reason of his services to the metal mining magnates of the Coesur d'Alene in the prosecution of Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone. It was not his fault that the working class saved them from the hangman.

Senator Walsh of Montana was re-elected largely because of the votes bought and stolen for him by the copper trust as areward for his eloquent and patriotic justification of the murder of Frank Little.

AT least a dozen lackeys of the lumber trust in the state of Washington stabilized their wavering political fortunes by smearing themselves with the blood of Wesley Everest, tortured to death by a white-collared mob in Centralia.

Was not the most famous utterance of Theodor-Roosevelt that statement in regard to the Haywood-Moyer-Pettibone caseby which he sought to prejudice the nation against them: “Murder is murder?”

WHO shall number the horde of little minions of coal, oil, steel, shipping, who swept into public office on the wave of gratitude from the rulingclass aroused by the arrests, prosecutions and imprisonment of the I. W. W. during and after the war?

WHO can count the miserable little tools of Wall Street and its subsidiaries who were allowed to dip their hands into the campaign fund of the two capitalist parties by reason of their part in the “red raids” of 1919-20 which caused directly and indirectly the separation of families, unimaginable physical and mental suffering, and uncounted deaths?

WHY does the capitalist press rush to the defense of Governor Fuller?

It is evident that he has right and justice on his side, that in allowing Sacco and Vanzetti to be murdered he acted on precedent hallowed and sanctified by the endorsement it has from the most eminent, as well as the most humble, of American statesmen.

GOVERNOR Fuller should quiet at once all tendency toward “vile and ghastly insinuation.”

He should, in a statement marked by the quiet dignity which the issue warrants, announce himself as a candidate on a 100 per cent American ticket with its official insignia an electric chair rampant on the charred corpses of two foreign-born workingmen and the motto: “In hoc signum vinces.” (By this sign we conquer.)

THE higher the office he runs for the more support he will get from the lords of finance and industry and his campaign documents, which should be signed by a bloody thumbprint, will make his signature known thruout the world.

Developments in Nicaragua and China make it almost imperative that the next president of the United States should have served an apprenticeship in murder.

But—

No “vile and ghastly” insinuations.

Let us stick to the simple and more horrible truth.

12:20 A. M., AUG. 23, 1927.

By WALTER SNOW.

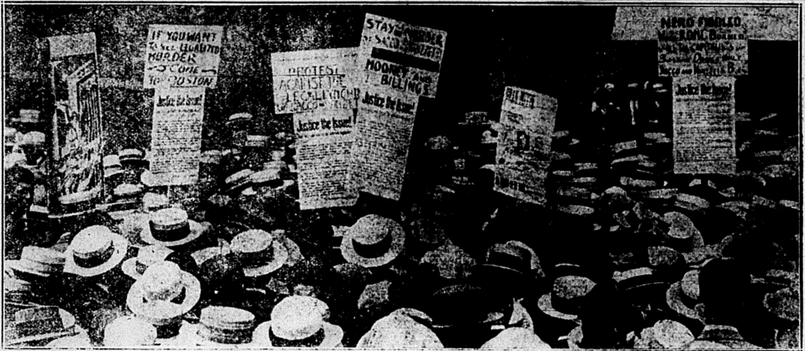
The clock ticks on
And the electric lights are still burning.
But the minutes that have slipped by so casually since midnight
Have seen Sacco
And Vanzetti
Breathe as well as I do now
And then, like madmen, be strapped into a thing of steel
And have the current that often lit their study books
Run through their bodies
Making them cease to think of their oppressed comrades,
Unable to raise again their voices against tyrants
And to even breathe
Because the bankers, the judges and the priests so decreed.
The clock ticks on
But, starting with this very morning,
Thousands who have been asleep before
Will awaken

THE MURDER OF TWO BRAVE WORKERS

NICOLA SACCO
(1894-1927)

Born in Torremaggiore, Italy. Came to U. S. at age of 17, where he became shoe cutter. Worked in various New England cities. Survivors: Wife, Rose Sacco; son, Dante, 14; Inez, 6, born four months after Sacco's arrest. Active as organizer and speaker for years.

Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston worked ceaselessly to free the two workers. Vanzetti's letters to her from prison reveal in a poignant way his literary and intellectual interests.



IF YOU WANT TO SEE LEGALIZED MURDER COME TO BOSTON
Justice the Issue!
PROTEST AGAINST THE LEGAL LYNCHING
Justice the Issue!
MOONEY AND BILLINGS
Justice the Issue!

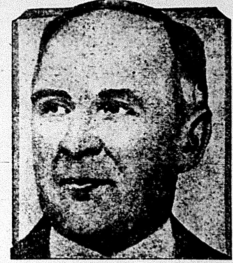
Despite the fact that the American Federation of Labor at five successive conventions demanded a new trial for Sacco and Vanzetti, its president was silent on the frame-up up to the last moment. Shamed by the tremendous labor demonstrations calling for their release, Green finally sent an apologetic letter to Gov. Fuller urging that the death sentence be commuted to life imprisonment.

BARTOLOMEO VANZETTI
(1888-1927)

Born in Valla Falletto, Italy. Unmarried. Came to U. S. in 1908. Worked as restaurant dishwasher and pastry cook in New York; in cordage mills at Plymouth, Mass. Blacklisted after strike there and began to peddle fish in Plymouth. Was active as speaker, and writer.

50,000 workers crowd Union Square to demand freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti—in the face of machine guns, armored motorcycles, gas and tear bombs, and 2,000 cops.

Webster Thayer, who presided at the "trial" of the frame-up victims. His conduct at that time was violently prejudicial to the defendants, and even Fuller's reactionary committee described it as "indiscreet." When he sentenced Sacco and Vanzetti in Dedham last spring he didn't dare look in their faces once during the entire proceedings.



Governor Alvin T. Fuller.

Executioner of the two innocent workers. This manufacturer of Packard cars, his fortune valued at $13,000,000, hopes now to step to a chair in the White House over the shattered bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Fuller's "Advisory" committee: Straton, Lowell, and Grant. They gave the tone of respectability to the bloody verdict of the New England mill owners. Their report is a classic of prejudice, distortion and class hatred.

JOHN SARGENT

John Sargent, attorney general of U. S., who refused to permit examination of department of justice files showing conspiracy to "get" Sacco and Vanzetti because they were radicals.

POWERS HAPGOOD

Powers Hapgood, former Harvard athlete, militant leader of miners. Arrested many times for picketing state house; in desperation police confined him in psychopathic ward of hospital for "examination."

"Mysterious" bomb explosion in Baltimore. Occupants were conveniently out of town at the time. These "accidents" usually occur when agents of capitalism are engaged in some particularly murderous act like framing Tom Mooney or killing Sacco and Vanzetti.

WORLD COMMUNIST SPOKESMEN DENOUNCE THE MURDER AT BOSTON

Warn Imperialists of Wrath of Workers in "Pravda" Memorial Issue

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., Aug. 28.—This Sunday's "Pravda" includes a number of articles of leading representatives of the Communist Party dealing with the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. In a leading article J. T. Murphy, prominent British Communist leader writes:

"The demonstration of the British workers against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has shown all the efforts of Ramsay MacDonald (who only recently was the guest of the chief executioner, Governor Fuller) to stem the movement against the American imperialists proven vain.

"The reformists and pacifists have been trying to direct this great movement against the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti on humanitarian lines. But this is a hopeless undertaking.

PEASANTS' INTERNATIONAL SEES NEW ATTACK ON FIELD LABOR IN SACCO-VANZETTI MURDER

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., Aug. 28.—The Peasants' Communist International has published an appeal reading:

"Brothers, Farmers, Peasants! The assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti, committed by the American government, means the declaration of war not only against labor but also against every emancipating movement particularly of the farmers and peasants.

"The terror applied to the workers precedes the cruel attack of the capitalists and landowners against the field toilers.

"The working class of all countries brands the cowardly murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by huge meetings, demonstrations and mass protests.

"Brothers, Farmers Peasants! Join your voices with the indignant voices of your brothers, the workers. The heroic death of Sacco and Vanzetti should unite still closer the ranks of the workers and peasants."

SOVIET UNION MOURNS SACCO, VANZETTI AT FUNERAL HOUR

NAME STREETS FOR MARTYRS.

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., Aug. 28.—Following the example of Moscow, which today is draped in mourning while the funeral of Sacco and Vanzetti is taking place in Boston, the scene of this monstrous class murder, many of the cities and towns thruout the Soviet Union are observing the day. One of the streets of Kiev will be renamed for the martyrs of American imperialism.

At factory meetings and even in the remotest villages the masses are staging furious demonstrations against the American butchers.

PROTEST AT INTERNATIONAL SAILORS' CLUB IN LENINGRAD

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R., Aug. 28.—At the International Sailors' Club here a meeting was held to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti attended by sailors of British, Norwegian, German, Swedish and Russian sailors. The reports were incessantly interrupted with furious imprecations from the foreign sailors who shouted "Down With the American Bourgeoisie" "Long Live the Memory of Sacco and Vanzetti."

In Honor of Our Martyrs

The ashes of the two murdered proletarians, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, come to New York City today.

Tens of thousands of workers today in the capital city of the world's most powerful imperialism, will do them honor.

Here in New York City are the treasure chests holding the greater part of the world's gold supply. It is the private property of the great international bankers.

Here also, today, the ashes, all that remains of Sacco and Vanzetti, in whose memory workers rise in militant protest in every corner, far and near, over the earth.

For the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti are today's symbol of world labor's struggle against the power of Wall Street's gold.

• • •

In doing honor to the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti, New York labor honors itself. It makes a pledge to continue the class struggle against its oppressors with renewed vigor, with increasing self-sacrifice until the final victory is won.

Sacco and Vanzetti gave their all—their lives—in order that the time of labor's emancipation might draw rapidly nearer.

In their memory, and with the firm resolve to "Fight On!" we demonstrate today.

Tomorrow, with greater courage, born of the heroic martyrdom of Sacco and Vanzetti, we press on toward greater battles, toward greater victories.

Workers of New York!
Demonstrate today! In memory of Sacco and Vanzetti!

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE universal attempts on the part of the imperialists to draw a curtain on the Sacco-Vanzetti case indicates the fear that possesses them of the dynamic revolutionary consequences of the murder of those innocent workers. No case in the history of the whole workingclass movement has aroused world labor to such a pitch of hatred against capitalism as the burning of those two innocent Italian workers. Never was there so widespread a feeling that the two radicals were framed. The conduct of the international plunderbund since the execution simply confirms this conviction.

INTENSE feeling has been created on both sides. Many workers who had hitherto been only on the fringe of the radical movement were stirred to militancy in defense of Sacco and Vanzetti. Superannuated flunkeys in hotels expressing an opinion that it was a mighty good thing to get those two "trouble makers" out of the way would find themselves at loggerheads with a transient guest. Station masters who lick the boss's boots would have a set-to with a passenger, and thruout the whole labor movement the case was the main topic of discussion.

THE authorities are as much afraid of Sacco and Vanzetti now as they were while awaiting doom in Charlestown prison. Indeed more so. The bitterness that has been created in the minds of the workers by this cold-blooded and cynical butchery will not be erased by time, because those two heroic men will be added to the galaxy of labor martyrs who have gone to the execution block, the gallows and the electric chair for the cause of labor's emancipation.

• • •

IT is not of disturbances and riots at the Sacco-Vanzetti processions that the police are afraid of. They fear the propaganda value of those demonstrations on workers who have not yet been touched by the divine spark of revolt. The only disorder that takes place at any labor demonstration is that caused by the police. And the police would not permit any kind of a labor meeting but for the sake of expediency.

• • •

THAT the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti is a new signal for a sharper onslaught on the workers can be seen by a mere glance at the newspapers. In France all foreign radicals are to be drawn into the govern-

PROTEST THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI AT UNION SQUARE TODAY

To the Workers of New York:

Today militant labor in New York salutes the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee calls upon all its loyal supporters to demonstrate labor's solidarity to the cause which Sacco and Vanzetti represented by turning out en masse and paying respects to the memory of our murdered comrades.

We urge all workers to bring red carnations to place before the ashes of our revolutionary dead!

Come to Union Square at 5 o'clock and bring your fellow-workers with you!

Make today an historic day in the annals of the class war!
On to Union Square!
Long live Sacco and Vanzetti!
Honor to the revolution's martyrs!

SACCO-VANZETTI EMERGENCY COMMITTEE,
ROSE BARON, Secretary.

FRENCH LABOR PROTEST AGAINST LEGION FORCES AMERICANS HOME

PARIS, Aug. 28.—More than 1,700 Americans who have arrived in France during this week end have re-booked their passage for home, as a result of the anti-American Legion demonstrations and the Sacco-Vanzetti protest, according to the Cherbourg correspondent of the Intransigeant.

The growing protest of workers against the convention of the American Legion is rapidly gaining strength and many members of the American Legion are believed to be among those who have left Cherbourg.

Protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, dock-hands at Port de Bouc refused to unload zinc from the American freighter Liberty Bell, according to a dispatch received by L'Humanite. Other dock crews are expected to follow suit.

The sailing of the Leviathan on Tuesday may be delayed as the result of anti-American protest following the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Demonstrations at Paris and Cherbourg continue.

DEMONSTRATION AT UNION SQUARE FOR TWO MARTYRS; EXPECT RECORD GATHERING

Remains of Workers to Lie in State Until Wednesday Afternoon

Hundreds of thousands of workers are expected to stream toward Union Square at 5 o'clock today to participate in the funeral demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti and to protest against their murder.

Following the arrival of the ashes of the two murdered workers at the Grand Central station at 5:15, a guard of honor headed by Mrs. Sacco, Luigia Vanzetti and Powers Hapgood, young militant mine leader and Harvard graduate, will bear the remains of two workers to Union Sq.

Despite the determination of Police Commissioner Warren not to permit a funeral parade in honor "of a couple of murderers who were convicted and executed according to law," thousands of workers will march from the Square to the Stuyvesant Casino, Ninth street and Second avenue, where the ashes of the two martyrs will be borne. The ashes will lie in state at the Casino until Wednesday noon under a twenty-four hour guard of honor.

QUARTER MILLION WORKERS VIEW "MARCH OF SORROW"

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Fully a quarter of a million workers, drawn from the great industrial districts of Boston and vicinity, stood in intermittently falling rain, viewing the mighty funeral demonstration held here today in honor of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, international labor's martyrs.

Thousands of the more courageous workers battled with the police for the right to walk in the funeral procession itself, to participate in "The March of Sorrow."

MANY CLASHES WITH POLICE.

Repeated clashes with the army of Cossacks under the direction of Superintendent of Police Michael Crowley took place on the way to the Forest Hills Crematory, where the remains of Sacco and Vanzetti were reduced to ashes with the most simple program possible.

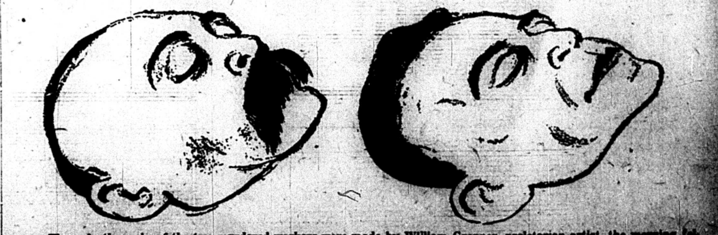
Soviet Union Plans War Plane Named Sacco-Vanzetti to Lead Air Fleet

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 28.—A new war airplane to be named Sacco-Vanzetti has been proposed by the Presidium of the Society for the Development of Aviation and Chemical Research here.

The Presidium has issued a circular, signed by Joseph Unshlicht, an official in the Commissariat for War and Navy, calling for the collection of funds to build such a plane as a leader for the present air fleet. This will be our answer to Joseph Chamberlain, the circular states.

DEATH MASK OF VANZETTI AND SACCO



These death masks of the two murdered workers were made by William Gropper, proletarian artist, the morning following their execution in the Charlestown state prison.

PRAVDA EXPOSES SOCIALISTS AS ENEMIES OF LABOR

Tried to Stifle Sacco Demonstrations

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—Pravda, in commenting upon the legalized murder of Sacco and Vanzetti points out that when the growing indignation of the working class against the regime of the bourgeoisie and the bourgeois democratic dictatorship burst forth the capitalist class, with the assistance of the social democrats, tries to divert the workers attention from the threatening questions of revolutionary struggle and substitute therefore other questions that lead the toilers astray. Especially deceptive and treacherous are meaningless phrases about "violated justice," "outraged law," etc.

Such phrase-mongering is contemptible in the case of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. It is quite clear that their execution was accomplished according to all precepts of capitalist legality.

Expose Socialist Traitors.

Continuing its exposure of the social democratic agents of the bourgeoisie, Pravda declares that: "The workers must deeply reflect upon the meaning of the actions of the social democrats and the reformists of the whole world who, in full solidarity with the imperialist bandits, find it more than convenient as an excuse to evade participating in demonstrations of fury against murder of Sacco and Vanzetti to direct their blows, not against the regime of the capitalist exploiters, but against the revolutionary workers and peasants of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. These traitors are still serving their masters by reechoing the denunciation against the Soviet government that was obliged, as a matter of self-defense to cut short the counter revolutionary plots of Churchill's agents.

The workers must never forget that the organ of the German social democracy, Vorwaerts, is heading a campaign against proletarian against the murderers of Sacco and Vanzetti and at the same time assailing the Soviets in Russia. They must never forget the pleasure trip of the British delegates to the Paris congress of the Amsterdam International on the day of the demonstration of hundreds of thousands of Paris workmen in Vincennes Forest against the proposed execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Actions Repudiated Reformists.

"The behavior of the working class showed plainly the soundness of their revolutionary instinct which the reformists tried to destroy, and served to prove again that the only determined leaders of the working class are the Communist vanguard who are relentlessly fighting against the whole murder crew of the international bourgeoisie."

Keep Books From Textile Workers.

GASTONIA, N. C., Aug. 28 (FP).—This city, flourishing center of the greatest textile county in the United States, has no public library. Nearly 25,000 workers are employed in the hundred mills of Gaston Co. About 20 per cent of them are illiterate.

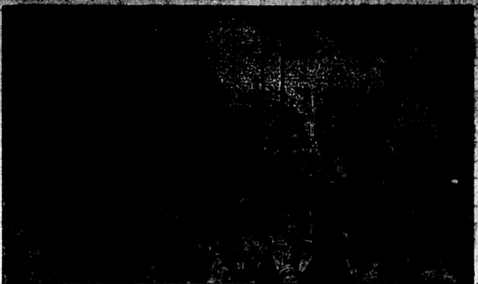
WAITING FOR NEWS OF SACCO-VANZETTI MURDER



12,000 workers crowded the north end of Union Square last Monday night to await news of the execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

When bulletins announcing their death were placed outside the offices of "The Freiheit," Jewish Communist daily, scores of men and women fainted. Several hundred police were present to intimidate the crowd.

SACCO, VANZETTI MUTILATED FOR HARVARD MEDICS

Brains and Heart Taken For Lowell's School

(By Federated Press).

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Nicola Sacco, six years ago, told the Dedham court that the children of the poor could not get to Harvard—that it was a university for the rich.

Now Sacco is getting to Harvard after all—the heart and brains of him. The Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee charges that the bodies of their two martyred friends have been mutilated and the heart and brains sent to the Harvard Medical School, along with those of Celestino Madeiros, the gunman who confessed to the South Braintree crime.

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, the medical examiner who performed the autopsy, refuses to affirm or deny the charge, and his silence is interpreted by newspapermen as consciousness of guilt.

It is not uncommon to turn the vital organs of executed men over to the medical school, but in this case the act is felt to be a gross outrage on the feelings of the millions devoted to the two radicals.

Six years ago Sacco had his say about Harvard, and District Attorney Katzmann made skillful use of his outburst before the jury. Six years later A. Lawrence Lowell, the president of Harvard, had his say about the upstart young radical, and doomed him to the electric chair. And as a final chapter the passionate heart of the young rebel goes to Lowell's medical rooms, for the knives of cynical experimenters to carve.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28.—Crowds surrounded the Ukrainian Hall at Arnold, Pa., unable to force their way among the thousands inside who had met to protest the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Tony Minerich, Fred Carreno and A. Jakira addressed the gathering. Several of the speeches were made in Italian.

Limoges Workers Strike Police Bullies Routed In St. Nazaire Attacks

LIMOGES, France, Aug. 28. — Thousands of workers responded to the call for a general strike to protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by downing tools here.

KU KLUX WAR ON FOREIGN-BORN IS BEING CONTINUED

Protective CouncilBares Klan Program

Although dying out in those sections of the country where it originated, the Ku Klux Klan is still carrying on its cowardly, sinister, underhanded work in certain industrial sections, according to the reports of field organizers for the Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

The Councils for the Protection of the Foreign Born Workers have been organized throughout the country for the purpose of combatting legislation designed to register and finger-print these workers who furnish more than half of the man power in the heavy industries of the country. Such measures, according to the organization, are advocated by the big employers of industrial labor in order to regimentalize and intimidate the worker who resents the treatment accorded him.

Keep Klan Alive.

Unable to reply to the arguments of the Council organizers against these methods of tzarist Russia being implanted in the United States, the big industrialists and some of the smaller fry are artificially keeping alive the Ku Klux Klan in order to illegally and by violence and intimidation to fight the battles they cannot fight in the open.

In the state of Pennsylvania the Klan is particularly active against the Councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers and has tried to institute boycotts against business men who support the movement, and has also passed resolutions to "investigate" the organizers — probably in its accustomed cowardly way by parading in night shirts and pillow cases and indulging in terroristic attacks.

The employers of foreign-born workers try hard to prevent them coming in contact with the American workers and they even succeed in inducing some American workers to join the Klan by creating in their minds the idea that their low pay and bad conditions of labor are due to the greed of the owners of industry, but to the fact that there are foreign-born workers employed there.

One of the greatest tasks of the Councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers is its naturalization work, which entails encouragement to learn the English language and efforts to familiarize these workers with American institutions.

Expose Real Purpose.

It is pointed out by the organizers that the best antidote to the nefarious work of the Klan is to expose the real purpose of their unlawful attacks and at the same time impress upon the native American workers that it is to their interest to strive to defend the forein-born workers against the beating down of their standard of living and the regimentalism of labor, because if such attacks against foreign-born workers are permitted to succeed the system will eventually be widened to include all workers.

Those who oppose the fight to protect the foreign-born workers are enemies of all labor because it is impossible to continue a state of affairs where some workers in a given industry are better treated than others who do the same work.

American Labor Has Many Allies to Aid War Against Sacco-Vanzetti Slayers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

THE murder of Sacco and Vanzetti by the American ruling class is arousing strenuous and unprecedented protest by workers the world over. No martyrdom of a spokesman of labor, in the world's entire history, has evoked such demonstrations against the social system that ordered the sentence of death, as have taken place during the past week, that still continue.

• • •

Several factors are contributing to this historic development in the class struggle.

Sacco and Vanzetti were slain by the dominant imperialism in the world—the capitalist government of the United States.

There is hardly a worker or farmer, anywhere in the world, that has not some grievance against this American imperialism.

For the workers of all Latin America, the seven years' prison torture inflicted upon Sacco and Vanzetti, terminated by the savage death penalty carried out against them in the electric chair, merley crystallized their own years of misery under the "dollar diplomacy" of the Wall Street hangmen. To them, a voice raised against the legalized assassination of Sacco and Vanzetti, is a protest against the blood bath visited by American military forces upon the peoples of Nicaragua; a protest against the looting and plundering of all Latin American countries.

For the workers of Europe, the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, visualized sharply the dollar kaiserdom that has been aiding every European reaction in suppressing labor's efforts to rise. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti parallels the murder of workers in Germany under the Dawes Plan, the slaughter of labor in Italy under the Wall Street financed fascism of Mussolini, the suffering resulting from the Hoover-aided overthrow of the Hungarian Soviet Republic, the misery upheld by American financial aid to the reaction in the Baltic states and the Balkans, especially in Poland and Roumania.

To the workers and peasants of the Union of Soviet Republics, the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti makes more apparent than ever the new war danger. They can see in it not only an increasing oppression of the workers in the United States, but also American imperialist participation in and leadership of the developing attack against the First Workers' Republic.

• • •

To the workers and farmers not only of China, but of all Asia, the American dollar tyranny, its hands dripping the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti, is revealed clearer than ever as the capitalist enemy of their struggle for liberation, not only from foreign imperialist domination, but also from continued enslavement by their ruling classes.

In every land, therefore, there are deep-going causes for bitter hatred of the American imperialist regime. It has found quick expression in the world-wide wave of horror and indignation in the ranks of the workers of every nation.

It will be impossible for the American kept press to sweep aside this storm of protest by declaring that it has been engineered by "the agents of Moscow." That is what it is now trying to do in an effort to save the face of the American Legion, that is hard put to hold its convention in Paris in the face of French working class opposition.

It is, of course, no accident that the five internationals of the working class that are inspiring and leading the world protest for Sacco and Vanzetti, all have their headquarters in Moscow. In no other country could they function. It is only on the free soil of the Soviet Union, under the protection of the Workers' and Peasants' Government that they are able to carry on their activities. It is only because there is a Proletarian Dictatorship in the Soviet Union that it is possible for world labor to enjoy and profit by the leadership of the internationals that have sprung, not alone out of the Russian Bolshevik Revolution, but also out of the class conflict in all countries.

There is the Communist International, the world organization of Communist Parties in more than three score countries, the vanguard of the oppressed.

There is the Young Communist International, the international of the revolutionary youth of the world, that has mobilized millions around its standards, that sees in the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti the effort of American greed to maintain in slavery generations yet unborn.

There is the Peasants' International that rallies and unites the revolutionary farmers of the world, and that works for the unity of city and land labor in all countries. It feels in the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti the thrust of capitalism against the tillers of the soil, making worse their conditions everywhere, including the United States.

There is the Red International of Labor Unions, feared by the reaction within the ranks of labor in all countries as well as the capitalists themselves. It sees in the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, renewed attacks upon the trade unions in America, certainly, but also in all countries bulwarked by the American reaction.

There is the International Red Relief, the world organization of the class war prisoners. It battles for the working class victims of capitalist "justice" in all lands. It sses in the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, the bourgeois terror of Mussolini's Italy and Horthy's Hungary, and the Roumania of the bloody "Queen Maria" transplanted to the United States. It calls for working class solidarity against the bloody bourgeois class justice.

Millions of workers thruout the United States are realizing for the first time, as a result of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, that world labor is well organized on an international scale; that the issues confronting the working class are world-wide in scope.

Thus the lightning bolt of death that shot thru the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti, has also torn aside the veil of ignorance that has hung so long and so tenaciously before the eyes of the working class of this country.

Multitudes of American workers behold for the first time powerful allies rallying in their support in the fight against the exploiters at home.

There are not only the 150,000,000 of freed workers and farmers of the Union of Soviet Republics.

There are also the powerful and militant sections of the working class in every capitalist land organized and educated for carrying on the class struggle.

There are also the growing nationalist movements in every subject colonial nation, as well as the resistance being offered by the smaller semi-subject nations; a whole array of powerful opposition to capitalist tyranny and imperialist plunder.

• • •

The killing of Sacco and Vanzetti was a challenge by the capitalists to the workers of this country. Labor must take up the challenge.

The martyrdom of Sacco and Vanzetti must be transmuted into the unity of the working class.

Forward to greater and more militant trade unions; the organization of the unorganized, the building of the Labor Party, the protection of the foreign-born workers, the unity of the Negro with the white workers, the strengthening of the Workers (Communist) Party; the solidifying of the class forces of labor in America.

In memory of Sacco and Vanzetti, build for the overthrow of the capitalist social order that slaughtered them. Build for labor's complete victory and its final emancipation.

IMPERIALISM
The Final Stage of Capitalism
By LENIN

THIS book, a classic of Communist literature, was written, (as Lenin explains in his introduction) to "help the reader to understand the fundamental economic question, without the study of which modern war and politics are unintelligible—"

With a growing danger of an imperialist war, at this time particularly it should be read by every worker.

Efforts to Make Treaty of Perpetual Peace for France, U. S. A. at End

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Efforts of internationalists to bring the United States and France into a treaty perpetually outlawing war have failed, quite naturally.

This became definitely known today when it was learned Paul Claudel, French ambassador, will be informed upon his return to Washington next week that the United States can not become a party to such an agreement with France alone.

DENY CAPTURE OF NANKING BY SUN, FEUDAL WAR LORD

Organization of Labor, Peasantry Continues

SHANGHAI, Aug. 28.—The capture of Nanking by the Shantungese war lord Sun Chuan-fang is categorically denied here by military authorities.

The troops formerly commanded by Chiang Kai-shek, who resigned two weeks ago, have taken over both the Shanghai-Hankow and the Shanghai-Nanking Railways and have repaired the breaks in them, local native newspapers claim.

Nanking was the seat of the right wing "government" set up by Chiang Kai-shek after his betrayal of the Kuomintang. It was the scene of brutal bombardment by American and British war vessels early in the year when the Nationalist troops captured the city from the northern war lords. Several hundred women and children were killed in the bombardment.

Chiang Kai-shek, facing the opposition of labor and the peasantry and having suffered a number of disastrous defeats resigned two weeks ago, asking the renegade generals at Hankow to take over the military campaign against the north.

While the southern generals, who betrayed the revolution, are fighting against the northern feudal militarists, the real revolution is going rapidly ahead thru the organization of workers and the peasantry.

Russian Communist Party Membership Assails Opposition

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—Many responses to the decisions of the United Plenum of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission of the All-Union Communist Party are continually arriving from party organizations. Without exception the rank and file claim that the signatories of this slanderous document should be expelled from the Party if they refuse to recognize their errors and declare in full their readiness to realize all Party decisions.

Statement by Widow of Sun-Yat-Sen, Attacking the Counter-Revolution Gives New Life to Worker-Peasant Revolutionary Struggle in China

NOTE.—The DAILY WORKER has just received, thru the Nationalist News Agency at Hankow, China, the complete statement of Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, widow of Sun Yat Sen, in which she attacks the traitors to the revolution and points out that the only road to triumph leads thru the winning of power by the workers and peasants. It is in full as follows:

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

HANKOW, China, July 16 (By Mail).—A tremendous political sensation was caused by the declaration issued here by Mrs. Sun Yat-sen, calling upon officials of the Kuomintang government and upon party members thruout China and the world to remain steadfast in the revolutionary faith of the late founder of the Nationalist Party.

The declaration, which challenges the tendency towards reaction in the government and party was made public just on the eve of Mrs. Sun's withdrawal from the Wuhan government, of which she has been an important member, and her departure for her home in Shanghai.

It was published in several local Chinese papers, all of which were immediately thereafter suppressed or "reorganized." The correspondents here broadcasted the message to the world. It was published thruout China in both Chinese and English-language papers. Chinese papers in territory controlled by Chiang Kai-shih were also forbidden to print the declaration because of its implied criticism of the reactionary tendencies of his regime. Those few papers which printed it, notwithstanding this order, likewise were suppressed.

Visioned Change of Power.

In plain words she states that Sun Yat-sen envisaged a revolution which should bring about improvements in the lot of the peasants and workers of China, not one which should merely bring about a transfer of political power.

Her clear-cut delineation of the real significance of her late husband's policies has already resulted in a mass of articles and speeches by Kuomintang leaders aimed at clarifying their own stand toward the revolution. It has also had a tremendous repercussion amongst trade unions and peasant organizations, as well as amongst many Kuomintang locals, most of which have adopted resolutions on the declaration, giving it their wholehearted support.

The Declaration In Full.

The declaration in full follows:

"I feel that it is necessary at this time to explain as a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang that we have reached a point where definition is necessary and where some members of the party executive are so defining the principles and policies of Dr. Sun Yat-sen that they seem to me to do violence to Dr. Sun's ideas and ideals. Feeling thus, I must dissociate myself from active participation in the carrying out of these new policies of the party.

"Today we face a crisis and we must probe searchingly into fundamental questions for fundamental answers. We must answer the questions of the nature of revolution in general, of the Chinese revolution in particular, whether it is to be a mere political or a social revolution, and what changes are involved.

"In the last analysis, all revolutions must be social revolutions, based upon fundamental changes in society; otherwise it is not a revolution, but merely a change of government.

"To guide us in the Chinese revolution, Dr. Sun has given us his Three Principles and his Three Policies. It is the Third Principle, that of the livelihood of the people, that is at stake at the present time, the principle that answers the questions of fundamental social changes in China.

"This Third Principle was felt by Dr. Sun to be basic in our revolution. In this principle we find his analysis of social values and the place of the laboring and peasant classes defined. These classes become the basis of our strength in our struggle to overthrow imperialism, cancel the unequal treaties that enslave us, and effectively unify the country. These are the new pillars for the building up of a new free China. Without their support, the Kuomintang, as a revolutionary party, becomes weak, chaotic and illogical in its social platform; without their support, political issues are vague. If we adopt any policy that weakens these supports, we shake the very foundation of our party, betray the masses and are falsely loyal to our Leader.

Exposes Drift of Traitors.

"Today there is much talk of policy. Dr. Sun defined three policies, which he decided were the only means by which his Three Principles could be carried out. But today it is being said that policies must be changed to fit the needs of the time. There is some truth in this statement, but change of policy should never be carried to a point where it becomes a reversal, so that a revolutionary party ceases to be revolutionary and becomes merely an organ, operating under the banner of revolution, but actually working in support of very social structure which the party was founded to alter.

"At the moment we face critical issues. Theoretical and practical differences have arisen between various elements of the party. Drastic solutions are suggested. It is because I feel that the carrying out of some of these suggested solutions would destroy the strength of the party and delay the success of the revolution, that I must speak. These solutions seem to me a part of a policy which would alienate and suppress the classes upon which our strength largely depends and for which the revolution must be fought. Such a policy, I feel, is doomed to failure.

"This is time for honesty and courage. There have been mistakes, but the fact that some of us are unwilling to face is that we are at least as responsible for many of these mistakes as those whom we would now hold completely at fault. If we look back honestly at the past months in Wuhan, examine our words and decisions unflinchingly, we cannot evade this responsibility. Speeches, statements are recorded in the history of the party. But now we would shirk the responsibility shift it to other shoulders.

"Yes. There have been mistakes but we must face the fact that they are not only others' mistakes; they are our own as well. We have helped to make them; we must correct them. Moreover, for revolutionary mistakes, revolutionary solutions must be found. We must not betray the people. We have built up in them a great hope. They have placed in us a great faith. To that faith, we owe our final allegiance.

"Dr. Sun came from the people. He has told me a great deal about his early days. He came from the peasantry. His father was a farmer and the people in his district were farmers.

"Dr. Sun was poor. Not until he was fifteen years old did he have shoes for his feet, and he lived in a hilly region where it is not easy to be a barefoot boy. His family, until he and his brother were grown, lived almost from hand to mouth, in a hut. As a child he ate the cheapest food—not rice, for rice was too dear. His main nourishment was sweet potatoes.

"Many times Dr. Sun has told me that it was in those days, as a poor son of a poor peasant family, that he became a revolutionary. He was determined that the lot of the Chinese peasant should not continue to be so wretched, that little boys in China should have shoes to wear and rice to eat. For this ideal, he gave forty years of his life.

"Yet today the lot of the Chinese peasant is even more wretched than in those days when Dr. Sun was driven by his great sense of human wrongs into a life of revolution. And today men, who profess to follow his banner, talk of classes and think in terms of a "revolution" that would virtually disregard the sufferings of those millions of poverty-stricken peasants of China.

"Today also we hear condemnation of the peasant and labor movement as a recent, alien product. This is false. Twenty, thirty years ago, Dr. Sun was thinking and speaking in terms of a revolution that would change the status of the Chinese peasant. In his early twenties, he wrote to Li Hung-chang, petitioning for social and economic reforms. In 1911, he wrote an article on the agrarian question in China, printed in Geneva, in "The Socialist," in which he said that the basis of social and economic transformations in China is an agrarian revolution. All his life, this was one of the big goals he had in mind. Everything he planned he saw as means to the betterment of the life of the Chinese masses.

"In 1915, when we were in Japan, he urged Liao Chung-kai to study more deeply into the peasant and labor problems.

"It is only in the past few years, after four decades of struggle, that these plans for a revolution of the people have begun to bear fruit. I remember clearly the first All-Kwangtung Peasants Conference in Canton, in July, 1924. Then for the first time, we saw the people of China, who must be her new strength, coming to participate in the revolution. From all the districts of Kwangtung, the peasants came, many of them walking miles and miles, barefooted, to Canton. They were ragged, tattered. Some carried baskets and poles. I was deeply moved.

Sun's Purpose Was Clear.

"Dr. Sun was moved also. When we reached home, he said to me, 'This is the beginning of the success of the revolution,' and he told me again the part the oppressed people of China must play in their own salvation.

"All these years, his purpose was clear. But today we talk of recent foreign influence. Was Sun Yat-sen—the leader who was voicing the agrarian revolution for China when Russia was still under the heel of the czar—was he the tool of foreign scheming?

"Dr. Sun's policies are clear. If leaders of the party do not carry them out consistently then they are no longer Dr. Sun's true followers, and the party is no longer a revolutionary party, but merely a tool in the hands of this or that militarist. It will have ceased to be a living force working for the future welfare of the Chinese people, and will have become a machine, the agent of oppression, a parasite fattening on the present enslaving system.

Face Serious Crisis.

"We face a serious crisis. But it is more of a crisis for us as individuals than for China as a country. Whether the present Kuomintang at this moment rises to the height of its ideals and courageously finds a revolutionary corrective for its mistakes, or whether it slumps into the shamefulness of reaction and compromise, the three principles of Dr. Sun Yat-sen will conquer in the end. Revolution in China is inevitable.

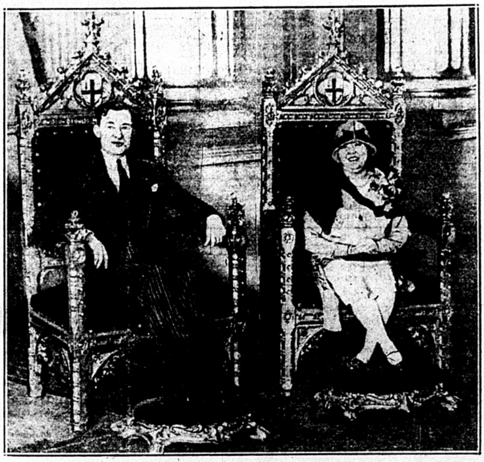
"At the moment, I feel that we are turning aside from the Tsungli's policy of leading and strengthening the people. Therefore I must withdraw until wiser policies prevail.

"There is no despair in my heart for the revolution. My disheartenment is only for the path into which some of these who had been leading the revolutoin have strayed.

Will Not Keep Faith Alone.

"But, altho there are members of the party who are straying from the path Dr. Sun charted for the revolution of China, millions of people in China who have already come under the banners of the party will continue on this path to the final goal. This means that I shall not keep faith alone. I am certain that all true members of the Kuomintang will take this revolutionary path.—Sun Soong Ching-ling."

TESTING THE COMFORTS OF A THRONE



Royal chairs reserved for the King and Queen of England, felt the weight of Mayor Jimmy Walker and his wife during their visit to the Mansion House in London. The mayor is now resting from his regular duties as toastmaster to visiting celebrities.

At the time photo was taken Walker little suspected the unhappy time he would have when he reached Berlin two days later. There thousands of workers, bitterly resentful against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, met him with jeers and hisses on his arrival. At the same time New York workers joined in a demonstration at the City Hall.

Segregate Negroes Working in Capital Departmental Jobs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (FP). — Colored government employes are waging a losing war on advancing segregation. The pension bureau has now instituted segregation, nearly all Negroes being placed in the files department. They have appealed to Secretary Work of the interior department. In nearly all government departments segregation has been accepted, the colored workers being given the worst paid and most disagreeable work.

Racial discrimination is the rule throughout Washington, which prides itself on being a semi-southern city and one in which southerners can reside without being troubled by equality with their former slaves. Colored residence is strictly limited to the less desirable sections and Negroes are never seen in white restaurants, theatres or the better shops save as employes. Only the street cars are free from Jim Crowism, but when the cars cross the Potomac into Virginia, Negroes must move to the rear.

Pullman the Only Carrier to Refuse Arbitration Offer

CHICAGO, Aug. 28 (FP). — "The only carrier in the country to refuse arbitration under the Watson-Parker law is the Pullman Co.," says Organizer A. Philip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. "It takes this position against the Pullman porters though it agreed to arbitration with its conductors. That the porters are entitled to the same consideration as the conductors is evident from the recommendation of E. P. Morrow of the federal mediation board that the company and our organization should settle the dispute over wages, abolition of tips and other conditions by arbitration.

Randolph has 70 per cent of the porters and maids enrolled in the brotherhood and promises to exhaust all means necessary to bring the company to terms. The porters are now paid $72.50 a month and have to depend on tips to keep alive. They have to work 400 hours a month, compared with 240 hours averaged by other railroad men.

Young Men Commit "Big Crimes."

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Youths under the age of 25 commit most of the "big crimes" in New York state, according to the sub-committee of the state crime commission. These youths, according to the committee, are professional criminals who "commit the greater portion of the major crimes with the specific purpose of taking property by acts of violence."

Socialists Reveal Their True Colors.

It is no mere accident that the official spokesmen of the socialist party should take the same attitude toward the parade with the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti that the chief of police takes. Today the ashes of these two workers martyred by the murder gang of the state house and university chairs of Massachusetts are in New York. Hundreds of thousands of workers desire to express again their indignation at this monstrous exhibition of class vengeance—to pay their last tribute to these two workers who so bravely and defiantly went to their death after living for seven long years in the shadow of the electric chair. But the New York defenders of capitalism, the police department and those faithful lackeys of the master class, the socialist leaders carry forward, even after the death of Sacco and Vanzetti, the policies they have consistently pursued.

August Claessens, local secretary of the socialist party, endeavored to serve the capitalist class by belittling the desire of the masses to stage a demonstration upon the arrival of the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti. The master class responsible for the murder of these two workers wants to forget about its crime—and wants the working class to forget They take the attitude that the "incident" is closed. They want us to accept the verdict of the murder crew as final.

That class vengeance in its most hideous form is not confined to Massachusetts, but also extends to New York, is revealed by the statements of Police Commissioner Warren, whose attitude is precisely that of the socialist leaders. Warren considers it "not fitting" to permit such a parade. In life and in death, in calm as in storm, the socialists sing the songs of the enemies of labor and aid the bourgeoisie in its fight against the working class.

Surely the advanced section of the working class of New York and of the entire country who have witnessed the long struggle for Sacco and Vanzetti has long ago realized the fact that the burden of the fight fell upon the Communists and that every ounce of energy and resources that we could mobilize was thrown into the fight. So determined were we to conduct the fight with all means at our command that we exerted every possible effort, often publishing thousands upon thousands of copies of The DAILY WORKER for the purpose of giving widespread publicity to this case. Today, the day of the arrival of the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti in New York, we are compelled to appeal to our readers and supporters to come to the aid of The DAILY WORKER so that we can continue the fight and emphasize our denial that the Sacco and Vanzetti case is not now closed and will never be closed until the working class, under the leadership of the Communists has definitely settled matters with the capitalist class and all its agents whether appearing officially at the head of police departments or disguised as socialist leaders.

American Communist Party Convention

The fifth convention of the Workers (Communist) Party will be held in New York City this week. It has been two years since the last convention; two years during which events of world-shaking importance has occurred; two years in which the situation confronting the working class has become vastly more complicated.

The imperialist powers are madly driving forward to a new war against the Soviet Union and are now waging war against the Chinese revolution, while at the same time endeavoring to crush every semblance of militancy on the part of the working classes in the home countries.

Around the question of the imminence of another world war that will be far more devastating will revolve the decisive policies that will be adopted at the convention of the Party. The war of the labor bureaucracy against the Communists and the left wing in the trade unions is a part of the war conspiracy; an attempt to weaken the labor movement and deprive it of its militant elements so that the master class may be assured a completely submissive working class when it finally decides openly to launch its war program. The fight against the reactionary labor bureaucracy and the yellow socialists who ape the lowest of the journalistic scavengers of imperialism with the cry that the Soviet Union is a menace to peace must be supplemented with the most relentless and determined fight against the blight of social pacifism.

The Communists are the defenders of the historical class interests of the working class as well as the most devoted and self-sacrificing fighters in the every day struggle. The defense of the elementary demands of the working class and the relentless fight against attempts to destroy the organizations of the working class is inseparable from the preparation for the final struggle against capitalist despotism.

More than ever, in this critical situation, is it essential for every worker who wants to participate in the front lines of the fight against American imperialism to align himself with the revolutionary movement in this country which is represented alone by the Workers (Communist) Party.

Just as previous Party conventions have registered tremendous strides forward in the realm of Marxist-Leninist theory and practice, so the coming convention will register another milestone in the road toward the proletarian revolution in the United States.

Fifth Party Convention to Open With Mass Meeting At Central Opera House, Tuesday, August 30th

Workers of New York City and vicinity will join in welcoming the Fifth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party by attending the mass meeting planned for Tuesday night, August 30, at the Central Opera House, 67th street, near Third avenue. The gathering will be under the auspices of the Party's Central Executive Committee. Admission will be [illegible] cents. A program of nationally prominent speakers will be announced shortly.

The New York Times Runs Into A Few Contradictions

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE New York Times editorial writers are never at their best when dealing with some world problem in which the Soviet Union or the Communist International is involved. Since no world problem can be discussed realistically without taking into consideration the existence and policy of these two great forces, The Times staff of international experts is in constant difficulty.

On Friday, August 26, The Times found it necessary to correct what it evidently believed was a dangerous impression created by its correspondent's report of an interview with Trotsky by the American labor delegation now in the Soviet Union.

THE Times correspondent reports Trotsky as follows:

"The capitalist States, however, he went on, were now back at the pre-war level, and further increased production would be followed automatically by a new war, and this war by a revolution, first of all in Europe, with the United States enjoying a respite."

FIRST of all The Times disputes the Trotsky thesis that a surplus of products creating a struggle for markets is a cause of war. It takes the position that increased national production is a guarantee of peace, apparently on the theory that everyone is so good natured as a result of prosperity that war becomes impossible. The conclusion to be drawn from such statements is that wars are caused by something as yet undefined which sours the naturally sunny dispositions of the masses.

LOATH to amit the implications of the struggle for markets resulting from increased production and the diplomatic maneuvering culminating in war—"politics carried to its logical conclusions"—The Times chides Trotsky for first predicting the break-up of the British Empire as a result of declining production and trade and then reaching the same conclusion from an estimate of the result of increased production.

THE TIMES says:

"It is only a few years since Trotsky in his 'Whither England' proved conclusively from the declining figures of English production and trade that the British Empire was done for. Now he has no difficulty at all in proving that the British Empire is doomed by increased production and trade."

"The same fate awaits other nations, not excluding the United States."

EVEN if The Times were not deliberately distorting the facts of the situation for its own purposes, confusing an increase in total world production with the production level of individual nations, only a disciple of the vulgar school of political economy would see a contradiction.

THE contradiction is not in Trotsky's thesis but in the capitalist system itself.

Declining production make it impossible for the capitalists to employ and feed the huge sections of the working class and the class struggle becomes acute.

Increased productions sharpens the struggle between capitalist nations, and groups of capitalist nations, for markets, sources of cheap raw materials, and export of capital, and this competition in turn induces the capitalists to reduce the standard of living of the working class in order to meet competition in the world markets.

THE class struggle and the imperialist struggle tend to become sharper. For the capitalist system there is no escape from these contradictions.

That war is a desperate attempt on the part of the capitalist class to solve these contradictions can be proved, and has been proved, by thousands of concrete instances.

What are the bickerings over colonies, markets, mandates and spheres of influence which have taken up the time of the diplomats ever since the end of the world war, if not attempts to divide among the victors the loot for which the war was fought?

WHAT is the struggle between the oil giants, Royal Dutch Shell, backed by the British government, and Standard Oil, backed by the American government, if not a struggle for the raw material, and markets in which to dispose of the crude and refined product?

DOES The Times contend that this bitter struggle, which induces first one and then the other competitor to deal with the workers and peasants government of the Soviet Union, tends to stabilize the British Empire, the capitalist system as a whole, or make more remote the danger of war, merely because production of oil and the market for it is expanding?

Or is there a direct connection between this titanic struggle, the Geneva conference and the evident intention of both Great Britain and the United States governments to increase rather than to reduce naval armaments?

NOW as to The Times, attempt to distort the actual situation relative to increased production. Increased production is a positive factor for a "capitalist nation only if its markets continue to expand. If rising production faces a narrowing market a crisis cannot be avoided.

On the other hand if production is sharply curtailed because of a shrinking market a political crisis is bound to occur which will assume serious proportions at once.

GREAT Britain has lost much of her world market and this in turn has produced industrial stagnation which have been followed by tremendous upheavals. (the coal strike, general strike, etc.) Similarly the consequent inability to export the required amounts of investment capital to her colonies has created an opening for American financial and political penetration. (Canada, Australia, China.)

THE total of world production and trade may be back to or even above the pre-war level but the DISTRIBUTION of it has changed—the share of Great Britain is SMALLER.

The share of the United States in world trade, and particularly in export of capital, has increased tremendously—and largely at the expense of Great Britain. In Canada alone the comparative figures (for 1924) given by Robert W. Dunn in "American Foreign Investments" are:

United States	..$2,425,000,000
Great Britain	.. 1,890,000,000

Before the world war the figures were:

Great Britain	..$1,860,000,000
United States	.. 417,143,220

SIGNIFICANT also is the fact that the first loan of its kind ever made by American financiers—$75,000,000 to the Austtralian government—was floated in 1925.

In the light of the important facts listed above it is clear that The Times faces a continual contradiction:

It must either admit that imperialist war is caused by and fought for the conflicting interests of the capitalists and thereby discard the fiction of the high spirtual motives which actuate the ruling class, as well as the fiction of captialism unshakable stability, or it must continue to make a fool of itself every time it tries to cast aspersions upon the Soviet Union and its leaders.

Old Parties Strive to Overcome Third Party Drift

By H. M. WICKS.

WITHIN the two old parties of capitalism, the republican and democratic parties, there survive strong third party tendencies that cause not a little uneasness among the professional politicians.

The soil upon which the third party, the petty bourgeois La Follette Movement, arose has not become impoverished since the campaign of 1924. Instead it has become more rich and more deeply furrowed by the prolonged economic depression among the farmers of the Middle West, while the cotton crisis in the South has brought entirely new elements to the point of breaking their traditional political affiliations with the democratic party.

The Mellon tax policies enforced by the Coolidge administration have served to antagonize anew a considerable portion of the middle class elements, who supported the drift toward a third party in 1924 and then, at the last moment deserted, in typical middle class fashion, to the camp of Coolidge on the fake issue of "continued prosperity." This class exposed in 1924 its historical role as a vacillating, unstable element that fluctuates between the various class elements in Society, but that always, in the last analysis, supports the most vicious reaction. However, at this moment, a considerable portion of the middle class elements of the towns and cities of the agricultural area are deeply resentful toward the Mellon-Hoover-Coolidge gang for lifting the taxes off the shoulders of the big capitalists, while leaving untouched the figures in the middle brackets. The middle class received no reductions in taxes as a result of the last revision. The Mellon policy on interallied war debts, the funding of considerable portions of the Italian debt in order to pave the way for Wall Street investments at higher rates in Italian industries, while scorning the suggestion of aiding the heavily mortgaged farmers through financial relief measures, has served further to intensify the drift against the administration. The utter contempt for the demands of the farmers, displayed by the puppet, Coolidge, when he vetoed the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, not only aroused the farmers of the Middle and Far West, but also infuriated large sections of the cotton, rice and tobacco growers of the South. In spite of the economic insifficiency of the McNary-Haugen bill, the vast majority of the population of the corn, wheat and cotton belts were convinced that it would have helped to establish protective equality of agriculture in comparison with other groups, especially industrialists, particularly favored by tariff walls.

There is a great cross section of the entire country that cuts directly through the corn and wheat belt that was formerly republican and the cotton belt that is traditionally democratic whose economic conditions today impel them toward a joint struggle against the dominant wings of both the two old parties.

One political incident of the first magnitude, that the leaders of both the old parties would like to forget, served to dramatize before the country the fact that the main forces of both those parties stand upon the same platform as far as foreign policy is concerned. That incident was the vote on the question of American adherence to the world court when all party lines were obliterated in general approval of that demand of the Wall Street imperialists.

THIS is a state of affairs that demands the most astute political juggling on the part of the leaders of both the old parties. Both leading groups in these parties are doing everything in their power to try to overcome the drift toward a new third party alignment. Thus far the party leaders have met with remarkable success in combating the third party tendency. Of course the task of stifling a third party movement is not so difficult as it was in 1924, in spite of the fact that the economic conditions are more favorable for such a movement today than at that time. This paradox is to be explained by the fact that the heavy defeat administered the LaFollette party has caused the middle class politicians to again turn to the fold of the republican and democratic parties and strive to realize within those parties the demands they feel they can never realize through a separate party. The LaFollette defeat has also created wide pessimism among the audible elements who supported the third party in 1924. They also feel that a third party movement is hopeless, so they too turn to the old parties, hoping to use their political power, mostly mythical, in support of candidates favorable to them. The chiefs of the republican party are fully aware of this condition, so since 1924 they have had Frank O. Lowden posing as a defender of the interests of the farmers in order to pave the way for Dawes (also suddenly become interested in the question of farm relief) or some other reliable defender of imperialism. As long as Lowden and other stalking horses for Wall Street's favorite candidates appear to play dominant roles in the republican party the middle class elements will pin their faith in them and remain within the party.

AMONG the democrats, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, who led the spectacular fight against the world court is mentioned as a presidential possibility and has tremendous influence in the Middle West as well as the traditional "Solid South." At the same time agents of the Wall Street dominated democratic party are roving the South trying to persuade the agriculturists that Al Smith, governor of New York and the favorite democrat candidate for the House of Morgan, is in reality a liberal who deeply sympathizes with their demands.

But in spite of the success achieved in preventing a marked trend toward a third party revival there are powerful elements in both old parties who unhesitatingly talk about practical organizational steps to unite the discontented masses of the country into a new third party drive.

WITHIN the past few days a number of prominent politicians, representing sectional groupings in their parties, have spoken quite plainly about a political combination of the agricultural interests of the South and the Middle West on a common program. Henry A. Wallace of Iowa, one of the prominent middle-west republicans advocates such an alliance. So does George W. Bean, republican national committeeman from Florida. On the democratic side such sentiments have been expressed by Col. Ousley of Dallas, Tex., formerly assistant secretary of agriculture in the Wilson administration. The list could be continued indefinitely, proving that even the local machine leaders reflect the deep-going resentment against the old parties that manifests itself among large sections of their former supporters.

The next few months will decide whether the game of the old party politicians will be successful; whether they will be able to induce their dissenting elements to accept their reactionary Wall Street candidates now parading in the guise of friends of the farmers or whether another abortive third petty bourgeois party will arise only to meet defeat again as three years ago.

THE class elements that are in revolt in the ranks of the two old parties are too weak to lead an independent political existence. Furthermore there are distinct class antagonisms between the poorer farmers and tenant farmers on the one hand and the well-to-do proprietor farmers and the middle class elements of the towns on the other hand that can never be reconciled. These middle class elements will abandon the struggle against the bankers the moment they are assured an existence as leeches upon the poorer farmers. It is their fate inevitably to sink to mere adjuncts of Wall Street (collecting agents for the big bankers and industrialists), while the poorer farmers and farm laborers will learn, through experience, that their only allies are the workers in the cities.

The impoverished farming masses of the Middle West and the South should not be deceived by their alleged friends in the ranks of the old parties, but should break with them and repudiate as well any new attempts at a third middle class party movement.

The economic condition of the farmers of the Middle West and South furnish the objective conditions for a strong mass support in these sections for a party of labor. Such a party could establish leadership in this situation over hundreds of thousands and millions of discontented farmers throughout the country.

By sabotaging the demand for a labor party, by playing the game of old party politics, the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor further earns the undying contempt of the labor movement

More than ever does the economic and political situation in the United States demand the utmost energy in a drive toward the creation of a class labor party that will represent the two great exploited groups, the workers and farmers, and challenge the parties of Wall Street.

Max Reinhardt Bringing His Salzburg Company to America

Accoring to an announcement from Gilbert Miller, who is now in Paris, Max Reinhardt and his celebrated players from his Salzburg theatre will come to America some time next month. Although no confirmation can be secured here, there is no doubt that the famous German actor and director is considering making a tour of the principal American cities. According to Miller's statement cabled from Paris, it will be the first time that an entire theatrical plant has been moved across the Atlantic.

The actors and the lighting apparatus and scenery used in the famous German performances will be transported to New York in order that the presentations may differ at no point from those which have drawn theatre lovers from all parts of the world to the little Austrian town.

The Reinhardt company is composed of an all-star cast taken from the three Reinhardt theatres in Berlin and Herr Reinhardt's Josefstadt Theatre in iVenna. The trip to the United States conseqeuntly will close three or four European theatres for the eight weeks that the actors are absent.

In the cast are such notable actors as the Thimig family, known as the German Barrymores, which includes Helen, Hermann and Hans; the classic actor Moissi, who created "The Living Corpse," presented in this city as "Redemption"; Lili Darvas, the Hungarian actress, wife of the playwright Molnar; the Russian actor, Sokoloff, and the comedian, Hans Moser. Rosamond Pinchot, who played the nun in "The Miracle" and who has recently appeared in Reinhardt's Salzburg productions, also will be a member of the company.

While Mr. Miller stated that the production will range from fantasies to ultra-modern plays, perhaps the most famous will be the Reinhardt adaptation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Other plays will be "Dante's Death," "Love and Intrigue" and "A Servant of Two Masters."

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, DAILY WORKER.—This is a copy of a letter I sent the Detroit Times:

Editor, Detroit "Times":

For the sake of truth and justice, not for slander and hypocrisy, I am sending you these cartoons and articles. I have clipped them from The "DAILY WORKER," 33 First Street, New York City.

In the three short years of its existence, The "DAILY WORKER" has proved itself to be the only American newspaper within the boundaries of the U. S. that really deserves the support of the American working class. It is a true representative of the common people, always fighting its demagogic plutocratic enemies, never afraid to fight capitalist injustice, and is always ready to courageously lead the struggle for the interests of the American workers.

Your paper, on the other hand, maintained, together with all of the other Hearst papers in the country, a most cowardly, hypocritical, and sneaky attitude in regards to the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Of course, we workers, who must toil with the sweat of our brows and with the shed of our blood, cannot expect anything more from a puppet newspaper of the American robber ruling class. I have read your paper for the last six years thinking it would always fight for the interests of us and of our kind, But NO, I have been disillusioned and frustrated. The Sacco-Vanzetti case has shown me the contrary. Your paper is only one of the intellectually-prostituted press of American capitalism. Your paper is absolutely unreliable; and incapable of voicing the truth because of the class that it represents.

If Mr. W. R. Hearst were really interested in TRUTH, he would have discontinued the publication of his papers years ago.

Yours,—A Detroit Worker.

THOUSANDS OF WORKERS BATTLE POLICE TO JOIN THE PROCESSION

Bodies of Two Martyred Workers Burned; Ashes Coming to New York Today

Altho the Boston cossacks had refused to grant permission for a mass procession, at times as many as thirty thousand workers followed the bodies of Sacco and Vanzetti in formal procession.

State constabulary reinforcing Boston police, brutally wielded their clubs in an effort to keep the procession down to the 200 prescribed by a city ordinance in view of the refusal of Police Superintendent Crowley to permit a mass demonstration.

The procession was barred from streets adjoining the State House, despite the promise granted by the police department several days ago. The weak excuse offered by the police was that "streets around the State House were in need of repair."

Workers Line Streets.

When the funeral procession got under way the thousands of workers who had filled Hanover street earlier in the day fell in behind. They had waited hours to join in "the March of Sorrow." They filled the streets from curb to curb for ten blocks or more.

Mounted police rode into them and scattered them. But the workers kept coming back.

The procession moved on to Scollay Square, the center of the business district. The square was packed with people. The police had difficulty in clearing a way. The throngs pressed against a plate glass window and caved it in.

Answer Police Attack.

At one point along the line workers answered a police attack by charging with their umbrellas but were driven back to the sidewalks.

The thousand policemen were assisted along the line by state troopers who kept the State House posted on every move.

Sometimes there were shouts of derision at the police. At other times those on the sidewalks applauded the members of the Defense Committee as they marched by with Mary Donovan, Powers Hapgood, Gill Morris and Gardner Jackson marching four abreast.

Police Swing Clubs.

The procession moved on to Forest Hills. There the crowd made a final effort to join the formal procession. They were charged by the police but kept on. Police drew their clubs and knocked down several women. One man was knocked unconscious.

Finally the members of the committee, pall bearers and chief mourners crowded into the little chapel where Mary Donovan delivered the oration.

Services in the little chapel, into which only two hundred persons could jam their way, were brief and simple. They consisted of a funeral oration delivered by Mary Donovan, of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee.

Her speech, addressed to Sacco and Vanzetti, denounced the authorities who murdered Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The minds of those who have killed you are not blinded," she cried. "They have committed this act in deliberate cold blood." At another point in her speech she declared:

"Your execution is one of the blackest crimes in the history of mankind."

Toward the end she exclaimed:

"The act of killing you was the act of vengeance of one class against you as symbols of another class."

And she concluded with:

"In your martyrdom we will fight on and conquer." There were no prayers and no songs for the two working class martyrs.

When Miss Donovan had concluded her oration the caskets were slipped into the furnace. Cremation required an hour. Then the ashes were allowed to cool for thirty minutes and placed in the urns.

Mrs. Rose Sacco, widow of one, and Miss Luigia Vanzetti, sister of the other, did not attend the services in the chapel. They remained in their closed automobile in which they had ridden in the funeral procession.

WELCOME PARTY'S 5TH CONVENTION TOMORROW NIGHT

Lovestone and Foster to Address Meeting

A mass demonstration to greet the delegates to the Fifth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of America will be held at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., Tuesday night.

Jay Lovestone, William Z. Foster, Ben Gitlow, James P. Cannon, Earl Browder and Max Bedacht will be among those to address the meeting.

In addition to greeting the delegates to the convention, workers will demonstrate against the war danger, the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti and class collaboration.

The meeting will also be a demonstration for the recognition of the Soviet Union, the Chinese revolution, organization of the unorganized, a labor party and powerful militant unionism. Admission to the meeting will be fifty cents.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 28.—Radio communication was successfully established between Hamburg and Buenos Aires yesterday under the auspices of the International Trans-Radio Company. A speech made in the German city was heard here distinctly.

Masses to Demonstrate for Sacco and Vanzetti in New York City Today

The demonstration at Union Square is expected to surpass in size the two monster meetings held before the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Powers Hapgood, who was one of the leaders in the Boston struggle for the liberation of the two workers will act as chairman at the meeting.

Hapgood will accompany Mrs. Sacco, Luigia Vanzetti and Ella Reeve Bloor who will carry the urns containing the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti from Boston.

Referring to the attack made on the plans for the mass memorial by August Claessens, New York secretary of the socialist party, Clarina Michelson, head of the Memorial Committee said: "I am surprised at Mr. Claessens's statement. His charges that we are a self-appointed committee, are a little surprising in view of the fact that I visited him and showed him credentials from the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee at Boston authorizing the Memorial Committee to arrange memorial meetings in New York City."

Huge Marble Urn.

The ashes of the martyred workers will be in state at the Stuyvesant Casino, where workers in single file, will view them. Workers are urged by the Memorial Committee to place red carnations at the foot of the urn bearing the ashes.

The two small urns bearing the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti will be placed in a large marble urn designed by Adolf Wolf, sculptor. At the apex of the urn, which stands as a pyramid, is a huge clenched fist. The urn bears the following inscription: "Sacco and Vanzetti murdered by capitalist justice, August 23, 1927."

Guard of Honor.

A guard of honor will meet the ashes at Grand Central station at 5 o'clock. Members of the guard are: Rose Baron of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, W. S. Van Valkenburgh of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, Benjamin H. Fletcher of the International Workers of the World, William Weinstone of the Workers (Communist) Party, Celia Polisuk of the Students' Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, Rose Pesotta of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee and Carlo Tresca.

The ashes will be conveyed in an automobile to Union Square where demonstration will be held. Among the speakers are: W. S. Van Valkenburgh, Carlo Tresca, William Weinstone, Celia Polisuk, Benjamin Gitlow and Benjamin H. Fletcher. Powers Hapgood, who is one of the delegation conveying the ashes from Boston, will act as chairman.

Mobilize 1,500 Police.

More than 1,500 policemen and plain clothes men, under Chief Inspector William J. Lahey, will be massed at the demonstration.

Endorsing the call of the Memorial Committee, Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee said: "The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee heartily endorses the plans for a mass demonstration at Union Square and urges all workers affiliated with it to turn out and bring their friends.

"We expect nearly 100,000 workers and sympathizers to gather and honor the ashes of our murdered comrades," Miss Baron said. "Millions of workers know that Sacco and Vanzetti fell as heroes in the class war. The workers always honor their dead. We hope that the police will not indulge in any brutality as hinted by Commissioner Warren. This would be a sacriligeous act and would be seriously condemned by workers all over the world."

CHINESE PEASANT REVOLTS GROW; WUHAN TOTTERS

Economic Crisis Brings Increased Terror

SHANGHAI, Aug. 28.—Reports received here indicate the complete stagnation of trade under the Wuhan government and the complete collapse of the currency. Everything is in chaos and the counter revolutionary mercenaries of imperialism and bourgeois generals are unable to secure enough from the pillaging of the territory they infest to maintain their bonapartist armies.

Their declining economic condition drives them from excess to excess and they try to overcome with murder the grim realities of a bankrupt economy.

Public Executions in Hankow.

HANKOW, Aug. 28.—The murder government here has publicly executed a "counter-revolutionary" whose name remains unknown. He was brot from Wuchang. One should not forget that according to the terminology of the central committee of the Kuomintang which maintains power by wading in the blood of the revolutionists, all Communists are called counter-revolutionaries.

In spite of the systematic terror, the peasant upheavals continue to grow in volume and intensity and every effort is being made to give revolutionary direction to the spontaneous uprisings over vast areas in China.

ment dragnet and deported. In Amsterdam, a state of siege is declared and in every country in Europe the authorities are devising new means to shackle the workingclass. And here in this cradle of democracy, two cities, Chicago and Boston, have added the infamous sanity test to the well-known third degree methods by which they force involuntary confessions from innocent prisoners. It is another anti-radical torture weapon. This sanity test has already been used in Boston on Powers Hapgood who has more intelligence in his right kidney than the entire Boston police force has between the ears.

THE wave or reaction that is now cresting thruout the world is not dissasociated with preparations for a war against the Soviet Union. The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti is a thermometer that marks the temperature of world capitalism. There is not a single peaceful spot in the capitalist world and the degree of oppression of the workers in any country is determined by the strength of their organizations and their militancy. Where they are weak and disorganized they are crucified at will.

THE consoling thot in this dark word picture is that, in proportion as the capitalists press the iron heel into the face of labor, the workers class hatred increases. Revolutions do not take place because they are pleasant or because the workers as a whole can be convinced by argument that they are desirable, tho propaganda helps. Revolutions are the product of unbearable conditions and ripened situations. It does not take a seer to predict that something is going to break before long.

* * *

THE imperialists are confident in the loyalty of the reactionary labor leaders. They believe the labor fakers can hold the workers in check. They look back to the general strike in Great Britain and note the splendid job done by Thomas, Clynes, MacDonald and others. Here in the United States William Green is a cog in the military machine and an imperialist priest who baptises cruisers. Matthew Woll is the head of the agents provocateurs. In every other capitalist country the high offic dom of trade unionism is in the ploy, even if not directly in the pay of the enemy.

* * *

ENGLAND is steadily driving for united front against the Sovi Union. The conflict of interests b tween British and American ca talists, the fear of the German g ernment that a declaration of war its part against Russia would be signal for revolution, the power the Soviet Union and the dread o conflagration thruout the Orient, the main factors that prevent an mediate declaration of war. should not be forgotten that no m ter how the bandit powers fi among themselves, in the l analysis they will unite against th power that threatens them all.

* * *

THUS we see the clubs, guns and bombs of the police forces of all capitalist countries used against the workers who meet to mourn the death of their comrades: Sacco and Vanzetti. Here is a challenge to imperialism that cuts across tariff squabbles, struggles for concessions and conflicts over the relative sizes of armies and navies. And while capitalist governments bare their teeth to the ashes of our two martyred comrades the wide arms of the Workers Republic are opened to the remains of the workingclass warriors, the victims of the vicious imperialists of the United States. The Soviet Union is not alone the real fatherland of the workers of all lands but the nucleus of the future world republic of labor.

SACCO and Vanzetti, two humble foreigners who came to this country to make a living and help spread their ideas of a new social order among their fellow workers are dead. But they are more potent dead than millions of the enslaved living. Their seven years of living death in the shadow of the electric chair is an epic of revolutionary courage unsurpassed in the annals of history. Their names will be echoed from millions of tongues from now until the last capitalist fortress falls before the forces of victorious world labor.

30,000 HONOR SACCO AND VANZETTI IN NEW YORK; MOSCOW WORKERS MOURN MURDERED COMRADES

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

A MEMBER of the New York police force that has been very much in evidence recently saving the country from the radicals, is under lock and key charged with the murder of a paymaster for a construction firm. It must be admitted however that the suspected murderer had a noble and worthy ambition as an incentive to seek wealth. He wanted money to build a home for his fiance. Since the home is the cornerstone of modern civilization it would seem that the prosecution is in a fix to devise an appropriate punishment to fit the crime.

* * *

THIS policeman is said to have had a good record on the force, which may mean that he was handy with the club and quick on the draw and that he never hesitated to use both on anybody he suspected of having designs on "lawr an' order." After all there is not much difference between the action of this policeman who shot and robbed the man he was pledged to protect and that of A. B. Fall, who peddled the government naval oil reserves consigned to his care. But for fear that the owners of the public wealth which the various governments are organized to protect would have their necks broken most of our patriotic public servants would turn their offices into high-jack joints.

* * *

MRS. James Hastings Snowden got on the front page last Monday but it cost her $100,000, which may be a small price for the wife of the wealthy oil operator to pay for such publicity. The lady wore $250,000 worth of jewelry while participating in the "Hampton Follies" given for the benefit of a local hospital. She still has $150,000 worth of jewelry left. No need of taking up a collection for the poor thing. In "The Rising of The Moon," a play by Lady Gregory, there is a line which reads: "The gown she wore was red with gore." The gown worn by Mrs. Snowden, decorated with a quarter million dollars worth of jewelry was red with the blood of thousands upon thousands of wage slaves who toiled long hours to enable this parasite to appear adorned like a glittering butterfly.

SACCO and Vanzetti were burned to death in Boston because they wanted to change the world that enables one woman to load her body with a quarter of a million dollars worth of jewelry while millions of workingmen cannot dress properly for either the heat of summer or the winter cold. This is the society that is protected by battleships, war planes, poison gas, soldiers, policemen, preachers, capitalist politicians, venal editors and equally venal professors.

* * *

A QUARTER million of workers watched the remains of Sacco and Vanzetti being taken to the crematorium where their bodies were turned into ashes. This was Boston's farewell to the two workers it murdered. But the Boston that watched the procession with wet eyes is not the Boston that directed the executioner to pull the fatal switch. And the day will come when another Boston will build a monument to Sacco and Vanzetti, on the ruins of the system that sent them to their doom.

* * *

THE way of the doer of good deeds is often strewn with thorns. Listen to the story of Mr. Thomas Ring, a wealthy Michigan lumberman who felt that Michigan was a fine place to make money but not an exciting place to spend it in. So he sold out his interests and left for Paris with the boodle. Ring was a case of over correction it appears. A good rotarian in Michigan he frequented the Latin Quarter in Paris and was quite popular with those who expect to become famous poets, painters and novelists some day, but for the moment would give their gizzards for a hot meal.

* * *

ALONG came an American sculptor and approached Mr. Ring with a little ash tray which he thot would have a big sale during the American Legion convention. Ring being patriotic as well as good-hearted entered into the spirit of the thing and led the sculptor to his inn keeper, as they used to say in the good old days. Thomas being a good customer the genial hotel man purchased two hundred ash trays and the sculptor ate and drank his fill. Ring wept with the emotion of having performed

THOUSANDS OF WORKERS IN SOVIET UNION MOURN FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

Masses Gather in Silence Thruout U. S. S. R. at Moment of Class War Victims' Funeral

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 29.—Yesterday Moscow presented an inspiring sight as great crowds of workers assembled in the open squares, gardens, parks, clubs and theatres for the purpose of joining in the mournings protest meetings on the occasion of Sacco's and Vanzetti's funeral.

Hundreds of Saccos and Vanzettis in Jail.

The orators speaking at the meetings emphasized that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is one of the endless acts of violence in the world-wide action of the bourgeoisie against the proletariat. The political emigrants, Comrades Bach from Latvia, and Berg from Poland, who were recently set free from the prisons of those countries declared that hundreds and thousands of Saccos and Vanzettis are awaiting their turn in the gaols, in exile or at hard labor.

In Poland the number of political prisoners alone amounts to 6,000 and small Latvia is seeking to equal the great powers by its cruelties.

Poland Prepares for War.

"Three weeks ago I left Poland," said Berg, "and the Polish bourgeoisie were making hasty war preparations.

Mayor Walker Flees From Berlin Workers to Resort for Swells

BADEN BADEN, Aug. 29.—After his departure from Berlin where workers greeted him with boos and hisses, Mayor James J. Walker has arrived here and is hobnobbing with exiled kings and nobles.

Mayor Walker constantly wears the red cross decoration given to him by President Hindenburg at Berlin.

ATTEND THE STARLIGHT PARK JAMBOREE AND ANSWER THE ATTACKS OF WOLL AND SIGMAN!

TO ALL WORKERS OF NEW YORK:

(A call to the workers of New York from the Joint Defense and Relief Committee).

Workers of all trades! Again the Joint Defense and Relief Committee has to call on you to support it in its future activities. Up till now every call of the Joint Defense has been answered by you and only due to your active support did we succeed in repelling all the attacks of the Sigman, McGrady clique upon the organized workers of the needle trades.

The affairs that the Joint Defense Committee is arranging are not for the purpose of enjoyment only; they are for the purpose of raising funds to carry on the fight and support the families of those who were imprisoned due to the frame-ups of the betrayers of the working class.

You have made good the losses that the Joint Defense has had due to rain at the Coney Island Stadium Concert and you showed up in large masses to the postponed concert at the last minute. You will have to make good also the losses that the defense committee has suffered due to the rain last Sunday, August 28th.

The expenses for this affair are between 9 and 10 thousand dollars. The money was borrowed and is to be repaid; the families of the imprisoned workers are waiting for their checks. We have to pay them.

Money is also necessary to begin an offensive against the reactionaries of the needle trades and to begin an organization drive to bring back shops to the union.

YOU MUST SUPPORT US IN THIS!

Whatever your plans may be for next Saturday, whether you want to go to camp or hiking or to any other place you must postpone it until Sunday.

You must show up to the Starlight Park on Saturday, September 3rd, to make the affair a large success so that the Sigman clique will not be able to celebrate the losses of the Joint Defense Committee.

Remember! You must be at Starlight Park and bring your friends!

Fuller's Adviser Dies As 300,000 Workers in Boston Protest Murder

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—Following the protest of 300,000 workers here yesterday against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti, Charles Sumner Smith, senior member of the Governor's Council, died from shock.

Smith, a big banker, was one of the laders of the pack that howled for the blood of Sacco and Vanzetti.

WELCOME FIFTH CONVENTION OF PARTY TONIGHT

Communist Mass Meet at Central Opera House

The Fifth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party opens tomorrow in this city. Practically all the prominent members of the Workers Party will attend and many of them are in town at the present time.

Tonight a mass meeting to celebrate the opening of the Fifth Convention will be held at Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., at 8 p. m. Among the speakers will be Jay Lovestone, Wm. Z. Foster, Ben Gitlow, James P. Cannon, Max Bedacht and Earl Browder.

Discuss Labor Problems.

The meeting will not be one of the usual sort of welcoming meetings, where everyone repeats the same old slogans, but will deal with the pressing problems that face labor at this time, including the major question of the new threat of world war, the lessons of class collaboration, the fight against imperialism. Other questions will be the labor party, the organization of the unorganized, the drive for recognition of the Soviet Union and the fight to get the armed forces of American imperialism out of China.

N.Y. Democratic Confab in Albany on Sept. 29

ALBANY, Aug. 29.—The voters of New York state at the next election will act on the second largest number of proposed amendments to the state constitution presented for consideration. But that is not being considered to any large extent, all interest being centered in the democratic party convention that will open here on September 2. All local politicians are waiting for its opening with eagerness.

POLICE ATTACK WORKERS MARCH ON CITY HALL

Procession Follows the Union Sq. Memorial

Scores of workers were fiendishly beaten and women and babies trampled upon when a squad of police hiding in Broome St. swooped down upon 2,000 workers marching from Union Square to City Hall after the end of the memorial meeting yesterday evening.

The cossacks hit right and left. When some workers started to run for safety the police threw their clubs at them. Many men were hit upon the head. When they fell the cops continued to hit them on the back and other parts of the body.

Beat Young Mother.

Several women were victims of the police brutality. Mrs. Marie Previnzio who was standing by her door step with her baby was knocked down by the police. The baby was saved from injury by the mother letting herself fall to protect her child. Mrs. Celia Katillio, an elderly woman fainted when the police started their

U. S. REFUSES TO PERMIT CHINESE TARIFF INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—The State Department will resist any attempt on the part of China to put a program for tariff autonomy into effect this fall, it was learned today.

The legation at Peking and the consular offices thruout southern China have been sent instructions to lodge "strongly-worded protests" against any increase of tariff duties. State Department officials, refuse to say what action would be taken if the State Department's "protest" proved unavailing.

Despite repeated promises made by the United States and the provisions of the Washington treaties for increased customs duties, the State Department will resist taxes that are so "high as to work hardship upon American firms shipping goods into China.

BRAVE HEAVY RAIN TO PAY TRIBUTE TO DEAD WORKERS AT UNION SQUARE

Cheer Mrs. Sacco; Workers Sing International; Death Masks in Marble Urn

In spite of continual showers, which turned into a downpour just as the memorial meeting opened yesterday afternoon, more than thirty thousand New York workers filled Union Square to pay their final tribute to their murdered comrades, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

The crowd which began gathering before four o'clock was repeatedly driven to cover by the storm, but came back to the wet and muddy square each time that the skies cleared. The determination which shone in such banners as "Long Live the Spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti," "The Memory of Sacco and Vanzetti Will Never Die," was evidenced by the resistance of the throng to all brutalities of the police. They kept constantly pushing and attempting to irritate the crowd, seeking an excuse to break up the meeting. But they were as unsuccessful as the rainy skies, and the meeting enthusiastically proceeded.

Interspersed with the speaking was the singing of the International, which rose spontaneously from first one section then anohter of the vast crowd, and was part of the greeting to Mrs. Sacco after the workers had cheered her for nearly ten minutes.

Mrs. Sacco arrived with the party from Boston at Grand Central at 6.10 almost an hour later than they had been expected. With her were Mrs. Jessica Henderson, of the Citizens' National Committee; Aldino Felicani, of the Boston Defense Committee; Ella Reeve Bloor, and H. S. Van Valkenburgh of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee. Powers Hapgood had arrived from Boston on the earlier train.

Greet Committee at Station.

More than 5,000 workers had gathered in the station to greet her and her companions, in spite of the fact no mass delegation had been planned. They crowded the lower waiting room to capacity and a dramatic tenseness pervaded the crowd as they waited for the ashes which they expected to arrive at any minute.

But half an hour before the delayed Boston group arrived, the police began dispersing the watchers, driving them out of the waiting room and even away from the streets near the station. Not only mounted and foot police drove ruthlessly into the crowd, but armored cars were on hand and the bomb squad was closely watching all that went on.

The Boston party was met by a New York reception committee composed of Mrs. Clarina Michelson of the Memorial Committee, Rose Pesotta of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee, Miss Rose Baron of the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, William Weinstone of the Workers (Communist) Party, Benjamin H. Fletcher of the I. W. W., Celia Polisuk of the Student Sacco-Vanzetti Committee and Leonardo Frisina of the Italian Chamber of Labor. They were escorted out of a special entrance at 45th Street and Vanderbilt Avenue and there the Boston and New York groups took autos and went direct to Union Square.

Brave Heavy Downpour.

They arrived just as a heavy rain started, but in spite of it Mrs. Sacco mounted the central platform and

VICIOUS ANTI-LABOR CAMPAIGN OF AMERICAN LEGION EXPOSED

Here are a few examples of the vicious anti-labor activities of the American Legion whose convention on September 19th the French workers are fighting to bar from Paris. They are taken from "Professional Patriots," edited by Norman Hapgood and published by Albert and Charles Boni.

BEAT UP NON-PARTISAN LEADERS.

"At Great Bend where a Farmers' Non-Partisan League meeting was scheduled, four speakers on the way to it were beaten up, two of them tarred and feathered. The men who were beaten and tarred were J. O. Stevic, editor of the Non-Partisan Leader, Carl Pearson, a veteran of the World War, while ex-Senator Burton of Kansas and George Wilson of Oklahoma who were together in the car were forced to get out of the country."

BREAK UP LENIN MEMORIAL MEETING.

"At Wilkes-Barre a Lenin memorial meeting conducted by the Workers (Communist) Party was broken up at the point of rifles by a crowd of Legion men who marched from their hall for that purpose, and who forced the audience to leave the hall and salute the American flag. The action of the local post was backed by others thruout the country who wired their approval."

STOP DEBS MEETING.

"The Legion specialized in stopping socialist meetings addressed by Eugene V. Debs, concerts by Fritz Kreisler and showings of a film depicting conditions in Russia entitled the "Fifth Year."

HALT ANTI-WAR CONFERENCE.

"The Legion chapter at Concord, Mass., attempted in June, 1926, to prevent the New England Fellowship of Youth from holding a conference there. Eggs, stones and stink bombs were reported among the missiles used without avail in this Legion-inspired attempt to intimidate college students interested in peace."

OTHER "PATRIOTIC" ACTIVITIES.

"Other 'patriotic' activities of the Legion have been to oppose amnesty for federal and state political prisoners, convicted solely for expressions of opinion during the war; anti-radical propaganda in the public schools through contests for prizes for essays against radicalism; co-operation with the United States Bureau of Education in an anti-chauvinistic program for American Education Week in 1924."

TRY TO BREAK PASSAIC STRIKE.

"The most recent strike-breaking effort of the Legion occurred in Passaic, New Jersey, in the winter and spring of 1926. The local Legion post opened a 'relief store' to discourage picketing by giving food to workers who stayed off the picket line."

SACCO - VANZETTI COMMITTEE HERE ANSWERS CHARGE

Rose Baron Replies to Boston Defense

The Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, Rose Baron, secretary, has issued a statement replying to the charges of the Boston Defense Committee that the Emergency Committee cannot account for the money which it raised for its New York Sacco-Vanzetti defense activities.

The statement in full, reads as follows:

"We would prefer not to be drawn into a controversy on the question of the expenditure of funds while the bodies of our murdered comrades are scarcely cold, but the baseless accusations of the Boston Committee must not go unanswered.

"Our treasurer, Robert W. Dunn, when called upon, submitted a statement of our finances to the Boston Committee. The specific charge that the Emergency Committee collected $7,000 and only sent to the Boston Committee $300 is a deliberate misstatement of fact. On November 17, 1926, our committee organized a mass protest meeting at Madison Square Garden and spent $6,186.21 for the rental of the auditorium, advertising, printing, postage, etc. The total receipts for this occasion were $5,450.92; it will be seen, therefore, that this committee incurred a loss on the meeting of $735.29.

Sent Them Check.

"Six months thereatfter the Boston Committee being desperately in need of funds called for help and although our committee only had a bank balance of about $400 at the time we mailed them a check for $300.

"At the time of the Madison Square demonstration the Boston Committee had complete faith in the "mercy" of the Massachusetts courts while our committee on the other hand believed that Sacco and Vanzetti could only be saved by the united action of the workingclass. Time has vindicated our attitude. The "merciful" Massachusetts courts butchered Sacco and Vanzetti in spite of Boston Defense Committee.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti Committee has carried on an intense campaign for the liberation of our dead comrades. We rented halls, printed stationery, leaflets and literature and every cent that we collected can be honestly accounted for. We have no paid officials and even our headquarters and office machinery is kindly donated by the International Labor Defense.

"We consider it an act of extreme bad taste to indulge in irresponsible accusations before the funeral of our comrades. We will not reciminate, on the contrary, we invite the Boston Defense Committee after the funeral to inspect our books at any time which is convenient for them. We have nothing to conceal, and we are proud of the work which we have done in the effort to save Sacco and Vanzetti and in this view New York's militant Labor concurs."

SACCO AND VANZETTI VICTIMS OF CLASS HATE, SAYS MARY DONOVAN IN FUNERAL ADDRESS

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—Mary Donovan, one of the members of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, today delivered the funeral oration over the bodies of the two executed men just before they were cremated. Her address follows:

"Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, you came to America seeking freedom, in the strong idealism of youth you came as workers searching for that liberty and equality of opportunity heralded as the particular gift of this country to all newcomers. You centered your labors in Massachusetts, the very birthplace of American ideals. And now Massachusetts and America have killed you—murdered you because you were anarchists.

"A hundred and fifty years ago the controlling people of this state hanged and burned women in Salem—charging them with witchcraft. The shame of those old acts of barbarism can never be wiped out. But they are as nothing beside this murder which modern Massachusetts has committed upon you. The witch burners were motivated by the superstitious fear of an emotional religion. Their minds were blinded by their selfish passion to reach Heaven. The minds of those who have killed you are not blinded. They have committed this act in deliberate cold blood.

"For more than seven years they had every chance to know the truth about you. Not once did they even dare mention the quality of your characters—a quality so noble and shining that millions have come to be guided by it. They refused to look. They allowed the bitter prejudice of class, position and self interest to close their eyes. They cared more for wealth, comfort and institutions than they did for truth. You, Sacco and Vanzetti, are the victims of the crassest plutocracy the world has known since ancient Rome.

"Your execution is one of the blackest crimes in the history of mankind. It is that and more. Horrible enough would it be if the killing of you had been ordered by the political and material powers alone. How much more horrible it is to have this act sanctioned and even blessed by those who pass among us as the leaders of intellectual and spiritual power. The blatant exulation with which they aided in your death is the final sign that the act of killing you was the act of vengeance of one class—the class dominated by worship of money and position—against you as symbols of another class—the workers and all others aspiring to realize the true meaning of life.

"Triumph In Death."

"'If it had not been for these things,' said Vanzetti shortly before his death, 'I might have lived out my life, talking at street corners to scorning men. I might have died, unmarked, unknown, a failure. Now we are not a failure. This is our career and our triumph. Never in our full life can we hope to do such work for tolerance, for justice, for man's understanding of man, as now we do by an accident. Our words—our lives—our pains—nothing. The taking of our lives—lives of a good shoemaker and a poor fish peddler—all that last moment belongs to us—that agony is our triumph.'

"By that triumph we are fired with an everlasting fire. Your long years of torture and your last hours of supreme agony are the living banner under which we and our descendants for generations to come will march to accomplish that better world based on the brotherhood of man for which you died. In your martyrdom we will fight on and conquer."

Every marcher had a red arm band with the inscription "Justice, Crucified August 22, 1927." Two workers were arrested by the police.

At the crematory the police stopped the selling of the Nation, liberal weekly.

Cal to Hear Ideas For Big Navy; His Vacation Soon Over

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 29. — President Coolidge came back to his desk at the summer White House today, prepared to dispose of a week's accumulation of business.

During the seven days he was in the Yellowstone National Park a number of matters of official business developed, all of which it is said will require his personal attention.

In the two remaining weeks of his vacation Coolidge expects to receive "first hand" information concerning a number of problems confronting the administration. To date, Senator Hiram W. Bingham, Republican, of Connecticut, leader in the fight for a huge air force, has the only set engagement, but others are expected. Bingham will arrive here the latter part of the week.

Meanwhile, Coolidge is dividing his time between fishing and horseback riding.

No Clue to Flushing Murder.

Detetcives working on the mystery of the headless male body found in a ravine in Flushing Manor, Queens, Friday, admitted yesterday that all clues in the case had failed.

American Legion Judge Will Find His Resolution No Protection in France

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

JUSTICE Harold H. Hartwell of the Central Worcester (Massachusetts) District Court has set sail for France.

The farewell tendered him by the judicial harlots of his home state, now internationally notorious because of its lynching of the two workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, was affectionate in the extreme. Lynchers, especially the lynchers of workers, stand upon the common ground of lust for human blood.

But it may be taken for granted that justice Hartwell will receive quite a different welcome when he lands on French soil, where the workers will recognize in him another connecting link between the slaughter of Sacco and Vanzetti and the interests supported by the American Legion, fascist aid of the American reaction, that has this year chosen Paris as the scene of its annual drunken orgy, that parades under the name of a "convention."

Justice Hartwell goes to France to attend the "convention" of the American Legion. A farewell was tendered him at Worcester, Mass., which is also the home town of Judge Webster Thayer, who acted as the lynching judge in the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti.

As if fearing the wrath of the workers of France, the members of the Worcester County Bar Association, that attended the farewell banquet, joined in adopting a resolution, not supporting the integrity of or eulogizing the legionnaire judge, Hartwell, however, but commending the lynching judge, Thayer, on the part that he played in putting Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair.

Judge Hartwell, however, will no doubt carefully carry a copy of this resolution with him to France in an effort to buffet the mounting wave of working class indignation aroused over the monstrous crime committed against the two workers, Sacco and Vanzetti, which French labor recognizes, as it should, as an attack against the world's working class.

First of all, French labor will not be misled by the flowery verbiage used to condone the crime of the murderous ruling class of Massachusetts.. The resolution reads:

"The members of the Worcester County Bar Association extend to Mr. Justice Webster Thayer their felicitations and hearty approval of his judicial conduct in the recent trial of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. His fairness thruout the long and tedious trial in preserving for the defendants all of their constitutional rights, which at that time met with the open and public approval of defense council, is heartily commended. Ever alert for exact justice for the defendants realizing his duty to the great Commonwealth which he so honorably serves, we applaud his stand for upholding of the law, at any cost, to the end that the sacred traditions of Massachusetts, that this is a government of law and not of men is still the watchword of the right thinking and sober minded citizens of the Commonwealth."

It must have taken even a lawyer or a judge in his cups to write such piffle, even in the state of Massachusetts. Let us remember the actual attitude of the "impartial" judge, Thayer, toward the defendants, Sacco and Vanzetti, seeking "justice" in his capitalist court.

The workers of France already know that Thayer, one of the leaders of the Massachusetts lynching mob, after its conviction in his court of Sacco and Vanzetti, asked Professor Richardson, of the law department of Dartmouth College.

"Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards?"

Thayer not only made this statement, in this form, to Professor Richardson, at a football game at Hanover, New Hampshire, but he repeated it in various forms, at different places, during the time that the Sacco-Vanzetti case was in his court.

Felix Frankfurter, professor of law at Harvard University, in his book, "The Case of Sacco and Vanzetti," in analyzing the 25,000-word decision that Judge Thayer handed down in the demand for a new trial, says:

"I assert . . . without the slightest fear of disproof, that certainly in modern times Judge Thayer's opinion stands upmatched, . . . for discrepancies between what the record discloses and what the opinion conveys.

"His 25,000 word document cannot accurately be described otherwise than as a farrago of misquotations, misrepresentations, suppressions and mutilations. The disinterested inquirer could not possibly derive from it a true knowledge of the new evidence that was submitted to him as a basis for a new trial. The opinion is literally honeycombed with demonstrable errors, and infused by a spirit alien to judicial utterance."

Dr. Morton Prince wrote at the time that any expert psychologist reading the Thayer opinion "could not fail to find evidences that portray strong personal feeling, poorly concealed, that should have no place in a judicial document."

It was this opinion handed down by Judge Thayer that caused the conservative Boston Herald, which long held the view that the sentence against these men should be carried out, to a frank reversal of its position. It declared editorially:

"As months have merged into years and the great debate over this case has continued, our doubts have solidified slowly into convictions, and reluctantly we have found ourselves compelled to reverse our original judgment. We hope the supreme judicial court will grant a new trial on the basis of the new evidence not yet examined in open court. We have read the full decision in which Judge Webster Thayer, who presided at the original trial, renders his decision against the application for a new trial, and we submit that it carries the tone of the advocate rather than the arbitrator."

Similar testimony against the "judicial conduct" of Judge Thayer could be cited thru many columns.

This should be sufficient, however for any open-minded worker in this country. It is more than sufficient for the workers of France who will convict the honorable judge, Harold H. Hartwell, of Worcester, Mass., immediately he presents himself in France, thru the mere fact that he carries a resolution lauding the capitalist judge, Thayer.

• • •

Even in the United States the rank and file of the American Legion itself seems to be waking up. This is shown in a letter just received by The DAILY WORKER signed "American Legionnaire." It reads in part as follows:

"Just a word of encouragment from an American Legionnaire. Praise to you for your outstanding fight for Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Last Friday night I watched the Chicago cops violate the laws of the United States and of decency. I never knew what the word 'provocateur' meant until I saw the Chicago police in action. And in the town of 'Big Bill,' the great champion of the pee-pul. I am a man who saw the dirty end of the war with the Second Division, Expeditionary Forces. The trouble with the Legion is that there are too many cheap training camp heroes in it and at the head of it.

"I think it may be time that someone should mention the fact that there was more treason spoken at the front than there ever will be in the steel mills.

"I don't care a hang myself whether we ever get a change of government, but I admire your guts, and I admit that your paper is a necessity. At some other time I will disclose my identity. Suffice it to say that I am a bona fide vet who got his belly full a Belleau, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Champagne, and Meuse-Argonne."

There is much that could be written in reply to this letter. This "American Legionnaire," altho he feels that something is wrong, does not realize that the Legion is a capitalist institution supporting the profit system.

The French workers were in the war longer and they learned better the meaning of the capitalist war.

Let American labor learn by watching the struggle of the French workers against their own militarism that greets that form of this country's militarism that goes to France as the American Legion.

NORWEGIAN UNIONISTS SEE SOVIET UNION, ENGLISH WORKERS PLAY SOCCER WITH U. S. S. R. WORKERS

NORWAY UNIONS VISIT U. S. S. R.

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Aug. 29.—The Norwegian Labor Delegation, numbering 120 persons, is leaving Oslo on its way to the Soviet Union. The Delegation was organized by the leaders of the most important Norwegian labor unions. The Delgeation will stay about one month in the U. S. S. R.

ENGLISH WORKERS PLAY SOCCER.

Accepting the invitation of the Central Council of Labor Unions of the U. S. S. R., sixteen worker football players are coming to the U. S. S. R. from England for the purpose of participating in sport competition. They will stay in the U. S. S. R. about one month. The first game will take place on Aug. 28 in Moscow.

RATIONALIZATION CUTS COSTS.

64% of the reports discussed at the Industrial Commission's conferences with the Moscow Textile Labor Union deal with the rationalization of production. The result of rationalization in some factories is that production expenses have been lowered and the average production increased from 10 to 20%.

30,000 [illegible] HONOR SACCO AND VANZETTI IN N. Y.

Speakers Cite Loyalty to Working Class

smiled a welcome to the cheering workers who had gathered by thousands in spite of the threatening clouds. She remained for a short time and then was taken to the Hotel McAlpin, while the other members of the party stayed to accompany the memorial urn to Stuyvesant Casino. This impressive memorial which is surmounted by a clenched fist bears in red letters the inscription "Sacco-Vanzetti, Martyred by American Plutocracy, August 23, 1927."

Honor Dead Workers.

Following Mrs. Sacco's departure, the speakers representing various participating organizations paid their respects to the two dead workers, and pledged the support of the workers to the task of keeping their memory always alive. In addition to H. S. Van Valkinburgh, W. W. Weinstone and Rose Pesotta, Ben Gitlow, representing the Workers (Communist) Party spoke, and also Carlo Tresca, William L. Patterson of the Negro Labor Congress, Benjamin H. Fletcher of the I. W. W., L. Frisina, James P. Cannon of the International Labor Defense, Pat Devine, Rebecca Grecht and Powers Hapgood.

Defense Committee Breaks Promise.

As the workers began gathering in Union Square to pay their last tribute to the remains of their martyred brothers, Sacco and Vanzetti, word reached those in charge of the memorial meeting that the party from Boston has missed the scheduled train and would reach New York an hour late. With this came the news by press wire from Boston that the ashes of the two workers were not accompanying the party, due to a last minute controversy with the Boston Defense Committee.

This act on the part of the Boston committee was a deliberate repudiation of all their promises and arrangements completed early last week. The committee had provided Mrs. Clarina Michelson with written credentials, and had authorized her as a member of the Sacco-Vanzetti Memorial Committee of Boston to come to New York and prepare the memorial reception for the ashes. With the Memorial Committee, the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee, the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee and large numbers of labor and fraternal organizations thruout the city fully cooperated.

Socialists Sabotage.

The only exception to this was the socialist party which did what it could to sabotage the meeting, being determined—like certain members of the Boston Defense Committee—that this should not be a mass memorial for Sacco and Vanzetti.

However, plans were completed for the workers to gather by thousands; and in spite of the Boston Committee's betrayal, the workers honored the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti in a demonstration that made observers confident that the two martyred workers will never die. Flowers—red roses, asters, carnations—sent by labor and fraternal organizations thruout the city began arriving long before 5 o'clock and were placed around the platform and banked on the sides.

Stands Draped.

Red and black draped the stand and surrounded two large pictures of Sacco and Vanzetti which hung in full view of the crowd. In the center back of these portraits the memorial urn was set when it arrived and its surmounting clenched fist rose high above the heads of the workers as a symbol of the threat which the organized workers make against the forces which killed their comrades.

Mrs. Rose Sacco Arrives.

In the delegation from Boston came Mrs. Rose Sacco, Aldino Felicani of the Defense Committee, Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor Mrs. Jessica Henderson of the Citizens National Committee, Powers Hapgood, and W. H. Van Valkenburgh of the International Sacco-Vanzetti Committee who endeavored to force a last-minute despatch of the ashes as had been promised. This delegation had to content itself with bringing the two death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti which are now on view at Stuyvesant Casino beside the memorial urn which was designed by Adolf Wolff to cover the ashes.

Police on Hand.

Promptly at three o'clock the first police contingent arrived at Union Square, looking for trouble, together with the first band of newspaper photographers. A small squad of mounted police was on hand too, keeping the square free for the four or five hundred which arrived at four o'clock. They were lined up for roll call, and were soon reinforced by more mounted police, armored cars and motorcycle squads with dozens of gold badges and stars and white caps, and automatics prominently displayed on hips.

One entire squad was despatched to the inside of the park building for emergency call. The rest were lined up solidly around the square with the armored cars in their usual spot at 17th St. and the mounted cops mobilized on Broadway.

Sacco-Vanzetti Float Refused at Parade

A float depicting the Sacco-Vanzetti case was refused admittance to the annual Asbury Park baby parade by Arthur F. Cottrel, director of the carnival. He said that he did not believe it was a fitting subject.

HOLE WORLD IS IABLE TO JAIL Y FASCIST CODE

Mussolini Aims Laws at Italian Labor Abroad

ROME, Aug. 29.—Mussolini's fury against the political refugees who have taken refuge from his fascist terrorism in foreign lands has been revealed anew in the new proposed "Mussolini code" of laws which will subject all citizens of Italy, all Italian citizens who have become naturalized in foreign countries, as well as all foreigners, to sentences ranging from a year in a fascist jail to life imprisonment or deah, for crimes committed against the present Italian dictator and his white fascist castor-oil terrorists.

Anybody On Earth Is Liable.

The crimes for which anybody on earth is liable to the maximum punishment from the fascist courts include: first, crimes against the personality of the state; second, counterfeiting the seal of the state; third, the falsification of Italian currency; fourth, crimes committed with explosives; fifth, crimes against Italians, etc.

According to the provisions of article seven of the Mussolini code, any political crime committed abroad, or any Italian or foreigner who commits a crime against the Italian state abroad is subject to the same penalties that would be inflicted upon an Italian/living in Italy. "Any common crime" the code specifies, "actuated in whole or in part by political or social motives is considered a political crime." Penalties for such a crime range from confiscation of all property to life imprisonment and death.'

Foreigners Subject to Law.

Especially interesting is the section of the proposed law which states that Italians who have become the naturalized citizens of foreign powers are still subject to Italian law while foreigners who are charged with the commission of a crime on foreign soil and have been acquitted by a foreign court amy be re-tried by the Italian courts.

All the terrorist measures which were enacted in the fury which followed the attempt against Mussolini's life last year have been incorporated in the present code.

Dutch Police Prohibit Meetings as New Terror Grips the Netherlands

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 29.—As part of the reign of terror which the police are enforcing thruout the Netherlands, all meetings of more than three persons have been officially prohibited here. The government is using the last week's Sacco and Vanzetti protest meetings a as pretext for strengthening the police forces and for applying terrorist methods in suppressing the workers' gatherings and protests. Similar measures are reported to have been taken at Amsterdam, the Hague and other Dutch cities.

Anglo-Russian Breach Results in Increasing Commerce with Mexico

(Official Mexican Press Service)

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 29.—Trade relations between Mexico and Russia are beginning to show marked increase as the result of efforts of the Russian legation in Mexico under Madame Kollantay in behalf of greater economic relations between the two countries.

The Mexican Government by way of stimulating and facilitating the transactions announced the reopening of the Mexican Consulate in Leningrad, closed since 1914 shortly after the outbreak of the World War. The Mexican consul has already left Mexico for Russia. The break in Anglo-Russian trade relations which rupture also affects Canada is already resulting in bigger Russian orders for Mexico.

Soviet Union Youth Supports Policy of Central Committee

MOSCOW, Aug. 29.—Pravda publishes an appeal of the Central Committee of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics Lenin Communist Youth League to all organizations and members of the organization.

The appeal fully agrees with the resolutions of the united plenum of the Central Committee and Control Commission of the Communist Party.

All Communist youth are asked to support these resolutions, thoroughly study them and energetically realize them.

World Press Confab Fizzles; Sought to Get News Monopoly

GENEVA, Aug. 29. — The International Press Conference came to end today with few of the proposals suggested put thru.

Called originally by the large news gathering associations of the world in order to get a monopoly of government news, the principal suggestions failed of adoption due to the opposition of smaller and independent news agencies.

Seek Monopoly.

The Associated Press in the United States, Reuters' in England and the other agencies are already semi-official in their nature, but the present conference endeavored to bring about a practical monopoly of the government news.

An attempt to subordinate government news-gathering to the League of Nations failed when a resolution authorizing the League to issue identity cards to international journalists was lost through the lack of being seconded.

WHILE THE DRINKING'S GOOD

Vin rouge, cognac,—everything in sight was put away in quick order by these thirsty delegates to the Amreican Legion Convention which is scheduled to be held in Paris late in September.

The convention, however, may not come off. Bitter resentment against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has led to repeated warnings that the enraged workers of Paris would not permit the labor-hating crew to proceed with their festive plans.

A retired lumberman living in Paris has just been ordered expelled from the country for promoting the sale of legion souvenir consisting of an ash tray showing the American soldier hastening to embrace the figure of a nude woman under which was inscribed, "Allez Up, American Legion, 1927."

American Legionnaire in Woman's Arms Brings Expulsion From France

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Truth has no place in art, the French government has ruled, and as a result of the decision, Thomas Ring, wealthy Michigan lumber boss who spends his lumberjacks' sweat, coined into French francs, in the artistic and other dives of Paris, has to leave the country within forty-eight hours.

The action of the French government is the result of Ring's part in the manufacture and sale of a small characteristic ash-tray having as its design a returned American legionaire about to embrace a naked woman while underneath is the motto: "Allez up, American Legion, 1927."

The ash-tray is the master-piece of a starving American artist from the Latin Quarter who had induced the gold-lined westerner to invest in the timely manufacture of the tell-tale trays. Ring saw nothing inappropriate in the design but the Legion objected to the exposé. The French authorities who have an eye on the money which the legionaires are bringing to Paris supported the legion. So Ring is to leave France while the Legion allez up.

Plot to Rob Warsaw Bank.

General Elections in Ireland Will Be Held September 15

DUBLIN, Aug. 29.—Immediately following the government victory in two Dublin bye elections president of the executive council, Cosgrave dissolved the government and set the date for the general elections at September 15.

Various predictions are made as to the probable results of the coming elections but since most of the prophesies appearing in the capitalist press are inspired by the government too much heed hould not be paid them.

It should not be forgotten that prior to the previous election most of the prophets foretold a substantial majority for the Cosgrave party, yet it met with severe reverses and after the entrance of the De Valeraites into the Dail, stayed in office by virtue of one renegade vote.

Both the Republican and Labor Parties are sorely pressed for fund, but their organizations are in fairly good condition. The leader of the Irish Labor Party, Tom Johnson, discredited his organization among the workers by his extremely mild criticism of the government in his speech on the vote of no confidence.

De Valera expects to nominate 85 candidates and the Labor Party about 30.

Feisal First May Be Last as British Fail To Find Oil in Irak

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The British Government is tired of maintaining the kingdom of Irak. The king, Feisal, is returning shortly to London to have the news conveyed to him. There will not be a vast amount of enthusiasm on his part, but he will be a good servant of British imperialism, see that the withdrawal of subsidies does not seriously embarrass himself. He know, you may be sure, how many beans make five.

The great shortcoming of Irak is, of course, the fact that the almighty left innumerable traces of oil but with nothing to back it up. Great Britain knowing the vital character of oil as well as it does the ten commandments, took a vast interest in this god forsaken sandy winterland. The Iraguians unlike the Irish were urged into becoming a nation, they were given a king, endowed with an army, saddled with a multitude of the British official class—and John Bull paid the bill, a mere $750,000,000.

Drilling for oil began, a pipe line from god knows where to the Mediterranean was planned—and then it was discovered that the millions of tons of oil anticipated were not on tap. Nature had decreed that oil objected to showing itself in Irak, although across the Persian border, some tens of miles away, it "came in" to beat the band.

So Feisal the first and probably the last is to hear now that his future and that of his Asiatic Sahara is now no great concern of the British Government.

Red Aid Calls World Labor to Carry On The Sacco and Vanzetti Die

MOSCOW, Aug. 29.—The International Revolutionary Aid Society issued an appeal today to the "workers and peasants of the world" to continue their attacks against the capitalist system of the world, notwithstanding the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"August 23rd must be remembered as a bloody day," the appeal declared. "The stamp of shame must be burned into the American murderers so they will never forget their dastardly crime of killing innocent men. The workers must fight to prevent a repetition of the American white terror, and must demand the release of political prisoners."

Teuton Monarchists and Republicans in Fight Over Flags

BERLIN, Aug. 29.—The struggle between monarchists and republicans in Germany, is at the moment mirrored thru the battle over the rival flags of the kaiserites and the supporters of the bourgeois republic.

Since the monarchists and the opposition parties are practically evenly balanced in the Dail the present emblems established by decree of the late President Ebert may be completely set aside.

Likes Streets, Parks, Beer.

The flag controversy did not worry Mayor Walker of New York, who continued to express admiration for Berlin's streets, parks and beer. The American executive's latest accomplishment is the whistling of a new song dedicated to him by a German composer. This should be good for a few thousand teutonic votes in the American metropolis.

The armies of occupation in the Rhineland it is reported will be reduced to 60,000. England urged France to agree to 50,000.

Prince Carol, Plotting In Paris, Gets Money To Pay Off Creditors

BZUCHAREST, Aug. 29. — Prince Carol of Roumania, self-exiled hereditary heir to the Roumanian throne, now living in a suburb of Paris, is to receive some "money from home" soon.

The Roumanian government has sent General Condescu to Paris to pay all of the Prince Carol's debts, and to assure the prince of a "just" division of the late King Ferdinand's estates, providing Carol will give his promise to stay out of Roumania's political affairs.

The prince's friends here are carrying on considerable pro-Carol propanganda, secretly passing around Carol's statement, issued shortly after King Ferdinand's death, in which the prince intimated he held himself in readiness to respond to any call from the Roumanian people for him to ascend the throne.

Asks Ban on Fire-arms.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Attorney General Ottinger of New York, in an address today before the National Association of Attorneys General, called upon President Coolidge to convene a conference of all state governors to formulate a nation-wide uniform and effective system of controlling the sale of fire-arms and explosives.

French Debt Agreement Impossible Now Due to Elections Approaching

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Any change of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement receiving the approval of the French parliament seems remote in view of the approaching general election.

M. Marin, who is one of Premier Poincare's closest advisers and leader of the national group in the chamber of deputies, said that it was quite likely the government would make another temporary debt arrangement covering the year 1928 and similar in character to the one which payment was being made this year.

The term of this year's agreement provide for payment of $30,000,000 which is the same amount France would have paid had she ratified the Mellon-Berenger agreement.

The minister of pensions said that in the present state of public opinion it would be impossible to obtain parliamentary approval to any debt agreement tying up the taxpayers for a period of 62 years.

Japanese Imperialists Attack Imperialism of U.S. and Great Britain

TOKIO, Aug. 29.—The Japanese press is viewing with much bitterness the convocation on August 31st at Geneva of the League of Nations' Conference on World Population and food supply. This is Japan's most vital problem, the newspapers declare, and the League of Nations is powerless to aid her.

The Yamato, a Tokio newspaper, states Japan's case against Great Britain and the United States: "Great Britain controls overseas possessions 140 times as large as her homeland, while the United States has boundless wealth with scant population. But parts of the British Empire and United States have closed their doors against other races so that they may monopolize the wealth of the world.

"They try to make themselves appear the champions and defenders of humanity and justice, but are so hard-minded that they are willing to let other nations die of hunger. The League of Nations has no power to correct this evil. Japan must assert her own rights to national existence."

25 Fishing Smacks Reported Destroyed On Bonavista Coast

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, Aug. 29.—Twenty-five fishing vessels were reported destroyed as the result of a storm which suddenly swept down at Bonavista.

The body of a sailor lashed to the rigging was the only trace of the fate of the crew of the schooner Laughlan, found bottom up in Plactntia Bay.

The schooner Noal foundered off St. Johns, one man being washed overboard and five others of the crew being driven twenty miles to sea in a dory. The quintet reached the coast completely exhausted today.

Another tragedy was indicated when the wreckage of the schooner Bowdon was picked up in the channel.

Noble Marquis Loses Rich Wife; Destitute

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Marquis of Hertford, who, as the Earl of Yarmouth, was married to Miss Alice Cornelia Thaw, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1903, is in financial difficulties.

Announcement was made recently that a receivership order has been entered against the Marquis upon petition of certain creditors.

LONDON WORKERS DENOUNCE SACCO, VANZETTI MURDER

A. J. Cook Hits Tory War on U. S. S. R.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—More than 15,000 workers protested against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti at a meeting held at Trafalgar Square last night.

Declaring that "the Statue of Liberty has become the monument of murder," A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation denounced American capitalism for perpetrating the murder.

Referring to the tory campaign against preparations for a war against the U. S. R. R. and cited the army manouvers at Salisbury Plain as an example of the preparations. A labor army made up of former service men was being formed which would fight any attempt on the part of the British die-hards to provoke a war with the Soviet Union, Cook said.

Revival of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

Insistent denials in the capitalist press of a new Anglo-Japanese Alliance only serve to strengthen the belief that such an alliance actually exists. The Japanese foreign office has loudly and with an excess of protestations denied that such a perfidious conspiracy against the United States could be thought of by Tokyo.

When it is recalled that the collapse of the pitiful farce at Geneva, called by Coolidge to discuss, in behalf of Wall Street, the question of naval armaments, forced upon Japan the realization that America was definitely committed to a navy that would tremendously strengthen her military power in the Pacific, it is not surprising that a secret revival of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance would be brought about. In fact it would be political idiocy to expect any other immediate outcome. For two very obvious reasons the revival of the old alliance for the purpose of serving new aims was a historical necessity.

First, in its imperialist conspiracy against the workers' and peasants' government in the Soviet Union, Britain needs the assistance of Japan as any ally. Secondly, Japanese statesmen know full well that in the struggle against the Chinese revolution, Britain, although taking the lead in aggressiveness, would be forced to rely upon Japanese co-operation, while the United States aims to exploit China to the exclusion of every other nation. With ritain dominant in China, Japan would at least share in that xploitation; with the United States dominant the Japanese naonalists and imperialists know that they would be reduced to ssals of Wall Street.

Of course this co-operation between Britain and Japan also s its limitations, inasmuch as each of the two nations hope ntually to dominate Asiatic policy. Japan's rising imperialism es to gain today thru joint action with Britain, but hopes also t tomorrow it will be strong enough to oust Britain. On the er hand Britain longs for the day when she can again recover r old place of world supremacy and reduce Japan to a state of assalage, while Yankee imperialism maneuvers to oust them oth.

But, in the midst of the rivalries of the imperialist powers in he Far East, there is always present the ominous threat of coial revolutions and to the north of China lies the vast proletan country of the Soviet Union, a great power coveting no terry, the enemy of imperialism and colonial despotism, and the riend of the oppressed of all the earth. So long as that power exists the imperialists dare not ignore its portent.

All of the three imperialist marauders in the Far East perceive that their immediate enemy is the Soviet Union which sets its face like flint against the imperialist plundering of peoples and so they co-operate in an effort to overcome their class enemy. In their fight against the Soviet Union they and their sycophants, the newspaper writers, the professional patriots, the pacifists, the social democrats of the Kautsky stripe and others, circulate the monstrous slander that the greatest menace to peace is precisely revolutionary Russia.

But behind the fight against the Soviet Union can be clearly perceived the gigantic antagonisms between the imperialist powers as they prepare for every more titanic struggles between themselves. One of the principal reasons they all wage war, openly or covertly, against the Soviet Union is because they are afraid to plunge the world into another imperialist war in an attempt at a new redivision of the world between them with the Soviet Union still intact and the working class in the home countries able to offer even a slight resistance. In that respect alone, through the fear it inspires among the powers that are preparing to fly at each other's throats, the Soviet Union has been the greatest force for peace in the world.

To prevent the materialization of the frightful implications arising from a new secret Anglo-Japanese Alliance it is necessary to combat with all energy the imperialist fight against the Soviet Union and the Chinese revolution and at the same time fight like tigers against the contemptible agents of the imperialists in the ranks of the labor movement in America, England and other imperialist countries who are trying to aid the capitalists prepare the next world blood bath by devitalizing the labor movement of its militant elements so it can be delivered bound and gagged into the hands of the war-mongers.

Connecticut Campaign Capital in China.

One of the Coolidge administration stalwarts in the senate, Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, is receiving considerable publicity on a Chinese pipe-dream. The eminent lackey of the insurance swindlers and defender of American imperialist depredations modestly claims credit for having persuaded the Manchurian bandit, Chang Tso-lin, to spare the life of Borodina, the wife of M. Borodin, sometime adviser to the nationalist government. The gentleman from Connecticut, according to his own version of the story—which, by the way, is not confirmed by Chang—is that he told the war lord he would be considered a "beast" and a "barbarian" if he executed the woman prisoner.

This nursery tale of the gallant yankee persuading a Chinaman to save the life of a lady might be political capital among the yokels of Connecticut who vote the republican ticket, and is not particularly harmful anywhere, but we respectfully suggest that word from representatives of the Soviet government would bear much more weight with the Manchurian bandit lackey of imperialism than a pudgy American shyster lecturing on etiquette.

What we are interested in is whether Bingham and the rest of the yankee meddlers who have been in China are going to voice approval of the American policy of bombarding defenseless Chinese or to demand that the armed forces be withdrawn so that the Chinese masses can settle with the Chang Tso-lins and other bandit chiefs in the pay of imperialism. If Senator Bingham is really desirous of obtaining a reputation for saving the lives of women he might do something of a practical nature by getting the murderous marines, sailors, soldiers and other gun-men of Wall Street out of China so they can no longer indulge in wholesale murder as they did in the shelling of Nanking.

PAN-AFRICAN CONGRESS FAVORS UNIONIZATION OF NEGRO WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

By ESTHER LOWELL.

Organization of colored workers in unions, in cooperatives and for political action were hotly discussed topics at the 4th Pan-African Congress held in New York. Delegates numbering 155 attended from population groups of Negro descent scattered around the world.

"We urge the white workers of the world to realize that no program of labor uplift can be successfully carried through in Europe or America so long as colored labor is exploited and enslaved and deprived of all political power," the congress declared in its final summation.

Caribbean Policy Criticized.

United States policy toward Negroes at home and towards Caribbean Islands was severely criticized. M. Dantes Bellegarde, Haiti's delegate to the League of Nations until the U. S. occupation objected, won from the congress a "demand that actual self-government be restored" to the black republic. Withdrawal of all U. S. military, naval and other officers except regularly accredited diplomatic or consular representatives was demanded likewise.

West Indians were urged "to begin an earnest movement for the federation of these islands; the reduction of their present outrageous expenses of government; the broadening of educational facilities on modern lines and labor legislation to protect the workers against industrial exploitation." Color prejudice among themselves should be eradicated as the first step.

Voice In Government.

Negroes everywhere need, the congress stated, a voice in their own government; native rights to the land and its natural resources; modern education for all children (vocational or otherwise was much discussed); development of Africa for the Africans and not merely for profit of Europeans; re-organization of commerce and industry to make the main object of capital and labor the welfare of the many rather than enriching of few; treatment of civilized men as civilized despite differences of birth, race or color.

Pan-Africa was explained by presiding officer Dr. W. E. B. DuBois as the total of peoples of African Negro descent. His estimates of Negro populations under various flags was graphically depicted by a procession of young women bearing flags and placards carrying the figures (in millions): Great Britain, 50; France, 25; U. S., 11; Abyssinia, 10; Brazil, 9; Belgium, 8.5; Portugal, 8; Egypt, 4; Liberia, 2.5; Haiti, 2; Dominican Republic, 8; Cuba, 8; Italy, 6; and Dutch colonies, 1. The total is 132.3 millions.

Firestone Rubber Concession.

Liberian and American Negroes were warned to be on the alert lest the Firestone rubber concession "encroach upon the political independence of Liberia."

Greetings and a message of solidarity from the executive of the League Against Imperialism meeting in Cologne was read to the congress by William Pickens of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Pickens reported on the Brussels conference of the League in February—the first such meeting of delegates from oppressed peoples. Pickens declared "that a likeness in economic condition is a far sounder basis for cooperation among men than is a similarity of skin-color or nose shape."

Moore Speaks.

Richard Moore, organizer for the American Negro Labor Congress, pointed out that most American Negroes are workers and urged their organization in trade unions. He criticized the congress for not delving deeply enough into colored workers' problems. He proposed alliance with other groups working against imperialism.

"The Negro began to learn class consciousness as well as race consciousness when he came in contact with industry and organized labor in the years of the war and in the migrations to the north," declared Robert Bagnall of the N. A. A. C. P.

The congress expressed appreciation "to the Soviet government of Russia for its liberal attitude toward the colored races and for the help which it has extended to them from time to time." A committee was chosen to work toward establishing a permanent and continuously functioning organization.

Letters From Our Readers

How the Socialist "Brain" Works.

Dear Comrade:

Not desiring to be sent to the electric chair, the writer did not partake in the following discussion, although he must admit that it was with much difficulty that he kept in gun intact.

. . . "What did you say," the socialist interrupted with marked anger. "The left-wingers? All Communists are idiots. They're a bunch of idots."

"Why," the interruptee asked politely. "Why?"

"Because they're a bunch of idiots. We have all these immigration laws on account of them. No Jew can come into the United States. And wait, that's nothing. On account of them, the Communists I mean, we are going to have laws to revoke the citizenship of all those who are radicals. Any foreigner, no matter how long he has been here, whether or not he is a citizen, will be deported as soon as it is found that he is connected with a radical movement. And don't you think the United States will be right? Who wants radical foreigners here anyhow? They come to make money and they actually despise the country. Let them go out. Let them go back to Russia, their paradise."

'So far, your boss seems pleased about Russia. The first few cables were very favorable."

"That's nothing. Russia changed, that's why the first impressions are so favorable. But wait. And say, even if I'd go to Poland, which is really a reactionary country, I would like it because it is now different than it was before the war.

"I'm telling you the Communists are a bunch of idiots. Look how they behaved towards the Sacco-Vanzetti case. A bunch of idiots I'm telling you. Instead of protesting in a friendly, yet dignified American manner, like Green, for instance, they acted like lunatics. They went to Union Square, a bunch of Jews and Italians, to protest. What right have they got to protest? Who are they? They ought to be tickled they're here. Let them get out. And did you read what happened after the demonstration? They caused a riot. They had their heads split. Good for them. Lucky we had enough police there. But by the way, do you know why there was such a big police force? Not because they expected trouble, but to protect the property around the Square."

"And you, you who distributed red literature during the Czar, you hold such views,?" expressed the chief listener in surprise.

"That's nothing. In account of the Communists Sacco and Vanzetti will be executed. Remember! We socialists would have saved them. Years ago we were strong. We pulled a big vote. In Washington we had London and Berger. Berger was appointed on a committee in charge of the affairs dealing with the Philippines. He fought for their independence and they got it."

"What the Phil . . ."

"Yes, yes. The Philippines have independence now. Yes, we made ourselves heard. Washington carefully listened. But now that the Communists came in from Russia, we're lost. Let them get out the bunch of idiots.

"Here, what happened to the unions

"That was a vulnerable spot where you pounded the capitalist class in your editorial: 'Mr. Broun's difficulties with the World,' in today's issue. A spot where much pounding will do a lot of good in my opinion. I delight in the exposure of the prostitute capitalist press, especially such cowardly pretending sheets as the New York World."

Utah Senator Flays U.S. Dictatorship in Haiti; Calls for Evacuation

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 29.—Declaring that "if the voice of Haiti could be heard it would be 99% in favor United States withdrawal," Senator William H. King of Utah characterized American occupation of the island republic as "force," "suppression" and as an aid "in breaking down the confidence that the South American and the Central American nations have in the United States."

"By secret treaties and by loans, with their expected future obligations," King said, "the United States has sealed Haiti's subjugation for the next forty years." The senator called upon the United States government to restore to the Haitians the independence taken from them by the American banks supported by the United States marines and American customs officials.

Haiti lost its independnece as a result of occupation by the United States forces during the Wilson administration, in 1915. The occupation came after a series of futile diplomatic attempts to force the Haitians to accept the loans of a group of New York banks whose capital was to be secured by customs receipts. The Haitians failing to fall into this trap, the marines were introduced and the loans forcibly effected while Europe's attention was distracted by the war.

West Virginia College Fires Two Professors; Failed to Boost State

CHARLESTON, W. Va., (FP) Aug. 29.—Among the reasons given for the summary discharge of two teachers at Marshall College is their failure to become "enthusiastic over West Virginia and the United States government." One of the teachers was too close to the students in charge of the school paper and the other protested against the barring of the American Mercury from the college library. They were heads of the departments of philosophy and economics.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 29.—Vera Reynolds, film actress whose first important screen role was that of a suicide in "Feet of Clay," today was recovering from what police declare was an attempt to end her own life.

Crouch Tells of China Revolution to Packed Middle Western Halls

"The resignation of Chiang Kai-shek marks a new stage in the rapidly changing Chinese revolution involving probably a rapprochement between the Hankow and Nanking governments" in the opinion of Paul Crouch, rebel ex-soldier whose addresses under the slogan of Hands Off China have stirred audiences wherever he has spoken.

Village Meetings Packed.

Crouch, who knows American imperialism from the point of view of a soldier detailed to an American colony in the Far East, is speaking under the auspices of the All-American Anti-Imeprialist League (United States Section). He is now in Minnesota from whence he will proceed to Chicago and points east. The extraordinarily large attendance even in small towns, like Great Falls and Plentywood, Montana, indicate that the mass of the American people sympathize with the Chinese revolution and want the withdrawal of United States military and naval forces from Chinese soil.

Referring to the much-discussed resignation of General Chiang Kai-shek, Crouch points out that a rapproachment between Hankow and Nanking at this time can mean only that the Chinese revolution is becoming more and more a movement of the workers and peasants of China.

"The Hankow government," he explains, "has moved rapidly to the right of late and has carried on a persistent campaign against the trade unions. This is done under the pretext of attacking the Communists.

"I should not be surprised to see Chiang Kai-shek creep back into the picture as a supporter of the Hankow government after a few months.

"Whatever form the revolution for the unification of China and against imperialism may take, however, one thing is certain, that the great mass of the American people will demand that the Chinese be permitted to determine the course of their own movement as they may find necessary. Foreign intervention must cease. All American war ships and marines must be withdrawn. It is not the interest of the common people of America, but the interest of Wall Street that American imperialist intervention in China continues."

Crouch began his tour immediately upon being released from prison last June. His tour was interrupted, however, when he found himself perilously near a break-down as a result of illness contracted in prison. However, as soon as he was able to go ahead, he continued on the road.

He says that he is "merely atoning to the oppressed peoples of the Far East" for his years of service in a imperialist army of occupation.

English Workers Starve As Duchesses Roll Past; Army of Workless Cross

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Board of Works has decided to tear up Piccadilly to renew the multifarious pipes beneath to relay the street completely. Traffic is to be diverted, the familiar buses are to use the Mall.

The News Spreads.

The word has percolated thruout Great Britain. The hopes of the gigantic army of the workless rose as they heard of the thousands of men wanted to ply the hammer and drill on the concrete of far famed Piccadilly. They moved in on London this workless, hopeful army; young men, middle aged men, elderly men in shabby clothes, men who had lived in trenches, fought in No Man's Land, cheered to the echo and loaded with decorations when the war was over.

At six o'clock in the morning the famous street was filled with the army. They had spent the night in the parks, braving the damp and cold of an English summer night, while the aristocracy slept. But they rose with hope. Just seven men were taken on to augment the force that opened the work, the regulars. The work goes on, the hammers ring, the compressed air drill grouches and grunts, the jobless stand by, hungry and heartsick, unwashed, penniless, clothes crushed with many days sleeping in woods and outhouses; shoes dusty with the tale of long miles on country roads.

Army of Jobless Recedes.

Today the army is dwindling. The silk hat can find room to pass, the duchess has space for her daily exercise; many of the army slept on the embankment last night under the shadow of the Cecil and the Savoy.

The old men are pathetic sights as they lean wearily against the barricades. "I haven't worked for a year" says Herbert Brown, "I have been a builders' laborer all my life. Yes I am old, sixty-three. They won't give me a chance. My son was shell shocked in the war, lives with me. We live in a garret, the wife gets a little from the local guardians."

War "Herds" Starve.

The man with the lined face wears a ribbon on his breast: "That's the D. C. M. fought at Gallipoli and France. Three years I have covered this country from end to end. No work. I have a small pension and can get a doss for six pence, some of the others are worse off than I."

A Hand Feeds the Poor.

The army dwindles slowly, the rich go about as usual. A sister of the pavement stops and regards a group of travel stained men, speaking the tongue of Wales. She smiles across a weary face and puts her hand into a torn handbag. She holds out a silver coin to one, says a word in welsh and moves on.

Gives an impressive performance as the hero in "Blood Money," George Middleton's new melodrama at the Hudson Theatre.

Revival of 'The Mikado' On Way—Civic Repertory Planning Junior Group.

Willard Robertson's play "Black Velvet," which is due here shortly will have the following players: Arthur Byron, Leona Hogarth, Lota Sanders, Kate Byron, Nelan Jaap, Frank Sylvester, and Leonard Doyle.

The Civic Repertory Theatre has completed plans for the organization of a Junior Group which will give to the younger actor some freedom from the routine work of the every day theatre, and to the novice an ideal and horizon in his craft. The group, similar in some respects to a theatrical workshop, will be under the supervision of Anne Moore.

Withrop Anne's revival of "The Mikado," due at the Royale Theatre Sept., 19, will have the following cast of Players: The Mikado, John Barclay; Ko-Ko, Fred Wright; Nanki-Poo, William Williams; Pooh-Bah, William Gordon; Pish-Tush, J. Humbird Duffey; Yum-Yum, Lois Bennet; Katisha, Vera Ross; Pitti-Sing, Sybil Sterling; Peep-Boo, Pettina Hall.

Alfred E. Aarons, is planning to stage a new play by Bruce Reynolds titled "Playing the Game." Mr. Reynolds the author of a novel "A Cocktail Continental." "My Princess" an operetta which Mr. Aarons is now rehearsing will have Hope Hampton as the star, and will be seen here early this season.

Sam H. Grisman, co-producer with Harry H. Oshrin of "Talk About Girls," early this summer, has placed in rehearsal a new play, "The Uninvited Guest," a comedy drama in three acts by Bernard J. McOwen. Peggy Entwistle, seen last in "Tommy," has the leading role. Others in the cast are Helen Strickland, Elmer Grandin, Mabel Colcord, Robert Conness, John Carmody and Walter Davis. Russell Mack is staging the play which is scheduled to open in New York late in September.

On the Screen

"The Garden of Allah," Rex Ingram's latest production for Metro, will open the Embassy Theatre, Friday evening. The new film is an adaptation of Robert Hichens's popular play and novel. The cast is headed by Ivan Petrovich a Serbian actor and with Alice Terry in the feminine lead. The supporting cast includes: Claude Fielding, Marcel Vibert, Humberston Wright, Michael Powell, Ben Sadour, Mme. Paquerette and Armand Dutertre.

Charlotte Greenwood, stage comedienne and eccentric dancer, is now in Los Angeles ready to begin her screen career as Florence in "Baby Mine," a George K. Arthur—Karl Dane starring picture, which Lew Lipton is filming for Metro.

Prints on the second Sovkino special "Ivan The Terrible" have just arrived in this country according to an announcement by the Amkino Corporation. This picture has had a tremendous success abroad equalling the success of "Potemkin" and "Mother." In Paris "Ivan The Terrible" played five capacity weeks at the huge Theatre des Champs Elysees. "Le Chine de France," leading French film journal, writes: "This is a savage film, so great, so beautiful, in its ferocity that it dominates you, grips your mind irresistibly. There is in 'Ivan The Terrible' estonishing novelty, but above all, a realism so sharp, so painful, that it constitutes a form of art audacious and gripping."

another worthy deed and the artist wept over his good fortune.

BUT rare indeed is the great joy that is not followed by a great sorrow and such was the case with the bliss of the American philanthropist and his beneficiary. It came to pass that a puritanical Frenchman who purchased one of the trays had not yet finished his second bottle of champagne when he took a look at the sculptor's product. And the sight that met his eye shocked and amazed him. The design on the tray showed the returning American doughboy hastening to embrace the figure of a nude woman, under which was inscribed: "Allez Up, American Legion, 1927."

THIS was too much. What was France coming to and the American Legion coming for? Legion advance agents were indignant. French business men were equally so. Action was demanded and gotten. And who should be made the scapegoat? None other than Thomas Ring, poor "Big Hearted Tom" as he was known in the Latin Quarter. Tho he spent his money like a Russian nobleman, when Russian noblemen had money, the American Legionnaires would spend more and the French bourgeoisie are nothing if not businesslike. So Thomas Ring was given forty eight hours to leave the country. Sorry, Mr. Ring but if you were a real patriot instead of just a wealthy money maker you would never have circulated or caused to be circulated such a base slander on the moral character of the American Legion.

REPUBLICANS ASK J. PANKEN TO RUN ON THEIR TICKET

Socialist Judge Gets Fusion Offer

Jacob Panken, socialist municipal court judge has been offered the co-operation of the republican party in the coming election.

The republican party organization in the sixth assembly district which includes the Second Municipal Court district where Panken is running for reelection withdrew one of its candidates, Samuel W. Greenwald so Panken could be placed on the ballot as a fusion nominee.

To Carry District.

The republican party has been of the opinion that they would have a change of carrying the district if Panken was one of their standard bearers. The proposal was that in addition to Panken the other candidate would be F. P. Cantinella, a member of the republican organization. It was felt that if the republican and socialist parties pooled their strength they would be able to elect Panken, socialist and Cantinella, republican.

While the socialist party is exceptionally anxious to reelect Panken to the judgeship they realize that accepting the help of the republican party might be successful insofar as electing Panken is concerned, but on the other hand it would be a clear example of the anti-working class character of that organization. On that basis Pankan has declined the help of the republican party.

Panken has been indorsed for reelection by the Municipal Court Committee of the Bar Association an anti-working class organization.

Citizens' Training Camps Graduate New Labor-Baiting Corps

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Division staff officers of the New York National Guard revealed here that plans are being made to have 700 officers and men of the New York State naval militia participate in rifle and revolver matches in state military camp here for three days beginning Tuesday, September 6. The militiamen will go to camp as soon as the national guardsmen evacuate the training-ground here.

The plans for the matches are being worked out by assistants to Rear-Admiral Louis M. Josephthal, commander of the naval militia.

The members of the first battalion and the second battalion, from New York City and various Long Island points will participate. Special trains over the New York Central railroad will carry the militiamen daily from Grand Central terminal to Peekskill and back to Manhattan.

Training is over this week for the citizen artillerymen of the second area, also. The Reserve Corps ended their season Saturday when nearly 125 reserve officers departed after having received active duty training. During the closing addresses, Colonel Bowen, in command at the Madison barracks, stressed the importance of the reserve corps as the mainstay of national defense.

The Citizens' Military Training Camps and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps are parts of the campaign which has for its object the gradual militarization of the United States in the interests of imperialism. It is planned to build up a huge reserve army not only against Latin America but also against American labor.

YONKERS, Aug. 29.—Charges that perjury is employed as often in defending manufacturing claims, particularly in personal injury cases, were made by Samuel Untermeyer in a statement issued from his home "Greystone," here, in which he outlined his views on the contingent fee system now being widely discussed in legal circles.

Abolition of the contingent fee system to reduce perjury in the courts has been recommended by numerous legal authorities, including United States District Attorney Tuttle, of New York, who scored the system at length in a recent address in Atlantic City.

Mr. Untermeyer suggested several remedies not only for the prevalence of perjury, but also for the present condition of contempt for all law.

Westinghouse Begs Its Workers' Charity for Men Blinded in Employ

A worker correspondent has just sent the DAILY WORKER the following notice which has been posted on the bulletin boards of the Westinghouse Electric Co. in New York City. It is a remarkable sample of the cynical hypocrisy with which a corporation of this size dares treat its workers.

NOTICE

August 19, 1927

Three poor unfortunate long service workmen formerly employed at East Pittsburgh Works having gone blind from disease while in service with families to support are making their sole living through the personal weaving and sale of these rugs.

Can we not all realize that the purchase of one of these will be a real charitable act?

Proletarian Press Bazaar to Be Held In New York Soon

Trade Unions, fraternal organizations, workers' clubs, and workmen circle branches, will take up the question of the First National Press Bazaar being held in Madison Square Garden, New York City on October 6, 7, 8, 9, under the joint auspices of The DAILY WORKER and the "Freiheit."

Reports coming in show that committees are working in practically every city and village in the country so that they will have a booth in the largest hall in the world at the largest Bazaar yet held in working class history. There are only five more weeks in which to put this over so those organizations who have not yet started preparations for their booths are urged to do so right now.

The Red Honor Roll for this affair is going to be the most elaborate yet. Names from the Far West will be there alongside names from New York and every other place. Every militant worker is urged to have his or her name on this magnificent all-embracing Honor Roll which will have a privileged place in the archives of the International Working Class. If anyone cannot find an Honor Roll on which to place their name they are urged to send their dollar to the DAILY WORKER and it will be attended to.

Something really exceptional—one might well say historical is being arranged as our program. Every organization in the United States that believes the two militant working class newspapers are worthy of support should send their greetings for publication in the program. A full page costs $70.00, half page $40.00, quarter page $20.00 and one eighth page $10.00. Raise the question of an ad at the next meeting of your organization. In order to have time for printing ads must be sent in at once.

Organizations are urged to immediately form Bazaar Committees which should have as their objective the putting of their immediate circle on the map as working class fighters. Get in touch with the Bazaar Committees which should have as their objective the putting of their immediate circle on the map as working class fighters. Get in touch with the Bazaar Committee at 30 Union Square if in doubt as to what should be done. The bosses have increased their fighting forces against us. Our answer must be the strengthening of Labor's Press. This can only be done by all of us rallying to the call and making the National Bazaar an epoch making event in our work.

Hundreds of Workers to Join in Minneapolis Memorial Mass Meeting

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 29. — Hundreds of workers are assembling here for the mass meeting memorial for Sacco and Vanzetti which will take place at 7 p. m. this evening at the Bridge Square, 2nd St. and Nicollet. Prominent speakers will address the meeting which will be held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense, if the police do not interfere.

MANY LEGIONNAIRES SAIL FOR HOME AS PROTEST OF FRENCH LABOR GROWS

PARIS, Aug. 29.—A record embarkation for any one ship at Cherburg since the war will take place tomorrow when 750 Americans will board the Leviathan as the result of the protest against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Among those who are leaving are a number of legionnairres, it is believed.

—protest against the American Legion convention scheduled to be held here on September 19th is growing rapidly.

Reports from the United States received here state that a number of the American Legion who were planning to sail for the convention have cancelled passage as the result of the growing protest against the convention on the part of French workers.

RANK AND FILE FUR WORKERS TO MEET WEDNESDAY

Discuss Unemployment at Manhattan Lyceum

Due to the disruptive tactics which have been pursued in the furriers' union during the past few months by the reactionary International and A. F. of L. officials, standards in the industry have fallen to a state unknown for many years, and conditions in the shops are becoming unbearable.

Because of secret agreements made with the bosses by the right wing leaders, there is a critical unemployment problem which is rousing the fur workers to consider some practical means of ending the internal struggle which is rending the union.

Meeting Wednesday.

In order to have a thoro discussion of the whole situation, a group of rank and file members has taken Manhattan Lyceum for Wednesday evening, August 31, right after work, and they will conduct an open forum to which all registered and unregistered are invited. The call issued by the committee is as follows:

Fur Workers, Sisters and Brothers:

When are we going to stop this disastrous war among our brothers? How long are we going to suffer as a result of this fight in our union? What benefit can we expect to get from this fight? And why in the name of common sense is this fight necessary?

What about the great masses of fur workers who want a strong union and a chance to make a living?

3,000 Are Unemployed.

About 3,000 workers are unemployed. Their wives and children are starving. An unheard of condition for the month of August, which is always the height of the season! Everyone who works expects to be sent down any day of the week. Wages are low. We work harder and faster. The bosses hang over our necks and drive us.

Why this condition? Is there no work? There was more production this season than last season. This committee investigated and found more than 300 corporation shops, and hundreds of contractors. They work day and night, Saturday and Sundays. They compete with the manufacturers. They do our work. They undermine our conditions. They drive us from our jobs.

How many open shops are there? How many non-union workers are there working for $15 and $20 a week any number of hours? You can answer this yourself.

Who suffers? We, the registered and unregistered workers! We, who have suffered to build our union!

Why do we suffer? Because the union is weak and cannot help us.

Fight to End Unemployment.

There is a way to stop all this. There is a way to relieve our present conditions.

The workers who are employed, registered and unrgeistered must bear in mind that those who are out of work will cut their wages. We must all do something to put an end to this fight and to our suffering.

All fur workers are invited to attend an open forum at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St., Wednesday, August 31st, right after work.

All fur workers must come—registered and unregistered. No leaders from either side, only rank and filers.

All those who are for peace in the union should come!

RANK AND FILE COMMITTEE OF REGISTERED AND UNREGISTERED FUR WORKERS.

London Labor Crams Park in Thousands As Cook Flays U. S.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—10,000 workers and sympathizers demonstrated in Trafalgar Square yesterday in a final meeting of protest against the murders of Sacco and Vanzetti. While the grim-looking police surrounded the square in hundreds, waiting for an opportunity to interfere, A. J. Cook, secretary of the Miners' Federation and leader of the miners during their long strike, declared that the British working class will never forget and never forgive the electrocution of the two innocent workers.

"The statue of liberty has become the monument of murder," Cook cried as a roar of assent arose from the thousands of workers. Cook called on all the workers to organize if they did not wish to see constant repetitions of the Massachusetts outrage.

During the course of the meeting a man leaped upon the base of the Nelson Monument and unrolled an American flag, with the intention of pouring oil over it and burning it. Members of the Class War Prisoners' Aid persuaded the man to desist.

PEMBERTON, Mass., Aug. 29.—One member of the crew was seriously burned and three others had narrow escapes today in an explosion aboard the Coast Guard Cutter 2337. Three members of the crew leaped to the wharf and escaped injury.

Neither Rain, Police or Sabotage Hurt Meeting

BY MICHAEL GOLD

Nothing could hurt the great mass memorial in Union Square yesterday for Sacco and Vanzetti. A thousand cops on horses and with machine guns were unavailing. The sabotage of the mean-minded Boston committee and the socialists was ineffectual. Lightning, thunder and buckets of rain could do nothing. The New York workers were aflame with proletarian spirit. They held their demonstration.

The ashes of our two martyrs did not arrive, as scheduled. Mary Donovan, an obscure spite female with a great lust for publicity was responsible for this. But Mrs. Sacco, that wonderful, patient heroine came from Boston to the demonstration. She, like her husband, is bigger than the two little parasites who have fastened on the Sacco case in Boston, and have tried to keep it from the world. Mrs. Sacco believes in the revolution. She belives in the working class of the world. And so she was present yesterday.

She came to the stand erected in Union Square. She stood there in black, amid the red carnations and red bunting, against a background of fifty machine-guns, and an army of cops. The faces of thirty thousand workers, pale and exalted, were lifted to her.

The rain poured in torrents. The rest of the city rushed for shelter, or fled to subways and taxicabs. But Mrs. Sacco stood silently in the rain, and the great crowd cheered hre again and again.

It was one of the signs of the spirit this legal murder has evoked in the hearts of the workers of the world. The workers will never forget. They will brave more than rain and police and sabotage before the end of this case is come.

There were cops on the roofs, with machine guns looking down on the Red Square of New York. There were cops on all the side streets, and stolid ranks on horses about the crowd. There were young cops, old cops, cops with cruel rumpsteak faces, cops with shifty eyes and hard-bitten mouths.

Fire engines came screaming through the huge crowd several times. The horses pressed against human flesh. The cops snarled and sneered and prodded. But on four platforms agitators preached the revolutionary lessons of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. And dripping with rain, 30,000 workers stood their ground and listened.

A bit of memorial sculptry by Adolf Wolf was unveiled on the central platform. It was a cubist pyramid design, out of which the square fist of a worker was thrust toward the sky.

Mother Bloor, her white hair drenched with rain, her young eyes bright with her wonderful spirit, spoke from a platform. On another was Comrade Patterson, a Negro leader who made such a gallant protest in Boston last week, and was arrested several times. On the other three platforms other speakers shouted the great slogans of the revolution—the great words that will some day come to life even in America, and set the workers free.

Italians in the crowd sang their spirited song, Bandera Rossa. Then everyone sang the International. The cops listened; the skyscrapers listened; the subway shook with the sound; the song was heard in Moscow, in Hankow, in Boston. It was heard somewhere, somehow, by the two men who have just been killed for this song.

The darkness came. The meeting broke up. But the crod would not go home. It circled about the square, pushed and prodded by police. A comrade pulled out a big red flag and waved it in the crowd as he passed the Communist newspaper, "Freiheit." Six mad cops pounced on him, while the crowd booed, and led him to the lockup.

The crowd drifted down Fourteenth street, while dozens of motorcycle machine gun cops raced up and down waving clubs. The crowd drifted down Second avenue. They were singing. For hours, even after the police had broken up various groups, clubbing and arresting them, crowds of young workers roamed the East Side streets, shouting for Sacco and Vanzetti and singing revolutionary songs.

No, nothing could hurt this demonstration. Sacco and Vanzetti have not died in vain—their deaths will be remembered whenever a mass of workers gather, as they gathered yesterday, and about them are ranged the machine guns and uniforms of the murderous capitalist system.

Thousands Mourn Sacco and Vanzetti in USSR

All military works are wroking 24 hours a day."

Sam Darcy, a member from the American Communist Party, speaking at the Peoples' Palace, stated that around the struggle for the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti the organization of the American working class had begun. The American workers see that the only Party leading them toward liberty is the Communist Party directed by the Comintern.

Silence Kept at Funeral.

At 2 P. M., at the moment of the funeral of the martyred revolutionaries, a solemn silence took place everywhere. Resolutions of protest were universally passed, calling the proletariat for the fight against advancing world capitalism.

An article in Pravda discussed the funeral saying: Sacco and Vanzetti being anarchists failed to understand that the victory over the bourgeois yoke will be possible solely by way of the revolutionary struggle for proletarian rule. This does not prevent the proletariat of the Soviet Union from reverently bowing their head before these victims of the capitalist class. But it also obliges the Soviet workers to appeal to the toilers of the whole world, now demonstrating openly their will to fight against the bourgeoisie, and to call them to draw exclusively class and revolutionary conclusions.

From this struggle the social democracy has gone tottering after the bourgeoisie in blaming the campaign of protest. But the day of the funeral of Sacco and Vanzetti will become a further step in the consolidation of the proletarian forces against the bourgeoisie of all countries.

CHICAGO MOVIES SHUT BY STRIKE; 20,000 WALK OUT

Reinstatement of Four Workers, Union Asks

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Chicago's motion picture theatres closed tonight at 6 o'clock owing to a dispute between the motion picture operators union and the Chicago motion picture exhibitors' association.

The union had demanded that four operators be employed in the Belmont Theatre, Orpheum circuit theatre.

The exhibitors announced that unless the union withdrew its demands the theatres will be closed, but before they have been closed union officials called operators out of all Orpheum theatres.

Approximately 350 theatres are affected and it was estimated tonight that between 15,000 and 20,000 theatre employes have gone on strike.

Air Pipe Explosion on New Subway Hurts 5

Five persons were slightly injured and scores of windows were shattered today by an underground blast of compressed air which blew a ten-foot hole in the pavement at Fifty-third Street and Second Avenue.

The blast was accompanied by deafening report, spreading terror among hundreds who feared a repetition of the subway bomb outrages. Police declared the explosion occurred in a compressed air "feeder" line leading to the construction site of the new Eighth Avenue subway, where it runs crosstown on Fifty-third Street.

Police Attack Workers March on City Hall

mass attack on the demonstrating workers. It took more than 20 minutes until she came to.

A man who runs a basement store was thrown down the stairs by one of the policemen. Only after he was viciously beaten did the police allow him to tell of his right to be there. No apology was forthcoming from the police.

After the workers were dispersed, 15 armored cars arrived from Stuyvesant Casino.

Another example of police action took place in front of Stuyvesant Casino before it was opened to the workers. At eight p. m. police without warning rushed upon the sidewalk and chased all those who were present. Many women with baby carriages were among those caught in the jam. Several women fainted when they saw the danger their children were in.

Guard Death Masks.

When the meeting ended in Union Square the clinched fist and the wreaths were taken into an automobile to Stuyvesant Casino. The thousands of workers who had attended the meeting started to follow. When they reached the Freiheit building, the workers stopped to cheer. Mounted police rode into the crowd and after hitting viciously, arrested Placido Rodriques, a waiter. The police objected to his carrying a red banner, six feet by nine feet.

Thousands of workers are passing the death masks all night. A guard of honor of six workers in shirts are acting as a guard of honor. They are being changed every fifteen minutes.

Flowers Bank Masks.

Flowers from many working class organizations are banked around the stand on which the masks are standing. They include the United Council of Working Class Housewives, Committee for Political Prisoners, The Joint Defense Committee, The DAILY WORKER, Il Martello, Carpenters Union, and others.

The casino is decorated in red. Pictures of Sacco and Vanzetti are hung in various parts of the room. A detail of police are on the building and in the street. Members of the industrial squad are mingling with the workers who are waiting their turn to go in and view the masks.

The march to City Hall that was broken up at Broome and Chrystie St. made up in enthusiasm what it lacks in size. As the workers marched along they sang the International and Solidarity Forever. Cheers for Sacco and Vanzetti and booes for Mussolini were given lustily. Traffic was held up at every corner while the workers passed.

At Union Square four platforms were used.

Weinstone Speaks.

Addressing the meeting were William W. Weinstone, General Secretary of the New York District of the Workers (Communist) Party said that "all the lackeys of capitalism, judges, governors and police commissioners say that Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty. On the other han we the workers say that they were innocent.

"We say that the Fullers and the Thayers murdered Sacco and Vanzetti. They were the enemies of capitalism because they tried to organize the workers. All the terror of capitalism will not stop us in our future work."

Harry Meyers of the Industrial Workers of the World said that "not only must we remember Sacco and Vanzetti but we should not forget the other martyrs of the workingclass of this country."

He referred to Joe Hill, killed in Utah, Wesley Everett, murdered by the American Legion in the state of Washington, the Chicago anarchists killed in 1886 and Tom Mooney and Billings who are still in jail.

Powers Hapgood who presided at the principal platform told the workers that Vanzetti informed him recently that if he lived he would devote his time to release Mooney and Billings.

"Our slogan must be," he continued, "Long live the spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti! Down with capitalist justice! Long live working class solidarity! Long live international solidarity!"

Police Bar Workers.

Although police at firs tannounced that mourners could file into Stuyvesant Casino until midnight, just before 10 o'clock secret orders came and all sympathizers were told to "go home, you can't get it."

At 10.10, however, Mrs. Rose Sacco came from the Hotel Shelton, where she is staying in a single room with Mrs. essica Henderson, and stood silent for a few minutes before the flower-laden memorial.

She was the last mourner to enter the Casino. Police then began pushing all others away.

The War Danger in Latin America

By J. NEVAREZ and LEON SLAVIN

The approaching imperialist war, in addition to once again drawing into its bloody mire the many nations of war-ridden Europe, and of North America, next time is sure to spread to the nations of South America. Because of the ever sharpening rivalry between the imperialist interests of Great Britain and the United States in Latin America, the nations of this continent will soon find themselves involved in a most horrible butchery.

U. S. Ousts British From Latin America.

Prior to the World War, British capital enjoyed supremacy in Latin America. But during and following the war, Yankee capital penetrated South America in ever greater proportions and the British supremacy has given way to Yankee.

Thus according to Max Winkler expert of the Bertron, Griscom & Co., prior to the war American investments in Latin America totaled only $100,000,000, and today these investment are soaring above $2,000,000,000. The American investments reached this tremendous figure, while during the war British investments were at standstill. The same is true in the trade relations of the two imperialist powers with Latin America. P. M. Atkins, in the Chicago Journal of Commerce, shows that British exports to South America since 1913 has increased only 9.5 per cent in value, while U. S. exports during the same period have increased 158.5 per cent in value.

Imperialists Exploit Revolts.

British imperialism, facing the revolt and loss of her colonies over which she hitherto had absolute control, will not resign herself to the fact that she is being ousted by the Yankees from one of the richest investment fields, and is thus determined to contest the Yankees for her foothold in South America.

In this conflict British and American imperialism, take advantage of the petty, arbitrarable differences existing between the governments of the Latin American nations, and thus these governments become the agents and instruments of struggle and ultimately for bloody warfare, to determine whether British or American imperialism is to have the sole right to exploit the resources, and the workers of Latin America.

Let us see how the South American nations are drawing nearer to open hostilities, in the interests of foreign imperialism, and what the existing pretexts for way may be.

Foreign Investments.

The dispute over the nitrate region of Tacna-Arica is the spark that will set off the conflagration. All "efforts" to have Chile, Peru, and Bolivia, arbitrate and come to a peaceful settlement have thus far failed. The reason for this becomes clear when it is recognized that the real forces in the Tacna-Arica dispute are the conflicting interests of British and American capital. In 1920, British investments in Bolivia exceded those of the United States by $2,500,000 the total U. S. investments being $15,000,000. Today, U. S. investments in Bolivia have risen to the 80 million mark, far surpassing the British figure.

In Chile which has been a stronghold for British investment, American investments have risen from $15,000,000 in 1912 to $400,000,000 at the present day.

In Peru, British investments are still in the lead with 25 milion over the 100 million dollar representing the U. S. investments.

The Argentine-Brazil Dispute.

Identical is the threatening war between Brazil and Argentina. British investments in Argentina still lead the United States. The British figure being $1,900,000,000 and that of the U. S. $250,000,000. In 1920 U. S. investments in Argentina were $40,000,000, so that we can see that U. S. investments are gaining very rapidly and in a few years will surpass those of Great Britain. In Brazil, with the exception of Chile there is more American capital invested that in any other South American country, American investments reaching upwards of $300,000,000. (Statistical figures from American Foreign Investments by Robert W. Dunn).

The pretext for a war between Argentina and Brazil is the dispute over the possession of an important navigable river, the Rio de la Plata, which is today in the hands of Argentina but has long been claimed by Brazil.

And that the certainty of a war among the above South American countries is not only a spectre existing in the minds of Communists, can be substantiated by the form the fierce armament and military preparedness race now in progress among the South American governments.

Imperialists Finance Armaments.

Peru, with the money extended to it by the foreign bankers in the form of loans, make no secret that it is constructing the best battle fleet possessed by any South American country. Chili does not view Peru's preparations with folded arms, and has already spent 430 million Chilian pesos in modernizing her old battle fleet.

Argentina does not remain behind and in the year expended, 100,000,000 pesos for new and modern armaments, and is continuing to spend enormous sums. The naval ministry of Argentina in 1916 spent 36 million pesos for the purchase of 2 cruisers, destroyers, torpedo boats, and submarines. Sometime ago the bourgeois press of Argentina announced that the government will spend 80 million gold pesos for the further purchase of armaments. This resulted in such a wave of popular indignation, that the bourgeois press was forced to "correct" its statement with the announcement that the government would spend 80 million in paper, which has the value of a third of the gold. But as result of a quarrel among the leading politicians, it leaked out that at a secret session of the chamber of deputies the naval minister solicited and obtained an appropriation of 75 million pesos in gold.

Brazil's Armament Race.

In view of Argentina's preparations Brazil also does not seek to fall behind and is arming to the teeth.

These leading South American countries are arming to the teeth not for any decorative purposes, but for the sole reason that they know that very soon, their British and American imperialist masters will command them to fly at each others throats, and thus will kindle the most horrible catastrophe that has ever befallen the South American continent.

The imperialist interests have in the different governments which they influence, their agents who are consciously preparing these countries for war out of which the only ones to gain will be the foreign interests, and the native masses the sure losers.

The Communist Parties of South America, under the guidance of the Communist International are making every effort to make clear the impending situation to the Proletariat, which if united, is the only force in South America that can prevent the outbreak of the war.

WAR ON WAR, IS CRY OF THOUSANDS WHO THRONG THE BIG CLEVELAND PEACE RALLY

By M. DWORKIN.

Night. Thousands of toil-worn men and women, of all colors and races, with a deep protest in their hearts against war have gathered.

Fighting War.

Public Square, Cleveland, Ohio. Under a still glowing red sky, after a hot summer, day they have gathered in thousands from the big industrial city in protest against war. They who are usually the first victims of every capitalist war stood in monster demonstration determined to wage war upon the war makers.

Surrounded by a glowing city the public square became a seething black monster of wronged men and women who pinned their hope of liberation on no one but themselves.

Veterans Against War.

Everywhere in the huge throng of protestants were to be seen the wounds of the last war. There were thousands of ex-service men grimfaced and determined to fight the next war at home on those who betrayed them once.

Here is a tall-stalwart Negro, a giant of a man, standing at Tom Johnson's monument. He is an ex-service man, a southerner. His eyes are shooting fire, red and almost popping out, every time the speaker on the rostrum in the distance thunders out the shuddering word "War."

"No Mo' War!"

"There'll be no mo' wah fo' me" he grins out determinedly and with rage in his voice. He looks up to the fifty-two story giant of a union station under construction on the south eastern corner of the public square and laughs.

"I've worked there in the basement four weeks and now I am idle four weeks. What chance does I have?" And he ends bitterly. "and me goin' to war?"

Woman Speaks.

One woman, a typical American mother, spoke bitterly about her unhealed wounds of the last war. Respectably dressed and outwardly cool she was typical of many women who stood gathered there.

"War? The last war left me with plenty to be bitter about. My son, who like all the rest of the boys were promised everything when they returned from the war for Democracy, could not even get a job and as a result, from privation and prolonged idleness his nerves were affected and now I have an insane son on my hands. And now," she added, "the youth who was hailed as a great patriot, is supported by his mother who goes out daily to work for the fat parasites on the 'heights.'"

The exhausted industrial city has somewhat hushed down. It is late at night. Public square is still crowded

Here is a tallstalwart Negro, a and never sleep, lest the enemy should perpetrate another "patriotic" crime similar to that of 1914. They will not sleep from now on, the thousands who were deceived once into a hideous bloody debauch, called war.

These have nothing to lose and everything to gain. And if a war must be they will war on the war makers.

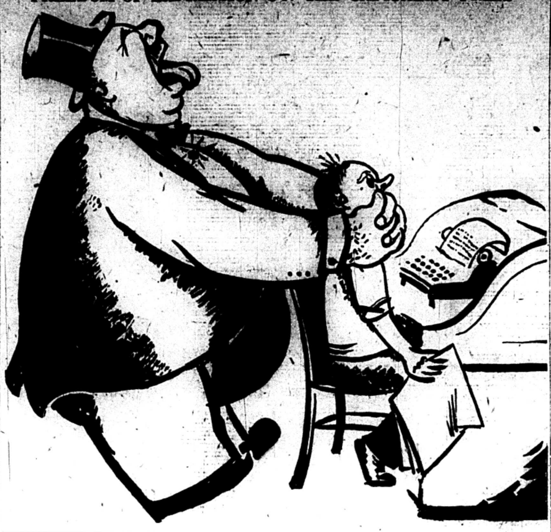
FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION ON THE CAPITALIST PRESS



John Reed -- Revolutionist

By SAM DARCY.

There is a difference between a worker who deserts his class and becomes a lackey of the ruling class, and one of the ruling class who aligns himself with the cause of the workers; for in the former case the individual sells his soul for reactionary aims and in the latter case the individual aligns himself with historical progress.

Pohn Reed Lives Forever.

History gives many examples of both types. But those who serve reaction have sunk into inglorious oblivion and today we know little of them. But to those who have aligned themselves with the oppressed and who often because of superior education and training have become leaders of the oppressed, to those we feel grateful for having served our cause, the cause of posterity and we therefore keep their names alive.

John Reed was one of these. Though a graduate of Harvard and classed among the bluest of the Blue Blood, he yet had enough vision and enough courage to break from his surroundings and join the revolutionary proletarian movement. It is true he belonged to the intelligenzia but then he was distinguished from the rest of the intelligenzia in that he really had intelligence and not merely a veneer with which to hide stupidity.

Goes to Mexico.

In 1914 he was in Mexico, almost immediately after he left the university, officially reporting the revolutionary events there, but actually studying them and feeling a deep sympathy which he coupled with a critical understanding of the revolutionary movement which was then agitating all of Mexico, and which was being utilized by a military clique for their own purposes. He wrote a book on his findings there called "Insurgent Mexico." In discussing what he characterized as the "opportunist, reformist, and self-seeking bourgeois character" of the leadership of the Revolutionary Army, he recognized the weakness of the Mexican revolution.

Reed's cause in Mexico was as one who knows Reed would expect, the cause of the peon. And all through his activity in Mexico just one vein of thought ran through his mind, his writings and his activity; namely, how best to utilize the events that were taking place for the freeing of the peon from the economic and political bondage with which he was so heavily burdened. Thus he denounced the so-called revolutionary generals of the time, for he despaired of their military and nationalist narrowness. He bitterly complains, in his book, that "during all the time I talked with them (Carranza, and the other generals) I never detected one gleam of sympathy for, or understanding of, the peons."

Scored Bourgeois Honors.

Then the war broke out. John Reed who was already back in the United States joined the revolutionary movement. He had been working for a bourgeois newspaper in New York but he used his income and his major energies for the revolutionary movement. The bourgeoisie acknowledged that he was a brilliant writer and certainly one of the greatest war correspondents that ever lived. They offered him every honor (honor as they saw it) but this meant nothing to Reed whose only conception of honor was honor in the service of the revolutionary proletariat. "The Masses," the "Liberator," the organ of the left wing of the socialist party, the left wing and the Communist Party themselves all are witness to the activities of John Reed. He was no "outsider" in the revolutionary movement. In the bitterest factional struggle, in the days immediately after the Russian revolution when there was no clarity in our movement, John Reed was as closely involved in every fight as was the most hard-boiled worker. Many of us who were in the left wing, in the Communist Labor Party, etc., will undoubtetdly remember the athletic hulk of John Reed, which had given him football fame in exclusive Harvard, pulling his trousers up and tightening his belt in preparation to delivering a broadside against one or another faction within the Communist movement.

We do not pretend that he was a theoretician. His revolutionary spirit was born out of a deep sympathy for the oppressed but because he was not a theoretician we cannot afford to under-estimate the role he played in our movement. Today, we lead the workers' struggle in the clear light of the teachings of Marx and Lenin but it was not always so. Many a revolutionary figure who has played a noble role and has made sacrifices which have emblazoned his name forever in history did not understand fully the class forces at work in a particular historic era or the relation of that era to other eras and the developing forces in their influence and in their results. Thus we must understand John Reed for what he was, a noble, fearless fighter whose healthy instincts made him fight with the workers and against capitalism and who did not hesitate to pay any price necessary to carry that struggle to a successful end.

Made Revolution Live In Words.

The revolutionary events in Russia would not let him rest in the United States, and it was not long before he passed through the blockade and entered the First Workers' Republic. The stories of his adventures from America to the scene of the Russian revolution as told both by himself and many others who participated would in themselves make a book and must be found elsewhere than in the space of this article. However, after he landed in Russia, his activity on behalf of the revolution was without limit. He was among its publicists, writing to the workers of the world, the wonderful story of the revolution as he saw it through his youthful eyes unhampered by traditional conservative ideas. He was among its best fighters helping to organize revolutionary regiments both of foreigners and Russians in order to go to the front and fight in defense of the revolution. He was one of the best symbols of the Russian revolution in that he helped to complete the international character of that world-shaking event. And possibly, greatest of all he was one of those who organized the revolutionary forces against the counter-revolution among the workers and peasants in those heroic struggles against the blockade, counter-revolution and economic break-down. He travelled through all of Russia in this work.

Brought Workers' Message to U. S.

In a series of articles that he wrote for the "Liberator" in the middle of 1920 he tells of the suffering and sacrifice of the Russians who were working with him. Throughout his articles it seemed never to have occurred to him that he was going through these struggles with the same heroism that he was crediting to the Russian masses. In one of these articles he says:

"And when I was done saluting them in the name of the American revolutionists (in a meeting of villagers), a gaunt youth leaped to his feet and cried passionately: 'From the workers of Serpukov, take this word to our brothers in America. For three years the Russian workers have been bleeding and dying for the revolution and not our own revolution but the world revolution. Tell our American comrades that we listen day and night for the sound of their footsteps coming to our aid. But tell them, too, that no matter how long it may take them, we shall hold firm. Never shall the Russian workers give up their revolution. We die for socialism, which perhaps, we shall never see'."

The eloquence of this spirit could only be communicated to America through such as John Reed for he was one of the few whose pen was gifted with the fluid of fire.

Gave Life for Revolution.

It was while he was carrying on this work that he fell sick with typhus. At first he disregarded his ill health and counted on his splendid physical frame to resist this dread disease. But his frame had lost its early health in the severe days of revolutionary struggle, and he succumbed among those others of his Russian comrades who had contracted the same disease in the same struggle. Finally, on October 17th, 1920 he died.

The Russian workers knew him for his work and they deeply felt the loss of him. They buried him with the honors they gave only to the most beloved of the revolutionary dead. And now, undearneath the great Kremlin Wall he lies in close proximity to the graves of the dead of the October Revolution, the great Mausoleum where Lenin lies and beneath the niche that Comrade Ruthenberg has won within the Kremlin Wall itself.

A Heroic Figure.

John Reed has made a great contribution not only to the Russian and World Revolutions but most particularly to the American Revolution, for John Reed is a great example to the American youth. Let none scoff at his lack of clarity on some of the teachings of Marx and Lenin for his revolutionary work is a powerful light that pales into insignificance the vaporings of those who only pretend to know. A real Marxist-Leninist will appreciate the true greatness of John Reed's contribution. Let us therefore all remember him for what he was and hold him aloft as one of those heroic figures which the struggling revolutionary proletariat of the United States will in historic perseptive learn to love and honor for what he gave to our cause.

Lenin Flats Are Best in London's Working Class Section of City

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Bethnal Green Borough Council has just built a block of flats that is called the Lenin Estate. The rents range from $2.75 to $5.75 a week including electricity.

In contract to the old broken down tenements that surround it, the building stands out most conspciously. It is claimed by many that they are the finest and most modern flats in London's east side.

There are 32 apartments which flank the sides of a quarrangle. Each has a separate entrance and all are two three bedroom type, with complete modern equipment. Artistic dresser and cabinets are built in. There is a generous supply of hot water.

THINK OF THE SUSTAINING FUND AT EVERY MEETING!

On War and Danger of War

This is the sixth installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committe of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

18. The so-called "ultra-left" groups have played no small part in the work of demoralizing the proletariat. While in the campaign against the Soviet Union the social democrats were an echo of the bourgeoisie, the ultra-lefts were an echo of the social democrats. Now when the preparation of an attack on the Soviet Union is becoming self-evident, when the professional house-breakers from Scotland Yard are raiding the premises of the Soviet representatives in London, the objective meaning and significance of "ultra-left" treachery is perfectly clear. In the light of the anti-Soviet campaign, this treachery appears as one of the elements intended to disorganize the Soviet rear in the event of war. In as far as this fraction endeavors to assume an international character, it constitutes an element in disorganizing the struggle of the Comintern against war.

19. The attitude of the Second International on the Chinese question was no less treacherous than its attitude towards the Soviet Union. The Second International did not move a finger to prevent the concentration of foreign troops in China. Its leaders are cynically and impudently for the war in China. If such a leader in the Second International as Thomas disagreed at will with the policy of his government in regard to the Chinese question, it was only in the sense that the government was not sending enough troops and should send more. Another leader of the Second International, MacDonald, declares that the protection of British interests in China demands the presence of an adequate armed force in the "settlement." The Second International openly supports the Chinese Gallifet, Chiang Kai-shek, after the Shanghai shootings (see "Hamburger Echo" of April 19, 1927). The efforts of the Chinese proletariat to secure hegemony over the national revolutionary movement are meeting with fierce opposition on the part of the entire international social democracy.

20. No less criminal and infamous is the attitude to the war question of the so-called "left" section of social democracy (Otto Bauer, Paul Levi and others).

(a).—This wing of social democracy is disguising its criminal passivity in regard to the war, which has already begun in China, by talk about the peril of imperialist wars in general.

(b).—Together with Hilferding they keep alive the extremely dangerous illusion that imperialism itself is not dangerous, that it only becomes dangerous if accompanied by reaction (Austrian social democratic organ "Kampf").

(c).—In their campaign against the Soviet Union they use the same poisonous weapons as the right wing of the social democrats.

This wing of social democracy is the most dangerous because of its leaders are disguising the standpoint of the right social democrats with "left" phraseology, because they always save at the critical moment the right social democrats and the bourgeoisie, and by misleading the workers help the bourgeoisie to carry out its plans.

21. The Communist Parties in their struggle against imperialist intervention in revolutionary China and their struggle for peace with the Soviet Union, cannot renounce the united front tactics. On the contrary. In this struggle the widest possible application of the united front tactics is a necessary condition both in the interests of the mobilization of the broad masses of the workers, peasants and oppressed nations and also in the interest of exposing pacifist illusions. In this respect it must not be for a moment be forgotten that the so-called "left" social democratic leaders (such as Paul Levi in Germany, Bracke in France, such representatives of the British Labor Party as Maxton and Wheatley, and such "left" trade union leaders as PPurcell and Hicks) are the most dangerous enemies of Communism in the labor movement. Even the more sincere leaders of the left opposition within the social democracy in so far as they merely waver and chatter, but refuse to dissociate themselves organizationally fromt he social democratic leadership, the Communist Parties are obliged to criticize most strongly and to expose their role as deceivers of their working class followers.

But at the same time the winning over of the left social democratic workers and also of their leftward inclined workers such as the anarcho-syndicalists for a revolutionary united proletarian front in the struggle against war was never such an important task as it is at the present time.

Disarmament and Pacifism.

22. In view of increased preparations for imperialist wars, the talk of the bourgeois governments and of the petty bourgeois pacifists about disarmament is the acme of hypocrisy and mockery (sabotage of the Washington agreement of 1921, concerning limitation of naval armaments, failure of the Coolidge "disarmament!" proposal, failure of the Geneva Conference of the League of Nations in March 1927). Communists must expose in every possible way the false and reactionary meaning, as long as the capitalist system still exists, of the slogan and of disarmament advanced by the bourgeoisie and their agents, the social democrats. To support such a slogan means to sow illusions that it is possible to do away with war without the abolition of capitalism. No proposals of the bourgeoisie and the social democrats concerning the curtailment of armaments and the reduction of war expenditure can reduce by a single iota the danger of war during the imperialist epoch.

The only country which has really reduced its army to a minimum is the Soviet Union. Among all the existing states, it is the only sure buttress of peace. Emerging in October 1917 from the struggle against the imperialist war, it has been for ten years like a heavy weight round the neck of the European imperialists, preventing them from hurling the various sections of the toiling masses against one another. It can fulfil this role also in the future, provided its policy has the support of the international working class. The policy of the Soviet Union directed towards disarmament is the policy of a state in which the proletariat is the ruling class and is laying the foundation of a new society which makes war impossible. The attitude of the world proletariat to the position of the Soviet Union on the disarmament question must therefore differ in principle from its attitude towards the hypocritical disarmament plans of the bourgeois states.

23. There is no doubt about the fact that the millions of toilers who went through the great imperialist war of 1914-18 do not want a new war. The wounds of the last war are still too fresh. These workers sincerely desire to combat war, but deceived by the social democrats, they do not yet see their war clearly, and have yet no revolutionary basis. This is the source of the vague and sentimental "pacifism," from which the working class still suffers. This pacifism has nothing in common with the deliberate deception carried on by the bourgeois pacifists, clergy and other charlatans whose task is to provide palliatives for the negative sides of capitalist society.

NEARING SEES UNEMPLOYMENT GROW

By SCOTT NEARING (Federated Press).

Traveling through the United States and Canada from New York to Vancouver I made the following observations:

1. In all of the industrial centers, there is unemployment, nowhere serious, but everywhere sufficiently threatening to worry the workers. Many of them are asking, when will the hard times come?

2. Among the farmers exists a reasonable hope this year of harvesting crops that will pay the costs of the farms. But a growing consciousness that they are playing a losing, hopeless game. They feel that they are in the grip of the bankers and that there is no escape. Farms by the thousands are for sale everywhere.

3. Each worker is making a desperate attempt to save himself from the system—by buying a home, a piece of land, a little stock, or some type of an insurance policy. Each man for himself to be the rule and the workers are following the game as it is played. A few are winning, easily. The great bulk are struggling desperately and just keeping their heads above water. They amuse themselves and divert themselves in many ways—movies, fights, races, fancy clothes—but the struggle remains hard.

4. In order to provide the wherewithall for the "each man for himself" game, the workers are leaving the unions, working overtime, taking cuts in piece rates, doubling up on jobs, and doing whatever else they can to make ends meet. The intensity of labor is increasing with the intensity of the survival struggle.

5. There was an immense interest in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, a great deal of interest in China, much interest in the Soviet Union, some little interest in Nicaragua and in the prospect of war.

PLAN SACCO-VANZETTI ASHES IN PARIS BY SEPT. 19

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

RUMORS persist that Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce is the favored candidate of the administration for the G. O. P. presidential nomination. This should not surprise anybody. Hoover would make an efficient tool of American imperialism in the white house. He has served Wall Street well for many years. Yet, Lowden, Dawes and others may be more adept at manipulating the political machinery than Hoover.

AL-SMITH is believed to have a good chance of winning the Democrat party nomination. His chief rival William Gibbs McAdoo is pretty well out of the picture. With Smith leading the voters that follow the democrat banner and Hoover riding the elephant, the financial rulers of this country can take a trip around the world with an easy conscience knowing that no matter which of the two loses, they will win. Until the workers of this country seriously begin to build a Labor Party the ruling-classes of this country can sleep easily.

SUPERINTENDENT McAndrew of the Chicago school system has been temporarily ousted from his position by the Thompson administration. McAndrew is an extreme reactionary and aroused the anger of the school teachers when he prohibited the teachers' councils from meeting during school hours. Since he assumed office the teachers have had no say in determining what kind of instruction should be given the children. McAndrew's discomfiture will cause no pain to the school teachers.

LORD CECIL has resigned from the Baldwin cabinet because of disagreement with his colleagues over the question of naval disarmament. It should not be assumed because of this that Cecil does not believe the British Empire should have the largest navy the world. He does. His disagreement with the rest of the cabinet is over method rather than a question of principle. His letter of resignation, however, reveals that Great Britain as well as the United States and Japan did not have a serious interest in disarmament but were simply jockeying for position. Confirmation of our own conviction from such an authoritative source is not to be sneezed at.

ACCORDING to newspaper dispatches from Martins Ferry, Ohio, the striking miners and company gunmen are exchanging shots. Driven to desperation by the conduct of the strikebreakers the miners were forced to retaliate. What is John L. Lewis doing or saying those days? There was a time in the history of the United Mine Workers of America when the entire strength of that once powerful organization would be thrown into the struggle against the employers. Now Lewis and his good man "Friday" Searles, are too busy going around "exposing" radicals at chambers of commerce meetings to have any time left for fighting the miners' battles.

THE Sacco-Vanzetti trial was fair according to Attorney-General Arthur K. Reading of Massachusetts, speaking in Buffalo. It was perfectly fair to the ruling class that wanted their blood but if the farce was prolonged for seven more years the two condemned workers would have no more chance to escape with their lives than a mouse who is being teased by a cat.

Convict Worker for Carrying Red Flag At Union Sq. Meet

Placido Rodriguez, a waiter who was arrested Monday when the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting in Union Square ended, was found guilty of disorderly conduct yesterday by Magistrate Goodman in the Yorkville Court. He was remanded until tomorrow for investigation and sentence. The original charge was criminal anarchy.

Rodriguez, together with thousands of other workers had started to follow the automobile bearing the armed fist that was going to Stuyvesant Casino when he was taken into custody. Because he was carrying a red flag he was severely beaten and then placed under arrest by two detectives. Mounted police rode into the crowd of workers who were near Rodriguez and threw many to the sidewalk under the horses' hoofs.

5th Party Convention Opens Today

IRVING PLAZA HALL SCENE OF 4-DAY MEETING

Lovestone and Foster to Make Reports

Business sessions of the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party will begin today at one o'clock at the Irving Plaza Hall, Irving Place and 15th Street, when Jay Lovestone, acting secretary of the Party since the death of C. E. Ruthenberg in March, calls the delegates to order.

The convention actually got under way with the holding of the demonstration of welcome at the Central Opera House last night.

Entire Nation Represented.

All sections of the nation will be represented at the convention by the 50 delegates, some of these coming from the states of Washington and California on the Pacific Coast. There will be about 50 fraternal delegates from various organizations. All Party publications have been invited to send fraternal delegates.

Acting Secretary Lovestone will make the report to the convention for the political committee. William Z. Foster will report on the trade union work of the Party.

Four-day Convention.

It is expected that the convention will extend over four days. Sessions will be held after the first day as follows: 10.30 to 1 o'clock; 2.30 to 5.30 o'clock; 7.30 to 10.30 o'clock.

Three Thousand Workers Greet the Delegates

Three thousand workers packed the Central Opera House, 67th Street and 3rd Avenue to greet the delegates.

Referring to the inner party situation, Jay Lovestone, secretary of the party said, "Never were our differences so small. Never was there such a sound basis for unity. Unity is now more necessary than ever before." Lovestone urged greater party unity than ever in view of the ruthless power that is being wielded by the forces of reaction.

Stresses Organization.

In stressing the necessity of organizing the more than 25,000,000 Amer-

ADD GUNMEN FOR OHIO MINE AREA; EVICTIONS GROW

Wives and Daughters of Miners Fight Scabs

BELLAIRE, O., (FP.) Aug. 30.—The ruthless determination of Ohio mine operators to cut wages below the subsistance level is bearing fruit in acutely strained relations in the mining camps. The lockout declared on April 1 was simply the formal recognition of a condition that had existed in some cases several years previous. The union scale of $7.50 a day would not be paid, the operators asserted, while coal was being mined in West Virginia and Kentucky, across the river, for $5 non-union.

Gunmen Increase.

Though some mines have remained closed down, others have attempted to resume on a non-union basis with strikebreakers brought from Pittsburgh and elsewhere. These have encountered unionists who in most cases persuaded them by various devices to quit the job and clear out. There have been troop movements and enrolment of mine guards. These are gunmen, in company pay but deputized under state law by the sheriffs.

The companies are using methods of warfare against labor unprecedented in this state. They are copying the western Pennsylvania operators. The Florence mines at Glen Run shut off the town's water supply when the miners would not go underground at the non-union rate. Evictions from company houses are becoming more frequent throughout the district. The principal points of struggle are Bellaire, Martin's Ferry, Shadyside, Steubenville and Yorkville.

CHEN AND MADAM SUN YAT SEN ON WAY TO MOSCOW

(Special To Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, Aug. 30.—Mme. Sun Yat-sen and Eugene Chen, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, are on their way to Moscow via Khabarovsk.

In reply to the greetings of representatives of the Communist Party, Chen declared, "The left wing of the Kuomintag has not been destroyed by the quarrels among the Wuhan generals. In the struggle which will develop in the very near future we will be able to bring the revolution to victory in co-operation with the Communist Party."

Eugene Chen and Mme. Sun Yatsen left the Wuhan Government when it turned counter-revolutionary—fought the left wing elements and refused to develop the agrarian revolution.

Three Tie-ups on I.R.T. Lines; Woman Is Hurt

Three accidents yesterday caused tie-ups on the Interboro subway. In the last of the three a woman broke her ankle and was taken to the hospital. She was Mrs. Ellen Edwards, of 11 West 117th Street.

The first tie-up occurred at the Clark St. station, Brooklyn. Compressed air rales on a northbound express refused to operate. The Grand Central station saw the second tie-up. Here a southbound express ran into signal trouble.

Mayor Walker Leaves for Munich After all Night Spree at Baden

BADEN BADEN, Aug. 30.—After sleeping until noon to recuperate from a farewell tour of the cafes and cabarets here last night, New York butterfly mayor, James J. Walker, left for Munich at 3.23 this afternoon.

Walker came here after his departure from Berlin, where he was hissed and booed by workers of the city.

CHICAGO MOVIES SUSPEND; 25,000 UNION MEN STRIKE

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. — Over 400 theaters in Chicago and its suburbs continue to be closed following the strike caused by a dispute between the motion picture operators union and the motion picture exhibitors' association.

25,000 Idle.

Twenty-five thousand employes in the theatres are affected by the strike which was called by the union when the bosses refused to reinstate four operators in the Belmont and Orpheum theatres.

It is estimated that a half a million people in the city were deprived last night of their usual form of amusement, with the result that other business activities of a similar nature reported flourishing incomes.

Neither side today offered any hope of immediate settlement altho the theatre owners were to meet today to consider whether they would accept arbitration in case the union made overtures.

Strike 100% Solid.

Representatives of the union, however, declared that victory would come shortly, the men being 100 per cent behind the strike. They explained that the bosses' interpretation of their agreement which the latter claim gives them the right to fire workers "when they change their program" constitute a serious threat to their organization.

Meanwhile radio dealers reported heavy sales increased today as a result of the shutdown of the theatres.

OPENING DAY OF AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION IS TO WITNESS GIANT MEMORIAL BY FRENCH COMMUNISTS

Luigia Vanzetti Plans to Sail on Cunard Liner Soon on Return to Italy

It became more certain yesterday that the ashes of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will arrive in Paris before September 19th when the convention of the American Legion is scheduled to open. French workers are striving to offset the meeting of the American fascists with a giant Sacco-Vanzetti memorial.

The ashes of the two murdered workers will be divided and placed in four urns, two of which will go to Paris with Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo, two of which will remain in Plymouth.

Sailing on a Cunard liner in a little over a week, Luigia Vanzetti will reach Paris before the opening of the Legion convention. Her arrival in Paris was once the occasion of a mass demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti. But that was before her brother and Sacco had gone to their doom in the electric chair.

The arrival of the ashes of the murdered workers in Paris is expected to crystallize sentiment against American capitalism which perpetrated the murder and to prevent the opening of the American fascist congress in Paris.

Luigia Vanzetti is expected to sail with the ashes on either the Mauretania, which leaves New York, Sept. 7th, or the Caledonia, which leaves on the 8th.

Belong to Working Class.

Mrs. Sacco, wife of Nicola Sacco, said yesterday that the ashes "do not belong to any members of the family but to the working class of the world which should decide their final destination."

More than 150,000 workers have already viewed the death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti at Stuyvesant Casino, Second Ave., near Ninth St. Entire families pass by the platform on which the masks are placed. They

Soviet Correspondent Expelled from France for 'Exaggerated' Report

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Jules Broune, the Paris correspondent of the Soviet Union's News Agency, Tass, has just been expelled from France by order of the Minister of the Interior.

Broune, who has been sending too truthful reports of the brutalities committed against the workers during the recent Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations in Paris, is charged with "exaggeration." His expulsion on such a charge is felt to be part of the campaign to reassure the American Legionnaires that the French government will permit no action by the workers during their stay in Paris.

LONG ISLAND R. R. FARE BOOST PLAN BARED IN REPORT

Profits Warrant Lower Rates, Says Counsel

The plan of the Long Island Railroad to mulct its docile strap-hanging commuters for a twenty per cent increase in commutation rates was jolted a little yesterday when George P. Nicholson, corporation counsel, filed a brief with the Transit and Public Service Commissions arguing against the increase.

The Long Island had asked for permission to increase commutation rates 20 per cent but an exhaustive investigation of the road's operating costs has shown, says Mr. Nicholson, "that commutation paid in 1926 above all operating expenses, taxes, etc., a return of 6 per cent on the fair value of property used in the service, an additional net profi of over $2,000,000. This contrasts quite sharply with the company's claim that not only does it receive no return from the commutation business, but that it actually loses money out of its pocket with each commuter carried."

Charge Excess Valuation.

As is usual in applications for rate increases, the railroad had placed excess valuations on its land and structures so that it could figure on this enlarged basis the percentage of revenue it ought to receive. The city's appraisers discovered that land which additional net profit of over $2,000,000 was actually worth $25,000,000; structures and equipment rated at $155,000,000 was actually worth $79,000,000.

Rates Should Be Lowered.

The conclusion of the city's findings in this case was that the margin of profit from commutation rates is large enough to justify a 20 per cent reduction instead of a 20 per cent increase. It is now up to the Transit and Public Service Commissions to decide who wins the railroad, or the commuters, who year in and year out pay their 5, 7, or 11 dollars a month to keep up the dividends to stockholders.

FURRIERS' UNION MEETING TO FIGHT UNEMPLOYMENT

All Locals Will Meet Tomorrow Night

A renewal of the struggle against the traitors within the furriers union, and against the bosses and the contractors, is announced in a leaflet, being distributed today in the market, which urges all registered and unregistered workers to attend the important local membership meetings which are scheduled for tomorrow night.

"The Joint Board is reorganizing the union machinery in order to begin the constructive organizational work," says the leaflet; and in preparation for this, elections are to be held for paid and unpaid officers. The first and last chance for nominations will be afforded at the membership meetings in which all workers are urged to participate.

To Appeal Year Jail Sentence Imposed on Miss Donovan Sept. 5

An appeal will be taken at once from the sentence of a year's imprisonment imposed Monday on Mary Donovan, secretary of the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, it was declared today.

She was charged with "inciting to riot," and "obstructing foot traffic." The first charge is the result of Miss Donovan's arrest last week for placing placards containing the words: "Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards?—Judge Thayer" on the coffins of Sacco and Vanzetti while they lay in Langone's funeral parlor in the north end of Boston.

Miss Donovan is now free under $1,000 bail.

LUIGIA VANZETTI TO SAIL WITH URNS SOON; 150,000 VIEW DEATH MASKS IN MEMORIAL PROCESSION

will be on view until midnight when they will be sent back to Boston.

Police Brutality.

Many children were among these who viewed the masks.

Representatives of all sections of the working class population of New York and vicinity are included among those who are paying their final respects to the two martyrs. Occasionally there is a slight lull in the line, then suddenly hundreds of workers pour into the building.

The only unpleasant part of the entire proceedings is the large detail of police and detectives present. While all the workers remove their hats on entering the hall, the representatives of "law and order" walk down the building without showing any consideration for the solemn occasion. Six policemen and several members of the bomb squad are detailed around the stand on which the masks recline. They see to it that the passing workers do not linger, roughly ordering them out thru a side door. Many of them are compelled to leave before they have ample opportunity to view the masks and the wreaths.

Many Wreaths Arrive.

In addition to the wreaths received Monday, many more arrived yesterday. They were from the Workers Unity House, Hungarian International Labor Defense, New Masses, Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, Domenico Di Sinti, Joint Board, Shirts and Boys' Waists Makers' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Window Cleaners' Union, Industrial Workers of the World, Painters' Union, residents of the United Workers' Cooperative House, Downtown Jewish Workers' Club, Anti-Fascist Society Masserano and several from shops where the workers took up collections to purchase a wreath.

Many children requested flowers as a remembrance of the occasion. The request was granted in scores of cases.

Beat Up Demonstrators.

Because he shouted for Sacco and Vanzetti Monday evening at 10th St. and First Ave., Sam Goldstein was brutally beaten up and then taken to Bellevue Hospital where he is now being held. The police are trying to claim that he is insane, a tactic instituted against demonstrators, when Powers Hapgood was recently arrested in Boston.

Memorial Committee Raps Brutality of Police at Union Sq.

"In the name of the Sacco and Vanzetti Memorial Committee, which arranged the ceremonies in Union Square on Monday I wish to condemn the brutality of the police in handling the 30,000 people assembled there," said Clarina Michelson, Secretary of the committee in a statement issued yesterday.

"We will admit a huge mass meeting of this kind is trying on the nerves of police officers, even though the people are good-natured and willing to obey traffic regulations as were the crowds on Monday. But police officers do not need to express their nervousness by riding their horses into non-resistant crowds, by knocking over baby carriages and trampling children under-foot as they did on Second Ave., or by suddenly leaping out at men and women from a side street, as they did at Broome Street, and beating and slugging defenceless men and women like a group of drunken gangsters on a spree.

"If this is what is called protecting a peaceful mass meeting, then no meeting is safe in New York, and someone will have to tell us how to protect ourselves from our so-called protectors. It is time the police department officials devised a policy of some kind in handling these meetings. Slugging seems to be one of the orders of the day at present, and if it meets with the approval of those higher up, the citizens of New York would like to know it.

"Despite the intimidating tactics of the police, indications are that over 150,000 sympathizers have passed through Stuyvesant Casino, on Second Ave., where the death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti are on view.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Prospects of a take-off by "Old Glory" for Rome within the next twenty hours waned Monday, when Lloyd Bertaud and Jones De Witt Hill inspected the runway and found it a soggy stretch of mud from the recent downpour.

WHEAT FARMERS RIPE FOR FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT CONVENTION DELEGATE STATES

Alfred Knudson, delegate from the unorganized territory to the Fifth Party Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party in New York City, reports that altho the wheat yield per acre is considerably larger this year than last, the farmers are no better off.

Banks Squeeze Farmers.

Formerly, Knudson said, it was possible for a farmer to get the necessary credit from the banks in order to buy seed, machinery, stock, etc., but this has now become increasingly difficuit. This year it is almost impossible and the banks are demanding the limit in security for small loans.

The wheat farmers of Northwest are not only in debt for this year's outfit but for the sums they have had to borrow for from six to eight years ago. So that if the farmer is to pull thru and just make this year's payments he is wholly dependent on the price he gets for his wheat.

Farmers Leaving Old Parties.

But the Northwestern farmer is more and more becoming aware that there is no hope for him from the two old political parties and that it is not possible to solve his problem under the capitalist system, Knudson declared. Altho many of the farmers still remain in the ranks of the old parties, the dissatisfaction is so general that it is only a question of an organized effort, a driving force, to crystallize it. The Workers Party must supply this driving force, says Knudson.

"Many of the former Non-Partisan Leaguers are still rallying around their leaders who accept office under the banner of the republicans," he continued. "And there is very little to hope from the leaders. But the increasingly bad conditions are detaching these progressive farmer elements from the old parties and a real Farmer-Labor movement is confidently expected to crystallize before the 1928 elections.

North Dakota Farmers Call For Farmer-Labor.

"The general feeling thruout the wheat country may be gauged by the resolutions passed recently at a farmers' meeting at Williston, North Dakota. In clear, terse language the farmers decided that the time has come for them to make a formal break, with the old parties and to make the Farmer-Labor Party a real issue in the coming campaign.

"The farmers have begun to realize that with their leaders daily and continually forming alliances with the banks and business interests, with debts threatening to swamp the wheat farmer on all sides, and no real relief in sight, his sole hope lies in a strong unified Farmer-Labor Party. It is to accomplish this object that the calling of a Northwestern Farmer-Labor Convention which will include all the elements in the wheat lands is now being proposed.

"It is the task of the Workers Party to vitalize and organize the now emerging political consciousness of the Northwestern farmer and to assist him in his effort to establish a mighty Farmer-Labor movement in the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota."

AMTER DESCRIBES GREAT PROGRESS IN ORGANIZING SHOPS IN DISTRICT NO. 6; ORGANIZERS REAL NEED

Israel Amter, Organizer of District No. 6, (Cleveland) now in New York City to attend the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, reports that the work of the Party in District No. 6 is progressing at a speed which has not been equalled before in the history of the District and is only retarded at present by a dearth of comrades fitted to organize the field which lies open to the Party.

Shop Work Most Important.

The most important work which is being pushed in the Ohio District, despite the fact that there are not a sufficient number of trained organizers to cope with the demand, is our work in organizing the shops and in publishing shop papers. The bulk of the activity is concentrated in the steel, mining, rubber and automobile industries.

There are at present, nuclei functioning in 26 shops in eleven of which shop papers are being regularly published. Shop papers are also being published, tho irregularly, in shops where the Party possesses no nuclei.

Miners Show Fight.

The industries in the Ohio District depend for their labor supply chiefly on the South Slavs, Poles and Russians, tho their are large native American elements, especially in the mines. The Party is learning now to solve the problem of cooperation between these different racial groups who are purposely hostile by the propaganda of the bosses.

In discussing the situation in the Ohio coal fields, Amter declared that the miners are showing a splendid fighting spirit for they know that if bosses succeed in making the Ohio fields non-union it means the smashing of the union thruout the country. But the leaders are weak or fakers.

Workers Rescue Speaker From Jail.

Comrade Amter tells how, in Martins' Ferry, a coal town where the police revoked their permission for a Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting, and arrested the Workers Party member who was trying to speak, the miners and steel workers streamed thru the streets of the town in thousands in order to rescue the speaker from the jail.

On the other hand, he tells the story of Earl Daugherty union leader, who ordered back the strikers who were marching to plead with the miners in the Hocking Valley fields.

The problem in all the important industries in Ohio, according to Amter, is the formation of shop committees. The shop nuclei have proved what can be done in the factories and it is only a question of sufficient organizers in order to make still more effective our activity among the shops of District 6.

District No. 6 made tremendous efforts in protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanbetti. Despite the attitudes of the Central Labor Council and the socialist party that refused a united front with the Workers Party, the demonstrations in Akron, Cleveland, Youngstown, Conneaut, and Canton called out thousands of workers. The meetings and processions in a number of these big industrial towns were the largest ever held there.

Sacco and Vanzetti Work Wins Workers.

Thru its agitation in the shops and with the shop papers, the Party in District No. 6 was able to tie up its struggle for Sacco and Vanzetti with the demands of the workers for the election of shop committees or for unionization where unions do not exist. Thousands and thousands of workers have seen thru the Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations that the Workers Party is the only Party leading the masses. The best elements in the International Workers of the World and the socialist labor party have been won over thru the fight against the Boston murders.

Organizers Needed.

Much credit for the success of the Sacco and Vanzetti fight must go to the International Labor Defense which successfully organized meetings and demonstrations thruout the state.

While much of Ohio remains to be effectively organized, especially in the western half of the state, great strides forward have been made, and our future success depends in great measure on the number of organizers we can send into the rubber, automobile and steel mills and the mines.

PROGRESS BEING MADE IN DISTRICT 3 IN SPITE OF GREAT DIFFICULTIES, IS DELEGATES' REPORT

The terror of the coal companies in the anthracite field is so terrific that the delegates from District No. 3 to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party now being held in New York City, have requested that their names be omitted from the reports they have made of the conditions in the hard coal region.

Miners Fight Against Obstacles.

Thousands of anthracite miners are out of work and wages are worse than ever but the fight to strengthen the union in the hard coal district goes on unflinchingly. Though whole companies, like the great Hudson Coal Co. which operates mines all thru the anthracite, have shut down 100 per cent, the miners have a strong fighting spirit and are carrying on the struggle despite the weak or treacherous attitude of their union leadership.

Wages have generally never been so bad altho there has been no cut which embraces the whole industry. But the coal companies are carrying thru a wage slashing system by cutting miners' wages in isolated districts.

Thru the Sacco and Vanzetti agitation carried on by the efforts of the Workers Party and the International Labor Defense in District No. 3, the miners and other workers in the anthracite have come to see that the Workers Party is the only party with a militant mass policy It is the only party which is fighting the battles of the workers.

Aid the Soft Coal Miners.

The work of the fractions in the union, while hampered by the reactionary policy of such leaders as President Rinaldo Cappellini in District No. 1 is slowly but effectively making itself felt. The most important problem outside of the organizational work which now confronts the Party in District No. 3 is that of extending aid to the striking soft coal miners. This is a task which the entire membership of District No. 3 must marshal its forces to accomplish. The conditions among the soft coal miners are worse than in the anthracite and the Party can accomplish real work in this situation.

Sacco and Vanzetti Protest Effective.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti created an extreme tension thruout the hard coal districts and the Party bent every energy to the calling of protest meetings and processions to secure the release of the two victims. Hundreds of miners have been brot closer to our Party thru this agitation, the delegates believe, and the full success of the Party's activity has not even been felt yet.

Owning Class Fears the Field of Class Struggle in the Textile Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

In its account of the impressive funeral of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Sunday, the Boston Herald said:

"The strangest procession Boston has ever seen passed thru the rain-soaked streets yesterday behind the bodies of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti."

But Boston is destined to see yet stranger sights. From the soil of the working class struggle, enriched by the blood of our martyred dead, there painfully rises the power of labor, organized and militant.

That will not only be a strange sight for Boston, for Massachusetts, for New England. It will be an unwelcome sight for those who put Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair. It will be like seeing the ghosts of the dead.

Sacco and Vanzetti died that the power of labor in New England might grow. While Attorney General Arthur K. Reading, of Massachusetts, tells the members of the National Association of Attorneys General, gathered in convention at Buffalo, New York, that Sacco and Vanzetti were given a "fair" trial, the actual pauperization of the textile workers of New England continues.

Attorney General Reading thus tries to bolster the lie that sticks hard in throats of the Massachusetts murder crew, while forgetting the actual industrial conditions in Massachusetts that will bring other Saccos and Vanzettis into the field of the class struggle.

The monster crime committed against Sacco and Vanzetti has convinced new millions of workers, not only in the United States but thruout the world that there can be no "justice" for workers under the capitalist system. Capitalist injustice to labor thus becomes more apparent than ever, in the courts, in industry, everywhere

While the attorney general of the mill barons of Massachusetts is peddling his piffle in Buffalo, the agent of America's industrial overlords, Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, is sending out his propaganda, thru the governmental "bureau of the census" aiding the profiteers in the textile industry. No effort to aid labor, but, to quote from the circular issued:

"To aid business executives in analyzing tendencies in production, prices, stocks, exports, etc., in the textile field, the Department of Commerce has just published the Textiles Section of the Record Book of Business Statistics. In this Bulletin, which will be followed by sections relating to other industries, there are presented statistics month by month from 1909 thru 1926, were available, on the various phases of the cotton, wool, silk, rayon and other textile industries. The statistical data are supplemented by descriptive text, illustrating the actual uses of this material by business concerns in planning sales and production policies, purchasing, etc., thru the publication of these data curently in the Department's monthly 'Survey of Current Business.'"

Thus the government that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti shows its eagerness to aid the textile barons directly benefitted by the lynching of these two workers.

At the same time the socalled "department of labor" of the government, presided over by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, the Pittsburgh banker, develops its attack against the foreign-born and inaugurates a campaign for new deportations.

One need only look at the actual statistics to learn the rich prize that New England's industrial oligarchs had staked in the slaughter of Sacco and Vanzetti. They believe that the lynching party at the Charlestown State Prison, on the night of August 22, will help them maintain the slavery conditions outlined in the reports of the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor, conditions that mean an increasing pauperization of the workers in this industry.

It is important to keep in mind that what is true of the textile industry, merely parallels similar developments in other industries, thus drawing in the whole American working class.

* * *

The textile industry is one of the oldest and the biggest in the development of American capitalistm. In recent years it has shown, thru actual figures, a decrease in the number of workers employed, a decrease in the workers' earnings, while at the same time revealing an increase in the hours of labor of those still permitted the luxury of having jobs. The figures are:

Year	Number Workers	Weekly Earnings	Hours per Week
1920	445,000	$24.86	51.8
1922	425,000	17.42	52.8
1924	485,000	19.72	53
1926	445,000	17.48	53.3

Squalor and misery follow in the wake of those figures revealing meager wages and the long work week.

These conditions gave rise to the repeated titanic struggles at Lawrence, Massachusetts, and more recently at Passaic, New Jersey. They are duplicated from New Bedford and Fall River in the New England North to the newest mill village in Alabama or Texas in the Far South.

Other facts brought out, as reported by Harvey O'Connor in the Federated Press, are as follows:

"Of the 82,000 workers studied in the 151 representative mills in North and South, fully 36,000 or 44 per cent were women. In many states, particularly in New England, the women are in the majority. Down South the labor of men is so cheap that the cotton mill owners can afford to hire more of them than women. The labor of children is thrown in for nearly nothing. That solves the family problem of what to do with the kids when both father and mother work in the mill."

* * *

In Massachusetts, "The Commonwealth" that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, the seat of capitalist "kultur," an average wage of $20 is paid for a 48.5-hour work-week. Rhode Island jumps the work-week to 50 hours and Pennsylvania to 52.

In Virginia, on the edge of the South, $16.75 is considered enough for 55 hours and in North Carolina, most advanced of the new industrial southern states, $16.13 is paid for 56 hours' work.

Wages are lower in South Carolina and in Georgia sink to $14.25 and in Alabama to $13.26. Georgia works her mill hands 57 hours a week. Scores of mills in the Carolinas and Georgia impose the 60-hour week on hteir workers. Usually it is split into the 11-hour day with five hours on Saturday. In the Carolinas the 55-hour week is the most common with 10 hours a day and five on Saturday.

The attorney general of Massachusetts, Reading, reports to his fellow attorney generals at Buffalo that it is the Communists who have been most active in the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, but, he declares, "Fortunately, America does not offer a fertile for Bolshevist ideas."

* * *

The mere fact that the panic-stricken textile capitalists of Massachusetts sought to terrorize the mill workers of New England with the spectacle of Sacco and Vanzetti done to death in the electric chair gives the lie to the claim that "All's Well In New England." They know that the workers chafe at their chains. They know that the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has only increased the discontent of labor. They know that the slavery conditions in the textile industry breed increasing resistance on the part of the workers.

Thus the class nature of the struggle, that the spokesmen of the owners of industry seek to minimize, continues to grow. The Communists are in the lead in the organization and the direction of that struggle.

Mexican Mine Strike, Protest of Murder of Sacco, Vanzetti Grow

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—The strike at the Amaparo mines is still continuing despite the arrival of federal troops despatched at the request of American officials the Excelsior says today. The strikes coupled with the growing Sacco and Vanzetti protest have frightened American mine magnates.

Altho the mines are still shut down there has been no destruction of property and no one was injured. The miners at a number of other camps in the region are striking.

Canada Fliers Hop Off; Enroute to London; Will Get $25,000 for the Trip

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 30.—Capt. Terry Tull and Lieut. James Metcalf hopped off in their plane "Sir John Carling" in a non-stop flight from London, Ont., to London, Eng., at 5.50 Monday morning.

The successful trans-Atlantic hop of the "Pride of Detroit" carrying Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock on the first leg of a round the world flight encouraged the fliers.

The Canadian fliers were confident of success, which will mean a prize of $25,000 offered them by Charles Burns of London, Ont.

Eugene Lyons Now Writing Story of Sacco and Vanzetti

The complete story of the celebrated case which ended with the death in the electric chair for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will be recounted in an illustrated book to be published soon by International Publishers, Inc. It is being written by Eugene Lyons, a newspaperman and magazine writer who was in close touch with the case from its inception more than seven years ago, according to the publishers' announcement.

"The book will be a straightforward and dramatic story of the lives and deaths of two alien workers in America," the publishers state. "It will be succinct, yet full enough to include all the essential facts of the arrests, the legal battles and the unprecedented international protest.

"We have gotten Mr. Lyons to begin work on the story immediately, while the memory of the events is fresh and the records easily available. He is especially interested in revealing the social forces which made of Sacco and Vanzetti, obscure workers at the time of their arrest, symbols of economic and social conflicts at the very heart of the world today. Nothing since the war has so tested the consciousness of the world as the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Nothing has so shaken people out of their smugness and indifference."

International Publishers hope to have the book off the press sometime in October. They indicate that inquiries for translation rights in several languages have already been made. Because of the world-wide interest in the case it is likely, they state, that it will be widely circulated in countries speaking Italian, German, French, Spanish, Russian, Portuguese and other languages.

The announcement says that "The author conducted the publicity in the case for more than a year immediately after their conviction—the year during which the protest in America and broad grew to towering proportions. He followed developments intimately since then. He learned to know Sacco and Vanzetti personally and also knows a great deal about their background, having lived in Italy."

Los Angeles Police Smash Protest; Pen Secret Press Lies

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 30.—The police and Uncle Sam's secret service men have "uncovered" secret plans for a gigantic march of death by Los Angeles workers in pretest against the executions of Sacco and Vanzetti, according to the press. A man and a woman were caught in the "criminal" act of "carrying huge placards bearing photographs of the death men into a building." The placards were seized and turned over to the police intelligence bureau, infamous for its lack of intelligence, according to August Vollmer, former chief of police here, who is a noted expert in the man-hunting. Federal agents were also notified, reports stated.

Flimsy Police Lies.

What became of the man and woman "apprehended" is a secret up to this hour. Their names were not even mentioned. The "dicks" are looking for a secret printing shop at present. They expect to uncover "thousands of placards and radical literature bearing instructions for the formation of a secret 'union' and the institution of a boycott."

Meeting Broken Up.

An open air meeting and a parade were both broken up by the police in the Boyle Heights section recently. The bomb squad has also been very busy these days trying to beat the records of Mitchel Palmer, former U. S. attorney general, and Wm. J. Burns.

The following story will explain what have been found here to date:

"When 'Stubby' Phillips, electrician at the Hall of Justice, deposited a gunny sack there containing grass he was taking home to feed his geese, a passerby reported to the sheriff's office that a bomb had been planted. Several deputies responded to the call, only to find the sack of grass and explanation by Phillips that he had left it at the corner of the building while he went to a parking station for his car."

Greetings to the Fifth Convention.

The DAILY WORKER extends its greetings to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party which opened last night with a mass meeting to welcome the delegates to New York. It is five years since a Communist convention has been held in this city—the last time being in December, 1922, the Second Convention of the Party.

At that time the Party had enjoyed but one short year of legal existence; it was then only emerging from the status of a propaganda organization to the tasks of serious mass work. The five years that have passed since that last New York convention have brot the Communist movement to the very forefront of labor's struggles in the United States. Whereas we were tolerated by the bureaucrats a few years ago we are now recognized as the only defenders of the elementary demands of the working class. Not only have we had to face the bitter enmity of the capitalist class—that is always to be expected—but special cadres of provocateurs, paid traducers of the revolutionary movement, have been recruited from the ranks of the labor bureaucrats to aid the master class in its fight against the vanguard of the labor movement.

In spite of the increasing intensity of the attack and in the midst of the task of reorganizing the Party from the old territorial and federation base, a heritage of social-democracy, to the scientific Communist form of shop nuclei, the Party has forged ahead and has taken the lead in every campaign in defense of labor. In the campaigns for organization of the unorganized, as in Passaic, it was the Party that took the lead. The struggle on the part of the rank and file of the miners against the cynical treachery of the John L. Lewis machine was given militant direction by the Party. When all others in the labor movement were either sabotaging or yielding to legalistic illusions in the great campaign against the murderous frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti the Party alone held aloft the banner of mass struggle. In fact there have been no major struggles or campaigns in the labor movement during recent years in which the Party did not play an important and, for the most part a dominant role.

Today, as the Fifth Convention comes into being we are sure that the Party will continue to develop its task of correctly estimating the problems before the working class of the United States and formulating policies that will enable us to move forward on the path to the proletarian revolution by mobilizing the working class against the new war conspiracies of the imperialist bandits of Wall Street.

Mellon Supports Vare's Philadelphia Hooligans

If ever there was historical justification for the observation of Marx and Engels in the Communist Manifesto that "the social scum, that passively rotting mass thrown off by the lowest layers of old society," the slum proletariat, is prepared, by its condition of life for "the part of a bribed tool of reactionary intrigue." it is to be found today in Philadalphia politics.

The real head of the national republican party, Andrew W. Mellon, billionaire banker and industrialist and secretary of the treasury in Coolidge's cabinet, is also the boss of the republican machine in Pennsylvania. Last year his candidate for United States senator, George Wharton Pepper, was beaten in the primaries by William S. Vare, boss of the thoroly rotten Philadelphia republican machine which, like most powerful city machines, is based upon the very lowest elements in society. Vare is the chief of the Quaker City hooligans—the riff-raff, the criminals, the prostitutes, the whole putrid mass of gutter-proletarians—the decayed scum thrown off by all layers of society. Like Tammany Hall, the power of the Vare machine rests directly upon the graft it permits its henchmen to share and the license it grants criminals to ply their trade against the rest of society. In Philadelphia this machine serves loyally as strike-breaker and scab-herder for the notorious poen-shop nabobs; the scab Mitten traction concern, the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the Curtis Publishing Company and all other apostles of scabbery.

But in the last senatorial campaign Vare went a step too far and challenged the eminently respectable Mr. Pepper, favorite of the eminently respectable Mr. Mellon. Mellon turned loose his purity squad to tour the state and expose the loathsome conditions prevailing in the city of brotherly love. No epithet of degradation was too violent to apply to Vare and his hooligans. But Vare was able to stuff and steal more ballots than the Mellon gang. The result was that W. L. Mellon, relative of Andrew W., and chairman of the state republican committee, supported Vare in the Fall elections and sat grimly on the platform at the Hotel Henry in Pittsburgh, while the hoodlum, Vare and his lickspittle, Harry A. Mackey, a low ignorant clown who was in charge of the city treasury of Philadelphia, performed in approved Callowhill street fashion before the eminences of finance and industry of the Smoky City. Vare praised Mellon; Mellon boosted Vare; Mackey was court jester; harmony prevailed.

The mightiest of American plutocrats united with the Philadelphia boss of the slum proletariat.

Vare, in spite of the things said against him by the Mellon gang played the game, and is now receiving his reward. He may not get to take his seat that he tried to steal in the United States senate, but he will continue to be undisputed boss of Philadelphia if Andrew W. Mellon can aid him. Vare has now selected as his candidate for mayor of Philadelphia that same buffoon, Harry A. Mackey.

An old line republican among the respectables, ex-mayor and ex-congressman J. Hampden Moore, challenged the right of Vare to appoint his hoodlums for the highest city offices. Mr. Moore had been in other days a strong supporter of Mellon and expected Mellon to aid him this time. But new times demand new alliances and Mellon has categorically endorsed Vare's man.

When strike-breakers and thugs and gunmen are needed to maintain the "American plan" of scabbery in industries controlled by Mellon the Vare gang will supply them. If a Pennsylvania election is to be stolen Philadelphia will do its share as long as Vare is Vare.

Against this thoroly rotten anti-labor gang of plutocrats and gutter snipe politicians the workers of Philadelphia are preparing to enter the field with a labor candidate and to wage a campaign that will expose the whole crew and pave the way for the building up of a state labor party that will fight against the frightful industrial tyranny maintained over the workers thru control of state power.

How the United States Army Makes Brutes Out of Men

By PAUL CROUCH.

If it had not been for the efforts of the class conscious workers represented by the International Labor Defense made in my behalf, I would still be a prisoner on that rock of hell, Alcatraz Island, facing a living death in which existence is a torture, for the rest of my life. And Walter Trumbull, sentenced by the army czars to twenty-six years at hard labor, would also be over there with me. Comrade Trumbull and I owe our freedom to the efforts of the working class.

Were Tortured For Truth.

I was sentenced to forty years at hard labor because I did not wish to be used as a tool for the enslavement and murder of my fellow workers. I saw that patriotism has two objects. First, to oppress and enslave other countries too weak to defend themselves. Second, to divert the attention of American workers while they are being exploited. Because Walter Trumbull and I saw these facts and called them to the attention of our fellow soldiers, we were considered dangerous by those who wish to use the soldier as cannon fodder to protect the millions of Wall Street.

At the time of our arrests, the Hawaiian Communist League was composed exclusively of soldiers, but it was our intention to extend our activities and unite the civilian workers and the soldier workers in a common movement against our oppressors.

Hawaiian Communist League.

Effect means little without an understanding of the cause. Therefore, it is necessary to understand the conditions in Hawaii and the army, which led to the Hawaiian Communist League, and the tactics of the government in using the soldier against the civilian worker while he, himself, is treated like a brute by his superior officers until he thinks of himself as an inferior being.

• • •

Before the organization of the Hawaiian Communist League, there had been a long strike of the Filipino plantation workers. The cost of living in Honolulu in a decent manner is even higher than here. Yet, the average wage was less than one dollar per day for ten hours hard labor under the tropic sun. The strikers demanded two dollars per day. Not only was this very modest demand denied, but the power of the government was used to aid the plantation owners in forcing the men back to work. While the American army stood ready to crush the least opposition with blood and steel, the local authorities used brutal force in suppressing the strike. If it had not been for the soldiers, the workers without doubt would have realized the motto of the Hawaiian Communist League: "Hawaii for Hawaiian workers." But the workers were forced back to work in slavery as before. Twenty-four Filipino workers were murdered at one time by the government agents of the plantation owners. Pablo Manlapit, the brave leader of the strikers, is in prison in Hawaii today, because of his efforts for the working class. He is eligible for parole, but the authorities refuse to release him unless he will agree to leave the Hawaiian Islands. This he refuses to do.

Economic Conscription.

It is said that the United States has a volunteer army. In reality, it is a conscripted army, drafted by more brutal methods than those in use by European countries. The majority of American soldiers were forced into the army by economic necessity—by unemployment and the fact that one must eat in order to live.

One hears much talk about American prosperity. Undoubtedly, the capitalists are prosperous. But in spite of all the wealth in this country, hundreds of thousands are unemployed and on the verge of starvation. Many of these unemployed enter the army. Remember, comrades, that the soldiers are the worst victims of capitalism, and we must carry our message of Revolution and freedom into the army, the last defense of capitalism. The army is the tool of capitalism, and we must take a definite and emphatic stand against imperialist wars and militarism. But the soldiers are fellow workers who have nothing in common with the interest of their officers. We must win them over to our cause. The Russian Revolution was won because the soldiers fought by the side of the civilian workers for freedom from an autocratic government and the capitalist system. That lesson some day will be repeated in America. And that day may not be far distant. There is no difference in the external appearance of a fresh egg and one ready to hatch. Capitalism contains the forces leading to its own destruction, and we must prepare for the final struggle.

Soldiers Brutalized.

The capitalist know that the soldier has everything in common with his fellow workers. Therefore, they use every possible means to prevent him from thinking and to crush all human instincts in him.

The soldier, forced into the army by economic necessity, has been told that he will get $21.00 per month plus all expenses during his period of training and that promotion with advance of pay is rapid. He understands that his job consists of drill and military duties. But he is soon disillusioned. He finds that many soldiers who have been in the army for years are still receiving only $21.00 per month. Not only that, but he must pay many of his own expenses, especially laundry and uniforms. The average soldier buys his own uniforms. In Hawaii, they were forced to do so. In some companies, the soldiers are requested to contribute to a fund so they can have better food than is supplied by the government. The soldier is forced to meet other expenses of a purely military nature.

Reading Banned.

Most intelligent workers think of the army as a place where men are taught the science of wholesale murder. Yes, it is, but they get their military drill in the morning, as a rule, and in the afternoon they put on their fatigue clothing and are required to do manual labor with non-commissioned officers for overseers. Really, every soldier in the army is a prisoner. He must be kept as busy as possible so that he will not have time to read and think. When the manuel labor in the afternoon is over, the soldier's day is not yet ended. He must keep his military equipment polished like a mirror, and is constantly preparing for inspections.

Frederick the Great once said that if his soldiers began to think not one of them would remain in the ranks. The American army officers realize that is true today. Serious reading on the part of the soldier is discouraged. Walter Trumbull was ordered by his company commander to destroy a copy of the National Geographic Magazine. It is especially undesirable for the soldier to learn about other countries. If he read about oppression in other nations he might compare it with his own enslavement and realize that the workers of all countries have a common cause; that they have nothing to lose but their chains and a world to gain.

Army Class Distinctions Rigid.

Nowhere else is class distinction so obvious as in the army. A soldier is not permitted to speak to an officer without permission, except in case of absolute necessity when on duty. If a soldier wishes to speak to a Colonel, in command of his regiment, he must explain his business to his First Sergeant and get permission to speak to the Company Commander. Then, he goes to his Captain, and salutes, standing stiffly at attention, and begins: "Sir, I have permission from the First Sergeant to speak to the Captain." He must always address an officer in the third [illegible] The word "you" applied t[illegible] is an unpardonable o[illegible] Captain may deny t[illegible] which case there is [illegible] be done or said. I could write ine[illegible] how the soldier is tre[illegible] ferior being. Along w[illegible] ment, his mind is consta[illegible] filled with the idea of nationa[illegible] pecially in Hawaii where most of the workers belong to other races. Everything possible is done to make him regard the natives with hostility and to prevent any personal association on a basis of equality. In Panama, soldiers are forbidden to marry natives. While he, himself, is being abused by his officers and taught to regard himself as far inferior to them, he is encouraged to find compensation in thinking of himself as superior to the native population so that he can be used as a tool for their enslavement.

Guard Houses Hell-Holes.

I have been discussing the relatively bright side of army life. But there are darker aspects. Alcatraz islands is more than a place of punishment. It is a sinister menace which constanty hangs over the head of every soldier, especially those who care to think for themselves or object to being cannon fooder for the use of Wall Street.

But Alcatraz and other disciplinary barracks are not the only places for the incarceration of soldiers in violation of all principles of justice and constitutional rights. Every regiment has a prison known as the guard house, where soldiers are held without bail in imprisonment at hard labor, sometimes for months, before trial. In these guard houses, soldiers often are treated worse than murderers who are imprisoned for life. In the Philippine Islands, soldiers in the guard house were forced to sleep on the cold cement floor with only one blanket. In Hawaii, at present, soldiers in guard houses are not permitted any reading matter except religious literature. They are given copies of the new testament. This is a good illustration of how religion is used as the opium of the people.

Barracks "Defies Imagination."

The soldiers in Hawaii are treated so harshly that many of them try to escape from the army and the Islands. But ships leaving Honolulu are carefully guarded against soldiers who try to escape, and those who attempt to do so are sentenced to six months in the Post Stockade at Schofield Barracks. Life there defies the imagination. Perhaps at no place in the world, except the French prison at Devil's Island, are prisoners treated more harshly. When at work, the order is: "Heads down, backs up, picks moving." Those who forget the order an instant are given extra work. When within the prison walls, they must set upon the floor. Anyone who sings or whistles is placed in solitary confinement on bread and water for seven days. No reading matter, except religious literature on Sunday, is permitted. Letters are delivered on Sunday and must be destroyed by the following day. If a prisoner is found with a newspaper or attempts to keep a letter from his mother or other relatives, he is given solitary confinement with no food except bread and water for seven days. The prisoner does not even have Sunday for a day of rest. In the morning he must prepare for inspections and in the afternoon, he is forced to submit to a dose of religious opium administered by an army Chaplain.

Boasts He Made Jail Hell.

Two former prisoners in the Schofield Stockade recently told me about a speech delivered by Major General William R. Smith, Commander of the Hawaiian Division. General Smith, they said, told them: "I have the law in this hand and you in this, and I will do with you as I wish. I know this place is hell because I have made it such."

These prisoners are not criminals. They are soldiers who could no longer endure the hell of army life. They had been led into the army by false pretenses and in desperation they tried to escape from the trap.

Press Suppresses Trial Facts.

Law is but a one sided affair with the military authorities and they do not hesitate to violate their own laws and resort to the underhanded methods. On February 19, 1925, Walter Trumbull and I were arrested and held without bail and without any charges or warrants against us until March 12. Charges were prepared then and we were tried in April. We were held incommunicado so that we could not get in touch with defense organizations and have proper defense when brought to trial. Army officers were appointed to defend us, but I could have defended myself much better without them. On February 20th, I wrote a letter from the guard house to my parents telling of my arrest. It was not mailed until about March 12th.

[illegible]rary to usual procedure, the [illegible]s were not informed in ad[illegible] trial, and after it became [illegible] Honolulu Star-Bulletin [illegible]ad been requested by [illegible]rities to suppress the [illegible]. Newspapers were [illegible]formation about the [illegible] Trumbull's trial in [illegible] prevent reporters [illegible]ent.

[illegible]ed to Alcatraz.

[illegible] our case the govern[illegible]ore anxious than usual [illegible] us to prison by any means [illegible] suppress the facts. But really our case was typical of injustice common in the army. A prisoner now in Alcatraz, Anton Regnerson, was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment on a forgery charge. I made a careful study of his case and it appears that he was the goat so that the guilty persons, perhaps in responsible positions, might go free. The army officer, appointed to defend Regnerson, called on him only ten minutes before the beginning of the trial. Regnerson gave a list of witnesses who, he said, could prove him innocent. Also, he wished to take the stand in his own defense. But the officer "defending" him would not call the witnesses as requested and told Regnerson not to take the stand, saying there was no evidence against him and that he was certain to be found "not guilty." A short time ago, Regnerson wrote to the War Department, requesting an investigation of his case. He told about the failure of his "defense" to really defend him or let him defend himself. He offered to produced proof that he was away from the city on the day the crime was committed and that it was impossible for him to have been the guilty person. The request for an impartial and thorough investigation was refused by the army authorities. Why should they investigate? What does a human life mean to them?

Join the Army and Become a Pervert!

Not all prisoners in Alcatraz are innocent. Some are guilty of the worst crimes. As an illustration of the moral influence of the army, a large per cent of Alcatraz prisoners were imprisoned for the worst perversions. They are low types of degenerates, and should be treated in medical institutions. Perversions are common among those sentenced for other offenses. Recruiting signs says: "Join the army and become a man." If many parents could see what sort of men the army made of their sons, they would wish they had never lived. Alcatraz, as well as other prisons, is a training school for crime. Soldiers are sentenced for minor offences or even fon no real crime at all, merely they can not easily lose their humanity and become brutes. Their spirits are broken in prison and their environment leads them into real crime. The real cause of crime is the capitalist system which makes a virtue of living at the expense of other.

Must Carry Message to Soldiers.

The average soldier today is without hope. He sees the brutal treatment around him, but he regards the government as all powerful, and soon his spirit is crushed. He becomes a selfish individualist with the motto: "Hurray for me—to hell with you." We must resurrect such hope as is left in the soldier. We must carry our Revolutionary message into the army, so that when the final struggle comes the soldier will fight by the side of the civilian workers instead of being used as a tool by the capitalists to murder them and help perpetuate his own enslavement.

The capitalists today are preparing for the next war. The workers, too, must prepare, or they will be used as cannin fodder against the workers of other countries and especially those of the Soviet Union. We must take a militant stand against militarism, and we must build up the International Labor Defense as the working class challenge to imperialist wars and economic slavery.

Kenneth Macgowan to Revive O'Neill and Shaw Plays

"Such Is Life," a play dealing with life in the Nineties, by Peter Blenny and Marie Armstrong Hecht, (formerly wife of Ben Hecht the novelist and playwright) will have its premiere at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Kenneth MacGowan is going in for producing again, this time in partnership with Sidney Ross. Their first offering will be "The Queen Bee," a comedy by Ruth Hawthorne and Louise Connell. This may be followed by revivals of O'Neill plays and a play or two by Bernard Shaw. MacGowan productions last season included "The Great God Brown," "Deside Under the Elms," and "Beyond the Horizon" by O'Neill.

Edward Kliscu has been engaged by Ross Productions Inc., to direct their new play entitled "Mister Romeo," which is planned for Broadway showing.

William Danforth has joined the cast of "The Circus Princess," the operetta at the Winter Garden, succeeding George Hassell, who is to be featured in "The Wild Man of Borneo."

MARIE ARMSTRONG HECHT

Co-author with Peter Blancy of "Such Is Life" which opens at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Letters From Our Readers

Sacco and Vanzetti Live in Workers' Hearts.

Dear Comrade:

Your unselfish and courageous conduct during Sacco and Vanzetti week is deign to be remembered by workers.

I used to vote for the Socialist Party without being member of it. But, the rotten conduct of S. P. leaders and A. F. of L. heads certainly disgusted me. I cannot understand how the majority of workers don't see these sold-out leaders' tricks!

We will not forget Sacco and Vanzetti, our beloved brothers—martyrs of this odious rotten system.

Let Fuller and his associates enjoy their deeds—we will not answer them by terrorist acts—but the day when the proletariat will conquer the power. We say, Sacco and Vanzetti are not dead, they are alive in our hearts, they are living in our memory,

One of the N. Y. Workers.

Comrade:

I have just read your wonderful truth revealing pages in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti. I see the cartoons of men hanging, of electric chairs, of men clustered together with weapons in their hands, of dead bodies. I see words written in large black letters that speak of murder, of labor, of Sacco, of Vanzetti, of Ludlow, of death, of fight, of August 22.

What are the colleges doing for Sacco and Vanzetti? I attended the Columbia summer school this season. There were over thirteen thousands students attending the summer session and not once did I hear a word of protest against the whole black procedure that was taking place in Massachusetts. Thirteen thousand students, most all of them teachers!

Columbia University by its silence is just as guilty as the bloodthirsty colleges in Massachusetts.

K. Gardel, New York City.

Levine's London Flight Means Break With Pilot

LONDON, Aug. 30.—"I am not running away from anybody except my wife. I seized the opportunity when I saw it and started out."

With these words Charles A. Levine yesterday explained the spectacular flight which he made alone today in the "Miss Columbia" from Le Bourget to Croydon, in two hours and fifteen minutes. Levine landed at Croydon at 4:10 this afternoon after three wobbly attempts to get onto the ground an in which he nearly ran into the customs house.

Military Camps Are Closing; Hundreds Ready for New War

PINE CAMP, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The reserve officers' training camp has already closed for the season and the citizens' military training camp will end Saturday.

A full mounted review was held yesterday. The students passed before Major-General McRae, corps area commander. The remainder of the week will be devoted to dismounted drill work. To create interest, prizes will be given to those who prove themselves the most proficient soldiers. Medals will also be awarded to those who can deliver the best five-minute speeches on citizenship.

With the demobilization of the officers of the 481st and 36th reserve regiments, nearly 125 reserve officers will have had active duty training in field artillery here this season. The work was designed as a two weeks refresher course, closing with a two or three-day period of firing on the range. Each reserve officer had a chance to direct the fire of a battery at the targets 2,000 to 5,000 yards away. French 75-millimeter guns were used throughout the reserve work.

Greetings to the Fifth Convention.

The DAILY WORKER extends its greetings to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party which opened last night with a mass meeting to welcome the delegates to New York. It is five years since a Communist convention has been held in this city—the last time being in December, 1922, the Second Convention of the Party.

At that time the Party had enjoyed but one short year of legal existence; it was then only emerging from the status of a propaganda organization to the tasks of serious mass work. The five years that have passed since that last New York convention have brot the Communist movement to the very forefront of labor's struggles in the United States. Whereas we were tolerated by the bureaucrats a few years ago we are now recognized as the only defenders of the elementary demands of the working class. Not only have we had to face the bitter enmity of the capitalist class—that is always to be expected—but special cadres of provocateurs, paid traducers of the revolutionary movement, have been recruited from the ranks of the labor bureaucrats to aid the master class in its fight against the vanguard of the labor movement.

In spite of the increasing intensity of the attack and in the midst of the task of reorganizing the Party from the old territorial and federation base, a heritage of social-democracy, to the scientific Communist form of shop nuclei, the Party has forged ahead and has taken the lead in every campaign in defense of labor. In the campaigns for organization of the unorganized, as in Passaic, it was the Party that took the lead. The struggle on the part of the rank and file of the miners against the cynical treachery of the John L. Lewis machine was given militant direction by the Party. When all others in the labor movement were either sabotaging or yielding to legalistic illusions in the great campaign against the murderous frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti the Party alone held aloft the banner of mass struggle. In fact there have been no major struggles or campaigns in the labor movement during recent years in which the Party did not play an important and, for the most part a dominant role.

Today, as the Fifth Convention comes into being we are sure that the Party will continue to develop its task of correctly estimating the problems before the working class of the United States and formulating policies that will enable us to move forward on the path to the proletarian revolution by mobilizing the working class against the new war conspiracies of the imperialist bandits of Wall Street.

Mellon Supports Vare's Philadelphia Hooligans

If ever there was historical justification for the observation of Marx and Engels in the Communist Manifesto that "the social scum, that passively rotting mass thrown off by the lowest layers of old society," the slum proletariat, is prepared, by its condition of life for "the part of a bribed tool of reactionary intrigue," it is to be found today in Philadalphia politics.

The real head of the national republican party, Andrew W. Mellon, billionaire banker and industrialist and secretary of the treasury in Coolidge's cabinet, is also the boss of the republican machine in Pennsylvania. Last year his candidate for United States senator, George Wharton Pepper, was beaten in the primaries by William S. Vare, boss of the thoroly rotten Philadelphia republican machine which, like most powerful city machines, is based upon the very lowest elements in society. Vare is the chief of the Quaker City hooligans—the riff-raff, the criminals, the prostitutes, the whole putrid mass of gutter-proletarians—the decayed scum thrown off by all layers of society. Like Tammany Hall, the power of the Vare machine rests directly upon the graft it permits its henchmen to share and the license it grants criminals to ply their trade against the rest of society. In Philadelphia this machine serves loyally as strike-breaker and scab-herder for the notorious poen-shop nabobs; the scab Mitten traction concern, the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the Curtis Publishing Company and all other apostles of scabbery.

But in the last senatorial campaign Vare went a step too far and challenged the eminently respectable Mr. Pepper, favorite of the eminently respectable Mr. Mellon. Mellon turned loose his purity squad to tour the state and expose the loathsome conditions prevailing in the city of brotherly love. No epithet of degradation was too violent to apply to Vare and his hooligans. But Vare was able to stuff and steal more ballots than the Mellon gang. The result was that W. L. Mellon, relative of Andrew W., and chairman of the state republican committee, supported Vare in the Fall elections and sat grimly on the platform at the Hotel Henry in Pittsburgh, while the hoodlum, Vare and his lickspittle, Harry A. Mackey, a low ignorant clown who was in charge of the city treasury of Philadelphia, performed in approved Callowhill street fashion before the eminences of finance and industry of the Smoky City. Vare praised Mellon; Mellon boosted Vare; Mackey was court jester; harmony prevailed.

The mightiest of American plutocrats united with the Philadelphia boss of the slum proletariat.

Vare, in spite of the things said against him by the Mellon gang played the game, and is now receiving his reward. He may not get to take his seat that he tried to steal in the United States senate, but he will continue to be undisputed boss of Philadelphia if Andrew W. Mellon can aid him. Vare has now selected as his candidate for mayor of Philadelphia that same buffoon, Harry A. Mackey.

An old line republican among the respectables, ex-mayor and ex-congressman J. Hampden Moore, challenged the right of Vare to appoint his hoodlums for the highest city offices. Mr. Moore had been in other days a strong supporter of Mellon and expected Mellon to aid him this time. But new times demand new alliances and Mellon has categorically endorsed Vare's man.

When strike-breakers and thugs and gunmen are needed to maintain the "American plan" of scabbery in industries controlled by Mellon the Vare gang will supply them. If a Pennsylvania election is to be stolen Philadelphia will do its share as long as Vare is Vare.

Against this thoroly rotten anti-labor gang of plutocrats and gutter snipe politicians the workers of Philadelphia are preparing to enter the field with a labor candidate and to wage a campaign that will expose the whole crew and pave the way for the building up of a state labor party that will fight against the frightful industrial tyranny maintained over the workers thru control of state power.

How the United States Army Makes Brutes Out of Men

By PAUL CROUCH.

If it had not been for the efforts of the class conscious workers represented by the International Labor Defense made in my behalf, I would still be a prisoner on that rock of hell, Alcatraz Island, facing a living death in which existence is a torture, for the rest of my life. And Walter Trumbull, sentenced by the army czars to twenty-six years at hard labor, would also be over there with me. Comrade Trumbull and I owe our freedom to the efforts of the working class.

Were Tortured For Truth.

I was sentenced to forty years at hard labor because I did not wish to be used as a tool for the enslavement and murder of my fellow workers. I saw that patriotism has two objects. First, to oppress and enslave other countries too weak to defend themselves. Second, to divert the attention of American workers while they are being exploited. Because Walter Trumbull and I saw these facts and called them to the attention of our fellow soldiers, we were considered dangerous by those who wish to use the soldier as cannon fodder to protect the millions of Wall Street.

At the time of our arrests, the Hawaiian Communist League was composed exclusively of soldiers, but it was our intention to extend our activities and unite the civilian workers and the soldier workers in a common movement against our oppressors.

Hawaiian Communist League.

Effect means little without an understanding of the cause. Therefore, it is necessary to understand the conditions in Hawaii and the army, which led to the Hawaiian Communist League, and the tactics of the government in using the soldier against the civilian worker while he, himself, is treated like a brute by his superior officers until he thinks of himself as an inferior being.

• • •

Before the organization of the Hawaiian Communist League, there had been a long strike of the Filipino plantation workers. The cost of living in Honolulu in a decent manner is even higher than here. Yet, the average wage was less than one dollar per day for ten hours hard labor under the tropic sun. The strikers demanded two dollars per day. Not only was this very modest demand denied, but the power of the government was used to aid the plantation owners in forcing the men back to work. While the American army stood ready to crush the least opposition with blood and steel, the local authorities used brutal force in suppressing the strike. If it had not been for the soldiers, the workers without doubt would have realized the motto of the Hawaiian Communist League: "Hawaii for Hawaiian workers." But the workers were forced back to work in slavery as before. Twenty-four Filipino workers were murdered at one time by the government agents of the plantation owners. Pablo Manlapit, the brave leader of the strikers, is in prison in Hawaii today, because of his efforts for the working class. He is eligible for parole, but the authorities refuse to release him unless he will agree to leave the Hawaiian Islands. This he refuses to do.

Economic Conscription.

It is said that the United States has a volunteer army. In reality, it is a conscripted army, drafted by more brutal methods than those in use by European countries. The majority of American soldiers were forced into the army by economic necessity—by unemployment and the fact that one must eat in order to live.

One hears much talk about American prosperity. Undoubtedly, the capitalists are prosperous. But in spite of all the wealth in this country, hundreds of thousands are unemployed and on the verge of starvation. Many of these unemployed enter the army. Remember, comrades, that the soldiers are the worst victims of capitalism, and we must carry our message of Revolution and freedom into the army, the last defense of capitalism. The army is the tool of capitalism, and we must take a definite and emphatic stand against imperialist wars and militarism. But the soldiers are fellow workers who have nothing in common with the interest of their officers. We must win them over to our cause. The Russian Revolution was won because the soldiers fought by the side of the civilian workers for freedom from an autocratic government and the capitalist system. That lesson some day will be repeated in America. And that day may not be far distant. There is no difference in the external appearance of a fresh egg and one ready to hatch. Capitalism contains the forces leading to its own destruction, and we must prepare for the final struggle.

Soldiers Brutalized.

The capitalist know that the soldier has everything in common with his fellow workers. Therefore, they use every possible means to prevent him from thinking and to crush all human instincts in him.

The soldier, forced into the army by economic necessity, has been told that he will get $21.00 per month plus all expenses during his period of training and that promotion with advance of pay is rapid. He understands that his job consists of drill and military duties. But he is soon disillusioned. He finds that many soldiers who have been in the army for years are still receiving only $21.00 per month. Not only that, but he must pay many of his own expenses, especially laundry and uniforms. The average soldier buys his own uniforms. In Hawaii, they were forced to do so. In some companies, the soldiers are requested to contribute to a fund so they can have better food than is supplied by the government. The soldier is forced to meet other expenses of a purely military nature.

Reading Banned.

Most intelligent workers think of the army as a place where men are taught the science of wholesale murder. Yes, it is, but they get their military drill in the morning, as a rule, and in the afternoon they put on their fatigue clothing and are required to do manual labor with non-commissioned officers for overseers. Really, every soldier in the army is a prisoner. He must be kept as busy as possible so that he will not have time to read and think. When the manuel labor in the afternoon is over, the soldier's day is not yet ended. He must keep his military equipment polished like a mirror, and is constantly preparing for inspections.

Frederick the Great once said that if his soldiers began to think not one of them would remain in the ranks. The American army officers realize that is true today. Serious reading on the part of the soldier is discouraged. Walter Trumbull was ordered by his company commander to destroy a copy of the National Geographic Magazine. It is especially undesirable for the soldier to learn about other countries. If he read about oppression in other nations he might compare it with his own enslavement and realize that the workers of all countries have a common cause, that they have nothing to lose but their chains and a world to gain.

Army Class Distinctions Rigid.

Nowhere else is class distinction so obvious as in the army. A soldier is not permitted to speak to an officer without permission, except in case of absolute necessity when on duty. If a soldier wishes to speak to a Colonel, in command of his regiment, he must explain his business to his First Sergeant and get permission to speak to the Company Commander. Then, he goes to his Captain, and salutes, standing stiffly at attention, and begins: "Sir, I have permission from the First Sergeant to speak to the Captain." He must always address an officer in the third person. The word "you" applied to an officer is an unpardonable offense. The Captain may deny the request, in which case there is nothing more to be done or said. But if permission is given, the soldier goes to the Adjutant and repeats the request to have the opportunity of actually addressing the sacred person of the regimental commander.

I could write indefinitely, telling how the soldier is treated like an inferior being. Along with this treatment, his mind is constantly being filled with the idea of nationalism, especially in Hawaii where most of the workers belong to other races. Everything possible is done to make him regard the natives with hostility and to prevent any personal association on a basis of equality. In Panama, soldiers are forbidden to marry natives. While he, himself, is being abused by his officers and taught to regard himself as far inferior to them, he is encouraged to find compensation in thinking of himself as superior to the native population so that he can be used as a tool for their enslavement.

Guard Houses Hell-Holes.

I have been discussing the relatively bright side of army life. But there are darker aspects. Alcatraz islands is more than a place of punishment. It is a sinister menace which constanty hangs over the head of every soldier, especially those who care to think for themselves or object to being cannon fooder for the use of Wall Street.

But Alcatraz and other disciplinary barracks are not the only places for the incarceration of soldiers in violation of all principles of justice and constitutional rights. Every regiment has a prison known as the guard house, where soldiers are held without bail in imprisonment at hard labor, sometimes for months, before trial. In these guard houses, soldiers often are treated worse than murderers who are imprisoned for life. In the Philippine Islands, soldiers in the guard house were forced to sleep on the cold cement floor with only one blanket. In Hawaii, at present, soldiers in guard houses are not permitted any reading matter except religious literature. They are given copies of the new testament. This is a good illustration of how religion is used as the opium of the people.

Barracks "Defies Imagination."

The soldiers in Hawaii are treated so harshly that many of them try to escape from the army and the Islands. But ships leaving Honolulu are carefully guarded against soldiers who try to escape, and those who attempt to do so are sentenced to six months in the Post Stockade at Schofield Barracks. Life there defies the imagination. Perhaps at no place in the world, except the French prison at Devil's Island, are prisoners treated more harshly. When at work, the order is: "Heads down, backs up, picks moving." Those who forget the order an instant are given extra work. When within the prison walls, they must set upon the floor. Anyone who sings or whistles is placed in solitary confinement on bread and water for seven days. No reading matter, except religious literature on Sunday, is permitted. Letters are delivered on Sunday and must be destroyed by the following day. If a prisoner is found with a newspaper or attempts to keep a letter from his mother or other relatives, he is given solitary confinement with no food except bread and water for seven days. The prisoner does not even have Sunday for a day of rest. In the morning he must prepare for inspections and in the afternoon, he is forced to submit to a dose of religious opium administered by an army Chaplain.

Boasts He Made Jail Hell.

Two former prisoners in the Schofield Stockade recently told me about a speech delivered by Major General William R. Smith, Commander of the Hawaiian Division. General Smith, they said, told them: "I have the law in this hand and you in this, and I will do with you as I wish. I know this place is hell because I have made it such."

These prisoners are not criminals. They are soldiers who could no longer endure the hell of army life. They had been led into the army by false pretenses and in desperation they tried to escape from the trap.

Press Suppresses Trial Facts.

Law is but a one sided affair with the military authorities and they do not hesitate to violate their own laws and resort to the underhanded methods. On February 19, 1925, Walter Trumbull and I were arrested and held without bail and without any charges or warrants against us until March 12. Charges were prepared then and we were tried in April. We were held incommunicado so that we could not get in touch with defense organizations and have proper defense when brought to trial. Army officers were appointed to defend us, but I could have defended myself much better without them. On February 20th, I wrote a letter from the guard house to my parents telling of my arrest. It was not mailed until about March 12th.

Contrary to usual procedure, the newspapers were not informed in advance of my trial, and after it became public, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin stated that it had been requested by the army authorities to suppress the facts in the case. Newspapers were given wrong information about the date of Comrade Trumbull's trial in their efforts to prevent reporters from being present.

Railroaded to Alcatraz.

Of course, in our case the government was more anxious than usual to railroad us to prison by any means and to suppress the facts. But really our case was typical of injustice common in the army. A prisoner now in Alcatraz, Anton Regnerson, was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment on a forgery charge. I made a careful study of his case and it appears that he was the goat so that the guilty persons, perhaps in responsible positions, might go free. The army officer, appointed to defend Regnerson, called on him only ten minutes before the beginning of the trial. Regnerson gave a list of witnesses who, he said, could prove him innocent. Also, he wished to take the stand in his own defense. But the officer "defending" him would not call the witnesses as requested and told Regnerson not to take the stand, saying there was no evidence against him and that he was certain to be found "not guilty." A short time ago, Regnerson wrote to the War Department, requesting an investigation of his case. He told about the failure of his "defense" to really defend him or let him defend himself. He offered to produced proof that he was away from the city on the day the crime was committed and that it was impossible for him to have been the guilty person. The request for an impartial and thorough investigation was refused by the army authorities. Why should they investigate? What does a human life mean to them?

Join the Army and Become a Pervert!

Not all prisoners in Alcatraz are innocent. Some are guilty of the worst crimes. As an illustration of the moral influence of the army, a large per cent of Alcatraz prisoners were imprisoned for the worst perversions. They are low types of degenerates, and should be treated in medical institutions. Perversions are common among those sentenced for other offenses. Recruiting signs says: "Join the army and become a man." If many parents could see what sort of men the army made of their sons, they would wish they had never lived. Alcatraz, as well as other prisons, is a training school for crime. Soldiers are sentenced for minor offences or even for no real crime at all, merely they can not easily lose their humanity and become brutes. Their spirits are broken in prison and their environment leads them into real crime. The real cause of crime is the capitalist system which makes a virtue of living at the expense of other.

Must Carry Message to Soldiers.

The average soldier today is without hope. He sees the brutal treatment around him, but he regards the government as all powerful, and soon his spirit is crushed. He becomes a selfish individualist with the motto: "Hurray for me—to hell with you." We must resurrect such hope as is left in the soldier. We must carry our Revolutionary message into the army, so that when the final struggle comes the soldier will fight by the side of the civilian workers instead of being used as a tool by the capitalists to murder them and help perpetuate his own enslavement.

The capitalists today are preparing for the next war. The workers, too, must prepare, or they will be used as cannin fodder against the workers of other countries and especially those of the Soviet Union. We must take a militant stand against militarism, and we must build up the International Labor Defense as the working class challenge to imperialist wars and economic slavery.

DRAMA

Kenneth Macgowan to Revive O'Neill and Shaw Plays

"Such Is Life," a play dealing with life in the Nineties, by Peter Blenny and Marie Armstrong Hecht, (formerly wife of Ben Hecht the novelist and playwright) will have its premiere at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Kenneth MacGowan is going in for producing again, this time in partnership with Sidney Ross. Their first offering will be "The Queen Bee," a comedy by Ruth Hawthorne and Louise Connell. This may be followed by revivals of O'Neill plays and a play or two by Bernard Shaw. MacGowan productions last season included "The Great God Brown," "Deside Under the Elms," and "Beyond the Horizon" by O'Neill.

Edward Kliscu has been engaged by Ross Productions Inc., to direct their new play entitled "Mister Romeo," which is planned for Broadway showing.

William Danforth has joined the cast of "The Circus Princess," the operetta at the Winter Garden, succeeding George Hassell, who is to be featured in "The Wild Man of Borneo."

MARIE ARMSTRONG HECHT

Co-author with Peter Blancy of "Such Is Life" which opens at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Music Notes

Luella Melius, coloratura soprano, will be the soloist at the first concert of the Beethoven Symphony Orchestra, Georges Zaslawsky, conductor on October 12th at Carnegie Hall the first of a series of seven subscription performances to be given during the course of the season.

"La Forza Del Destino" will be presented by the Free Open-Air Opera Company at Starlight Stadium tomorrow night.

Daniel Mayer recitals during the month of October will include dance recitals by Tamiris, Martha Graham and Doris Niles, a song recital by Gil Valeriano, a piano recital by Irene Scharrer and song recitals by A. Finlay Campbell and Ena Berga.

Dusolina Giannini will begin her tour in October with a recital at Richmond, Va.

Lucilla de Vescovi, soprano, will give a series of four recitals at The John Golden Theatre devoted to the songs of Italy and Latin countries.

Sacco and Vanzetti Live in Workers' Hearts.

Dear Comrade:

Your unselfish and courageous conduct during Sacco and Vanzetti week is deign to be remembered by workers.

I used to vote for the Socialist Party without being member of it. But, the rotten conduct of S. P. leaders and A. F. of L. heads certainly disgusted me. I cannot understand how the majority of workers don't see these sold-out leaders' tricks!

We will not forget Sacco and Vanzetti, our beloved brothers—martyrs of this odious rotten system.

Let Fuller and his associates enjoy their deeds—we will not answer them by terrorist acts—but the day when the proletariat will conquer the power. We say, Sacco and Vanzetti are not dead, they are alive in our hearts, they are living in our memory.

One of the N. Y. Workers.

Comrade:

I have just read your wonderful truth revealing pages in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti. I see the cartoons of men hanging, of electric chairs, of men clustered together with weapons in their hands, of dead bodies. I see words written in large black letters that speak of murder, of labor, of Sacco, of Vanzetti, of Ludlow, of death, of fight, of August 22.

What are the colleges doing for Sacco and Vanzetti? I attended the Columbia summer school this season. There were over thirteen thousands students attending the summer session and not once did I hear a word of protest against the whole black procedure that was taking place in Massachusetts. Thirteen thousand students, most all of them teachers!

Columbia University by its silence is just as guilty as the bloodthirsty colleges in Massachusetts.

K. Gardel, New York City.

Perjury Trial of Rabbi Buchler May Be Finished Today

Today will probably see the close of the trial of Rabbi Samuel Buchler, secretary of the dock department, who is accused of perjury before the Grand Jury when he was called for questioning concerning the raising of funds for the Jewish Transylvania Hospital.

Buchler, who is president of the Hospital Committee, came in for investigation by the postal authorities because of his handkerchief and pencil drives which asked for two dollar donations for the hospital. On the stand yesterday, during his trial in the United States District Court, he was unable to explain why he had not produced the books and records of the hospital when the government demanded them; but he insisted that he had at all times told nothing but the truth in answer to the Grand Jury's questions concerning his "charity" activities.

Rabbi's Claims Denied.

Buchler claimed yesterday that he never had any official connection with James R. Klemas, who is now serving a jail sentence for a charity fraud for crippled children. This is a direct contradiction of Klemas' statement that he paid Buchler $300 for the privilege of conducting a drive in the city of Baltimore for the Transylvania Hospital.

Final arguments by both attorneys in this case will be made at the opening of this morning's session and the case will then go to the jury.

Furriers Union Meeting to Fight Unemployment

fur workers has already exceeded all bounds. The army of unemployed is growing weekly and is already running into the thousands."

Forced to make some apology for this deplorable condition, the right wing officials have accused the Joint Board of crowding the trade with apprentices. The truth of the matter is that during the last strike, these disrupters of the union filled the shops with scabs and learners and now the fur workers are suffering. A large number of fur finishers have been deprived of their jobs by scabs sent by Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. "In every Associated shop," says Ben Gold, "there are learners who are taking the place of the fur workers."

Forcing Piece Work.

And in addition to this, the manufacturers are forcing the workers to accept piece work, all sorts of hurry-up systems and other methods of exploitation—all with the connivance and help of the right wing leaders.

The membership meetings tomorrow evening will welcome registered as well as unregistered fur workers, and those who have been so sadly misled by the traitorous representatives of the A. F. of L. and the International are urged to come and take part in the work of rebuilding their union. The meetings are scheduled as follows:

Cutters Local 1—Royal Hall, 55 East 4th Street; Operators Local 5—Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th Street; Nailers Local 10—Stuyvesant Casino, 142 2nd Avenue; Finishers Local 15—Astoria Annex, 61 East 4th Street.

Greet Delegates to Party Convention

ican workers who remain unorganized, William Z. Foster declared, "The Workers (Communist) Party of America is indeed the vanguard of the proletariat. It is taking the lead in the fight for industrial unionism, it is taking the lead in the organization of the unorganized, it played the leading role in the struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti.

Urging American workers to learn the lesson from the Sacco and Vanzetti case to understand the nature of the class nature of the murder and to build the International Labor Defense, a resolution adopted at the meeting declared:

"The Party shall draw the attention of the American workers to the imperative necessity of building the International Labor Defense as a protective weapon against the ever-present danger of persecution.

"The Workers (Communist) Party will do all in its power to make the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti the cherished tradition of the American working class, to plant in the heart of the American proletariat a revolutionary hatred against capitalism and a revolutionary determination to end capitalism."

William W. Weinstone who greeted the delegates, Robert Minor, who spoke on the international situation, and Benjamin Gitlow, who stressed the growing strength of the Workers Party, were other speakers.

Catching Small Fry for Indictments in Milk Graft Scandal

Indictments may be sought shortly against "Small Fry" involved in the milk graft scandal, it was said today by acting District Attorney Pecora following his return from a brief vacation during which time he studied former Supreme Court Justice Kelly's report on the recent investigation.

No More Higher-Ups.

Pecora made it plain that no persons of prominence are involved in the data uncovered by the probe and expressed the belief that all the "higher ups" have been tried and convicted.

The report is understood to name minor employes in connection with the acceptance of small "gratuities." Whether the evidence is sufficient to warrant indictments in all cases will be determined quickly and the matter placed before the grand jury, as the district attorney's office is anxious to dispose of the milk cases, Pecora said.

ON THE DEATH MASKS OF SACCO, VANZETTI

By MICHAEL GOLD.

STUYVESANT CASINO is just another of our East Side halls. It glitters with too many mirrors, is loaded with gilt, gewgaws and rococo Cupids, lyres, and wreaths; it is painfully stylish. The hall pretends like so many others to be a salon of Louis the Magnificent, but no one is really fooled by this pretense.

For the hardwood floor is covered with sawdust. There is a dingy barroom where dingy near-beer is sold. The plentiful gilt trimmings are covered with fly-specks, and just outside the door is Second Avenue, where the loud shirt-sleeved life of the workers prevails.

Clubs of Jewish and Italian gangsters hold their "social" dances in this hall. Wailing Jewish orchestras have played Bulgars and Kazatskys at many a Jewish wedding here. There have been rivers and oceans of democratic-republican speeches flowing here. Meetings of Communists and socialists, too, and in many a strike of the needle trade workers this has been a strike headquarters, blue with smoke, and strewn with banana peels.

Today it has been converted, this hall of many changes, into a shrine of the East Side workers. The death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti are on view. For two days now about 50,000 workers—men, women and children—have passed silently with bared heads before the platform on which the masks are resting. There is a quiet, a reverence, a strange solemnity such as this raucous hall has never witnessed.

He also said "Long Live Anarchy." He also said, "My love to my children, my dear wife." He may have said other things, but they are not reported. He may have repeated the word of Cambronne; he may have looked beyond the walls of the execution chamber and beheld the vast army of capitalist judges, college presidents, governors, editors, ministers and millionaires, and flung at them the splendid word of Cambronne: Merde! It is not reported, but it is there in his last smile.

Vanzetti is serene. There is a beautiful calm on his long austere face. It is the peace of a dreamer who has not dreamed in vain. Vanzetti was a man filled with the poetry of the revolution. In his great heart there was all the pathos of the present, and the glory of the future. When he died, he was sure of the future. When he died, he was sure of the revolution. His blue steadfast eyes were filled with visions of the worker's world. He needed no priest tempting him with a mythical heaven; he was his own priest, and prophet, and poet, and his heaven was not in the clouds, but on earth. All his years of agony were not in vain. All his dark hours in the death-house were not in vain. He did not forgive his judges and jailors at the last; no, he never forgave capitalism. But he forgave the revolution which had chosen him for one of its martyrs; which had led him to the electric chair; he was sure it was not in vain.

The children stare at the two significant masks and go away thoughtfully. They will grow up and remember. And the workers who file by so solemnly will remember. And history will remember, and this crude, gilt worker's hall will be remembered.

Six workers, men and women, stand constantly as a guard of honor on each side of the platform. They are dressed in vivid red blouses. There are any number of flowers, red roses and carnations, banked about the masks. These come from different unions and labor organizations. The smell of the dying flowers fills the room.

There is red bunting, and touches of black. There is a memorial sculpture, with a square worker's fist jutting out of it. There is red everywhere—bright brave red of the revolution. And a dozen cops swing their clubs idly and lounge about, marvelling at this strange solemn atmosphere.

The workers go by slowly, staring thoughtfully at the masks. They come all day and night, some of them before going to work, others weary after a day in the shops. There are many school children, thousands of them. It is a spectacle for them; everyone on the East Side has heard of Sacco and Vanzetti, and they are curious.

There are almost a million people on the East Side, and it is safe to say the vast majority of them, even when not radical, have been stirred by the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. They may not understand the broad issues involved, but with a sure proletarian instinct they feel the injustice meted out to two fellow-workers, two fellow-immigrants in the Promised Land.

The children gaze with awe. They will talk about this many a day. They will remember these names, and when they grow up the dim seeds planted during these weeks will grow into something red and daring as this bunting.

The death masks are white and still under the stare of so many eyes. Sacco, in death as in life, has his scornful defiant smile of a brave worker. There was humor in this man; as he sat down in the electric chair he greeted the frock-coated dignataries about him with a satirical: "Good evening, Gentlemen!"

Unorganized Plumbers Hold Meet Tomorrow

All unorganized plumbers are invited to attend a meeting tomorrow night, 8 p. m. at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Ave. Immediate steps to improve conditions will be taken up.

The General Association of Jobbing and Alteration Plumbers, who have announced the meeting, is a recently formed organization of workers who had been left unorganized in the past. As a result the conditions in the trade are unbelivealby poor. Unemployment is severe and regular. The most vicious extremes of the speed up system have been established. While the workers in the trade are frequently among the most skilled in the building trades, their pay is approximately one-half that received by the organized trades workers.

Policeman Charged With Murder May Plead "Insanity"

Patrolman Daniel J. Graham, indicted for the murder of Judson H. Pratt, construction company engineer whom he was assigned to guard, may seek to escape the electric chair by pleading insanity.

He has asked that Thomas McDonald, attorney, of 320 Broadway, defend him. MacDonald has not decided to take the case, but has announced that if he does he will ask for the appointment of a lunacy commission. He will probably appear for the policeman tomorrow.

Meanwhile Graham seems unmoved by the situation he is in. He ate a hearty breakfast today, which he ordered himself after spurning the usual prison fare. He has no cell mate, and has refused to see anyone but his lawyer.

At the home of the dead man, plans were completed for the funeral. Services will be held at the Winthrop Avenue house. The body of Pratt will be taken to Onondaga, N. Y., his birthplace.

Thousand Murders Per Month Committed Here

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Murders in the United States average one thousand a month the year around, Oscar Hallam, of St. Paul, Minnesota, chairman of the criminal law section of the American Bar Association told the opening session of the convention today. He advocated central bureaus of criminal identification in every state as a check upon violent crimes. Virtually all of the major crimes he said, are committed by a relatively small social group.

MRS. ROSE SACCO: A FIGHTER

By Walter Snow

"I would go to the ends of the earth for the labor cause."

These were the words of Mrs. Rose Sacco, that thin little woman in black whose devotion to her long-imprisoned husband has made her beloved by millions of workers.

The thousands who cheered her in Union Square Tuesday know she is glad of their solidarity and faithful to them. Did she not come to their memorial meeting even tho members of the Boston Defense Committee barred her from bringing her husband's ashes?

And altho after the meeting police prohibited her from going directly to view the clenched fist memorial and death masks at Stuyvesant Casino—sidetracking the automobile in which she was riding to prevent a solemn funeral march—Mrs. Sacco later in the evening visited the Casino.

When a DAILY WORKER reporter met her at the Casino, she was too tired to talk. But her faithful friend, Mrs. Jessica Henderson, of Boston, who flaunted Back Bay traditions by going to the aid of two foreign-born workers framed by Massachusetts mill owners, spoke for her.

"Rose is whole-heartedly in the fight," said Mrs. Henderson. "I have never known such a militant little woman before. She is an inspiration to me."

Mrs. Henderson was one member of the Boston Committee who kept faith with New York workers by coming to Union Square. Before she left Boston at 1 o'clock on the "Knickerbocker," of the Shore Line, she made every possible move to bring the ashes of the men for whom she had fought seven years along.

Last night she shared a single bedroom in the Hotel Sheldon, 49th St. and Lexington Ave., with Mrs. Sacco. "We don't need a suite," she said. "There are two beds in the room. That is enough for two women whom grief has made sisters."

The two women, however, do not believe in perpetually hanging their heads. They have faith in solidarity and wish to arouse and organize the working class. They intend to train Dante Sacco, the martyr's son, to become a labor organizer.

Mrs. Henderson had harsh words for the police who hurried the line of mourners past the Sacco-Vanzetti Memorial in the Casino. "Your New York police are just as brutal as the ones we have in Boston," she said.

ASKED WHAT SHE TOUGHT OF THE COMMUNIST ANTI-AMERICAN LEGION DEMONSTRATIONS IN FRANCE, HER EYES GLEAMED WITH FIRE. "IT WOULD BE MARVELOUS IF THE FRENCH WORKERS COULD PREVENT THE LEGION FROM HOLDING THEIR CONVENTION IN PARIS. I HOPE THE FRENCH MILITARISTS DON'T CAUSE ANY VIOLENCE, HOWEVER."

Mrs. Sacco said again and again that she wished to thank the thousands of workers who came to salute the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti at Union Square.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations which have extended from South America to the Soviet Union have written a new chapter in history," she declared.

Miss Luigi Vanzetti was unable to come to New York because she was prostrated at the home of Beltrando Brini, in North Plymouth—the same Brini who, as a boy, sold eels with Vanzetti in the Italian district on the day of the South Braintree murder, Mrs. Sacco explained. Mrs. Sacco will soon return to her home in Malden, Mass., from New York.

HENRI DETERDING RAGES AND TALKS "HUMANITY" AS STANDARD OIL TAKES SOVIET OIL HE LOST

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The recent apparent conflict of opinions among the leaders of Standard Oil groups as to the morality of dealing in Russian oil is causing wide spread interest in European oil circles.

Socony and Socony Differ.

The curious thing is that the Standard Oil of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company who are buying, or selling on commission, very large quantities of Russian oil, are the holders of a large amount of Nobel Oil Stock, which they purchased since the Russian Revolution. They make no scruples about doing business, while Standard Oil of New Jersey, who had no holdings in Czarist oil concerns are, apparently siding with the Shell interests who have alternately bought or bargained for Russian oil or denounced the Soviet "in the interests of humanitarianism and business morality." It is probable that the Standard Oil of New Jersey is seriously embarrassed by the over-production of their subsidiaries, and need the Eastern markets of their brother trusts to relieve the situation.

The Standard Oil of New York, which apparently finds a market within its areas in the United States of America for all, or nearly all the oil its producing subsidiaries can deliver, has created a chain of storage and distribution plants throughout the Far and Near East, and in East and South Africa. Colombo and Port Said once the important oil bunkering stations monopolized by the Royal Dutch Shell group—with their 60 per cent Dutch and 40 per cent British control—are now the arenas for a challenge by Standard Oil of New York. The latter has now storage capacity for 85,000,000 barrels in these areas and served by 43 oil tankers, a large number of barges and river craft operated by its subsidiaries. Russian oil is to fill this field.

Noble Deterding Also Bid to U.S.S.R.

Sir Henri Deterding, leader of the Shell Group, now claims that Standard Oil of New York is wrong to have relations with the Soviet, who he accuses of using money derived from oil sales for fostering Communism in the Dutch East Indies. Incidentally it is reported that Sir Henri, eminent moralist and a proponent of humanitarianism as he purports to be, made an offer, it is rumored, in November of last year for the monopoly of marketing Soviet oil in the world's market.

The campaign against Russian oil in Great Britain is dying down, as the attitude of the Government in stimulating Russian trade, despite the suspension of diplomatic relations, plainly discourages the Combine and the Rothermere Press. A recent effort by the conservative council of the small West country town of Barnstaple to prevent the Russian Oil Products Ltd. from opening a distributing depot at that place was overridden by the Home Secretary himself.

The Vacuum Oil Company has issued a circular to its representatives in Great Britain concluding with a statement to the effect that the ownership of petroleum wells in Russia has changed as a result of the revolution which, it states, is entirely a domestic affair of the Russians themselves. This comes, be it noted, from a company holding parcels of stocks from expropriated companies.

Another angle is touched by the London editor of the "Yorkshire Post." He says, "whatever may be the outcome of this conflict, some authorities hold the view that if Russian oil is seriously boycotted, it may mean that other sources of oil supplies will be seriously depleted, and that the position will eventually be reached where Russia dominates the world's oil markets. This is considered to be undesirable since it may give undue power to the Soviet in this respect."

Philippine Governor Refuses to State His Policy; Bans Newsmen

MANILA, Aug. 30.—The high-handed and characteristic action of acting-Governor General Eugene Gilmore in refusing to grant any interview to Philippine newspapermen has met with a reprisal in the form of a journalistic boycott of the American official. No Manila paper will permit the acting-Governor's name to appear anywhere in its columns until he has made a statement of his policy either personally or thru his cabinet.

The acting-Governor had issued orders banning the Philippine newspapermen from the Malacanan Palace where his offices are.

Gilmore has been acting-Governor since the death of Leonard Wood and his refusal to interview the native journalist is attributed to his uncertainty as to what form the future Coolidge rubber policy in the Islands is to take.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The members of the Connecticut State Park and Forest Commission accompanied by the directors of the Connecticut Forestry Association will make an inspection trip of the Westchester County park system on September 14th, with a view to having a park development policy for Connecticut.

The Peasant Revolution

By EARL BROWDER.
ARTICLE V.

THE rise of the peasants has been accompanied by strife and bloodshed from the beginning. It is a mistake to suppose that the recent suppressions in Hunan and Hupeh are extraordinary occurances in themselves; the new development consists only in the fact that now the central government apparatus has itself turned against the peasants. The fundamental struggle in the villages has been of the nature of civil war from the very beginnings of the peasant movement. A few original documents will show this better than all my own exposition.

Here is the speech of Yi Li-yuan, Chairman of the Hunan Peasants Union, on the occasion of the Hupeh peasant reception to the International Workers' Delegation, on April 2, 1927. It is brief enough to report in full, and is classical in its simplicity:

"I have the honor to represent the peasants of Hunan to attend this grand meeting today. I have also something to speak to you relating the conditions of the Hunan peasants. It would be greatly appreciated if you, dear comrades, could give us a little bit of assistance. Peasants of Hunan and Hupeh must have a close relation with one another as hands and feet of a body do. Hunan peasants are as poor as you are. Within this few years the rents are increased terribly by the landowners. Sixty percent of the harvest which we have got through our hard work must go to the hands of the landowners who use this unearned profit for their own amusement and comfort, while we, the peasants, have little left for our living. Furthermore, if the harvest is bad we have no means to pay the rents other than actioning our wives and children. Comrades, how pitiful we are! Should we not overthrow these cruel and wicked landowners?

Fight Landowners Also.

"We peasants want to participate in that which we have produced. We strike not only to exterminate militarists but also landowners. The landowners in forty districts of Hunan have been overthrown by us. Most of them have fled and taken refuge in the Wuhan cities. You have to help us to overthrow them too. We know that the strength of the nationalist revolution is dependent upon the help of the community. For this reason we must support the revolutionary leaders in order to accomplish the revolution. The National Peasants' Union has just been organized. Peasants of various provinces must work together so as to set up a firm foundation for the General Peasants' Union. He who opposes the peasants movement is opposing the nationalist revolution."

* * *

In "The Plough", organ of the peasant movement (issue No. 7), a report on the Kwangtung conditions says: "The present livelihood of peasants in rural villages is like that of fish in a drying pond which can neithed fly nor run away". This document, which contained the political line for the 1926 Peasant' Congress in Canton, just a year before the great upheavals in Nanking, Shanghai, Hankow and Changsha, has great historical value; like many of the Chinese documents which I gathered during my visit, it is more valuable than libraries of books written in the West, for arriving at an intimate understanding of the Chinese revolution. The following are some of the most important paragraphs.

Struggle of Peasants.

"The peasants' struggle, caused by the suppressions, has on the one hand proved the failure of being unorganized, for by want of organizations the peasants have suffered great sacrifices, and on the other hand has given teachings hastening their eagerness in revolution. It also resulted in the present movement. At present, the peasants have organizations. It is the mark of progress in the procedure of the peasant struggle. The promotion of peasant movements and the organization of peasant' unions in Kwantung were caused by two factors.

"Indirectly, it was due to the effect of the world revolutionary tendency, owing to the achievement of the revolution of workers and peasants of Soviet Russia, of the students' patriotic movement on May 4, protesting against Japan and overthrowing the traitors of the first strike of the Canton seamen, protesting against the imperialists and foreign capitalists, of the massacres in Peking and Hankow on February 7th, directly denouncing the militarists Chao Kan and Wu Peifu and indirectly against the English imperialists and American imperialists whom Chao and Wu conspired with. It is the great movement for the economical and political struggle of the masses of workers.

"Directly, it was due to the peasants' oppressions by the imperialists, militarists, compradores, and landlords.

"Upon seeing workers have labor unions, merchants have merchants associations, and students have student unions, so the peasants began to organize peasant unions. From this point of view, we may know that the significance of the beginning of the organization of peasant unions is very simple. But, really, the peasants suffered a great grievance and hoped to have unions just as merchants, students, and workers to unite themselves. The landlord class who held the economical, political and educational power of villages, upon seeing that the peasants rose to organize peasant unions, recognized that it would be harmful to the power of their controlling classes and so suppressed the peasants more seriously and made obstacle to the peasants' progress, fabricating rumors to fool and to threaten the peasants. Indedd, they tried in every way possible to violate peasants' unions and to suppress the peasants. In 1922, the Hai Fung landlords and depraved gentries conspired — with the militarist Chang Chiung-ming, ordering the District Magistrate to arrest and to imprison the peasants' leaders of the Hai Fung peasant union. In 1923, when the peasant corps of Wan Lo village of Shun Tak district prepared to inaugurate, the local Militia Board conspired with the District Magistrate Chow Chiching prohibiting the peasant corps to register.

Escape Isolation.

"In 1924, the Kong Tung landlords conspired with the District Magistrate Lei Chai-yuen destroying the Kong Tung village peasant union, Kwong Ning district, with armed force of the unlawful militia. Fortunately, since the peasant movement, the militia, defense board, self-control union, etc., which were organized by the landlords, gentries, rowdies, and peasants jointly, were all dismissed. For instance, at that time, peasants who used to be members of militia, severed their connections with the militia and rose to protest against militia. Gradually, among the rural villages, two opponent organizations existed, namely, the organization of the landlord class and the organization of the peasant class; the former are the militia, defense corps, etc., and the latter is the peasant union organized voluntarily by the peasants. None of the members of the militia of the places where peasants' unions exist, are peasants, but only the rowdies, beggars, bandits, etc. At the same time, the peasants have been able to come out of the manifold confinement of localism and clanism, and have organized village peasant' unions with peasants under different surnames, and division peasant' unions with a number of village peasant unions. SACRIFICE!

(On the Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti)

By HILDEGARDE OLGA ALEXANDER

For seven years you suffered
Tortures hard to tell
The anguish of a mind
Racked with the fires of hell.
The sufferings you bore
Were for the views you held
Not for the Braintree murder
Of the two that bullets felled.

The land of the brave
And the land of the free
Did not fulfill your hopes
You found no liberty.
For liberty was the cross
They crucified you on
And justice were the nails
That drove you thereupon.

They clamored for your body,
They vanquished not your soul,
And, in the name of justice,
Tyranny claimed its toll.
They burned your wasted body,
Yet, could they hope to still
The voices raised in protest
Against such bloody will?

On the altar of humanity
You were the sacrifice
And "Justice" jeered and sneered
When with your lives you paid the price;
But the words of many centuries
Were echoed down to you,
Your heart cried out "Forgive them
For they know not what they do."

Your martyrdom is over
Yet nothing can efface
The cause you gave your lives for
Which breathes hope to every race.

On War and Danger of War

This is the Seventh Installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

24. One must differentiate between these two forms of pacifism. While Communists are prepared patiently for weeks and months on end if necessary to explain to the workers their errors endeavoring to draw them into a "united workers' front" with the vanguard of the working class and helping them in the course of the struggle to overcome these errors, they must be utterly relentless in regard to the "leaders," who, taking advantage of the confused pacifist ideas among the proletariat, give this pacifism the definite form of a "position" and give various false explanations of the fundamental principle.

"One of the forms of deceiving the working class," wrote Lenin during the war in the year 1915, "is pacifism and the abstract preaching of peace. Under capitalism and particularly in its imperialist stage, war is inevitable. To preach peace at the present time without at the same time calling upon the masses for revolutionary action, can serve only to sow illusions, corrupt the proletariat by imbuing them with confidence in the humaneness of the bourgeoisie and convert it into a plaything of the secret diplomacy of the belligerent countries." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 51 "Pacifism and the Slogan of Peace").

25. Among these pacifist muddleheads who "preach peace without at the same time calling upon the masses for revolutionary action" must be included first of all, the British Independent Labor Party, which has not taken a single practical step towards the mobolization of the British working class and the soldiers and sailors for the struggle against British imperialism. The Independent Labor Party stubbornly rejected the united front with the Communist Party. It condemned the "violence" and armed struggle of the Chinese masses against the foreign imperialists, it advocated "negotiations" in order to paralyze the further development of the national revolutionary movement in China.

Not less harmful is another form of this "socialist pacifism," namely, the peculiar religious-mystical "anti-militarism" associated with Lansbury and supported by the Independent Labor Party. It is limited to voting against war credits, to the advocacy of individual and collective refusal to do military service and to transport arms in the event of war. This group is coming more and more under the influence of the Labor Party and is capitulating before British imperialism. This pseudo-socialist pacifism is dangerous because it creates among the workers the illusion that social democracy, at least its pacifist section, is prepared to fight against war. As a matter of fact it only helps to suppress the question of genuine mass methods of struggling against war.

Tactical Questions in the Struggle Aagainst Imperialist Wars.

26. Lenin's presentation of the question of war determines the tactics of the Communist Parties for an entire historical epoch, the epoch of imperialist wars. Slogans like "War Against War," "Convert the imperialist war into civil war," "Defeat of the home bourgeois government in an imperialist war," remain today classical examples of true revolutionary internationalism. Leninism has rendered the great service of dealing with the question of war in its concrete historical conditions; the following three types of wars were laid down: (a) wars between imperialist states; (b) national revolutionary wars against imperialism including also colonial countries (China); (c) capitalist counter-revolutionary wars against the proletarian revolution and countreis building up Socialism. The Comintern has now merely to put into concrete form—with regards to wars of the last two types—the general treatment of the question of war, which Bolshevism laid down most fully with regard to wars between imperialist states.

27. Bolshevism first of all rejects: (a) a frivolous treatment of the question of war. In his draft of instructions to the Russian delegation to the Hague conference, Lenin very emphatically warned against any frivolous treatment of the methods of struggle against war. He advised all Communists Parties to take into consideration the actual conditions in which war arises; the secrecy with which preparations are made for it; its unexpected outbreak, the helplessness of the "ordinary organization of the workers" even if it calls itself revolutionary, in the face of an actual menace of war; the fact that "the overwhelming majority of the toilers will decide the question (of national defense) in favor of their own bourgeoisie, owing to the powerful pressure exercised by the bourgeois state apparatus. FOREIGN CONCESSIONS CAN DO PROFITABLE BUSINESS IN SOVIET UNION

By TOM BARKER.

LONDON, (By Mail) Aug. 22.—"In our enterprise we have gone back into Russia purely as business people and have been treated as such by the Soviet Government," said Mr. Herbert Guedella, chariman, at the ordinary general meeting of the Lena Goldfields, Ltd., in London on July 29th. "It is not for me to criticize the recent action which has disturbed the relations between the governments of Great Britain and Soviet Russia."

Talks About Russia.

"I presume," he went on, "that we may be permitted to claim some little experience of working conditions in Russia, and that in fact we are better acquainted with them than the various people who write so much in the British press on this subject. We employ many thousands of workers, and, thru the various trade unions we work under collective agreements, which are strictly adhered to. I can assure you our workers are not underpaid, and their efficiency compares favorably with those of other European countries."

Earlier in his report, Mr. Guedella showed the great difficulties associated with operating gold fields in the inaccessible reaches of the Lena River, which drains into the Arctic Ocean thru a vast delta. "We have to provide not merely technical stores and spares for our business but also the necessities of life for the 5000 workers and dependents at Bodaibo, the center of the Lena enterprise, but we buy in London a variety of goods unobtainable in Russia. We buy vast quantities of flour, etc., in Moscow, while livestock is purchased in Mongolia and driven across the plains to Irkutsk where we undertake the necessary transport for the final thousand miles to Bodaibo."

Hard Conditions.

"In winter we are cut off for supplies, only the mail getting thru. We operate the 95-mile length of railway from the river to Bodaibo.

"Engineers estimate that about 114 million cubic yards of gold bearing sands have already been proved giving a gold content of about 35 cents per yard. This will give sufficient work for four of the largest type Bucyrus dredges for ten years. Our first dredge will start work next year and will be followed speedily by others, which will supersede the present uneconomical drift mining.

Get Copper and Iron.

"Under a fifty-year concession we have taken over the copper and iron mines and smelters and iron works of the Sissert property and similar deposits and installations at Revda in the Urals. Our chief attention will be devoted to the famous Degtiarsky copper seam which is estimated to contain 6,000,000 tons of pyritic ore, and to treat which we are considering the erection of a plant with a capacity of 2000 tons of ore a day."

"Our third area is 15,500 square miles in the Altai-Irtysh river basin with its immense reserves of silver, copper and lead. I can not be considered as exaggerating," observed Mr. Guedella, "if I use the word 'enormous' with regard to its future possibilities."

Following the report of a substantial profit on the year's working Mr. Guedella concluded "So far as possible we have always endeavored to adhere to the general basis of agreement, but, when necessary we have not hesitated to approach the Chief Concessions Committee to point out our difficulties in certain directions. On such occasions we have always received sympathetic consideration. I think that it has now been recognised that our sole policy is to create and establish our enterprise on a large scale on sound and businesslike lines with results that cannot but be reciprocally advantageous both to the Soviet Government and ourselves."

PLAN SACCO-VANZETTI ASHES IN PARIS BY SEPT. 19

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

RUMORS persist that Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce is the favored candidate of the administration for the G. O. P. presidential nomination. This should not surprise anybody. Hoover would make an efficient tool of American imperialism in the white house. He has served Wall Street well for many years. Yet, Lowden, Dawes and others may be more adept at manipulating the political machinery than Hoover.

AL SMITH is believed to have a good chance of winning the Democrat party nomination. His chief rival William Gibbs McAdoo is pretty well out of the picture. With Smith leading the voters that follow the democrat banner and Hoover riding the elephant, the financial rulers of this country can take a trip around the world with an easy conscience knowing that no matter which of the two loses, they will win. Until the workers of this country seriously begin to build a Labor Party the ruling-classes of this country can sleep easily.

SUPERINTENDENT McAndrew of the Chicago school system has been temporarily ousted from his position by the Thompson administration. McAndrew is an extreme reactionary and aroused the anger of the school teachers when he prohibited the teachers' councils from meeting during school hours. Since he assumed office the teachers have had no say in determining what kind of instruction should be given the children. McAndrew's discomfiture will cause no pain to the school teachers.

LORD CECIL has resigned from the Baldwin cabinet because of disagreement with his colleagues over the question of naval disarmament. It should not be assumed because of this that Cecil does not believe the British Empire should have the largest navy in the world. He does. His disagreement with the rest of the cabinet is over method rather than a question of principle. His letter of resignation, however, reveals that Great Britain as well as the United States and Japan did not have a serious interest in disarmament but were simply jockeying for position. Confirmation of our own conviction from such an authoritative source is not to be sneezed at.

ACCORDING to newspaper dispatches from Martins Ferry, Ohio, the striking miners and company gunmen are exchanging shots. Driven to desperation by the conduct of the strikebreakers the miners were forced to retaliate. What is John L. Lewis doing or saying those days? There was a time in the history of the United Mine Workers of America when the entire strength of that once powerful organization would be thrown into the struggle against the employers. Now Lewis and his good man "Friday" Searles, are too busy going around "exposing" radicals at chambers of commerce meetings to have any time left for fighting the miners' battles.

THE Sacco-Vanzetti trial was fair according to Attorney-General Arthur K. Reading of Massachusetts, speaking in Buffalo. It was perfectly fair to the ruling class that wanted their blood but if the farce was prolonged for seven more years the two condemned workers would have no more chance to escape with their lives than a mouse who is being teased by a cat.

Convict Worker for Carrying Red Flag At Union Sq. Meet

Placido Rodriguez, a waiter who was arrested Monday when the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting in Union Square ended, was found guilty of disorderly conduct yesterday by Magistrate Goodman in the Yorkville Court. He was remanded until tomorrow for investigation and sentence. The original charge was criminal anarchy.

Rodriguez, together with thousands of other workers had started to follow the automobile bearing the armed fist that was going to Stuyvesant Casino when he was taken into custody. Because he was carrying a red flag he was severely beaten and then placed under arrest by two detectives. Mounted police rode into the crowd of workers who were near Rodriguez and threw many to the sidewalk under the horses' hoofs.

5th Party Convention Opens Today

IRVING PLAZA HALL SCENE OF 4-DAY MEETING

Lovestone and Foster to Make Reports

Business sessions of the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party will begin today at one o'clock at the Irving Plaza Hall, Irving Place and 15th Street, when Jay Lovestone, acting secretary of the Party since the death of C. E. Ruthenberg in March, calls the delegates to order.

The convention actually got under way with the holding of the demonstration of welcome at the Central Opera House last night.

Entire Nation Represented.

All sections of the nation will be represented at the convention by the 50 delegates, some of these coming from the states of Washington and California on the Pacific Coast. There will be about 30 fraternal delegates from various organizations. All Party publications have been invited to send fraternal delegates.

Acting Secretary Lovestone will make the report to the convention for the political committee. William Z. Foster will report on the trade union work of the Party.

Four-day Convention.

It is expected that the convention will extend over four days. Sessions will be held after the first day as follows: 10.30 to 1 o'clock; 2.30 to 5.30 o'clock; 7.30 to 10.30 o'clock.

ADD GUNMEN FOR OHIO MINE AREA; EVICTIONS GROW

Wives and Daughters of Miners Fight Scabs

BELLAIRE, O., (FP.) Aug. 30.—The ruthless determination of Ohio mine operators to cut wages below the subsistance level is bearing fruit in acutely strained relations in the mining camps. The lockout declared on April 1 was simply the formal recognition of a condition that had existed in some cases several years previous. The union scale of $7.50 a day would not be paid, the operators asserted, while coal was being mined in West Virginia and Kentucky, across the river, for $5 non-union.

Gunmen Increase.

Though some mines have remained closed down, others have attempted to resume on a non-union basis with strikebreakers brought from Pittsburgh and elsewhere. These have encountered unionists who in most cases persuaded them by various devices to quit the job and clear out. There have been troop movements and enrolment of mine guards. These are gunmen in company pay but deputized under state law by the sheriffs.

The wives and daughters of miners, seeing strangers coming to rob the men of their jobs, are among the most active elements in putting a sense of shame into the invaders, both strikebreakers and guards.

Spirit is Militant.

There is a good deal of militancy remaining in the Ohio district of the United Mine Workers. Traditions of the brave old days when unionists stopped trains and uncoupled locomotives pulling scab coal to the lake ports from across the river are not forgotten. The memory is still green of the occasion when the militia was met at the station as it came into the coal fields and each soldier was stripped of rifle and bayonet as he stepped off the train. The strikers then formed the guardsmen in column of fours and marched them to the next station.

The companies are using methods of warfare against labor unprecedented in this state. They are copying the western Pennsylvania operators. The Florence mines at Glen Run shut off the town's water supply when the miners would not go underground at the non-union rate. Evictions from company houses are becoming more frequent throughout the district. The principal points of struggle are Bellaire, Martin's Ferry, Shadyside, Steubenville and Yorkville.

CHEN AND MADAM SUN YAT SEN ON WAY TO MOSCOW

(Spcial To Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, Aug. 30.—Mme. Sun Yat-sen and Eugene Chen, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, are on their way to Moscow via Khabarovsk.

In reply to the greetings of representatives of the Communist Party, Chen declared, "The left wing of the Kuomintag has not been destroyed by the quarrels among the Wuhan generals. In the struggle which will develop in the very near future we will be able to bring the revolution to victory in co-operation with the Communist Party."

Eugene Chen and Mme. Sun Yatsen left the Wuhan Government when it turned counter-revolutionary—fought the left wing elements and refused to develop the agrarian revolution.

Harbor Workers Lose Benefits of Federal Compensation Laws

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 30.—Workers on floating rafts and floating pile drivers in the construction of bulk heads, piers, docks and industrial plants at the water's edge have been excluded from the protection of the longshoremen's and harbor workers' compensation act. These workers are thus thrown into the twilight zone between land workers protected by state laws and water workers who come under the new federal compensation act.

Navy Protects Her Own; Acquits Aviator Charged With Endangering Public

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Lieut. Thomas R. Williamson, Jr., naval aviator on trial before a general naval court martial, charged with acrobatics in the air and flying too low over apartment houses on July 24, today was acquitted on four specifications and presumably convicted on two.

The specifications "not proven" were the second, involving acrobatics, prohibited by the navy below an altitude of 1,500 feet, and four, five and six, all of which charged violations of the department of commerce air regulations.

Announcement of the verdict concerning charges of low flying will not be made public officially until after review by the secretary of the navy.

CHICAGO MOVIES SUSPEND; 25,000 UNION MEN STRIKE

CHICAGO, Aug. 30. — Over 400 theaters in Chicago and its suburbs continue to be closed following the strike caused by a dispute between the motion picture operators union and the motion picture exhibitors' association.

25,000 Idle.

Twenty-five thousand employes in the theatres are affected by the strike which was called by the union when the bosses refused to reinstate four operators in the Belmont and Orpheum theatres.

It is estimated that a half a million people in the city were deprived last night of their usual form of amusement, with the result that other business activities of a similar nature reported flourishing incomes.

Neither side today offered any hope of immediate settlement altho the theatre owners were to meet today to consider whether they would accept arbitration in case the union made overtures.

Strike 100% Solid.

Representatives of the union, however, declared that victory would come shortly, the men being 100 per cent behind the strike. They explained that the bosses' interpretation of their agreement which the latter claim gives them the right to fire workers "when they change their program" constitute a serious threat to their organization.

Meanwhile radio dealers reported heavy sales increased today as a result of the shutdown of the theatres.

OPENING DAY OF AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION IS TO WITNESS GIANT MEMORIAL BY FRENCH COMMUNISTS

Luigia Vanzetti Plans to Sail on Cunard Liner Soon on Return to Italy

It became more certain yesterday that the ashes of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will arrive in Paris before September 19th when the convention of the American Legion is scheduled to open. French workers are striving to offset the meeting of the American fascists with a giant Sacco-Vanzetti memorial.

The ashes of the two murdered workers will be divided and placed in four urns, two of which will go to Paris with Luigia Vanzetti, sister of Bartolomeo, two of which will remain in Plymouth.

Sailing on a Cunard liner in a little over a week, Luigia Vanzetti will reach Paris before the opening of the Legion convention. Her arrival in Paris was once the occasion of a mass demonstration for Sacco and Vanzetti. But that was before her brother and Sacco had gone to their doom in the electric chair.

The arrival of the ashes of the murdered workers in Paris is expected to crystallize sentiment against American capitalism which perpetrated the murder and to prevent the opening of the American fascist congress in Paris.

Luigia Vanzetti is expected to sail with the ashes on either the Mauretania, which leaves New York, Sept. 7th, or the Caledonia, which leaves on the 8th.

Belong to Working Class.

Mrs. Sacco, wife of Nicola Sacco, said yesterday that the ashes "do not belong to any members of the family but to the working class of the world which should decide their final destination."

More than 150,000 workers have already viewed the death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti at Stuyvesant Casino, Second Ave., near Ninth St. Entire families pass by the platform on which the masks are placed. They

Soviet Correspondent Expelled from France for 'Exaggerated' Report

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Jules Broune, the Paris correspondent of the Soviet Union's News Agency, Tass, has just been expelled from France by order of the Minister of the Interior.

Broune, who has been sending too truthful reports of the brutalities committed against the workers during the recent Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations in Paris, is charged with "exaggeration." His expulsion on such a charge is felt to be part of the campaign to reassure the American Leegionnaires that the French government will permit no action by the workers during their stay in Paris.

Neither Rain, Police Nor Sabotage Hurt Meeting

BY MICHAEL GOLD

Nothing could hurt the great mass memorial in Union Square yesterday for Sacco and Vanzetti. A thousand cops on horses and with machine guns were unavailing. The sabotage of the mean-minded Boston committee and the socialists was ineffectual. Lightning, thunder and buckets of rain could do nothing. The New York workers were aflame with proletarian spirit. They held their demonstration.

The ashes of our two martyrs did not arrive, as scheduled. Mary Donovan, an obscure spiteful female with a great lust for publicity was responsible for this. But Mrs. Sacco, that wonderful, patient heroine came from Boston to the demonstration. She, like her husband, is bigger than the two little parasites who have fastened on the Sacco case in Boston, and have tried to keep it from the world. Mrs. Sacco believes in the revolution. She belives in the working class of the world. And so she was present yesterday.

She came to the stand erected in Union Square. She stood there in black, amid the red carnations and red bunting, against a background of fifty machine-guns, and an army of cops. The faces of thirty thousand workers, pale and exalted, were lifted to her.

The rain poured in torrents. The rest of the city rushed for shelter, or fled to subways and taxicabs. But Mrs. Sacco stood silently in the rain, and the great crowd cheered hre again and again.

It was one of the signs of the spirit this legal murder has evoked in the hearts of the workers of the world. The workers will never forget. They will brave more than rain and police and sabotage before the end of this case is come.

There were cops on the roofs, with machine guns looking down on the Red Square of New York. There were cops on all the side streets, and stolid ranks on horses about the crowd. There were young cops, old cops, cops with cruel rumpsteak faces, cops with shifty eyes and hard-bitten mouths.

Fire engines came screaming through the huge crowd several times. The horses pressed against human flesh. The cops snarled and sneered and prodded. But on four platforms agitators preached the revolutionary lessons of the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. And dripping with rain, 30,000 workers stood their ground and listened.

A bit of memorial sculptry by Adolf Wolf was unveiled on the central platform. It was a cubist pyramid design, out of which the square fist of a worker was thrust toward the sky.

Mother Bloor, her white hair drenched with rain, her young eyes bright with her wonderful spirit, spoke from a platform. On another was Comrade Patterson, a Negro leader who made such a gallant protest in Boston last week, and was arrested several times. On the other three platforms other speakers shouted the great slogans of the revolution—the great words that will some day come to life even in America, and set the workers free.

Italians in the crowd sang their spirited song, Bandera Rossa. Then everyone sang the International. The cops listened; the skyscrapers listened; the subway shook with the sound; the song was heard in Moscow, in Hankow, in Boston. It was heard somewhere, somehow, by the two men who have just been killed for this song.

The darkness came. The meeting broke up. But the crod would not go home. It circled about the square, pushed and prodded by police. A comrade pulled out a big red flag and waved it in the crowd as he passed the Communist newspaper, "Freiheit." Six mad cops pounced on him, while the crowd booed, and led him to the lockup.

The crowd drifted down Fourteenth street, while dozens of motorcycle machine gun cops raced up and down waving clubs. The crowd drifted down Second avenue. They were singing. For hours, even after the police had broken up various groups, clubbing and arresting them, crowds of young workers roamed the East Side streets, shouting for Sacco and Vanzetti and singing revolutionary songs.

No, nothing could hurt this demonstration. Sacco and Vanzetti have not died in vain—their deaths will be remembered whenever a mass of workers gather, as they gathered yesterday, and about them are ranged the machine guns and uniforms of the murderous capitalist system.

LUIGIA VANZETTI TO SAIL WITH URNS SOON; 150,000 VIEW DEATH MASKS IN MEMORIAL PROCESSION

Thousands of Floral Wreaths Brought by New York Workers to Stuyvesant Casino

will be on view until midnight when they will be sent back to Boston.

Police Brutality.

Many children were among those who viewed the masks.

Representatives of all sections of the working class population of New York and vicinity are included among those who are paying their final respects to the two martyrs. Occasionally there is a slight lull in the line, then suddenly hundreds of workers pour into the building.

The only unpleasant part of the entire proceedings is the large detail of police and detectives present. While all the workers remove their hats on entering the hall, the representatives of "law and order" walk down the building without showing any consideration for the solemn occasion. Six policemen and several members of the bomb squad are detailed around the stand on which the masks recline. They see to it that the passing workers do not linger, roughly ordering them out thru a side door. Many of them are compelled to leave before they have ample opportunity to view the masks and the wreaths.

Many Wreaths Arrive.

In addition to the wreaths received Monday, many more arrived yesterday. They were from the Workers Unity House, Hungarian International Labor Defense, New Masses, Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, Domenico Di Sinti, Joint Board, Shirts and Boys' Waists Makers' Union, Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, Window Cleaners' Union, Industrial Workers of the World, Painters' Union, residents of the United Workers' Cooperative House, Downtown Jewish Workers' Club, Anti-Fascist Society Masserano and several from shops where the workers took up collections to purchase a wreath.

Many children requested flowers as a remembrance of the occasion. The request was granted in scores of cases.

Beat Up Demonstrators.

Because he shouted for Sacco and Vanzetti Monday evening at 10th St. and First Ave., Sam Goldstein was brutally beaten up and then taken to Bellevue Hospital where he is now being held. The police are trying to claim that he is insane, a tactic instituted against demonstrators, when Powers Hapgood was recently arrested in Boston.

Memorial Committee Raps Brutality of Police at Union Sq.

"In the name of the Sacco and Vanzetti Memorial Committee, which arranged the ceremonies in Union Square on Monday I wish to condemn the brutality of the police in handling the 30,000 people assembled there," said Clarina Michelson, Secretary of the committee in a statement issued yesterday.

"We will admit a huge mass meeting of this kind is trying on the nerves of police officers, even though the people are good-natured and willing to obey traffic regulations as were the crowds on Monday. But police officers do not need to express their nervousness by riding their horses into non-resistant crowds, by knocking over baby carriages and trampling children under-foot as they did on Second Ave., or by suddenly leaping out at men and women from a side street, as they did at Broome Street, and beating and slugging defenceless men and women like a group of drunken gangsters on a spree.

"If this is what is called protecting a peaceful mass meeting, then no meeting is safe in New York, and someone will have to tell us how to protect ourselves from our so-called protectors. It is time the police department officials devised a policy of some kind in handling these meetings. Slugging seems to be one of the orders of the day at present, and if it meets with the approval of those higher up, the citizens of New York would like to know it.

"Despite the intimidating tactics of the police, indications are that over 150,000 sympathizers have passed through Stuyvesant Casino, on Second Ave., where the death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti are on view.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Prospects of a take-off by "Old Glory" for Rome within the next twenty hours waned Monday, when Lloyd Bertaud and Jones De Witt Hill inspected the runway and found it a soggy stretch of mud from the recent downpour.

"The Drawings in This Book Are Aflame With the Idea of the Class Struggle—"

The case of
Sacco and Vanzetti
in CARTOONS from
THE DAILY WORKER
by Ellis

WITH A SPLENDID INTRODUCTION BY
Joseph Freeman

ELLIS has given us in this book an inspiration to carry on the brave fight of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The drawings—like their conduct—call not for mourning but for struggle"—says Jos. Freeman, noted writer in his introduction.

Drawn in the heat of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti these inspired cartoons are a beautiful memorial tribute to the memory of two brave workers. Here is a book that will speak more than you possibly can to the man in your shop and trade union.

Only one cartoon has been placed on each page. EVERY PAGE IS SUITABLE FOR FRAMING. The book is large size—9x12 inches on heavy antique art paper. Send for a copy today. The price has been lowered practically at cost to assure the widest possible distribution in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

WHEAT FARMERS RIPE FOR FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT CONVENTION DELEGATE STATES

Alfred Knudson, delegate from the unorganized territory to the Fifth Party Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party in New York City, reports that altho the wheat yield per acre is considerably larger this year than last, the farmers are no better off.

Banks Squeeze Farmers.

Formerly, Knudson said, it was possible for a farmer to get the necessary credit from the banks in order to buy seed, machinery, stock, etc., but this has now become increasingly difficult. This year it is almost impossible and the banks are demanding the limit in security for small loans.

The wheat farmers of Northwest are not only in debt for this year's outfit but for the sums they have had to borrow for from six to eight years ago. So that if the farmer is to pull thru and just make this year's payments he is wholly dependent on the price he gets for his wheat.

Farmers Leaving Old Parties.

But the Northwestern farmer is more and more becoming aware that there is no hope for him from the two old political parties and that it is not possible to solve his problem under the capitalist system, Knudson declared. Altho many of the farmers still remain in the ranks of the old parties, the dissatisfaction is so general that it is only a question of an organized effort, a driving force, to crystallize it. The Workers Party must supply this driving force, says Knudson.

"Many of the former Non-Partisan Leaguers are still rallying around their leaders who accept office under the banner of the republicans," he continued. "And there is very little to hope from the leaders. But the increasingly bad conditions are detaching these progressive farmer elements from the old parties and a real Farmer-Labor movement is confidently expected to crystallize before the 1928 elections.

North Dakota Farmers Call For Farmer-Labor.

"The general feeling thruout the wheat country may be gauged by the resolutions passed recently at a farmers' meeting at Williston, North Dakota. In clear, terse language the farmers decided that the time has come for them to make a formal break with the old parties and to make the Farmer-Labor Party a real issue in the coming campaign.

"The farmers have begun to realize that with their leaders daily and continually forming alliances with the banks and business interests, with debts threatening to swamp the wheat farmer on all sides, and no real relief in sight, his sole hope lies in a strong unified Farmer-Labor Party. It is to accomplish this object that the calling of a Northwestern Farmer-Labor Convention which will include all the elements in the wheat lands is now being proposed.

"It is the task of the Workers Party to vitalize and organize the now emerging political consciousness of the Northwestern farmer and to assist him in his effort to establish a mighty Farmer-Labor movement in the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota."

AMTER DESCRIBES GREAT PROGRESS IN ORGANIZING SHOPS IN DISTRICT NO. 6; ORGANIZERS REAL NEED

Israel Amter, Organizer of District No. 6, (Cleveland) now in New York City to attend the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, reports that the work of the Party in District No. 6 is progressing at a speed which has not been equalled before in the history of the District and is only retarded at present by a dearth of comrades fitted to organize the field which lies open to the Party.

Shop Work Most Important.

The most important work which is being pushed in the Ohio District, despite the fact that there are not a sufficient number of trained organizers to cope with the demand, is our work in organizing the shops and in publishing shop papers. The bulk of the activity is concentrated in the steel, mining, rubber and automobile industries.

There are, at present, nuclei functioning in 26 shops in eleven of which shop papers are being regularly published. Shop papers are also being published, tho irregularly, in shops where the Party possesses no nuclei.

Miners Show Fight.

The industries in the Ohio District depend for their labor supply chiefly on the South Slavs, Poles and Russians, tho their are large native American elements, especially in the mines. The Party is learning now to solve the problem of cooperation between these different racial groups who are purposely hostile by the propaganda of the bosses.

In discussing the situation in the Ohio coal fields, Amter declared that the miners are showing a splendid fighting spirit for they know that if bosses succeed in making the Ohio fields non-union it means the smashing of the union thruout the country. But the leaders are weak or fakers.

Workers Rescue Speaker From Jail.

Comrade Amter tells how, in Martins' Ferry, a coal town where the police revoked their permission for a Sacco and Vanzetti protest meeting, and arrested the Workers Party member who was trying to speak, the miners and steel workers streamed thru the streets of the town in thousands in order to rescue the speaker from the jail.

On the other hand, he tells the story of Earl Daugherty union leader, who ordered back the strikers who were marching to plead with the miners in the Hocking Valley fields.

The problem in all the important industries in Ohio, according to Amter, is the formation of shop committees. The shop nuclei have proved what can be done in the factories and it is only a question of sufficient organizers in order to make still more effective our activity among the shops of District 6.

District No. 6 made tremendous efforts in protesting against the murder of Sacco and Vanbetti. Despite the attitudes of the Central Labor Council and the socialist party that refused a united front with the Workers Party, the demonstrations in Akron, Cleveland, Youngstown, Conneaut, and Canton called out thousands of workers. The meetings and processions in a number of these big industrial towns were the largest ever held there.

Sacco and Vanzetti Work Wins Workers.

Thru its agitation in the shops and with the shop papers, the Party in District No. 6 was able to tie up its struggle for Sacco and Vanzetti with the demands of the workers for the election of shop committees or for unionization where unions do not exist. Thousands and thousands of workers have seen thru the Sacco and Vanzetti demonstrations that the Workers Party is the only Party leading the masses. The best elements in the International Workers of the World and the socialist labor party have been won over thru the fight against the Boston murders.

Organizers Needed.

Much credit for the success of the Sacco and Vanzetti fight must go to the International Labor Defense which successfully organized meetings and demonstrations thruout the state.

While much of Ohio remains to be effectively organized, especially in the western half of the state, great strides forward have been made, and our future success depends in great measure on the number of organizers we can send into the rubber, automobile and steel mills and the mines.

PROGRESS BEING MADE IN DISTRICT 3 IN SPITE OF GREAT DIFFICULTIES, IS DELEGATES' REPORT

The terror of the coal companies in the anthracite field is so terrific that the delegates from District No. 3 to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party now being held in New York City, have requested that their names be omitted from the reports they have made of the conditions in the hard coal region.

Miners Fight Against Obstacles.

Thousands of anthracite miners are out of work and wages are worse than ever but the fight to strengthen the union in the hard coal district goes on unflinchingly. Though whole companies, like the great Hudson Coal Co. which operates mines all thru the anthracite, have shut down 100 per cent, the miners have a strong fighting spirit and are carrying on the struggle despite the weak or treacherous attitude of their union leadership.

Wages have generally never been so bad altho there has been no cut which embraces the whole industry. But the coal companies are carrying thru a wage slashing system by cutting miners' wages in isolated districts.

Thru the Sacco and Vanzetti agitation carried on by the efforts of the Workers Party and the International Labor Defense in District No. 3, the miners and other workers in the anthracite have come to see that the Workers Party is the only party with a militant mass policy. It is the only party which is fighting the battles of the workers.

Aid the Soft Coal Miners.

The work of the fractions in the union, while hampered by the reactionary policy of such leaders as President Rinaldo Cappellini in District No. 1 is slowly but effectively making itself felt. The most important problem outside of the organizational work which now confronts the Party in District No. 3 is that of extending aid to the striking soft coal miners. This is a task which the entire membership of District No. 3 must marshal its forces to accomplish. The conditions among the soft coal miners are worse than in the anthracite and the Party can accomplish real work in this situation.

Sacco and Vanzetti Protest Effective.

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti created an extreme tension thruout the hard coal districts and the Party bent every energy to the calling of protest meetings and processions to secure the release of the two victims. Hundreds of miners have been brot closer to our Party thru this agitation, the delegates believe, and the full success of the Party's activity has not even been felt yet.

Owning Class Fears the Field of Class Struggle in the Textile Industry

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IN its account of the impressive funeral of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Sunday, the Boston Herald said:

"The strangest procession Boston has ever seen passed thru the rain-soaked streets yesterday behind the bodies of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti."

But Boston is destined to see yet stranger sights. From the soil of the working class struggle, enriched by the blood of our martyred dead, there painfully rises the power of labor, organized and militant.

That will not only be a strange sight for Boston, for Massachusetts, for New England. It will be an unwelcome sight for those who put Sacco and Vanzetti to death in the electric chair. It will be like seeing the ghosts of the dead.

Sacco and Vanzetti died that the power of labor in New England might grow. While Attorney General Arthur K. Reading, of Massachusetts, tells the members of the National Association of Attorneys General, gathered in convention at Buffalo, New York, that Sacco and Vanzetti were given a "fair" trial, the actual pauperization of the textile workers of New England continues.

Attorney General Reading thus tries to bolster the lie that sticks hard in throats of the Massachusetts murder crew, while forgetting the actual industrial conditions in Massachusetts that will bring other Saccos and Vanzettis into the field of the class struggle.

The monster crime committed against Sacco and Vanzetti has convinced new millions of workers, not only in the United States but thruout the world that there can be no "justice" for workers under the capitalist system. Capitalist injustice to labor thus becomes more apparent than ever, in the courts, in industry, everywhere.

While the attorney general of the mill barons of Massachusetts is peddling his piffle in Buffalo, the agent of America's industrial overlords, Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, is sending out his propaganda, thru the governmental "bureau of the census" aiding the profiteers in the textile industry. No effort to aid labor, but, to quote from the circular issued:

"To aid business executives in analyzing tendencies in production, prices, stocks, exports, etc., in the textile field, the Department of Commerce has just published the Textiles Section of the Record Book of Business Statistics. In this Bulletin, which will be followed by sections relating to other industries, there are presented statistics month by month from 1909 thru 1926, were available, on the various phases of the cotton, wool, silk, rayon and other textile industries. The statistical data are supplemented by descriptive text, illustrating the actual uses of this material by business concerns in planning sales and production policies, purchasing, etc., thru the publication of these data curently in the Department's monthly 'Survey of Current Business.' ".

Thus the government that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti shows its eagerness to aid the textile barons directly benefitted by the lynching of these two workers.

At the same time the socalled "department of labor" of the government, presided over by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, the Pittsburgh banker, develops its attack against the foreign-born and inaugurates a campaign for new deportations.

One need only look at the actual statistics to learn the rich prize that New England's industrial oligarchs had staked in the slaughter of Sacco and Vanzetti. They believe that the lynching party at the Charlestown State Prison, on the night of August 22, will help them maintain the slavery conditions outlined in the reports of the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor, conditions that mean an increasing pauperization of the workers in this industry.

It is important to keep in mind that what is true of the textile industry, merely parallels similar developments in other industries, thus drawing in the whole American working class.

* * *

The textile industry is one of the oldest and the biggest in the development of American capitalistm. In recent years it has shown, thru actual figures, a decrease in the number of workers employed, a decrease in the workers' earnings, while at the same time revealing an increase in the hours of labor of those still permitted the luxury of having jobs. The figures are:

Year	Number Workers	Weekly Earnings	Hours per Week
1920	445,000	$24.86	51.8
1922	425,000	17.42	52.8
1924	485,000	19.72	53
1926	445,000	17.48	53.3

Squalor and misery follow in the wake of those figures revealing meager wages and the long work week.

These conditions gave rise to the repeated titanic struggles at Lawrence, Massachusetts, and more recently at Passaic, New Jersey. They are duplicated from New Bedford and Fall River in the New England North to the newest mill village in Alabama or Texas in the Far South.

Other facts brought out, as reported by Harvey O'Connor in the Federated Press, are as follows:

"Of the 82,000 workers studied in the 151 representative mills in North and South, fully 36,000 or 44 per cent were women. In many states, particularly in New England, the women are in the majority. Down South the labor of men is so cheap that the cotton mill owners can afford to hire more of them than women. The labor of children is thrown in for nearly nothing. That solves the family problem of what to do with the kids when both father and mother work in the mill."

* * *

In Massachusetts, "The Commonwealth" that murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, the seat of capitalist "kultur," an average wage of $20 is paid for a 48.5-hour work-week. Rhode Island jumps the work-week to 50 hours and Pennsylvania to 52.

In Virginia, on the edge of the South, $16.75 is considered enough for 55 hours and in North Carolina, most advanced of the new industrial southern states, $16.13 is paid for 56 hours' work.

Wages are lower in South Carolina and in Georgia sink to $14.25 and in Alabama to $13.26. Georgia works her mill hands 57 hours a week. Scores of mills in the Carolinas and Georgia impose the 60-hour week on hteir workers. Usually it is split into the 11-hour day with five hours on Saturday. In the Carolinas the 55-hour week is the most common with 10 hours a day and five on Saturday.

The attorney general of Massachusetts, Reading, reports to his fellow attorney generals at Buffalo that it is the Communists who have been most active in the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, but, he declares, "Fortunately, America does not offer a fertile for Bolshevist ideas."

* * *

The mere fact that the panic-stricken textile capitalists of Massachusetts sought to terrorize the mill workers of New England with the spectacle of Sacco and Vanzetti done to death in the electric chair gives the lie to the claim that "All's Well In New England." They know that the workers chafe at their chains. They know that the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti has only increased the discontent of labor. They know that the slavery conditions in the textile industry breed increasing resistance on the part of the workers.

Thus the class nature of the struggle, that the spokesmen of the owners of industry seek to minimize, continues to grow. The Communists are in the lead in the organization and the direction of that struggle.

Mexican Mine Strike, Protest of Murder of Sacco, Vanzetti Grow

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 30.—The strike at the Amaparo mines is still continuing despite the arrival of federal troops despatched at the request of American officials the Excelsior says today. The strikes coupled with the growing Sacco and Vanzetti protest have frightened American mine magnates.

Altho the mines are still shut down there has been no destruction of property and no one was injured. The miners at a number of other camps in the region are striking.

Canada Fliers Hop Off; Enroute to London; Will Get $25,000 for the Trip

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 30.—Capt. Terry Tull and Lieut. James Metcalf hopped off in their plane "Sir John Carling" in a non-stop flight from London, Ont., to London, Eng., at 5.50 Monday morning.

The successful trans-Atlantic hop of the "Pride of Detroit" carrying Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock on the first leg of a round the world flight encouraged the fliers.

The Canadian fliers were confident of success, which will mean a prize of $25,000 offered them by Charles Burns of London, Ont.

Eugene Lyons Now Writing Story of Sacco and Vanzetti

The complete story of the celebrated case which ended with the death in the electric chair for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti will be recounted in an illustrated book to be published soon by International Publishers, Inc. It is being written by Eugene Lyons, a newspaperman and magazine writer who was in close touch with the case from its inception more than seven years ago, according to the publishers' announcement.

"The book will be a straightforward and dramatic story of the lives and deaths of two alien workers in America," the publishers state. "It will be succinct, yet full enough to include all the essential facts of the arrests, the legal battles and the unprecedented international protest.

"We have gotten Mr. Lyons to begin work on the story immediately, while the memory of the events is fresh and the records easily available. He is especially interested in revealing the social forces which made of Sacco and Vanzetti, obscure workers at the time of their arrest, symbols of economic and social conflicts at the very heart of the world today. Nothing since the war has so tested the consciousness of the world as the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Nothing has so shaken people out of their smugness and indifference."

International Publishers hope to have the book off the press sometime in October. They indicate that inquiries for translation rights in several languages have already been made. Because of the world-wide interest in the case it is likely, they state, that it will be widely circulated in countries speaking Italian, German, French, Spanish, Russian, Portuguese and other languages.

The announcement says that "The author conducted the publicity in the case for more than a year immediately after their conviction—the year during which the protest in America and broad grew to towering proportions. He followed developments intimately since then. He learned to know Sacco and Vanzetti personally and also knows a great deal about their background, having lived in Italy."

Los Angeles Police Smash Protest; Pen Secret Press Lies

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 30.—The police and Uncle Sam's secret service men have "uncovered" secret plans for a gigantic march of death by Los Angeles workers in protest against the executions of Sacco and Vanzetti, according to the press. A man and a woman were caught in the "criminal" act of "carrying huge placards bearing photographs of the death men into a building." The placards were seized and turned over to the police intelligence bureau, infamous for its lack of intelligence, according to August Vollmer, former chief of police here, who is a noted expert in the man-hunting. Federal agents were also notified, reports stated.

Flimsy Police Lies.

What became of the man and woman "apprehended" is a secret up to this hour. Their names were not even mentioned. The "dicks" are looking for a secret printing shop at present. They expect to uncover "thousands of placards and radical literature bearing instructions for the formation of a secret 'union' and the institution of a boycott."

Meeting Broken Up.

An open air meeting and a parade were both broken up by the police in the Boyle Heights section recently. The bomb squad has also been very busy these days trying to beat the records of Mitchel Palmer, former U. S. attorney general, and Wm. J. Burns.

The following story will explain what have been found here to date:

"When 'Stubby' Phillips, electrician at the Hall of Justice, deposited a gunny sack there containing grass he was taking home to feed his geese, a passerby reported to the sheriff's office that a bomb had been planted. Several deputies responded to the call, only to find the sack of grass and explanation by Phillips that he had left it at the corner of the building while he went to a parking station for his car."

Levine's London Flight Means Break With Pilot

LONDON, Aug. 30.—"I am not running away from anybody except my wife. I seized the opportunity when I saw it and started out."

With these words Charles A. Levine yesterday explained the spectacular flight which he made alone today in the "Miss Columbia" from Le Bourget to Croydon, in two hours and fifteen minutes. Levine landed at Croydon at 4:10 this afternoon after three wobbly attempts to get onto the ground an in which he nearly ran into the customs house.

Military Camps Are Closing; Hundreds Ready for New War

PINE CAMP, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The reserve officers' training camp has already closed for the season and the citizens' military training camp will end Saturday.

A full mounted review was held yesterday. The students passed before Major-General McRae, corps area commander. The remainder of the week will be devoted to dismounted drill work. To create interest, prizes will be given to those who prove themselves the most proficient soldiers. Medals will also be awarded to those who can deliver the best five-minute speeches on citizenship.

With the demobilization of the officers of the 481st and 56th reserve regiments, nearly 125 reserve officers will have had active duty training in field artillery here this season. The work was designed as a two weeks refresher course, closing with a two or three-day period of firing on the range. Each reserve officer had a chance to direct the fire of a battery at the targets 2,000 to 5,000 yards away. French 75-millimeter guns were used throughout the reserve work.

Greetings to the Fifth Convention.

The DAILY WORKER extends its greetings to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party which opened last night with a mass meeting to welcome the delegates to New York. It is five years since a Communist convention has been held in this city—the last time being in December, 1922, the Second Convention of the Party.

At that time the Party had enjoyed but one short year of legal existence; it was then only emerging from the status of a propaganda organization to the tasks of serious mass work. The five years that have passed since that last New York convention have brot the Communist movement to the very forefront of labor's struggles in the United States. Whereas we were tolerated by the bureaucrats a few years ago we are now recognized as the only defenders of the elementary demands of the working class. Not only have we had to face the bitter enmity of the capitalist class—that is always to be expected—but special cadres of provocateurs, paid traducers of the revolutionary movement, have been recruited from the ranks of the labor bureaucrats to aid the master class in its fight against the vanguard of the labor movement.

In spite of the increasing intensity of the attack and in the midst of the task of reorganizing the Party from the old territorial and federation base, a heritage of social-democracy, to the scientific Communist form of shop nuclei, the Party has forged ahead and has taken the lead in every campaign in defense of labor. In the campaigns for organization of the unorganized, as in Passaic, it was the Party that took the lead. The struggle on the part of the rank and file of the miners against the cynical treachery of the John L. Lewis machine was given militant direction by the Party. When all others in the labor movement were either sabotaging or yielding to legalistic illusions in the great campaign against the murderous frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti the Party alone held aloft the banner of mass struggle. In fact there have been no major struggles or campaigns in the labor movement during recent years in which the Party did not play an important and, for the most part a dominant role.

Today, as the Fifth Convention comes into being we are sure that the Party will continue to develop its task of correctly estimating the problems before the working class of the United States and formulating policies that will enable us to move forward on the path to the proletarian revolution by mobilizing the working class against the new war conspiracies of the imperialist bandits of Wall Street.

Mellon Supports Vare's Philadelphia Hooligans

If ever there was historical justification for the observation of Marx and Engels in the Communist Manifesto that "the social scum, that passively rotting mass thrown off by the lowest layers of old society," the slum proletariat, is prepared, by its condition of life for "the part of a bribed tool of reactionary intrigue," it is to be found today in Philadalphia politics.

The real head of the national republican party, Andrew W. Mellon, billionaire banker and industrialist and secretary of the treasury in Coolidge's cabinet, is also the boss of the republican machine in Pennsylvania. Last year his candidate for United States senator, George Wharton Pepper, was beaten in the primaries by William S. Vare, boss of the thoroly rotten Philadelphia republican machine which, like most powerful city machines, is based upon the very lowest elements in society. Vare is the chief of the Quaker City hooligans—the riff-raff, the criminals, the prostitutes, the whole putrid mass of gutter-proletarians—the decayed scum thrown off by all layers of society. Like Tammany Hall, the power of the Vare machine rests directly upon the graft it permits its henchmen to share and the license it grants criminals to ply their trade against the rest of society. In Philadelphia this machine serves loyally as strike-breaker and scab-herder for the notorious poen-shop nabobs; the scab Mitten traction concern, the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the Curtis Publishing Company and all other apostles of scabbery.

But in the last senatorial campaign Vare went a step too far and challenged the eminently respectable Mr. Pepper, favorite of the eminently respectable Mr. Mellon. Mellon turned loose his purity squad to tour the state and expose the loathsome conditions prevailing in the city of brotherly love. No epithet of degradation was too violent to apply to Vare and his hooligans. But Vare was able to stuff and steal more ballots than the Mellon gang. The result was that W. L. Mellon, relative of Andrew W., and chairman of the state republican committee, supported Vare in the Fall elections and sat grimly on the platform at the Hotel Henry in Pittsburgh, while the hoodlum, Vare and his lickspittle, Harry A. Mackey a low ignorant clown who was in charge of the city treasury of Philadelphia, performed in approved Callowhill street fashion before the eminences of finance and industry of the Smoky City. Vare praised Mellon; Mellon boosted Vare; Mackey was court jester; harmony prevailed.

The mightiest of American plutocrats united with the Philadelphia boss of the slum proletariat.

Vare, in spite of the things said against him by the Mellon gang played the game, and is now receiving his reward. He may not get to take his seat that he tried to steal in the United States senate, but he will continue to be undisputed boss of Philadelphia if Andrew W. Mellon can aid him. Vare has now selected as his candidate for mayor of Philadelphia that same buffoon, Harry A. Mackey.

An old line republican among the respectables, ex-mayor and ex-congressman J. Hampden Moore, challenged the right of Vare to appoint his hoodlums for the highest city offices. Mr. Moore had been in other days a strong supporter of Mellon and expected Mellon to aid him this time. But new times demand new alliances and Mellon has categorically endorsed Vare's man.

When strike-breakers and thugs and gunmen are needed to maintain the "American plan" of scabbery in industries controlled by Mellon the Vare gang will supply them. If a Pennsylvania election is to be stolen Philadelphia will do its share as long as Vare is Vare.

Against this thoroly rotten anti-labor gang of plutocrats and gutter snipe politicians the workers of Philadelphia are preparing to enter the field with a labor candidate and to wage a campaign that will expose the whole crew and pave the way for the building up of a state labor party that will fight against the frightful industrial tyranny maintained over the workers thru control of state power.

How the United States Army Makes Brutes Out of Men

By PAUL CROUCH.

If it had not been for the efforts of the class conscious workers represented by the International Labor Defense made in my behalf, I would still be a prisoner on that rock of hell, Alcatraz Island, facing a living death in which existence is a torture, for the rest of my life. And Walter Trumbull, sentenced by the army czars to twenty-six years at hard labor, would also be over there with me. Comrade Trumbull and I owe our freedom to the efforts of the working class.

Were Tortured For Truth.

I was sentenced to forty years at hard labor because I did not wish to be used as a tool for the enslavement and murder of my fellow workers. I saw that patriotism has two objects. First, to oppress and enslave other countries too weak to defend themselves. Second, to divert the attention of American workers while they are being exploited. Because Walter Trumbull and I saw these facts and called them to the attention of our fellow soldiers, we were considered dangerous by those who wish to use the soldier as cannon fodder to protect the millions of Wall Street.

At the time of our arrests, the Hawaiian Communist League was composed exclusively of soldiers, but it was our intention to extend our activities and unite the civilian workers and the soldier workers in a common movement against our oppressors.

Hawaiian Communist League.

Effect means little without an understanding of the cause. Therefore, it is necessary to understand the conditions in Hawaii and the army, which led to the Hawaiian Communist League, and the tactics of the government in using the soldier against the civilian worker while he, himself, is treated like a brute by his superior officers until he thinks of himself as an inferior being.

* * *

Before the organization of the Hawaiian Communist League, there had been a long strike of the Filipino plantation workers. The cost of living in Honolulu in a decent manner is even higher than here. Yet, the average wage was less than one dollar per day for ten hours hard labor under the tropic sun. The strikers demanded two dollars per day. Not only was this very modest demand denied, but the power of the government was used to aid the plantation owners in forcing the men back to work. While the American army stood ready to crush the least opposition with blood and steel, the local authorities used brutal force in suppressing the strike. If it had not been for the soldiers, the workers without doubt would have realized the motto of the Hawaiian Communist League: "Hawaii for Hawaiian workers." But the workers were forced back to work in slavery as before. Twenty-four Filipino workers were murdered at one time by the government agents of the plantation owners. Pablo Manlapit, the brave leader of the strikers, is in prison in Hawaii today, because of his efforts for the working class. He is eligible for parole, but the authorities refuse to release him unless he will agree to leave the Hawaiian Islands. This he refuses to do.

Economic Conscription.

It is said that the United States has a volunteer army. In reality, it is a conscripted army, drafted by more brutal methods than those in use by European countries. The majority of American soldiers were forced into the army by economic necessity—by unemployment and the fact that one must eat in order to live.

One hears much talk about American prosperity. Undoubtedly, the capitalists are prosperous. But in spite of all the wealth in this country, hundreds of thousands are unemployed and on the verge of starvation. Many of these unemployed enter the army. Remember, comrades, that the soldiers are the worst victims of capitalism, and we must carry our message of Revolution and freedom into the army, the last defense of capitalism. The army is the tool of capitalism, and we must take a definite and emphatic stand against imperialist wars and militarism. But the soldiers are fellow workers who have nothing in common with the interest of their officers. We must win them over to our cause. The Russian Revolution was won because the soldiers fought by the side of the civilian workers for freedom from an autocratic government and the capitalist system. That lesson some day will be repeated in America. And that day may not be far distant. There is no difference in the external appearance of a fresh egg and one ready to hatch. Capitalism contains the forces leading to its own destruction, and we must prepare for the final struggle.

Soldiers Brutalized.

The capitalist know that the soldier has everything in common with his fellow workers. Therefore, they use every possible means to prevent him from thinking and to crush all human instincts in him.

The soldier, forced into the army by economic necessity, has been told that he will get $21.00 per month plus all expenses during his period of training and that promotion with advance of pay is rapid. He understands that his job consists of drill and military duties. But he is soon disillusioned. He finds that many soldiers who have been in the army for years are still receiving only $21.00 per month. Not only that, but he must pay many of his own expenses, especially laundry and uniforms. The average soldier buys his own uniforms. In Hawaii, they were forced to do so. In some companies, the soldiers are requested to contribute to a fund so they can have better food than is supplied by the government. The soldier is forced to meet other expenses of a purely military nature.

Reading Banned.

Most intelligent workers think of the army as a place where men are taught the science of wholesale murder. Yes, it is, but they get their military drill in the morning, as a rule, and in the afternoon they put on their fatigue clothing and are required to do manual labor with noncommissioned officers for overseers. Really, every soldier in the army is a prisoner. He must be kept as busy as possible so that he will not have time to read and think. When the manuel labor in the afternoon is over, the soldier's day is not yet ended. He must keep his military equipment polished like a mirror, and is constantly preparing for inspections.

* * *

Frederick the Great once said that if his soldiers began to think not one of them would remain in the ranks. The American army officers realize that is true today. Serious reading on the part of the soldier is discouraged. Walter Trumbull was ordered by his company commander to destroy a copy of the National Geographic Magazine. It is especially undesirable for the soldier to learn about other countries. If he read about oppression in other nations he might compare it with his own enslavement and realize that the workers of all countries have a common cause—that they have nothing to lose but their chains and a world to gain.

Army Class Distinctions Rigid.

Nowhere else is class distinction so obvious as in the army. A soldier is not permitted to speak to an officer without permission, except in case of absolute necessity when on duty. If a soldier wishes to speak to a Colonel, in command of his regiment, he must explain his business to his First Sergeant and get permission to speak to the Company Commander. Then, he goes to his Captain, and salutes, standing stiffly at attention, and begins: "Sir, I have permission from the First Sergeant to speak to the Captain." He must always address an officer in the third person. The word "you" applied to an officer is an unpardonable offense. The Captain may deny the request, in which case there is nothing more to be done or said. But if permission is given, the soldier goes to the Adjutant and repeats the request to have the opportunity of actually addressing the sacred person of the regimental commander.

I could write indefinitely, telling how the soldier is treated like an inferior being. Along with this treatment, his mind is constantly being filled with the idea of nationalism, especially in Hawaii where most of the workers belong to other races. Everything possible is done to make him regard the natives with hostility and to prevent any personal association on a basis of equality. In Panama, soldiers are forbidden to marry natives. While he, himself, is being abused by his officers and taught to regard himself as far inferior to them, he is encouraged to find compensation in thinking of himself as superior to the native population so that he can be used as a tool for their enslavement.

Guard Houses Hell-Holes.

I have been discussing the relatively bright side of army life. But there are darker aspects. Alcatraz islands is more than a place of punishment. It is a sinister menace which constanty hangs over the head of every soldier, especially those who care to think for themselves or object to being cannon fooder for the use of Wall Street.

But Alcatraz and other disciplinary barracks are not the only places for the incarceration of soldiers in violation of all principles of justice and constitutional rights. Every regiment has a prison known as the guard house, where soldiers are held without bail in imprisonment at hard labor, sometimes for months, before trial. In these guard houses, soldiers often are treated worse than murderers who are imprisoned for life. In the Philippine Islands, soldiers in the guard house were forced to sleep on the cold cement floor with only one blanket. In Hawaii, at present, soldiers in guard houses are not permitted any reading matter except religious literature. They are given copies of the new testament. This is a good illustration of how religion is used as the opium of the people.

Barracks "Defies Imagination."

The soldiers in Hawaii are treated so harshly that many of them try to escape from the army and the Islands. But ships leaving Honolulu are carefully guarded against soldiers who try to escape, and those who attempt to do so are sentenced to six months in the Post Stockade at Schofield Barracks. Life there defies the imagination. Perhaps at no place in the world, except the French prison at Devil's Island, are prisoners treated more harshly. When at work, the order is: "Heads down, backs up, picks moving." Those who forget the order an instant are given extra work. When within the prison walls, they must set upon the floor. Anyone who sings or whistles is placed in solitary confinement on bread and water for seven days. No reading matter, except religious literature on Sunday, is permitted. Letters are delivered on Sunday and must be destroyed by the following day. If a prisoner is found with a newspaper or attempts to keep a letter from his mother or other relatives, he is given solitary confinement with no food except bread and water for seven days. The prisoner does not even have Sunday for a day of rest. In the morning he must prepare for inspections and in the afternoon, he is forced to submit to a dose of religious opium administered by an army Chaplain.

Boasts He Made Jail Hell.

Two former prisoners in the Schofield Stockade recently told me about a speech delivered by Major General William R. Smith, Commander of the Hawaiian Division. General Smith, they said, told them: "I have the law in this hand and you in this, and I will do with you as I wish. I know this place is hell because I have made it such."

* * *

These prisoners are not criminals. They are soldiers who could no longer endure the hell of army life. They had been led into the army by false pretenses and in desperation they tried to escape from the trap.

Press Suppresses Trial Facts.

Law is but a one sided affair with the military authorities and they do not hesitate to violate their own laws and resort to the underhanded methods. On February 19, 1925, Walter Trumbull and I were arrested and held without bail and without any charges or warrants against us until March 12. Charges were prepared then and we were tried in April. We were held incommunicado so that we could not get in touch with defense organizations and have proper defense when brought to trial. Army officers were appointed to defend us, but I could have defended myself much better without them. On February 20th, I wrote a letter from the guard house to my parents telling of my arrest. It was not mailed until about March 12th.

Contrary to usual procedure, the newspapers were not informed in advance of my trial, and after it became public, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin stated that it had been requested by the army authorities to suppress the facts in the case. Newspapers were given wrong information about the date of Comrade Trumbull's trial in their efforts to prevent reporters from being present.

Railroaded to Alcatraz.

Of course, in our case the government was more anxious than usual to railroad us to prison by any means and to suppress the facts. But really our case was typical of injustice common in the army. A prisoner now in Alcatraz, Anton Regnerson, was sentenced to twelve years imprisonment on a forgery charge. I made a careful study of his case and it appears that he was the goat so that the guilty persons, perhaps in responsible positions, might go free. The army officer, appointed to defend Regnerson, called on him only ten minutes before the beginning of the trial. Regnerson gave a list of witnesses who, he said, could prove him innocent. Also, he wished to take the stand in his own defense. But the officer "defending" him would not call the witnesses as requested and told Regnerson not to take the stand, saying there was no evidence against him and that he was certain to be found "not guilty." A short time ago, Regnerson wrote to the War Department, requesting an investigation of his case. He told about the failure of his "defense" to really defend him or let him defend himself. He offered to produced proof that he was away from the city on the day the crime was committed and that it was impossible for him to have been the guilty person. The request for an impartial and thorough investigation was refused by the army authorities. Why should they investigate? What does a human life mean to them?

Join the Army and Become a Pervert!

Not all prisoners in Alcatraz are innocent. Some are guilty of the worst crimes. As an illustration of the moral influence of the army, a large per cent of Alcatraz prisoners were imprisoned for the worst perversions. They are low types of degenerates, and should be treated in medical institutions. Perversions are common among those sentenced for other offenses. Recruiting signs says: "Join the army and become a man." If many parents could see what sort of men the army made of their sons, they would wish they had never lived. Alcatraz, as well as other prisons, is a training school for crime. Soldiers are sentenced for minor offences or even for no real crime at all, merely they can not easily lose their humanity and become brutes. Their spirits are broken in prison and their environment leads them into real crime. The real cause of crime is the capitalist system which makes a virtue of living at the expense of other.

Must Carry Message to Soldiers.

The average soldier today is without hope. He sees the brutal treatment around him, but he regards the government as all powerful, and soon his spirit is crushed. He becomes a selfish individualist with the motto: "Hurray for me—to hell with you." We must resurrect such hope as is left in the soldier. We must carry our Revolutionary message into the army, so that when the final struggle comes the soldier will fight by the side of the civilian workers instead of being used as a tool by the capitalists to murder them and help perpetuate his own enslavement.

The capitalists today are preparing for the next war. The workers, too, must prepare, or they will be used as cannin fodder against the workers of other countries and especially those of the Soviet Union. We must take a militant stand against militarism, and we must build up the International Labor Defense as the working class challenge to imperialist wars and economic slavery.

DRAMA

Kenneth Macgowan to Revive O'Neill and Shaw Plays

"Such Is Life," a play dealing with life in the Nineties, by Peter Blenny, and Marie Armstrong Hecht, (formerly wife of Ben Hecht the novelist and playwright) will have its premiere at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Kenneth MacGowan is going in for producing again, this time in partnership with Sidney Ross. Their first offering will be "The Queen Bee," a comedy by Ruth Hawthorne and Louise Connell. This may be followed by revivals of O'Neill plays and a play or two by Bernard Shaw. MacGowan productions last season included "The Great God Brown," "Deside Under the Elms," and "Beyond the Horizon" by O'Neill.

Edward Kliscu has been engaged by Ross Productions Inc., to direct their new play entitled "Mister Romeo," which is planned for Broadway showing.

William Danforth has joined the cast of "The Circus Princess," the operetta at the Winter Garden, succeeding George Hassell, who is to be featured in "The Wild Man of Borneo."

MARIE ARMSTRONG HECHT

Co-author with Peter Blancy of "Such Is Life" which opens at the Morosco Theatre tonight.

Letters From Our Readers

Sacco and Vanzetti Live in Workers' Hearts.

Dear Comrade:

Your unselfish and courageous conduct during Sacco and Vanzetti week is deign to be remembered by workers.

I used to vote for the Socialist Party without being member of it. But, the rotten conduct of S. P. leaders and A. F. of L. heads certainly disgusted me. I cannot understand how the majority of workers don't see these sold-out leaders' tricks!

We will not forget Sacco and Vanzetti, our beloved brothers—martyrs of this odious rotten system.

Let Fuller and his associates enjoy their deeds—we will not answer them by terrorist acts—but the day when the proletariat will conquer the power. We say, Sacco and Vanzetti are not dead, they are alive in our hearts, they are living in our memory.

One of the N. Y. Workers.

Comrade:

I have just read your wonderful truth revealing pages in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti. I see the cartoons of men hanging, of electric chairs, of men clustered together with weapons in their hands, of dead bodies. I see words written in large black letters that speak of murder, of labor, of Sacco, of Vanzetti, of Ludlow, of death, of fight, of August 22.

What are the colleges doing for Sacco and Vanzetti? I attended the Columbia summer school this season. There were over thirteen thousands students attending the summer session and not once did I hear a word of protest against the whole black procedure that was taking place in Massachusetts. Thirteen thousand students, most all of them teachers!

Columbia University by its silence is just as guilty as the bloodthirsty colleges in Massachusetts.

K. Gardel, New York City.

BEGIN THREAT OF DEPORTATION TO SCARE STRIKERS

New Tactic of the Ohio Coal Barons

(By Worker Correspondent)

CLEVELAND, Aug. 30.—Following closely upon the demonstrations and strike of the workers in connection with the Sacco and Vanzetti murder, the authorities in southeastern Ohio are taking steps to deport foreign-born workers.

U. S. Marshal Stanley G. Borthwick, of Cincinnati, has announced that "unnaturalized residents who participate in violence in violation of the injunction issued in Federal Court to Eastern Ohio coal operators may be deported." This is clear and decisive. Borthwick asserts that "the government will not tolerate flaunting of its orders by non-residents or native miners." This is perfectly clear. The foreign-born miners are to feel the first brunt of the fight of the miners to save their union, and then the native miner will come next.

Not Empty Threat.

There are many who believed that the threat of deportation of the foreign-born was an idle threat. Now that the southeastern Ohio miners are out fighting, the threat is destined to become a reality. This will not keep the miners from fighting. At the Florence mine near St. Clairsville, Ohio, miners' wives stoned and rotten-egged fifteen non-union miners who were being brought to the mine under guard of Sheriff Clyde Hardesty and eight deputies. They fought till they were arrested, the sheriff having quite a time getting a husky miner's wife to jail, and suffering in the fight. At the Provident Mine near St. Clairsville, twenty scabs have been put to work cleaning away the under brush and pumping water out of the shaft.

Organizing Surface Men.

As against this, the miners' officials announce that they are organizing the surface men in eastern Ohio. It would appear as if the miners' officials believed that everything would be settled satisfactorily and therefore waited for nearly five months before undertaking any organization work. This is criminality on the part of the officials, who should have known from the beginning that the coal operators would go the limit and that the courts and military power would be put at their disposal.

The attack on the foreign-born miners is directly an attack on the native miners, as may be noted in the statement of Marshall Borthwick. Southeastern Ohio is destined to become the bloody battle field on which the first fight to save the United Mine Workers will be fought out.

And John L. Lewis? As usual, silent! Still failing to take action—and by this failure aiding the coal barons and the state to destroy the miners' organization. The miners will not forget this fact.

Hoover Is Favorite in Wyoming Declare Editorial Delegation

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30.—Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce and of almost everything else in the Coolidge cabinet is the favorite son of Wyoming for the republican nomination for president according to views expressed by a delegation of Wyoming editors that met the president on his return journey thru that state from the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Coolidge did not indicate event by the quiver of an eyelid whether he favored the Coolidge candidacy or not. He was as impervious to pressure as the hide of a rhinocerous to the tickling of a cat's whiskers. Nevertheless there are rumors here that the administration is in sympathy with Hoover's ambition tho it states that it will remain neutral in the primaries.

Hoover is said to plan his resignation from the cabinet provided he intends to enter the race just as Hughes quit the supreme court for a similar purpose. As will be remembered, Hughes lost by one-tenth of a whisker to Woodrow Wilson, perhaps because of the aversion of the fair sex of California to superfluous chin foliage. Hoover uses the razor to good advantage and will not enter the lists handicapped by excess baggage.

Everett Sanders, the president's secretary, is reported ready to resign his present position to direct the Hoover campaign. The fact that this is denied merely tends to confirm its truth.

The residents of Cody expressed regret that Coolidge's hat was not still in the ring. During the course of a dance held in the leading hotel Mrs. Coolidge and John Coolidge, her son, danced but the president refrained, tho it is believed had he not uttered his famous "do not choose" statement, he would have given an exhibition of the black bottom for the benefit of the terpsichorean vote.

Paul Crouch to Address Big Chicago Meeting on The Chinese Revolution

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Paul Crouch, ex-soldier, recently released from Alcatraz penitentiary, has just reached this city. Crouch was jailed for his anti-imperialist activities in the United States Army, and is now on a tour lecturing on his experiences and on the new war danger.

"China is the center of world imperialist attack," said Crouch when interviewed here. "The war danger lies there where the concentration of 30,000 foreign troops and 171 battle ships threatens the Chinese nationalists."

Crouch is to speak on China for the Hands-Off-China Committee on Thursday, September 8th, at 8 p. m., North Side Turner Hall, 820 North Chicago Avenue. On this occasion there will be other interesting and prominent speakers, among whom are: A. L. Fitch, president local 113, Machinists Union; William H. Holly, prominent attorney; A. L. Mei, Chinese representative of the Kuo-Min-Tang; and Carl Haessler, editor in chief of the Federated press.

Movie Struck Girls in Vice Dens of Coast

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30.—Scores of young girls from all over the country are today inhabitants of houses of prostitution here, according to Councilman William G. Bonelli, president of the city council. He has demanded that abatement proceedings be started against at least 26 establishments in downtown Los Angeles.

In making his demands upon the police commission for a closing of the vice dens which are declared to have been in operation over a period of many months. President Bonelli submitted a list of addresses where the police had made from three to 18 arrests on vice charges.

Headquarters of the vice ring are located at 130½ South Spring St. Inside workings of the ring are said to be the perfection of organization. First a location is spotted. Then a lease is obtained and sold to the "landlady." The policeman on the beat is then taken in the confidence of the ring and "business" is started on a large scale.

WORKERS' WAGES SLASHED AS POWERS STRUGGLE FOR SUPREMACY IN WORLD'S TEXTILE INDUSTRY

By LELAND OLD, (Fed. Press)

The part played by wages in the cutthroat competition for the textile markets of the world is revealed in a report on cottonmill wages in 12 countries prepared for the international economic conference at Geneva. The report shows the wages of cottonmill operatives ranging as low as $1.09 a week in India and as high as $31.49 in the United States. The average actual earnings of cottonmill operatives in the United States is shown by the department of labor as $17.48. This covers a range from $12.66 in Alabama to $22.66 in New Hampshire. The English average is $8.23.

British Textile Workers Hard Hit.

The situation is particularly serious for labor in England, formerly leader in the development of western capitalism. Cotton mills in the United States still have a large domestic market but the British cotton industry is dependent upon foreign markets, particularly in Asia, Africa and South America. The development of the cotton industry in countries where wages are low is undermining English cottonmill operatives and striking at the heart of British economic imperialism.

British cottonmill wages average only $7 to $8 a week which seems very low compared with the United States. But these low wages are under-cut not only by wages in the so-called backward nations but by wages in Germany and its neighbors, all pulled down by the fate of Germany as a conquered people.

The report shows average wages of various occupations in the cotton mills of Europe, Asia and America on a 48-hour week basis. For the several countries the ranges were:

Cotton mill weekly wages	Range
Austria	$3.37	to	$5.76
Belgium	2.70	"	6.29
Canada	14.16	"	15.36
France	4.56	"	6.72
Germany	3.98	"	6.72
Great Britain	7.24	"	8.05
India	1.09	"	4.02
Italy	3.52	"	6.26
Japan	2.72	"	3.11
Netherlands	6.04	"	10.49
Poland	2.80	"	5.79
United States	13.54	"	31.49

British Textiles Can't Come Back.

Year after year the British cotton industry fails to pull out of the mire of depression. Not only is there unemployment but part time, a 30-hour week having been the rule for many months. In Germany, on the other hand, the industry has been steadily recovering, with unemployment cut from 54,500 to 24,500 in the last 6 months of 1926 and the number of short-time workers cut from 139,000 to 26,000. The German textile industry, according to the U. S. department of labor, is just about returned to prewar normal.

Meanwhile British capitalists continue to export textile machinery to these countries where cheap labor undercuts the British worker. In the first half of 1927 British India received $5,450,000 of British textile machinery compared with $4,940,000 the first half of 1926. For other countries the figures are Japan $1,840,000 compared with $1,510,000; Germany $1,560,000 compared with $1,400,000 and Russia $3,0[illegible]00 compared with $1,510,000. Altogether in the half year England exported over $27,000,000 worth of textile machinery compared with about $24,000,000 in the same period 1926.

CHICAGO LABOR NEWS

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 30.—"The Chicago Federation of Labor Challenges the governor, the Massachusetts state supreme court and the trial judge in the Sacco-Vanzetti case to show where justice has been meted out in this case and court," reads a statement by Secretary E. N. Nockels of the federation after the electrocution Aug. 22.

"Both conservative and radical groups in and out of the organized labor movement," declares The Federation News, organ of the Chicago central body, "as well as individuals of high standing in public and private life, believed that the convicted men were not guilty."

"Sacco and Vanzetti died for the working class," says the International Labor Defense. "Like their immortal comrades of Chicago's Haymarket they died as martyrs to the cause of labor. This was known or felt by tens of millions of workers in every corner of the globe."

Organized railroad labor is actively seeking improved wages and conditions on roads running out of Chicago. The 7500 Chicago & Northwestern clerks are demanding a 15 cent hourly raise. The Chicago & Alton shop men are demanding recognition of the standard unions in place of the company union to which they are now compelled to pay dues if they want to keep their jobs. Maintenance of way men on the Northwestern recently received an average increase by arbitration of 2 cents an hour. The 10,000 clerks on the Illinois Central received 3 cents by the same method.

From the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor, with headquarters in Chicago, comes the news that all the shop unions on the railroads are showing membership growth. The evil results of the war inflation and of the disastrous 1922 shop strike are gradually being overcome.

Labor day in Chicago will be quite different this year from the quiet observance or rather lack of observance the past few years when neither parades nor meetings were held and many trade union families flivvered out of town over the weekend. The central body has obtained the Soldier Field Stadium seating 80,000. A program of speaking, athletics, airplane stunts, feature dancing and amateur boxing has been arranged. In the evening the audience will adjourn to the municipal pier for ball-room dancing.

RightWing FakerWould Gag Workers for Boss; Boss, Too Dumb, Refuses

(By DAILY WORKER Correspondent)

Frenchy, minus his right wing gang breezes into the office, hands the boss his card, extends his hand cordially and rattles off.

"Hershkowitz is my name. I am from the Union and we are organizing shipping clerks and ticket sewers. We understand that you get your help from an employment agency, which is not right. The next time you need any extra help call us up and we can send you down some extra help."

Boosts Yellow Unionism.

When told that no extra help was needed at this time he asked the boss to send the shipping clerks to the "union" to register, and used the following persuasion.

"You see, if I should get the boy to join the Union he might become radical and expect the Union to do something for him because he pays dues and right away he would expect a raise in pay. But I am a guy who goes fifty-fifty and always believes in a fair days' work for a fair days' pay. So if you tell the boy to come to the Union to register, I'll see that you won't have any trouble from him."

"Well," replied the Boss, "I have no objection to a man joining any organization he sees fit, but it is not my place to tell one of my employes, to join the union."

No Reds In His Union.

"But why shouldn't you consider the man. It would do him good. It's for his benefit. A man does charity sometimes," pleaded Frenchy with the boss, and in spite of the fact that he was given permission to interview anyone in the shop he wished, he did not interview the non-union shipping clerks and ticket sewers and left with an uncertain promise that the next time "experienced" help would be needed, he would be telephoned.

Throughout the speech the fact that he was a fifty-fifty man kept repeating itself until there could be no doubt. He is fifty-fifty with the bosses—and to hell with the workers.

Art Exhibit Cancelled By Kent In Protest Of Sacco-Vanzetti Murder

Rockwell Kent, well-known artist, has cancelled his exhibition at Worcester this fall, refusing to have anything to do with any Massachusetts organization. His letter to the Art Museum follows:

"It is with regret that I inform you that because of the killing of Sacco and Vanzetti by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts I have determined to have no relations of any public nature with that state or with any community or organization of it. I am compelled to take this action by my abhorrence of such murder and my conclusion that the citizens of the state must be held responsible for it.

"And while I feel the stubborn disregard of America's interests and humanity's demands which has marked the state's procedure and made its act so singularly brutal to be derived from its cultured arrogance, while therefore I believe by retaliation to be at least feebly consistent with the state's offense and of a nature which if generally undertaken and persisted in might chasten it, I can unfortunately attach no public importance to my resolution, it is merely necessary to my own integrity."

Omaha Labor Holds Memorial Meet for Sacco and Vanzetti

OMAHA, Nebr., August 30. — A Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting was held at Jefferson Park by the International Labor Defense.

The demonstration was addressed by W. J. White, steel worker; Roy E. Stephen, secretary of the local I. L. D. branch and W. J. Patton of Council Bluffs who acted as chairman.

Stephens was arrested last Saturday for his activity in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. He was held until Sunday when he was released on bail. Monday he was lectured by the judge who denounced him as a "Bolshevik agitator."

Upholsterers Tie Up Shop in Minneapolis; War on "Speed-up"

By I. BARON.
(Worker Correspondent).

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 30. — The upholsterers at the Brooks Parlor Furniture Co. have declared a strike against the furniture bosses. The strike is 100%. The workers are striking against the speed up system which was introduced here recently following a cut from 10 to 20% in the time schedule. The workers complain that they are unable to endure the frightful speed up conditions now existing in the shops.

Ohio Miners Fear New Police Acts As Meeting Nears

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Announcement of another march on Pomeroy by the striking union sympathizers which followed reported attempts of the operators of the eastern mines to open up the fields on a non-union basis with the fullest possible forces in the near future, are the excuses alleged by the authorities for the precautionary measures which the county and state officials are taking to prevent any violence at the march and the mass meeting which will follow it.

The march of the workers will be along the lines of last Thursday's whose object was to urge the non-union workers to quit work and which the mine officials broke up. The present meeting will call the non-union workers to quit work in the fields so as to aid the union miners in their fight for the renewal of the Jacksonville agreement. The police have sanctioned both the march and the mass meeting.

The authorities, however, continue to send deputies from the Ohio national guard into the non-union mines and the workers fear that a new effort is being prepared to frustrate the action of the striking miners.

$2.66 a Day Is Pay Of Pullman Porters Now Building Union

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 30.—Altho the Pullman Co. boasts assets of $336,000,000 and income last year of $83,000,000, according to reports just released by the interstate commerce commission, it paid its porters an average of only $2.66 a day.

The Pullman Co. has been fighting the Porters Brotherhood tooth and nail in their moderate demands for recognition and better wages, but it increased its treasury balance by $1,788,000 last year to a total of $34,000,000. Net income available for profits was $14,100,000.

Wages Miserable.

In the wage list, nearly 11,000 porters and maids received their pitiable $2.66 a day and 5,600 car cleaners fared little better at $3.35. Mechanics got $4.60. When the company averaged the wages and salaries of its 26,000 employes, including high priced general officials and supervisory staff, the daily average was but $3.70.

Los Angeles Picnic Is Postponed Till Sept. 11; Will Dare Persecution

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30.—The Annual Press Picnic first set for August 14th at Plummer's Park, Hollywood, has been postponed to Sunday, September 11th, at Plummer's Park, the corner of Vista and Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood; the same place where the May Day Picnic was held.

All those who have tickets keep this change in mind. Boost to make the affair a bigger success than ever. Our Party papers need the funds that the function will bring in and our Party needs them too.

Don't bring lunches; there will be plenty to eat. Books and papers will be sold. There will be dancing, speaking, and friendly greetings from the whole united Party in Southern California. Don't let the raids scare you away! They should spur you on to make this affair a greater and bigger success than ever. Show your courage now in the face of persecution.

Come one, come all, and make the Press Picnic Bigger and Better!

FAILURE IN ALL FIELDS OUTCOME OF "PROSPERITY"

Outlook NowhereBright as Pay Falls, Jobs Fly

BY FEDERATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Worry is the dominant feature in Washington as a bad summer draws to a worse close. No matter what bureaucrat's office the inquiring reporter sticks his head into, he sees officials worrying. Gone are the seraphic days when Mr. Coolidge was unchallenged and all was well with the world.

Prosperity in the Dumps.

At the department of commerce building they talk apprehensively declining industrial productivity, of the plight of the iron and steel industry, the prospect that textiles are through with their temporary flush, the increasing unrest among the smaller fry of the business interests, who report "prosperity without profits." Even the usually cheerful Mr. Hoover looks gravely at the future and confines his oracular utterance to a more "fair." The federal reserve board, which has its own means of keeping its finger on the industrial pulse, is no more optimistic. Autos are still in a bad way, speculation continues apace on the New York stock exchange despite signs of gathering storm and America's gold policy is still dictated by regard for the British pound rather than for solid American conditions.

The department of agriculture is chronically sour and continuously pointing out the spread between industrial and farm prices. But the wretched summer out west, with corn imperilled by cold weather and coming frost and what in merely moderate shape, intensifies the gloom.

American Workers Can't Afford Children.

Of late the department of labor has been joining the general cacophony of distress. Within the past month it has seen fit to remind "prosperous" America that millions of workers get such low pay that they cannot afford families. In coal, steel, railroads and on the farms, laborers are no better off than the much abused pauper labor of Europe, to which Secretary Davis points with so much commiseration when he indulges in the frequent pipe dreams concerning prosperous American workers.

The women's bureau has not had particularly refreshing news, either. Its reports tell of wretchedly underpaid women workers toiling as high as 80 hours a week for little or nothing.

Imperialists Have the Blues.

Nor do you hear cheery notes from the state department, where Kellogg is still nursing wounded feelings over the Geneva and wondering what incident will next crop up in Mexico, Nicaragua, China or the Caribbean to set liberal and labor opinion barking at his heels. Of all the sorry messes of American diplomacy, Kellogg's is by general consent, the worst. Good things have been done badly and wicked ventures have turned into hellbrews.

In the navy and war departments, you might expect a certain gruff jollity, what with the Geneva breakdown and the outlook for the world biggest navy and a rattling good army. But the gold-braided gentlemen have a way of being miserable because they can't have the whole world on a silver platter. Give these gentlemen an inch, and they want a mile. But their wishes are so outrageously expensive that even patriotic, 100 per cent congressmen pause in contemplation of 20 $10,000,000 cruisers, with trimmings to match.

The politicians of course are the sorriest lot of all. They had all attached themselves to the Coolidge bandwagon and were ready for another four-year joyride at the expense of the public. And now they have to scratch their brains in an effort to guess whether Hoover, Dawes, Huges, or Lowden has the sure-thing bandwagon. If they make a wrong guess, they'll be out of luck when Cal steps down from the throne on March 4, 1929. The boys who make the lucky guess and pick the winner will get the nice, juicy jobs when their favorite becomes president.

Most dejected of all is the plaintive figure of poor little Mr. Coolidge. But a month ago he was the tinged of the correspondents and the great wise man in the eyes of the politicians seeking jobs and favors. This winter he will be flouted and defied by both houses of congress. Old Mr. Mellon, principal prop., will have retired, having accomplished reduction of taxes on great fortunes, including his own. The financial powers will have picked Cal's successor, leaving only the ubiquitous visitor from Oscaloosa and Kokomo interested in the whereabouts of the ertswhile mighty Mr. Coolidge.

Croton Dam Overflow.

CROTON, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Prolonged rainfall has started the water in the big chain of lakes back of Cornell dam of the New York City waterworks on the rampage. A big cataract is once more sweeping over the wide spillway of the dam in Croton and being lost into the gorge 150 feet below.

Soviet Gold Fought for Sacco and Vanzetti, Is Latest Paid Press Lie

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—The Boston press is carrying big headlines about the Soviet agents lavishly distributing Russian gold in the Sacco-Vanzetti propaganda. There is a story of a mysterious Soviet agent with unlimited funds, who is giving the money to the Citizens' Committee in the Hotel Bellevue. The respectable crowd comprising the Citizens' National Committee will no doubt be horrified at this accusation.

No thinking men or women, particularly those closely connected with the defense work or the various organizations will be misled by these stupid rumors. Yet, it is but one of the vicious rumors which were circulated in Boston, in order to psychologize the labor movement and terrorize it with tales of bombs and Russian gold.

These stupid stories are the forerunners of the attack against the labor movement. They are a part of the general vicious frame up system which has sent Sacco and Vanzetti to death. The capitalist class ought to be more careful in utilizing these methods. Following each frame up there is a greater and greater indignation in the ranks of the labor movement and the capitalists may well say: "Another such frame up and we will remain without the army."

Negro Executed for Murder White Woman Insists She Caused

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 30.—A white woman now confesses that she murdered the woman for whose killing Maurice Mays, a Negro, was executed, after a long fight by people of both races who believed in his innocence. The fight lasted for several years, but the Knoxville, Tenn., authorities were as determined to execute Mays as was the authorities in Massachusetts to execute the two radicals.

Judges Out For Blood.

Just as in the case of the two Italian radicals, so in the case of Mays the Negro, there was another strong motive in the minds of the judges, the jury and the rest of the court which biased them toward a verdict of guilty; in the Sacco-Vanzetti case it was anarchism; in the case of Maurice Mays it was the violation of the will of the majority race about interracial matters. Mays, it was whispered about the court and through the official channels, had been intimate with the white woman. Therefore, whether he murdered her or not, "he ought to be killed.

Now a white woman in Ohio confesses that she herself killed the other white woman, because the other white woman was taking the affections of the killer's husband.

Won't Hear White Woman's Confession.

Just as the authorities in Massachusetts would pay no attention to the criminal who confessed that he and his gang did the murder for which the two Italians were being tried, so the police authorities of Knoxville, Tenn., on being told that a woman, who was in Knoxville at the time of the murder, but who is now in Ohio, had confessed to killing the woman for whom Mays was executed, simply send word back to Ohio that "Maurice Mays has paid the death penalty for the crime and that records show no charge against the woman."

Of course, it is too late for the woman's confession to save Mays, but the Knoxville authorities know that it is not too late to "save their faces" from the pointing finger of scorn from just men. Therefore, they will play "hush" on this matter.

MRS. ROSE SACCO: A FIGHTER

By Walter Snow

"I would go to the ends of the earth for the labor cause."

These were the words of Mrs. Rose Sacco, that thin little woman in black whose devotion to her long-imprisoned husband has made her beloved by millions of workers.

The thousands who cheered her in Union Square Tuesday know she is glad of their solidarity and faithful to them. Did she not come to their memorial meeting even tho members of the Boston Defense Committee barred her from bringing her husband's ashes?

And altho after the meeting police prohibited her from going directly to view the clenched fist memorial and death masks at Stuyvesant Casino—sidetracking the automobile in which she was riding to prevent a solemn funeral march—Mrs. Sacco later in the evening visited the Casino.

When a DAILY WORKER reporter met her at the Casino, she was too tired to talk. But her faithful friend, Mrs. Jessica Henderson, of Boston, who flaunted Back Bay traditions by going to the aid of two foreign-born workers framed by Massachusetts mill owners, spoke for her.

"Rose is whole-heartedly in the fight," said Mrs. Henderson. "I have never known such a militant little woman before. She is an inspiration to me."

Mrs. Henderson was one member of the Boston Committee who kept faith with New York workers by coming to Union Square. Before she left Boston at 1 o'clock on the "Knickerbocker," of the Shore Line, she made every possible move to bring the ashes of the men for whom she had fought seven years along.

Last night she shared a single bedroom in the Hotel Sheldon, 49th St. and Lexington Ave., with Mrs. Sacco. "We don't need a suite," she said. "There are two beds in the room. That is enough for two women whom grief has made sisters."

The two women, however, do not believe in perpetually hanging their heads. They have faith in solidarity and wish to arouse and organize the working class. They intend to train Dante Sacco, the martyr's son, to become a labor organizer.

Mrs. Henderson had harsh words for the police who hurried the line of mourners past the Sacco-Vanzetti Memorial in the Casino. "Your New York police are just as brutal as the ones we have in Boston," she said.

ASKED WHAT SHE TOUGHT OF THE COMMUNIST ANTI-AMERICAN LEGION DEMONSTRATIONS IN FRANCE, HER EYES GLEAMED WITH FIRE. "IT WOULD BE MARVELOUS IF THE FRENCH WORKERS COULD PREVENT THE LEGION FROM HOLDING THEIR CONVENTION IN PARIS. I HOPE THE FRENCH MILITARISTS DON'T CAUSE ANY VIOLENCE, HOWEVER."

Mrs. Sacco said again and again that she wished to thank the thousands of workers who came to salute the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti at Union Square.

"The Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations which have extended from South America to the Soviet Union have written a new chapter in history," she declared.

Miss Luigi Vanzetti was unable to come to New York because she was prostrated at the home of Beltrando Brini, in North Plymouth—the same Brini who, as a boy, sold eels with Vanzetti in the Italian district on the day of the South Braintree murder, Mrs. Sacco explained. Mrs. Sacco will soon return to her home in Malden, Mass., from New York.

HENRI DETERDING RAGES AND TALKS "HUMANITY" AS STANDARD OIL TAKES SOVIET OIL HE LOST

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The recent apparent conflict of opinions among the leaders of Standard Oil groups as to the morality of dealing in Russian oil is causing wide spread interest in European oil circles.

Socony and Socony Differ.

The curious thing is that the Standard Oil of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company who are buying, or selling on commission, very large quantities of Russian oil, are the holders of a large amount of Nobel Oil Stock, which they purchased since the Russian Revolution. They make no scruples about doing business, while Standard Oil of New Jersey, who had no holdings in Czarist oil concerns are, apparently siding with the Shell interests who have alternately bought or bargained for Russian oil or denounced the Soviet "in the interests of humanitarianism and business morality." It is probable that the Standard Oil of New Jersey is seriously embarrassed by the over-production of their subsidiaries, and need the Eastern markets of their brother trusts to relieve the situation.

The Standard Oil of New York, which apparently finds a market within its areas in the United States of America for all, or nearly all the oil its producing subsidiaries can deliver, has created a chain of storage and distribution plants throughout the Far and Near East, and in East and South Africa. Colombo and Port Said once the important oil bunkering stations monopolized by the Royal Dutch Shell group—with their 60 per cent Dutch and 40 per cent British control—are now the arenas for a challenge by Standard Oil of New York. The latter has now storage capacity for 85,000,000 barrels in these areas and served by 43 oil tankers, a large number of barges and river craft operated by its subsidiaries. Russian oil is to fill this field.

Noble Deterding Also Bid to U.S.S.R.

Sir Henri Deterding, leader of the Shell Group, now claims that Standard Oil of New York is wrong to have relations with the Soviet, who he accuses of using money derived from oil sales for fostering Communism in the Dutch East Indies. Incidentally it is reported that Sir Henri, eminent moralist and a proponent of humanitarianism as he purports to be, made an offer, it is rumored, in November of last year for the monopoly of marketing Soviet oil in the world's market.

The campaign against Russian oil in Great Britain is dying down, as the attitude of the Government in stimulating Russian trade, despite the suspension of diplomatic relations, plainly discourages the Combine and the Rothermere Press. A recent effort by the conservative council of the small West country town of Barnstaple to prevent the Russian Oil Products Ltd. from opening a distributing depot at that place was overridden by the Home Secretary himself.

The Vacuum Oil Company has issued a circular to its representatives in Great Britain concluding with a statement to the effect that the ownership of petroleum wells in Russia has changed as a result of the revolution which, it states, is entirely a domestic affair of the Russians themselves. This comes, be it noted, from a company holding parcels of stocks from expropriated companies.

Another angle is touched by the London editor of the "Yorkshire Post." He says, "whatever may be the outcome of this conflict, some authorities hold the view that if Russian oil is seriously boycotted, it may mean that other sources of oil supplies will be seriously depleted, and that the position will eventually be reached where Russia dominates the world's oil markets. This is considered to be undesirable since it may give undue power to the Soviet in this respect."

Philippine Governor Refuses to State His Policy; Bans Newsmen

MANILA, Aug. 30.—The high-handed and characteristic action of acting-Governor General Eugene Gilmore in refusing to grant any interview to Philippine newspapermen has met with a reprisal in the form of a journalistic boycott of the American official. No Manila paper will permit the acting-Governor's name to appear anywhere in its columns until he has made a statement of his policy either personally or thru his cabinet.

The acting-Governor had issued orders banning the Philippine newspapermen from the Malacanan Palace where his offices are.

Gilmore has been acting-Governor since the death of Leonard Wood and his refusal to interview the native journalist is attributed to his uncertainty as to what form the future Coolidge rubber policy in the Islands is to take.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The members of the Connecticut State Park and Forest Commission accompanied by the directors of the Connecticut Forestry Association will make an inspection trip of the Westchester County park system on September 14th, with a view to having a park development policy for Connecticut.

REVOLUTIONARY CHINESE PEASANTS

Peasant Self-Defense Corps of Hayuanchu village of Fanyhsien in celebration of their success in suppressing anti-revolutionists—June 13, 1925.

The Peasant Revolution

By EARL BROWDER.
ARTICLE V.

THE rise of the peasants has been accompanied by strife and bloodshed from the beginning. It is a mistake to suppose that the recent suppressions in Hunan and Hupeh are extraordinary occurances in themselves; the new development consists only in this, that now the central government apparatus has itself turned against the peasants. The fundamental struggle in the villages has been of the nature of civil war from the very beginnings of the peasant movement. A few original documents will show this better than all my own exposition.

Here is the speech of Yi Li-yuan, Chairman of the Hunan Peasants Union, on the occasion of the Hupeh peasant reception to the International Workers' Delegation, on April 2, 1927. It is brief enough to report in full, and is classical in its simplicity:

"I have the honor to represent the peasants of Hunan to attend this grand meeting today. I have also something to speak to you relating the conditions of the Hunan peasants. It would be greatly appreciated if you, dear comrades, could give us a little bit of assistance. Peasants of Hunan and Hupeh must have a close relation with one another as hands and feet of a body do. Hunan peasants are as poor as you are. Within this few years the rents are increased terribly by the landowners. Sixty per cent of the harvest which we have got through our hard work must go to the hands of the landowners who use this unearned profit for their own amusement and comfort, while we, the peasants, have little left for our living. Furthermore, if the harvest is bad we have no means to pay the rents other than actioning our wives and children. Comrades, how pitiful we are! Should we not overthrow these cruel and wicked landowners?

Fight Landowners Also.

"We peasants want to participate in that which we have produced. We strike not only to exterminate militarists but also landowners. The landowners in forty districts of Hunan have been overthrown by us. Most of them have fled and taken refuge in the Wuhan cities. You have to help us to overthrow them too. We know that the strength of the nationalist revolution is dependent upon the help of the community. For this reason we must support the revolutionary leaders in order to accomplish the revolution. The National Peasants' Union has just been organized. Peasants of various provinces must work together so as to set up a firm foundation for the 'General Peasants' Union. He who opposes the peasants movement is opposing the nationalist revolution."

* * *

In "The Plough", organ of the peasant movement (issue No. 7), a report on the Kwangtung conditions says: "The present livelihood of peasants in rural villages is like that of fish in a drying pond which can neithed fly nor run away". This document, which contained the political line for the 1926 Peasant' Congress in Canton, just a year before the great upheavals in Nanking, Shanghai, Hankow and Changsha, has great historical value; like many of the Chinese documents which I gathered during my visit, it is more valuable than libraries of books written in the West, for arriving at an intimate understanding of the Chinese revolution. The following are some of the most important paragraphs:

Struggle of Peasants.

"The peasants' struggle, caused by the suppressions, has on the one hand proved the failure of being unorganized, for by want of organizations the peasants have suffered great sacrifices, and on the other hand has given teachings hastening their eagerness in revolution. It also resulted in the present movement. At present, the peasants have organizations. It is the mark of progress in the procedure of the peasant struggle. The promotion of peasant movements and the organization of peasant' unions in Kwantung were caused by two factors.

"Indirectly, it was due to the effect of the world revolutionary tendency, owing to the achievement of the revolution of workers and peasants of Soviet Russia, of the students' patriotic movement on May 4, protesting against Japan and overthrowing the traitors of the first strike of the Canton seamen, protesting against the imperialists and foreign capitalists, of the massacres in Peking and Hankow on February 7th, directly denouncing the militarists Chao Kan and Wu Peifu and indirectly against the English imperialists and American imperialists whom Chao and Wu conspired with. It is the great movement for the economical and political struggle of the masses of workers.

"Directly, it was due to the peasants' oppressions by the imperialists, militarists, compradores, and landlords.

"Upon seeing workers have labor unions, merchants have merchants associations, and students have student unions, so the peasants began to organize peasant unions. From this point of view, we may know that the significance of the beginning of the organization of peasant unions is very simple. But, really, the peasants suffered a great grievance and hoped to have unions just as merchants, students, and workers to unite themselves. The landlord class who held the economical, political and educational power of villages, upon seeing that the peasants rose to organize peasant unions, recognized that it would be harmful to the power of their controlling classes and so suppressed the peasants more seriously and made obstacle to the peasants' progress, fabricating rumors to fool and to threaten the peasants. Indeed, they tried in every way possible to violate peasants' unions and to suppress the peasants. In 1922, the Hai Fung landlords and depraved gentries conspired — with the militarist Chang Chiung-ming, ordering the District Magistrate to arrest and to imprison the peasants' leaders of the Hai Fung peasant union. In 1923, when the peasant corps of Wan Lo village of Shun Tak district prepared to inaugurate, the local Militia Board conspired with the District Magistrate Chow Chiching prohibiting the peasant corps to register.

Escape Isolation.

"In 1924, the Kong Tung landlords conspired with the District Magistrate Lei Chai-yuen destroying the Kong Tung village peasant union, Kwong Ning district, with armed force of the unlawful militia. Fortunately, since the peasant movement, the militia, defense board, self-control union, etc., which were organized by the landlords, gentries, rowdies, and peasants jointly, were all dismissed. For instance, at that time, peasants who used to be members of militia, severed their connections with the militia and rose to protest against militia. Gradually, among the rural villages, two opponent organizations existed, namely, the organization of the landlord class and the organization of the peasant class; the former are the militia, defense corps, etc., and the latter is the peasant union organized voluntarily by the peasants. None of the members of the militia of the places where peasants' unions exist, are peasants, but only the rowdies, beggars, bandits, etc. At the same time, the peasants have been able to come out of the manifold confinement of localism and clanism, and have organized village peasant' unions with peasants under different surnames, and division peasant' unions with a number of village peasant unions. SACRIFICE!

(On the Murder of Sacco and Vanzetti)

By HILDEGARDE OLGA ALEXANDER

For seven years you suffered
Tortures hard to tell
The anguish of a mind
Racked with the fires of hell.
The sufferings you bore
Were for the views you held
Not for the Braintree murder
Of the two that bullets felled.

The land of the brave
And the land of the free
Did not fulfill your hopes
You found no liberty.
For liberty was the cross
They crucified you on
And justice were the nails
That drove you thereupon.

They clamored for your body,
They vanquished not your soul,
And, in the name of justice,
Tyranny claimed its toll.
They burned your wasted body,
Yet, could they hope to still
The voices raised in protest
Against such bloody will?

On the altar of humanity
You were the sacrifice
And "Justice" jeered and sneered
When with your lives you paid the price;
But the words of many centuries
Were echoed down to you,
Your heart cried out "Forgive them
For they know not what they do."

Your martyrdom is over
Yet nothing can efface
The cause you gave your lives for
Which breathes hope to every race.

On War and Danger of War

This is the Seventh Installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

24. One must differentiate between these two forms of pacifism. While Communists are prepared patiently for weeks and months on end if necessary to explain to the workers their errors endeavoring to draw them into a "united workers' front" with the vanguard of the working class and helping them in the course of the struggle to overcome these errors, they must be utterly relentless in regard to the "leaders," who, taking advantage of the confused pacifist ideas among the proletariat, give this pacifism the definite form of a "position" and give various false explanations of the fundamental principle.

"One of the forms of deceiving the working class," wrote Lenin during the war in the year 1915, "is pacifism and the abstract preaching of peace. Under capitalism and particularly in its imperialist stage, war is inevitable. . .To preach peace at the present time without at the same time calling upon the masses for revolutionary action, can serve only to sow illusions, corrupt the proletariat by imbuing them with confidence in the humaneness of the bourgeoisie and convert it into a plaything of the secret diplomacy of the belligerent countries." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 51 "Pacifism and the Slogan of Peace").

25. Among these pacifist muddleheads who "preach peace without at the same time calling upon the masses for revolutionary action" must be included first of all, the British Independent Labor Party, which has not taken a single practical step towards the mobolization of the British working class and the soldiers and sailors for the struggle against British imperialism. The Independent Labor Party stubbornly rejected the united front with the Communist Party. It condemned the "violence" and armed struggle of the Chinese masses against the foreign imperialists, it advocated "negotiations" in order to paralyze the further development of the national revolutionary movement in China.

Not less harmful is another form of this "socialist pacifism," namely, the peculiar religious-mystical "anti-militarism" associated with Lansbury and supported by the Independent Labor Party. It is limited to voting against war credits, to the advocacy of individual and collective refusal to do military service and to transport arms in the event of war. This group is coming more and more under the influence of the Labor Party and is capitulating before British imperialism. This pseudo-socialist pacifism is dangerous because it creates among the workers the illusion that social democracy, at least its pacifist section, is prepared to fight against war. As a matter of fact it only helps to suppress the question of genuine mass methods of struggling against war.

Tactical Questions in the Struggle Aagainst Imperialist Wars.

26. Lenin's presentation of the question of war determines the tactics of the Communist Parties for an entire historical epoch, the epoch of imperialist wars. Slogans like "War Against War," "Convert the imperialist war into civil war," "Defeat of the home bourgeois government in an imperialist war," remain today classical examples of true revolutionary internationalism. Leninism has rendered the great service of dealing with the question of war in its concrete historical conditions; the following three types of wars were laid down: (a) wars between imperialist states; (b) national revolutionary wars against imperialism including also colonial countries (China); (c) capitalist counter-revolutionary wars against the proletarian revolution and countreis building up Socialism. The Comintern has now merely to put into concrete form—with regards to wars of the last two types—the general treatment of the question of war, which Bolshevism laid down most fully with regard to wars between imperialist states.

27. Bolshevism first of all rejects: (a) a frivolous treatment of the question of war. In his draft of instructions to the Russian delegation to the Hague conference, Lenin very emphatically warned against any frivolous treatment of the methods of struggle against war. He advised all Communists Parties to take into consideration the actual conditions in which war arises; the secrecy with which preparations are made for it; its unexpected outbreak, the helplessness of the "ordinary organization of the workers" even if it calls itself revolutionary, in the face of an actual menace of war; the fact that "the overwhelming majority of the toilers will decide the question (of national defense) in favor of their own bourgeoisie, owing to the powerful pressure exercised by the bourgeois state apparatus. FOREIGN CONCESSIONS CAN DO PROFITABLE BUSINESS IN SOVIET UNION

By TOM BARKER.

LONDON, (By Mail) Aug. 22.—"In our enterprise we have gone back into Russia purely as business people and have been treated as such by the Soviet Government," said Mr. Herbert Guedella, chariman, at the ordinary general meeting of the Lena Goldfields, Ltd., in London on July 29th. "It is not for me to criticize the recent action which has disturbed the relations between the governments of Great Britain and Soviet Russia."

Talks About Russia.

"I presume," he went on, "that we may be permitted to claim some little experience of working conditions in Russia, and that in fact we are better acquainted with them than the various people who write so much in the British press on this subject. We employ many thousands of workers, and, thru the various trade unions we work under collective agreements, which are strictly adhered to. I can assure you our workers are not underpaid, and their efficiency compares favorably with those of other European countries."

Earlier in his report, Mr. Guedella showed the great difficulties associated with operating gold fields in the inaccessible reaches of the Lena River, which drains into the Arctic Ocean thru a vast delta. "We have to provide not merely technical stores and spares for our business but also the necessities of life for the 5000 workers and dependents at Bodaibo, the center of the Lena enterprise, but we buy in London a variety of goods unobtainable in Russia. We buy vast quantities of flour, etc., in Moscow, while livestock is purchased in Mongolia and driven across the plains to Irkutsk where we undertake the necessary transport for the final thousand miles to Bodaibo."

Hard Conditions.

"In winter we are cut off for supplies, only the mail getting thru. We operate the 95-mile length of railway from the river to Bodaibo.

"'Engineers estimate that about 114 million cubic yards of gold bearing sands have already been proved giving a gold content of about 35 cents per yard. This will give sufficient work for four of the largest type Bucyrus dredges for ten years. Our first dredge will start work next year and will be followed speedily by others, which will supersede the present uneconomical drift mining.

Get Copper and Iron.

"Under a fifty-year concession we have taken over the copper and iron mines and smelters and iron works of the Sissert property and similar deposits and installations at Revda in the Urals. Our chief attention will be devoted to the famous Degtiarsky copper seam which is estimated to contain 6,000,000 tons of pyritic ore, and to treat which we are considering the erection of a plant with a capacity of 2000 tons of ore a day."

"Our third area is 15,500 square miles in the Altai-Irtysh river basin with its immense reserves of silver, copper and lead. I can not be considered as exaggerating," observed Mr. Guedella, "if I use the word 'enormous' with regard to its future possibilities."

Following the report of a substantial profit on the year's working Mr. Guedella concluded "So far as possible we have always endeavored to adhere to the general basis of agreement, but, when necessary we have not hesitated to approach the Chief Concessions Committee to point out our difficulties in certain directions. On such occasions we have always received sympathetic consideration. I think that it has now been recognized that our sole policy is to create and establish our enterprise on a large scale on sound and businesslike lines with results that cannot but be reciprocally advantageous both to the Soviet Government and ourselves."

U. S. IMPERIALISM COMMON ENEMY OF ALL WORKERS

New Court Attack Against "Daily" Is Mystery

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

IF you want to know the "real" facts about the Communist Party convention now taking place in New York City, do not bother reading The DAILY WORKER, but take your mental fodder from the Herald-Tribune. In last Wednesday's issue of that paper we are told that the convention is being held "somewhere in Westchester county" and that even the delegates do not yet know the location. This is the kind of rubbish that appears in the guise of news in the capitalist press. It is not surprising that every intelligent worker looks with suspicion on whatever appears in the boss sheets—even the weather reports.

FORMER governor McCray of Indiana, today quits Atlanta prison on parole. McCray was once one of the big guns in Indiana politics and respected by all who respect success in politics and business. The governor was doing business with the aid of money deposited in banks by the thrifty Hoosiers. But McCray's foot slipped and just as soon as it did, his fellow sharks grabbed it and he found himself on his way to the can. But not having violated a criminal syndicalist law and not being a militant trade union organizer he will be forgiven and restored to the bosom of bourgeois Indiana.

ANOTHER one of those farces that international capitalism pulls off periodically is now being held in Paris. It is the interparliamentary world congress where solons from many nations meet to blow off their bazoos and incidentially speak for the interests of the capitalist crooks they represent. Some people imagine that those meetings encourage peace. Just as little as would periodic meetings of second story workers enable the innocent sleeper to pound the pillow with a greater feeling of security than he experiences now.

AS a single-handed and self-serving publicity agent Charles A. Levine is entitled to the non-stop medal for continuous success in making the front page on sheer merit. Levine is an ex-junkman and owes so much money to the government that he is liable to mistake himself for the Republic of France. Being a patriot he contracted business relations with Uncle Sam during the war but Sam evidently considered himself jilted out of half a million dollars and was so sore on his unfaithful partner that he would not confer the customary honors on the former dealer in cast-off things after his successful passengership to Germany.

LEVINE is an ambitious fellow and will not return on a palatial liner as did the other air heroes. He has gotten into so many fights in Europe that the militarists of Germany and France may decide to postpone the next war for another generation. Having licked everything in France Levine jumped into his air flivver and almost knocked England into the Irish sea. Everything was more or less hurt but Levine. It is reported that the intrepid adventurer would fly alone on his return trip to the Mother Pays Son Salary for Robbing Her Estate

An alleged "scheme" whereby a man is said to have deprived his aged mother of her $150,000 estate, and charged her $100 a week for the privilege, is charged in a report on file yesterday in surrogate's court.

The report is an attempt to get a new accounting of the estate of Mrs. Ella Mitchelbacher. The son, Abraham Mitchelbacher, had rendered an accounting showing assets worth $3,300. A sister and niece, named also as beneficiaries, have protested.

Fake "Ringside" Seats [illegible]r Big Dempsey Fight

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—It may interest you to know that there are 38,000 alleged ringside seats for the Dempsey-Tunney Brawl. If you can wander out to the stadium and do your own counting.

You'll discover that although 38,000 seats will be sold for $40 each and will be called "ringside" seats the unvarnished truth is that there are no more than 5,000 or 6,000 actual ringside seats.

POLICE HAND OUT MANY SUBPOENAS FOR GOVERNMENT

Editorial, Business and Mechanical Staff Called

Subpoenas wholesale were served yesterday on members of the editorial, business and mechanical staff of The DAILY WORKER, calling on them to appear before the federal grand jury this morning at 11:30 o'clock.

These are all the facts at hand at this writing in the government's latest move against The DAILY WORKER, the exact object of which takes on the nature of a deep mystery.

Kelly Serves Subpoenas.

The fact that subpoenas were served by Sergeant Kelly and other members of the "bomb squad," part of the New York police department, when the summons was to appear before a federal (United States District Court) grand jury, is explained by the claim that the police sergeant is more familiar with the members of the DAILY WORKER staff than the force of the United States marshal's office.

When notified of this new government move, Attorney Joseph Brodsky, counsel for The DAILY WORKER, declared he was unable to explain its meaning.

"It is a mystery to me," he declared.

The stamp of Charles H. Tuttle, United States district attorney, was upon the subpoenas served, but when his office was called by The DAILY WORKER, those in charge refused to give any additional information.

Out on $1,000 Bail.

Members of the editorial staff of The DAILY WORKER, including J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, Alex Bittleman, with Bert Miller, manager, and David Gordon, author of the poem, "America," are now being held for trial under $1,000 bail each, because of the appearance in The DAILY WORKER of Gordon's poem. They appeared in Judge Lynch's court recently when Sept. 6 was decided on as the date for setting the time of trial on this charge.

Foresee New Attack.

It is not believed that this old charge has any connection with the serving of the subpoena on The DAILY WORKER staff yesterday.

This new attack was launched on the opening day of the Fifth Conven-

Daily Worker Struggle to Save Sacco, Vanzetti Lauded by Newark ILD

By LEO KLING
(Worker Correspondent).

At an enthusiastic meeting held at the Hungarian Workers Home in Newark last week, the International Labor Defense branch of that city made a collection of $17.00 for The DAILY WORKER.

Finding the need very great, the comrades dug into their pockets and raised the sum to $20.05. They were not satisfied. They began to investigate the condition of their treasury. They thereupon took the balance of the money they had and donated the full amount of $35.05 to The DAILY WORKER.

The comrades of Newark gave their support to The DAILY WORKER because of its splendid fight for class war prisoners, particularly of its fight for Sacco and Vanzetti. The entire discussion which was full of life and enthusiasm lasted for three-quarters of an hour.

WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION CALLS ON WORKERS TO BUILD POWERFUL INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

The resolution unanimously adopted by the great gathering assembled in Central Opera House Tuesday night to greet the delegates to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party calls upon American workers to build the International Labor Defense to curb legalized murders like that of Sacco and Vanzetti. The resolution declares that it is the duty of the Workers (Communist) Party of America to expose the nature of capitalist justice. The text of the resolution follows in full:

AMERICAN capitalism is at the height of its power. But while it pursues its profit interests with ruthless brutality it is neverthelss, anxious to hide the face of its dictatorship behind a mask of democracy and justice. The contradiction thus created a merciless capitalist dictatorship operating under the guise of a benevolent democracy, has given birth to the institution of frame-ups so often perpetrated in America by organs of the state power.

The capitalist dictatorship desires to destroy its political enemy; but it cannot do it openly for fear of destroying, at the same time, the democratic illusions of the masses. Therefore the political enemy is charged with a common crime which he never committed; a crime is fastened upon him by perjured evidence, obvious discrepancies in the evidence are smoothed over by rulings of a judge who is a party to a frame-up; an atmosphere of prejudice is created and carefully nursed; and the result of it all is the covering up of an unwarranted persecution of a political opponent with the cloak of a righteous defense of society against the attacks of a common criminal.

This method of class warfare has created in America a long series of perpetrated judicial murders which invariably accompanied intensive conflicts between capital and labor. Thus the eight hour movement of American labor in the eighties was stifled for a time by the victimization of the Haymarket martyrs in 1837; the strikes and struggles of the metal miners of the west resulted in an attack by American capital through a frame-up against Haywood and others; the continued unrest of the underpaid textile workers of New England inspired the Massachusetts authorities to the frame-up against Ettor and Giovanitti in Lawrence; the desire to break down the resistance of American labor against the war brought Billings and Mooney as victims of an outrageous frame-up under the shadow of the gallows. And the general unrest of labor after the World War was attacked by American capital through its wholesale persecution of foreign-born workers by the deportation delirium of the then Attorney-General of the United States, Mitchell Palmer. The outrage committed by the prostituted capitalist justice in the legal murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti was an outgrowth of this delirium.

Persecute Foregin-Born.

It was during this period of wholesale persecution of foreign-born workers that a thoroughly corrupted police department in New York and an equally notorious corrupted federal department of justice attempted to lay at the door of the militant labor movement of America a blast of explosives in Wall Street which was either planned by police agents or transported through the streets of the city for building purposes with disregard of the most elementary precautions.

All police organs, city and federal, worked feverish[illegible] the trails of the real caus[illegible] explosion and attempted to fas[illegible] crime upon he revolutionar[illegible]nt. With third degree methods which would have been accepted with joy as a welcome addition to the technique of any medieval torturer, they attempted to get "confessions" from innocent victims. One of these, tortured to death, was unquestionably thrown out of the windows of the department of justice headquarters in Park Row, New York. This victim, the Italian worker Salsedo, because unwilling to perjure himself against his comrades in favor of a frame-up of the department of justice had to testify to the brutality of this department with his broken limbs and his mangled body.

Salsedo was a friend and comrade of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. The latter protested against the outrageous murder of their comrade and thus drew the hatred of the commissioned framers upon their own persons.

Sacco and Vanzetti Murder

The federal department of justice and the judiciary machinery of the State of Massachusetts co-operated in and are both equally responsible for the frame-up which ended in the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Sacco

MEXICAN COMMUNIST PARTY GREETS FIFTH CONVENTION OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN NEW YORK

Expresses Hope for Complete Unity of Brother Party in This Country

Fraternal Communist greetings were received by the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party yesterday from the Communist Party of Mexico calling for increased struggle against American imperialism, the common enemy of the workers of both countries.

The telegram, read by Acting Secretary Jay Lovestone, to the convention assembled at Irving Plaza Hall, Irving Place and 15th Street, was as follows:

> "The Mexican Communist Party greets the Fifth Convention of its Brother Party, the Workers (Communist) Party, wishing the outcome will be complete unity. Yours for the overthrow of the common enemy —American Imperialism."

Enthusiastic applause greeted the reading of the telegram. There has always been the closest co-operation between the Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico. Recent conventions of the Mexican Party have been attended by fraternal delegates from our Party.

The receipt of the telegram of greetings would indicate that the Mexican Party is not planning to send a fraternal delegate to New York for the present convention.

Greeting from Pittsburgh.

The convention also received a telegram of greetings from a street nucleus in Pittsburgh with "Greetings and hopes for complete unification."

The business sessions of the convention opened Wednesday, following the enthusiastic demonstration in the Central Opera House, Tuesday night, addressed by Jay Lovestone, William Z. Foster, Ben Gitlow, William W. Weinstone, Robert Minor, of the Central Executive Committee; Herbert Zam, of the Young Workers League, and a representative of the Pioneers.

Select Presidium of Five.

After the reading of the agenda proposed by the political committee, a presidium was elected as follows: Jay Lovestone, Benjamin Gitlow, Max Bedacht, William Z. Foster and William W. Weinstone.

Acting Secretary Lovestone was chosen as the chairman of the afternoon session, with Foster as chair-

KUOMINTANG IN AMERICA DENOUNCES WUHAN GOVERNM'T AS REACTIONARY

His Failure to Loose Forces of Agrarian Revolution; Supports Mme. Sun

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PALO ALTO, Cal., Aug. 31.—The Central Committee of the Kuomintang in America has passed a resolution supporting Mme. Sun Yat-sen's declaration against the counter-revolutionary policies of the Wuhan government and reaffirms its determination to strictly adhere to Sun Yat-sen's policy of cooperation with the Communists and the Soviet Union and the loosing of the workers and peasants revolution.

The Oakland and San Francisco branches have passed similar resolutions and the San Francisco branch has also issued a long manifesto vigorously supporting the above policy in the Kuo Min Yat Po, the daily organ of the Kuomintang in America and is carrying on a militant campaign supporting the left wing policies.

and Vanzetti did not die as a punishment of crimes committed by them, but died as a monumental proof of the crimes of the federal department of justice of the judiciary machine of the State of Massachusetts and of capitalist justice as a whole.

Sacco and Vanzetti were anarchists. Although enemies of the state they opposed the aim of the communists of conquering the state power as a means of destroying capitalism and establishing a free society. Capitalist justice, as one arm of the power of the capitalist state, destroyed in Sacco and Vanzetti two of its enemies. In doing this the capitalist state proved that while philosophy may disregard an antagonistic state the capitalist state does not disregard antagonistic philosophies. It strikes its enemies and thus proves with convincing logic that it will never capitulate before an idea but will give way only to the substantial force of the proletariat organized into one revolutionary fighting class.

Expose Capitalist Justice.

In the face of this latest outrage of capitalist justice it becomes the duty of the Party to tear the false masks of fairness and justice from the face of the capitalist state and to show to the workers in its true light the capitalist dictatorship. The threads of the whole frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti must be laid bare so that the workers of America get a glimpse of the brutal manifestations of the class struggle which, under the capitalist dictatorship in America, parade as justice.

The Party shall open the eyes of the American workers to the impossibility of expecting impartial justice from a capitalist court in any case where the interests of capital clash with the interests of labor. It shall transmit to the workers the experience from the Sacco and Vanzetti case, that justice for the workers cannot come from capitalist courts, but can only come as fruit of struggle of a united working class against capital and its institutions.

Must Build I. L. D.

The Party shall draw the attention of the American workers to the imperative necessity of preparing, thru the building and strengthening of the International Labor Defense as a protective weapon, against the ever-threatening danger of persecution.

The Workers (Communist) Party will do all in its power to make the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti a cherished tradition of the American working class, to plant in the hearts of the American proletariat revolutionary hatred against capitalism and into their heads revolutionary determination to end capitalism.

W. Virginia Labor Calls for Unions For Unorganized

By Federated Press.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 31.—Adoption of a program calling for a state-wide campaign to unionize the unorganized workers of West Virginia closed the twentieth anniversary convention of the state Federation of Labor. President John B. Easton, who was reelected without opposition, will take charge of the enrolling of the hundreds of volunteer organizers the convention expects to assist in the drive.

Easton's recruits will work hand in hand with the various international unions, the state federation furnishing the unifying force.

Miners Union Week.

The twentieth anniversary convention opened with building trades, printers, glass workers and other delegates from the non-mining occupations in control. The once powerful West Virginia miners' district unions have shrunk to a shadow of the powerful organizations of 50,000 members and more than once dominated the state labor gatherings.

Will C. Thompson, secretary-treasurer of District No. 17 of the United Mine Workers, took the floor the first afternoon and made an appeal for aid from the rest of the labor movement. Referring to the strike still continuing in parts of the Fairmont (northern) field and the meetings being held in the southern regions he said the job before the U. M. W. of A. was a huge one, and the other trade unions must lend their full support if it was to be successful.

Tell of Attack on Unions.

Mining is the basic industry of West Virginia and with the defeat of the miners' union the whole labor movement has suffered. Delegates from the Typographical Union told how the two leading newspapers of Charleston, the capital city, have gone open shop in the last year. Building tradesmen told of attacks on their organizations. Realizing that a vigorous counter-movement was necessary the convention voted for the organization drive, from which much is expected.

"The Drawings in This Book Are Aflame With the Idea of the Class Struggle—"

The case of
Sacco and Vanzetti
in CARTOONS from THE DAILY WORKER
by Ellis

WITH A SPLENDID INTRODUCTION BY
Joseph Freeman

ELLIS has given us in this book an inspiration to carry on the brave fight of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The drawings—like their conduct—call not for mourning but for struggle"—says Jos. Freeman, noted writer in his introduction.

Drawn in the heat of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti these inspired cartoons are a beautiful memorial tribute to the memory of two brave workers. Here is a book that will speak more than you possibly can to the man in your shop and trade union.

Only one cartoon has been placed on each page. EVERY PAGE IS SUITABLE FOR FRAMING. The book is large size—9x12 inches on heavy antique art paper. Send for a copy today. The price has been lowered practically at cost to assure the widest possible distribution in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

TRADE UNION PROGRESSIVES ON COAST FIGHTING FOR MILITANT ACTION

members of the Central Labor Union of Los Angeles that is now expressing itself. Recently the labor council urged all local unions to join in demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti and when the unions started to do so, had the orders cancelled at the 11th hour, Levin said.

Unions Gain Membership.

According to Levin the Electrical and Machinists' Unions are gaining membership in Los Angeles. The building trades of Hollywood, the world moving picture center has appointed a special committee to continue the organization work. Even the actors and actresses are planning to become union members by joining the Equity Association. This is their answer to the producers threat to cut their salaries.

The most unorganized workers in the state, who are also poorly paid are the fruit pickers. Recently in the peach district 5,000 workers who went there in response to a call were left stranded due to a disagreement between the packers and the fruit growers.

Work As Slaves.

In the Imperial Valley many Mexican workers are brot into the state by special privileges and are then kept under virtual peonage. They work for unusually low wages at fruit packing, cotton picking and farming.

Recently the unorganized lumber workers were given a $2 slash in wages. These highly exploited workers are mostly in the Sugar Pine and Red Wood sections of the state.

In Oakland there has been formed a conference to work for the repeal of the state criminal syndicalist law. Twenty unions are represented in this organization. The Building Trades Council of Oakland is supporting this move.

Tells of Frisco.

Ernest Ettlinger also from California told of the labor movement in San Francisco. He told how six year ago the open shop drive was started against the building thrades unions and of the general strike of 1921.

The strike of the 2,000 carpenters that started in April of last year and ended in a defeat this January was also referred to. After their defeat the rank and file decided to get rid of the reactionary machine within the union that was responsible for their defeat. According to Ettinger, the largest carpenters' local in San Francisco is supporting wholeheartedly this rank and file movement.

For Joint Agreement.

In the painters' union the progressives are advocating a joint agreement between all building trades unions and the bosses, all of them to expire at the same time. They are also propagating the five day week. Every building trades union in Los Angeles is being visited to gain their support for the struggle. Arrangements for a large labor day parade in Los Angeles are now being prepared.

Conditions in Oregon

Delegate Sulo W. Syvanen of the Finnish Communist Daily Toveri, Astoria, Oregon, recited the conditions in the state of Oregon.

According to Syvenen the largest salmon fishing center in the world is located in Astoria. The fishermen there have organized themselves into a federal union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. It is known as the Columbia Fishermen's Protective Association and has more than 1,000 members. The carpenters union in the same city is dominated by ultra-reactionary forces and is not active.

In Portland, Oregon, the only union of any importance is the Carpenters.

Strong Progressive Group.

In Seattle several years ago six militant delegates were expelled from the Central Labor Council on the charge of being Communists. The reactionary forces hoped that would act as the death knell of the progressive movement there. But they calculated wrong for today a strong group of progressive delegates sit in the council. Also a large body of militant workers are found in the various unions.

The lumber workers are unorganized. They number more than 25,000 men. The first step towards their organization has been among the higher skilled shingle weavers who have been organized in Grays Harbor, Kalamo and Ballard. About 2,500 men are in this union.

Organized 100 per cent.

In Gray's Harbor they are organized 100 per cent. In the other places the figure is not quite so high. Recently a strike took place at Kalama which resulted in an increase of four cents a thousand in the amount of work done.

Plans for the organization of the other lumber workers are going forward. The average pay is $3 to $3.50 a day for 8 hours. The bosses are attempting to raise the work day to 10 hours.

Referring to the growth of the party, Aaron Fislerman, district organizer of the Party at Seattle, said that during the last year 240 new members were secured in the district. The Party has recenlty opened a new headquarters in a three-story building. An open forum and 10 classes will be started on September 18.

The Party has participated in many united front movements during the last year. They have been on such important questions as Sacco and Vanzetti, Hands Off China and other subjects of international importance.

man of the evening session. The various members of the presidium will interchange as chairman during the sessions of the convention.

The credentials committee was selected to consist of Jay Lovestone, Jack Stachel, Abram Jakira, John J. Ballam and John W. Johnstone.

The financial committee includes Jay Lovestone, William W. Weinstone and Alex Bail.

The press committee consists of J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne and Robert Minor.

Following these preliminaries the convention recessed to allow the credentials committee to get to work and consider the challenges that had been made of delegates in several districts.

Herald-Tribune as Provocateur.

On the opening day of the convention the New York Herald-Tribune appeared in the role of provocatuer, very evidently seeking to incite governmental action against the Workers (Communist) Party. It printed a lurid story declaring that the convention was being held in secret "somewhere in Westchester country."

In speaking of the convention the Herald-Tribune declares that:

"The actual place of meeting is being kept secret by the Communists. It is known only to delegates and department of justice men operating as active members of the Workers Party.

"Altho New York is given as the convention city in the call, it was learned yesterday that the meeting place will be 'somewhere' in Westchester county'."

It became known to The DAILY WORKER that the following telegram has been received by Mr. R. A. Holcomb, managing-editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, 225 West 40th St., New York City:

"Please assign two star reporters and Mr. Fred B. Marvin, editor of the late New York Commercial, to go gunning with me somewhere in Westchester. (Signed) Percy Parlor, Red Agent, Department of Justice."

Convention Held in Public.

Of course, no effort was made to keep the meeting place of the convention secret. While the Herald-Tribune was spreading its "fake" the New York Times was appearing with the news of where and when the convention would be held.

This news was also published in detail in yesterday's issues of The DAILY WORKER.

It was also announced at the mass meeting held at the Central Opera House on Tuesday night.

tion of the Workers (Communist) Party. No effort was made, however, to serve subpoenas on the members of the staf of "The Daily" attending the convention.

Warrants are outstanding against J. Louis Engdahl and Alex Bittleman on state charges growing out of the publication of the poem "America," on which Dunne, Miller and Gordon have already been tried and convicted. At the time of the trials Engdahl was in Moscow, while Bittleman was in Chicago. Detective Kelly has inferred that these charges would be pressed.

Ask About Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

In questioning members of the staff of "The Daily," the visiting squad of the police department showed considerable interest in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

"You have been pretty busy during the Sacco-Vanzetti case, haven't you?" was the suggestive question put to draw out an answer.

Members of the mechanical staff were questioned as to the manner in which The DAILY WORKER was gotten out, who handled copy and who approved of various material going into the paper.

Kept Charges "Dark Secret."

The three plainclothes men who served the subpoenas on members of the staff refused to furnish them with any information. The sections of the law involved in the serving of the subpoeanas was kept a dark secret.

The Capitalist Press Is No Place to Discuss Lessons of Fate of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ALDINO FELICANI, member of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston, on two occasions at least since the execution of the two workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, has used the capitalist press to make an attack on the American Communist movement.

Felicani is an anarchist. Sacco and Vanzetti were also anarchists. But this made no difference to the Communists, neither in the United States nor in any other country. Sacco and Vanzetti were the workers, imprisoned, placed on trial for their lives and sentenced to death by the capitalist state. Communists made every effort, stopped at no sacrifice, to achieve their liberation.

There should have been no difference between workers and working class organizations to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair. Unfortunately there were differences.

There should be no differences today among the workers to build for the unity of American labor and [illegible]lopment of its power, in [illegible] the heroic fight waged [illegible] Vanzetti. But un[illegible]re are differences. Com[illegible] first in the effort to over[illegible]se differences, to cement the uni[illegible] of labor.

In attacking the Communist movement, Felicani does not do so on principle. He resorts to the age-long subterfuge of raising the question of finances.

The International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of New York City have both carefully, repeatedly and patiently answered all of Felicani's criticisms.

In addition, it may be said, however, that Mary Donovan, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston, in a statement to The DAILY WORKER last Saturday, specifically repudiated the statement attributed to her in the New York Herald-Tribune and other capitalist papers of that day to the effect that $500,000 had been raised by Communists and never accounted for, which Felicani again alluded to in his interview in the capitalist press yesterday.

It is an immediate duty of the Boston Committee to officially repudiate the slanders that have been circulated in its name, and credited to Felicani, who is especially obligated to give his views thru some other medium than the press of the enemy class.

Felicani, as an anarchist, may disagree in principle with the Communist program. That is his right, altho it is difficult to understand how any intelligent worker needs better proof than the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti themselves to refute anarchist theories.

The revolutionary movement that is actually threatening the capitalist social order does not consist of workers who believe in the anarchist "negation" of power; of those who believe in individual terror and a passive "refusal to deal with the state," but it is made up of workers who carry on an unceasing struggle of the proletariat for all power, for the destruction of the capitalist state. Such workers cast their lot with the Communist movement.

Let not Felicani debase the struggle, over the principle to a squabble over finances. That is a mere trick. It was the trick used by Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Socialist Daily Forward, to hamper the work of the Friends of Soviet Russia, in the days of famine in the Union of Soviet Republics. It is the subterfuge used by the reactionary bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor in avoiding a direct struggle over principle with the progressives and the left wing.

Felicani, however, is also quoted as stating that the Communists of America are more concerned in spreading their propaganda than in aiding our comrades who died in the electric chair.

If Felicani makes this charge, and he has not denied it, then he has yet to learn that Communists had no interests separate and apart from those demanding the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, just as the Communist movement wages the struggle for the release of all class war prisoners, just as it fights for the emancipation for the whole working class. Even the Boston Committee must now confess the complete bankruptcy of its policies, dictated in great part by bourgeois lawyers and other non-working class elements.

It is in fact the bankruptcy of anarchist theories, especially in wa[illegible] such a struggle as was ne[illegible] the fight for Sacco and [illegible] draws many work[illegible] sympathies into [illegible] Communist Inter[illegible]rs not only in [illegible]ut over the en-

An excellent confession of the bankruptcy of anarchist theories has just been made by Ephim Yarchuk, a Russian ex-anarcho-syndicalist, in a letter to the Pravda (June 15, 1927), the central organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Yarchuk writes as follows:

"Dear Comrade Editor,—Please be good enough to print the following declaration:

"Since 1903 I have been in the ranks of the revolutionary movement and down to the present time belonged to the anarcho-syndicalist wing. I took an active part in the 1905 and 1917 revolutions, working in Kronstadt. I participated in the formation of the Anarcho-Syndicalist Confederation and bitterly criticized Bolshevism. I was arrested several times and in 1921 was deported from the Union of Soviet Republics.

"Looking at the post-war West-European revolutionary movement in general and at the anarcho-syndicalist movement in particular, I was forced to put the following basic questions to myself:

1. "Can the revolutionary movement successfully develop when not headed by a strictly centralized party—as the anarchists believe?

2. "Can the social revolution be victorious without the dictatorship of the proletariat?

3. "Is the road chosen by the Communist Party (Bolshevik) leading to Communism?

"During the process of my work and deliberation on these questions, and after long discussions with anarchists I must admit that:

1). "Only a strictly centralized party, led by experienced, tried and true fighters with a clear and exactly defined class-proletarian ideology, can lead the revolutionary movement of the proletariat. Such a party is the Party of the Bolshevik-Communists.

2). "The experience of the Russian Revolution must convince every honest revolutionary that a transfer to Communism from a Capitalist State is possible only by means of force. Only the dictatorship of the proletariat can overcome the duplicity, cunning and organized resistance of the bourgeoisie and their henchmen.

3). "If the process of the development of the Russian Revolution has dispelled all illusions (including my own) on quickly surmounting the resistance of the bourgeoisie, on a painless transfer to Communism, then these visionaries are alone to blame for this, for they were unable to penetrate the secrets of the dialectics of history. Taking into consideration all the conditions and circumstances that had accompanied the development of the Russian Revolution I must say straightly that the road shown by the Bolshevik Party is the only true and possible road that can lead us to the complete triumph of Communism.

"With comradely greetings,—Ephim Yarchuk."

Years of difficult struggle against capitalism in this country still face the workers of America.

The capitalist class is most interested in confusing the workers in this struggle. It uses its press most ably in its effort to create this confusion.

In spite of the capitalist class and its press, the workers must learn the lessons of the fate meted out to Sacco and Vanzetti, and build its power for future struggles. Communists have full faith that, once learning this lesson corectly the workers will turn in full confidence to the leadership of the American Communist Party and the Communist International.

Moore, Jailer of Passaic Strikers, Scores Free Speech

By IRVING FREEMAN.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Aug. 31.—Governor A. Harry Moore, democrat-elect has pitched himself on the bandwagon of professional patriots last week in his speech before the Monmouth County Historical Association, he declared, "that under the guide of free speech we permit some folks to talk and try to take the white stripes and the blue stars out of our flag and make it all red."

"It is unfortunate that some newspapers and the so-called intellectuals give their aid to radicalism in America."

Real Hundred Per Center.

Governor Moore sets himself up as a 100 per center and classes all citizens who disagree with him as radicals. This lick spittle who is in office in Trenton only because he is the puppet of Mayor Hague in Jersey City not so many years ago was a worker. Today because he has played the game of politics he is the governor of New Jersey.

Not once has he raised his voice or used his offices in the interests of organized or unorganized labor. At the last session of the legislature every bill introduced favorable to labor was killed and never adopted. The Passaic strikers framed in the textile strike of 1926 are still in jail in Trenton. No pardon has been given them by the governor.

In making the above speech Governor Moore was exploiting the Sacco-Vanzetti case for political purposes. The democratic national convention is coming. They need a candidate for the presidency. Governor Moore supporters have already announced him as a candidate in the 1928 race for the presidency. Will the workers of New Jersey permit this ambitious political performer to fool them as he did when he was elected to office or will they proceed to organize a powerful Labor Party that will fight for and protect the interests of labor in Jersey?

PAUL CROUCH ON TOUR FOR ANTI-IMPERIAL LEAGUE

Served Prison Term for Communist Agitation

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 31.—The interesting career of Paul Crouch, journalist, former sergeant in the intelligence service of the U. S. army in Hawaii and peace-time political prisoner in the military "Rock o' Hell of Frisco Bay" became more vivid when he walked into the Federated Press Office. Slender and erect in his more than 6-foot height, with dark hair and friendly straightforward eyes, slow and gentle of speech, he looked anything but the bewhiskered firebrand of civil war and rapine imagined by the doddering courtmartial that sentenced him to 40 years at hard labor.

Organized Communist League.

His crime had been the organization of a league of Communist youth while stationed as a soldier in Hawaii. The ferocious goldbraid warriors would have ordered him shot if the articles of war had permitted. As it was, the war department at Washington, far from the infuriating effect of insular stimulants, cut 37 years off the sentence and Crouch served the rest, with the usual allowance for good conduct as a prisoner.

Crouch is a Carolina boy, born at the turn of the century. He joined the Young People's Socialist League at 15 and turned toward the radical side when the party split in 1919. Becoming telegraph editor of the Statesville (N. C.) Sentinel he quit because of the reactionary censorship and enlisted in the army in 1924, for the Hawaiian garrison, in search of literary material, knowing he could buy his way out after a year if he chose. At honolulu he was assigned to the journalism staff of the intelligence service and soon rose to sergeant. His task was to write publicity for the papers from an angle designed to popularize and justify the army and its ways.

In February 1925 he was arrested for his radical opinions and activity. He was soon on his way to a cell in Alcatraz military prison, the isle of bars and shadows lying just inside the Golden Gate in San Francisco bay. He put in 6 months at hard labor with pick and shovel and the remainder of his time in the prison tailor shop.

During his stay there over a score of prisoners became converted to the radical cause. On a ballot of 60 prisoners 37 voted for Communism and 23 against. Propaganda was carried on while at work, Sundays and during mealtime. On his release he received 64 pounds of mail that had been withheld by the prison censor.

Grouch is now touring the principal cities as a speaker for the All-American Anti-Imperialist League.

Hope to Find Redfern, Missing Flier in South Venezuela, Is Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. — Hope that Paul Redfern, missing Georgia to Brazil flyer, may be found in the barren stretches south of Venezuela was held out today in a dispatch to the State Department from Willie C. Cook, American minister to Venezuela.

Cook reported that a mail carrier and several inhabitants of the village of Nacareito had seen a plane about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon over the Orinocco delta. It was flying southeast toward Boca Grande. An hour before the plane was sighted a heavy storm broke over the Orinocco region.

All governmental agencies in Venezuela are endeavoring to find further trace of Redfern, Cook said. Few people live in the region where the plane was sighted.

BY the way, now that Henry Ford has apologized to the Hebrews for his campaign of slander against them, and incidentally paid for the luxury of his belligerency, the Irish world, a semi-catholic, semi-Irish-Republican weekly in New York is taking up the fight. Using as an ercuse a movie which is said to slander the Irish people, the Irish World has embarked on a crusade against the Jews which surpasses in vulgarity and venom the worst that the agents of the Black Hundred of the Czars did in their hey day. Incidentally the editor of the Irish World (a fellow by the name of Jones) wrote a vicious article against Sacco and Vanzetti, branding them as murderers, anarchists and atheists.

WE hold no brief for plays on screen or stage derogatory to any people, particularly an oppressed people, and we know that one of the favorite weapons of the imperialists has been that of slander. The ruling classes of all countries have tried to laugh the Jews out of existence after they failed to crush them by other methods. The British represented the Irish as buffoons. Every other power used similar methods against their own subject people. This ridicule was designed to create the impression that the peoples against whom it was directed were not capable of governing themselves. It worked.

MOVING picture magnates are now capitalising the appetite for this kind of optic fare. The fact that many of them are Hebrews is no explanation of the matter. There are Irish film magnates and Irish film directors and Irish theatre owners just as responsible. And they are all willing to caricature and hold up to ridicule the mothers that bore them for profit. The Irish World is taking advantage of the profit-lust of moving picture barons and theatre owners to stage a cheap circulation stunt. It will not lay the blame squarely where it belongs, i.e., at the feet of the profit system. Where Henry Ford failed, it is not likely that the Irish World will succeed in a cheap, ignorant vulgar anti-Semitic campaign.

MUCH CASH SPENT ON GRAFT PROBES BRINGS NO RESULT

Failing on Higher-Ups Release Small Fry

An indignant counsel for the Citizens' Union rises to denounce Judge Kelby's report on milk graft in this city, characterizing it as worse than worthless, and declaring that it has only served to seriously hamper further investigation.

This report cost the city $60,000, according to estimates, and resulted in not a single indictment. Assistant District Attorney Pecora examined the evidence contained in ninety-six fat envelopes, submitted by Judge Kelby, and came out with the opinion that there was "nary" an indictment in the whole lot.

Mayor Walker turned the milk investigation over to Judge Kelby last August. At that time it was understood that at least one "higher up," a powerful figure, was involved in the milk scandal.

Somehow or other the investigation seemed to have languished for on March of this year, the Citizens' Union protested at the delay, and would not be denied. They carried their complaint to Mayor Walker, who requested Kelby to make public "as much of the report as can be revealed without interfering with prosecutions."

The bulky report came to light, and then it was revealed that those against whom the alleged evidence had been obtained were the smallest of small fry. The "powerful higher-up" who was to be "investigated," failed even to get a mention.

And now Leonard M. Wallstein, counsel for the Citizens' Union, wants something done about it.

"Not only has the report failed to develop evidence warranting prosecution," says Wallstein, "but for over a year it has obstructed effective prosecution, and seriously handicapped any real investigation that may now be begun."

Political opinion generally seems to take the stand that the investigation has been whitewashed. And the job cost $60,000.

Oppose Exploitation of Potomac.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 31 (FP).—Vigorous opposition to private exploitation of the power resources of the Potomac River is voiced by the District of Columbia—Maryland Federation of Labor's executive council. Representatives will appear before the federal power commission at Harpers Ferry when the Potomac Power Co. asks permission to build a series of power dams between that point and Washington.

The federation prefers the development of the Potomac as a national park, but insists that if power is to be generated from its falls, that the government do it so that electrical energy can be sold at minimum cost, as in Canada.

Jersey Federation Of Labor to Meet September 13-14th

(By IRVING FREEMAN)

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—The official call for the 49th annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor went out last month.

The conference will take place in Camden Sept. 13th and 14th. Delegates from all local unions and central labor bodies will send delegates. Many problems will come up for solution. In the past year the courts have made a farce of the anti-injunction law; every bill favorable to labor was killed by the politicians assembled in Trenton, Passaic strikers remain in the penitentiary; judges are willing to do the bidding of the bosses and there remains the job of organizing the bulk of the wage workers who are unorganized.

While many opposition candidates to the machine will come as delegates we can safely predict that instead of taking decisive action towards organizing the unorganized, organizing a strong Labor Party the convention will go on record as in the past. The progressives will not be powerful enough to overcome the poison virus of the Hague machine thru Jennings, Brandle, etc., coming from Jersey City.

These democratic labor politicians are in the trade union movement for their own ulterior purposes. There will be a change of the state secretary and a good Hagueite will be chosen. Until the progressives throw off their faith in the officialdom they will not succeed in breaking down the machine in control of the State Federation of Labor. No progressive resolutions will be passed and no militant action taken to overcome the menace of injunctions, organizing the unorganized and organizing a Labor Party for 1928.

Police Raid Impromptu Los Angeles Mourning For Sacco and Vanzetti

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 31.—A few minutes after the news of the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti was flashed over the wires, hundreds of people crowded the assembly hall of the Co-operative-Center Building to hold a memorial meeting, without any previous arrangements. Police and detectives swarmed about the hall, attempting to prevent the throngs from entering the building and threatening the speakers with arrest. Wm. Schneiderman, M. Karpiloff, and Frank Spector delivered memorial addresses after which the audience arose and sang the Workers' Funeral March with deep feeling.

The police tore down the black banner of mourning hung over the building. Hurried preparations were immediately made for a large memorial demonstration Thursday. The Workers Party hall is still being guarded, and the homes of Tom Lewis and other leading Communist of this city are being periodically raided and searched.

GREEK COMMUNIST DEPUTIES TRIED IN WHITE TERROR

Immunity Is Revoked; Red Daily Also Sued

ATHENS, Aug. 31.—As a result of the action of the reactionary Greek government in revoking the constitutional immunity of two of the Communist deputies at Athens, Rapanicolaou and Soulam are about to be tried for inciting to revolt.

Greek Unions Head Class War.

The charges grew out of the recent demonstrations of the militant tobacco workers in Saloniki in which one man was killed when the police attacked a gathering of over 30,000 workers, while 250 were arrested and thousands clubbed. The Greek government is determined at all costs to break the militant spirit of the Saloniki tobacco workers who, together with the powerful unions of the textile-workers, miners and seamen, have declared their willingness to fight side by side with the Greek Communist Party for the rights of the exploited Greek workers.

"The incitement to revolt" with which Papanicalaou and Soulam are charged consists in their speeches to the Saloniki workers who were demonstrating against the infamous Workers' Security Fund, a disablement insurance fund established by law, into which the workers have to pay 4 per cent of their wages. The tobacco bosses are trustees of the fund and collect the workers contributions. The two Communist deputies were demanding the right of the workers to elect their own representatives as trustees of the fund when they were arrested.

Daily Communist Paper Attacked

As a further step in the government's drive on the Greek workers the Greek Communist daily, "Rizopastis" is also being sued by the government on charges of inciting to revolt. "Rizopastis" has a wide circulation among the militant Greek workers and trade unionists.

The ten Communist deputies in the national parliament at Athens have protested vigorously against the proposed government increase of the consumption taxes to 235,000,000 drachmas. The government succeeded in introducing the measure, however.

French Labor United In Growing Attack On The American Legion and thru statements published in L'Humanite, daily organ of the French Communist Party, have attacked the meeting of the Legion.

The united protest that is arising against meeting of the Legion is evidenced by the declaration of the socialist confederation, which refuse to participate in the mass demonstrations against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti last week.

Deport Tass Correspondent.

Jules Broune, Paris correspondent for Tass, official news agency of the Soviet Union was deported from the country for sending honest reports of the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations to the U. S. S. R. Broune was deported despite the fact that a protest was lodged by the Soviet ambassador.

Sixty workers are still being held by police authorities for having participated in the monster Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations last week.

Boston Liner Floated Again.

POCASSET, Mass., Aug. 31. — The Eastern Steamship Company New York to Boston liner "New York," which went ashore today in the sand north of this place as she was about to enter the Cape Cod canal, was floated again after a wait of almost five hours for high water.

BAR LEAGUE FROM HELPING LATIN-AMERICA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (FPP).—Latin-American nations in general and Panama in particular have just been warned by the state department that their membership in the League of Nations will not save them from whatever hard bargains American imperialism wishes to drive with them. Panama has been trying to shield herself from a treaty which the state department is forcing on her by the claim that its provisions conflict with her duties to the league. In a formal announcement, department officials assert that the new Panama-American treaty does not impair Panama's rights.

Panama however is by no means so sure about it and the Panama Federation of Labor in particular is putting up a hot battle against ratification of the document, which in effect signs away what shreds of independence the little nation ever possessed. In the next war, apparently with Great Britain, for which American military, diplomatic and commercial interests are preparing, Panama must also embroil herself, the new treaty provides.

Makes A Slave State.

While franker than the treaty of 1903, which legalized Roosevelt's interference in the internal affairs of Colombia and the subsidizing of a successful revolution, this new document evidently aims at the same end, the vassalage of the little state through which the Panama Canal runs. Although Panama is forced to declare war against whatever enemies the United States may have, this is nothing new. Panama was dragged into the world war the day after the United States declared war on Germany. On that same day, April 7, 1917, Cuba was also dragged in. Both Panama and Cuba are thus virtually dependencies just as Hawaii and the Philippines.

But the status of Panama as a member of the League of Nations has ruffled Washington diplomats. The league has bothersome provisions concerning the declaration of war by its members, which obviously would prevent Panama from being plunged into war just because the United States ordered it. That these provisions are valueless and of no effect insofar as Latin-American nations are concerned, is made plain by the state department's pronouncement, which is a warning to the League that it had better not butt in on the private deals which the United States forces on its quasi-independent vassals in the Caribbean.

The pronouncement is a hard blow at the League's prestige in Latin-America and is official notice to the selves that the League can save them selves that the leageu can save them from the colossus of the North.

Our Letter from Australia

Fascist Confat.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.)—Fascisti organizations throughout Australia held a conference at Katoomba, a mountain resort near Sydney, during the second week in June. It was stated that the purpose of the conference was "to improve the position of Italians in Australia but without mixing in any way in local politics." The fascisti chiefs and their aim was "to promote peace and goodwill". Facism is steadily extending throughout Australia as most of the Iitalian immigrants are supporters of Mussolini. However, it has little influence outside the Italian people. Should it attempt to interfere with Australian politics, labor organizations are ready to deal drastically with the "Castor Oil experts". The Labor Volunteer Army promises the fascists a warm time should the occasion warrant.

Restrict Chinese Workers.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.)—Legislation has been introduced by the labor government in New South Wales which will in future prevent Chinese workers in furniture factories remaining on the premises after their day's work is ended. They must now leave the factories at 5 p. m. of an evening and not return before 8 a. m. in the morning. Neither can they work on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays. The Furniture Trades Union officials have been granted the right to enter the Chinese factories to see that the law is being observed.

A previous law observed Chinese to be on factory premises after they had officially finished their day's work. If they were caught at work they were all "working proprietors", and if they were not "partners", it was a case of "no savvy." European competitors against the Chinese alleged that the Chinese did not know night from day, neither did they observe week-ends and public holidays.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.) — The New South Wales Labor Government has approved of plans for the establishment of a government-owned wireless service in the state of N. S. W. The scheme will co-ordinate and develop the wireless services now established in several government departments, provide a departemental system of communication in order to facilitate government work, and provide a system of relay stations for country areas and a central station. The scheme is distinct from the existing labor broadcasting station at the Sydney Trades Hall.

Bar Soviet Union Workers.

MELBOURNE, Australia (FP.) — Like Cal Coolidge's administration, the Australian federal government fears that if many Russian immigrants come to the country a "red" revolution might be started.

Since the raid on the Arcos premises in London, the Australian federal government has instituted special precautions against Russians entering Australia. All Russians arriving are subjected to special scrutiny and in some cases they are not allowed to land. Recently two Russians who came to Sydney from China were held up until the government was satisfied they had no bombs or "Bolshie" literature in their possession.

Repress Samoan Natives.

APIA, Samoan Islands, South Pacific Ocean (FP.). — Ever since the German portion of the Samoan Islands has been mandated to New Zealand, the natives have been more or less discontented because of the abolition of many of their tribal customs and usages. All efforts to get these restored have failed—the New Zealand government being determined to compel the natives to adopt the British forms of law and custom.

Recently, the native chiefs petitioned the government to be allowed to go to New Zealand so that they could state their case for a return to the old time customs, but the New Zealand government refused to issue them passports. The government's action evoked considerable sympathy with the natives and the government has now interpreted this sympathy as an attempt to ferment native discontent! The latest action of the government has been to threaten white inhabitants in Samoa with deportation if they do not cease extending their sympathy towards the natives.

THE MACHADO TERROR IN CUBA

By J. NEVAREZ.

The terror against the Cuban working class initiated by the government of General Machado, in the interest of the Wall Street sugar holders still continues and exacts its toll from the ranks of the workers, taking its best elements. Some months ago it became known to the world that the Machado executioners have deprived more than 200 trade-unionists of their lives. But very little as yet, is known of the grim deeds of Machado, in theoutside world, because of the censorship.

In spite of the disclosure of the Machado terror made by Chester W. Wright, erstwhile secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, the recent congress of that body failed to take any action or vent the slightest protest against the existing state of affairs in Cuba. On the contrary, the delegates sent by Machado to this so-called labor congress, and the cable greetings from this murderer of the Cuban workers were, ironically enough, seated and accepted, and the Machado agents were permitted to whitewash the Machado oligarchy. Thus it appears that this shameful procedure on the part of the Pan-A. F. of L. has given the Machado dictatorship encouragement to further their plans for crushing completely the Cuban labor movement.

The Machado government has announced the confiscation of 22,000 documents which refer to 680 active members of the Cuban working class and anti-imperialist movement, many of them Communists, out of which 118 have been indicted and will face a farcical trial, torture in the prisons and execution.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 31.—As labor-displacing machinery invades the big printing establishments in the cities, skilled workers are being crowded out and the printing crafts unions face heavy burdens of unemployment. Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 is assessing its employed members 1 per cent of their earnings to aid the members unable to find work. Pressmen are also finding it difficult to discover enough jobs to go around.

"See Russia for Yourself"

Tenth Anniversary of the Russian Revolution!

Second Tour --- Six Weeks

Leningrad Moscow Environs

Extensive celebrations throughout Soviet Russia will usher in the Tenth Anniversary of the Russian Revolution this November. The Moscow Art Theatre and similar artistic and cultural organizations are elaborately preparing to make the occasion a memorable one.
Members of our fall tour will witness the history of Soviet Russia from its world-shaking inception to its present prosperity vividly portrayed in pageant and festival.

Visiting delegations expected from all countries compel us to limit the number accepted to 100.

"If we were a royal or diplomatic delegation we could not have received more attention, consideration, hospitality and ovations."

"Russia was a revelation! Such a spirit and enthusiasm that exists cannot be seen elsewhere . . . It is like going to another world."

The Herald-Tribune's Campaign of Lies

The principal Coolidge organ of New York, the Herald-Tribune, has adopted a policy of deliberate mendacity against the left wing labor and Communist movement. For this purpose it employs certain low poltroons and debased prostitutes who do not even bother to obtain the slightest degree of information for their fantastic tales.

An example of how writers for the reptile press may fill columns of space with plain lies occurred on Wednesday, August 31, when the Herald-Tribune published a romantic tale to the effect that the Communists were holding a secret convention somewhere in Westchester county for the purpose of drawing up "plans for a Soviet revolution in the United States." The story is further adorned with the declaration that the actual place of meeting is "known only to delegates and department of justice men operating as active members of the Workers Party."

Of course it is ridiculous to assume that the publishers and editors of this reptile sheet will admit that the man who wrote the tale is a plain liar who had not a scintilla of evidence upon which to base it. The story was written only in an effort to incite the blood-hounds of the various suppressive agencies of the state and national governments against the legal and open convention of the Workers (Communist) Party now being held in this city.

Our plans for revolution are public property—open to all. We disdain to conceal our views and the full reports and proceedings of our convention will be published openly in the columns of The DAILY WORKER and other Party papers. Such reports are also available for any of the capitalist papers who care honestly to report the facts, instead of resorting, as did the Herald-Tribune, to palpable lies concocted out of the putrid brain of some mental pervert.

Judge Panken Flattered by Republicans.

Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken, elected ten years ago on the socialist ticket, has proved such a loyal servant of the capitalist class that the republican party, thru Congressman Nathan D. Pearlman, arch-reactionary and satellite of the Wall Street-Mellon-Coolidge administration, has offered him the republican nomination.

If Panken were a representative of the working class he would never have been offered such a nomination. A true representative of the working class would consider such an offer an insult, would deeply resent it and indulge in the most severe self-criticism to learn why the enemy class favors him. But, instead of recognizing the fact that the offer is an indictment of his record and evidence of his treachery to the working class, he replies to the republican congressman, Pearlman, in the following favoring and servile manner:

> "While I appreciate the fact that your offer is a great compliment to me and an endorsement of my services on the bench by you personally and the republican organization of the district, I must nevertheless decline."

He explains that his convictions as a socialist and the policy of the socialist party does not permit him to accept the republican nomination.

This offer of a republican nomination to the socialist, Panken, symbolizes the complete identity of the socialist leaders with the capitalist class. It is the logical, inevitable result of the anti-labor policy followed by the socialist leaders.

In their fight against the left wing and the rank and file of the labor movement the socialists have become the lackeys of the corrupt labor bureaucracy that in New York is allied with Tammany Hall. Tammany and the republican machine divide the jobs of judicial lackeys of capitalism among themselves without entering into contests at the polls, in order to create the illusion that judges are impartial and not bound to render special favors to their political bosses.

The endorsement of Panken by the republicans proves that the exploiters of labor in New York consider this so-called socialist a safe and sane servant of their class interests.

Tammany and the republican machine may refrain from utting up a candidate against Panken, the capitalist judge, but e will nevertheless be challenged at the polls by a real repreentative of the working class under the banner of the Workers (Communist) Party.

"The Common Enemy—American Imperialism"

In its telegram of greetings to the Fifth National Convention the Workers (Communist) Party the Communist Party of co concludes with the salutation: "Yours for the over- of the common enemy—American imperialism."

herein is symbolized the whole revolutionary struggle on rt of the Latin-American republics, the allies of the workss of the United States. The Southern republics into which Street is investing more and more of its wealth plundered om the workers it exploits are victims of the most brutal, entless and sinister despotism the world has ever seen—Dollar perialism.

As against the imperialist conspiracy called the Pan-Amer- union and its lieutenants in the Pan-American labor organization, the workers of Latin-America must unite with the workers of the United States into powerful anti-imperialist organizations that will wage a determined fight against the minions of Wall Street. Under the coordinating revolutionary leadership of the Communist International the two Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico will eventually lead the exploited sses of both countries to the overthrow of the power of Amercan imperialism and the establishment of the rule of the workers and farmers over both countries.

Labor Leaders Silent on 10-Hour Day Offensive

By V. Q.

A MONTH ago, articles in the DAILY WORKER exposed the ten hour day drive planned by the railway companies, as set forth in the report of the American Railway Executives, under the guise of "stabilization of employment." The writer pointed out then that the Machinists Journal, while shouting "nothing doing," informed the membership that there was no danger of the plan going into effect, as far as the union men were concerned. It pretended ignorance as to the attitude of President Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, whose name was signed to the report, and who was chairman of the committee which prepared the report. The writer proved by reference to an interview recorded in "Labor" of July 2nd, that Willard defended the report. But the Machinists Journal, which appeared fully a week after this interview denied knowledge as to Willard's attitude.

Willard Like the Rest.

WILLARD's signing the report showed that he used the B. & O. Plan to fool the workers into increasing production, when the road had a deficit. It showed that the plan of union-management cooperation or (worker-employer cooperation) was all bunk. The officials of the International Association of Machinists will not admit this, so they are silent on Willard.

If they didn't know Willard's attitude for the July issue of their Journal, they could have found out in a month's time. A month passed. The August issue is out. It continues to preach class collaboration, with articles on the benefits in apprentice training on the B. & O., and on Nash's fake "Golden Rule" plan in the clothing industry. But not another word on the threat of the ten hour day. Still no word as to Willard's attitude.

Do They Want More Proof?

"RAILWAY AGE," the organ representing the railway company executives, in its issue of July 9th, boasts of the fact that executives friendly to labor made the report. It says: "Some branches of organized labor are apparently suspicious of the suggestion for an elastic working day recently made by a special committee of the Association of Railway Executives. It is significant, however, that some executives who have the confidence of organized labor to an unusual degree, were included among those who made the report." Willard has not denied this.

THE interview with Labor proves he defended the report. He played the role of trying to convince the labor movement that the plan was not harmful to labor. He was used by the railway executives to sugar-coat the pill. That is his role in the drive for the ten hour day. If Willard did not endorse the report, he had a month to say so. He knew that the Machinist Journal claimed ignorance as to his stand. He knew that "Railway Age" said that he with others made the report. He has had plenty of time to explain himself. The Machinists Journal had plenty of time to find out. But their claim of ignorance is pretense. They know that Willard was for the report, and they fear to come out with it.

The Shop Craft Unions Silent.

NOT only is the Machinists Journal silent, but the other unions in the shop-crafts on the railroads are similarly silent. All are tied up with the B. & O. Plan of union-management cooperation.

If they can get away with their campaign of silence, the operators will have plenty of time to prepare the ground for their ten hour day drive. They will initiate a campaign of publicity, and more important, will take steps in the shops to insure the "successful" introduction of the ten hour day. Silence by the unions aids the companies in their plan.

The Ten-Hour Day Must Be Fought.

WHAT is needed is to arouse the labor movement as to the reality of the danger. What is need is to strengthen the resistance of the unions involved, through amalgamation. What is needed is an immediate joint campaign of the unions involved for the defense of the 8 hour day. But the shop crafts unions are asleep. Nothing of this is done. On the contrary, the union leaders go farther along on the road of class collaboration. They attack those of their members who sound the call to arms—who demand preparation for a war against the introduction of the ten hour day. The union leaders weaken the organizations, ideologically and organizationally, rendering them impotent, before the companies' onslaught.

Nothing but a well prepared campaign for struggle will defeat the ten hour day. Communist must take the lead. Progressives must fight. The ten hour day must be defeated.

DELEGATES TO CONGRESS OF INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE ALLIANCE REPORT ON SITUATION

By ESKEL RONN, and MATTI TENHUNEN.

MOSKOW, August 31.—At the Fifth Co-operative Congress of the Co-operative League of America, we were elected as delegates to the Congress of the International Co-operative Alliance to be held in Stockholm.

Study Soviet Union's Co-op.

Desiring to get better acquainted with the co-operators in other countries and to learn from their experiences, we planned to visit various countries before the congress. So we decided to visit the Swedish co-operatives and the Finnish co-operatives first, for we knew that they had developed the co-operatives to a high degree. Then we wanted to visit Soviet Russia, and thus get a picture of the two extremes so far as perfection of organization, efficiency of management, etc. was concerned.

Highly Developed.

In Sweden and Finland we were not disappointed for we found the highly developed organizations that we expected. For one who comes from America and who has read the reports that fill the newspapers about the conditions in Soviet Russia, who comes prepared to see chaos and disorder, the actual conditions are a surprise, very true to us they were a pleasant surprise.

Coming from American conditions one cannot of course help but see the differences in the form of architecture, the styles of clothing, but what especially attracted our attention was the general appearance of the people. There was not that display of the extreme rich and the extreme poor that is so prvalent in our country. There seemed to be a standard of life to which all were subjected. We found contented happy people, and the youth one immediately noticed. Their bouyance and healthful appearance must be due to the work that is being done to preserve the welfare of the children and young workers.

U. S. S. R. Workers Best Off.

We have visited hundreds of factories in America and must say that the working conditions, and the cleanliness we found in Soviet Russia is above the average American factory. This no doubt is due to the fact that all the workers in the industries are organized, having their union office connected with each large factory. Eight-hour work-day, with a vacation of two to four weeks at full pay, full pay while sick, are something the American worker does not even dare to dream of.

Comparing the co-operative stores, factories and restaurants of Soviet Russia with the hundreds of co-operatives and private similar institutions we have seen in America, we must confess that they are equal to these. Some of the stores were the finest we have ever seen. We found the shelves stocked with merchandise, of all descriptions, excellently displayed, clean and the personnel appeared to be courteous and efficient. We visited the large city stores, the small town stores, and the peasants' stores, and in all we failed to find the chaos and disorder, which we had expected. The fact that they are conducting these stores at a gross profit of 12 per cent and expenses of from 8 to 9 per cent already prove conclusively that there must be order and system. In America which is highly developed the private stores are charging 18 to 20 per cent with an expense of from 15 to 18 per cent. And one must not lose sight of the fact that the Russian cooperators only work 8 hours a day compared to the 10 hours or more of the American store clerk.

Good Reading Room.

To find the reasons for the spirit that prevails among the workers you will find the answer by looking over the club rooms attached to every factory and co-operative store. General meeting places are provided, with special reading rooms, co-operative corners for co-operative propaganda, trade union corners, hygenic corners, and Lenin corners where the government brings its messages of the development of the country and the various tasks to be performed before the workers. The workers are taught to stick together. Their united problems they jointly discuss. To talk organization they do not have to go around sneaking to the homes of their fellow workers. Is it a wonder that the workers are so solidly behind the trade unions, the co-operatives and the state?

To really understand the tremendousness of the development of the co-operative movement in Soviet Russia, one cannot do it by simply reading their reports and figures, but one must see the organization in action, to feel the throbbing pulse of this gigantic movement. Eleven million heads of families organized in one movement, doing 48 per cent of the business of the entire country, that's what these Soviet Russian co-operators have done. Such a development in a few years is only possible because their movement is highly centralized through district unions into the Centrosoyus, and the close co-operation that exists between the co-operative movement, the trade unions and the workers state. It is absolutely impossible for any co-operative movement in a capitalistic state to make such strides forward.

The development of the country we feel assured will progress still faster if the Soviet Russian workers are allowed to pursue their work in peace. The Russian worker realizes this for he sees the progress that has been made in the past few years, and so it is to be understood why everywhere the workers confronted us with the plea: "Keep your government from attacking us!" The earnestness of their plea brought to us what an enormous task the co-operators and the workers in general have to prevent their imperialist government from making war on the workers of Soviet Russia. It is the duty of cooperators to arouse the workers in all countries so that they will stop the onslaught that threatens Soviet Russia today!

Letters From Our Readers

Hapgood Disagrees With Gold.

Editor, Daily Worker:

I was much surprised and incensed at the vindictive, narrow, and untrue statement of Mike Gold in The DAILY WORKER for August 30th that "Mary Donovan, an obscure spiteful female with a great lust for publicity was responsible" for the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti not coming to New York for the demonstration Monday. In the first place, it was not Mary Donovan at all, but circumstances over which she had no control such as the necessity of getting permits from four states to transport ashes, the unwillingness of the committee to take the risk of transporting them illegally because of the likelihood of their being taken and destroyed by the capitalist police, and finally Miss Vanzetti's illness and desire not to have the ashes go without her that made it impossible to bring the ashes last Monday.

In the second place, such adjectives used in connection with a person like Mary Donovan, who has given her entire time and strength without pay to the Sacco-Vanzetti cause, who lost her job as state factory inspector because of her activities in the case, and who on the very day that Mike Gold penned his spiteful lines was sentenced to a year in prison on framed-up charges by representatives of the same group who murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, are absolutely inexcusable. I know Mary Donovan well because we have worked together and fought the police together and I admire her courage and her devotion to the cause for which she fights so ardently. I have never seen anyone who was less interested in personal publicity or glorythan she is.

While I would be the last person in the world to deny anyone the right to criticise policies for the sake of analyzing mistakes and thereby improving tactics, and while I feel that there are certain policies and errors for which the Boston Committee can well be criticized, still I must denounce such untrue and vindictive criticism as that indulged in by Mike Gold. Because it is so obviously untrue and unfair it convinces no one, alienates many, and helps to make impossible any attempt at a united front against capitalism which many of us are working for.—Powers Hapgood, New York, Aug. 31, 1927.

KARLIN DISOBEYS ORDERS.

A significant fact about the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting in Union Square Tuesday was that William Karlin, former socialist assemblyman, spoke from the central platform in defiance of August Claessens, secretary of the local socialist party.

As the socialists attempted to sabotage the protest strike on the day our comrades were killed, so they tried to keep workers from a memorial meeting even tho it seemed certain that Sacco and Vanzetti's ashes would be brought there.

Capitalist Press Applauds Claessens.

All of the capitalist papers, anxious to gloat over any division in the ranks of labor, anxious to have the masses soon forget martyrs of the class struggle, were informed by Mr. Claessens that the socialist party would not pay last respects to the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Claessens also charged that the Memorial Committee had not been authorized to announce that William Karlin would act as a member of Mrs. Sacco's guard of honor and later speak at the Union Square meeting.

The announcement of William Pickens, secretary of the Society for the Advancement of Colored People, that he "thought a representative of the socialist party" would speak was greeted with sneers from capitalist paper reporters on the porch of the nearby park house. They had seen Claessens!

Police Surprised.

But when Karlin stepped to the front of the platform and, standing beside William W. Weinstone, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, began to speak, the reporters and police officials on the porch leaned forward in amazement.

The Industrial Squad head, John Broderick, could not believe his eyes at first, and then muttered, "Well, well." A uniformed police lieutenant said, "I did not ex[illegible]is after the way the socialists [illegible] Gold off the platform at the oth[illegible]ting."

"Karlin's only s[illegible] as an individual, he was n[illegible]orized to by the socialists," Ed[illegible] Levinson, of the "New Leader" [illegible]d. Then he admitted Karlin to[illegible] early in the afternoon that he [illegible]peak.

Karlin, howev[illegible] not just speaking "as an in[illegible]." He represents a large ele[illegible] the social-ist party who ar[illegible]sfied with the American Fe[illegible] of Labor leader-style inertia of the present bosses of a once significant party.

He represents a seething rebellion against the sabotaging tactics which all but broke the final Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike and which—in the person of certain members of the Boston committee — prevented Mrs. Sacco from bringing the ashes of her martyred husband to Union Square.

The action of three Brooklyn furriers' locals and many cloak and suit shops, heretofore ruled by socialists, in defying their leaders by striking Aug. 22d, are other evidences of this dissatisfaction.

Class-conscious workers do not long tolerate those who betray them, whether the Judas is a Claessens or a Green.

—Walter Snow, New York.

Violence Brings Violence.

Dear Comrade:

Sacco and Vanzetti were sentenced to die before their trial by Governor Fuller on the floor of congress and by Judge Thayer on the golf links and elsewhere. The evidence is plain. The governor's "respectable" advisory board did not deny it.

The legal murder gang of capitalism has declared a war of violence against the workers. They have beaten, arrested and fined peaceful protesters against this violence. They have maltreated all who dared to protest. The ruthless plutocrats have not learned that violence brings violence.

A capitalist victim.

Poor Michigan Farmers and Workers Send Aid.

Enclosed, please find the money order for $101.30 which is the net profits from two entertainments held under the auspices of the Community Club of Dukes Siding, Mich., for the benefit of our paper The DAILY WORKER.

In return we do not ask nothing else but that you continue your great work in the fight against the capitalist class.

Sorry we cannot send more just now because there are in this community less than twenty poor farmers and about ten wage workers. But if in future you want our help just give your order and let us do the rest.

Yours for the working class revolutionary movement. Vaino Pelto.

Knew Fighting Daily at Once.

Dear Comrade:

Just the other day I got hold of a Daily Worker by accident and was instantly interested in it. So I've decided to send in $2.00 for a three months subscription, for that's the best I can do just at this time.

(Mrs.) Geo. Simko, Masury, O.

Editor, Daily Worker:

We can already see some of the many lessons which the Sacco and Vanzetti case will teach. It has brot the international workers together for one cause. It has shown us our potential strength. The judges, educators and bosses are class conscious, they stand united against the workers. Let us learn from them and prepare for the fight. Our cry should be: Sacco and Vanzetti have not died in vain!—Susan H. Calkins, Deming, New Mexico.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The yellow press in the United States is devoting yards of space to telling the workers in the industrial centers that the farmers are profiteers. In the farming sections they are devoting an equal amount of space to telling the farmers that it is the workers in the industrial centers who are the profiteers. The money interests have been preaching for forty years that the farmers' interests and the workers' are not the same. But the fact is that their interests are exactly the same.—N. G. Barnhouse, Comertown, Mont.

DRAMA

"Adam the Creator" by the Capeks to be Seen Here

A report from Prague says that New York will see the new play of the brothers Capek, "Adam the Creator," some time during the coming theatrical season. "Adam the Creator" deals with humanity, as did the two plays which made the brothers Capek famous, with a type picked out here and there to illustrate the authors' philosophy. In its symbolism and type psychology the play resembles the plays of the Robots and insects. The motivating idea behind this latest of Capek products is the creation of a new world by Adam.

Arthur Hopkins is co-author with George Manker Watters of "Burlesque," a play treating that phase of the show business, and which is scheduled to open at the Plymouth theatre tonight. Mr. Hopkins is both producer and director of the new production.

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen has been engaged by Joseph Santley for "Just Fancy," in which Mr. Stanley is to make his debut as an actor-producer late in September. This will be Mrs. Whiffen's first appearance in musical comedy, although this "grand old lady of the stage" has been before the public since 1865, when she made her debut in a London pantomime. Her most recent appearance was as Mrs. Mossop in "Trelawny of the Wells." Mrs. Whiffen, is eighty-two years of age.

Mae West is ready to do it again. The author and star of "Sex" has written another called "The Wicked Age," which she is planning to show on Broadway. The reformers who closed up "Sex" are already sniffing.

Edwin Justus Mayer, whose bright and merry play, "The Firebrand" played here last season, has completed his second play. It is a comedy-drama, and is titled "Children of Darkness."

MARTHA MALLIS

Will sing the title role in the special performance of "Carmen" which will be given for the benefit of the Joint Defense Committee at Starlight Park, Saturday Night.

PULLMAN PORTERS PUSH FIGHT FOR FEDERAL HEARING

To Ask Coolidge for Emergency Board

By ESTHER LOWELL (Fed. Press).

Pushing its fight unabated, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is beginning its campaign to have President Coolidge appoint an emergency board to investigate the union's dispute with the Pullman Co. General organizer A. Philip Randolph is starting out on a country-wide tour to inform the membership of the union's recognition by the federal mediation board and to push for the emergency board.

The Watson-Parker railroad act provides for the appointment of an emergency board when the unions and roads cannot come to agreement directly, through the federal mediation board, or by arbitration. Sec. 10 of the act reads:

"If a dispute between a carrier and its employees be not adjusted under the foregoing provisions of this Act and should, in the judgment of the Board of Mediation, threaten substantially to interrupt interstate commerce to a degree such as to deprive any section of the country of essential transportation service, the Board of Mediation shall notify the president, who may thereupon, in his discretion, create a board to investigate and report respecting such dispute."

Number Discretionary.

The president decides how many shall constitute the emergency board and their compensation. He must appoint those who are not "pecuniarily or otherwise interested in any organization of employes of any carrier." The board has 30 days to investigate and report back to the president, who then has 30 days more in which to consider it. No action by either party to the dispute is supposed to occur within these 60 days. No action is required of the president at the end of the period, according to the Watson-Parker act.

Just what could constitute a sufficient threat to bring the creation of an emergency board has not yet been decided by the mediation board. They may hold that nothing short of an imminent strike would make such an emergency. But Randolph is hopeful that the mediators will consider the Pullman Co.'s blank refusal to deal with the brotherhood a sufficiently serious situation to suggest emergency action by the president. The mediation board agreed with the brotherhood that the Pullman company union is held together only by coercion.

"We believe our case is stronger now than ever with the public, since the Pullman Co. is the only one that has refused to arbitrate with its workers," declares Randolph. "And the morale of our men is wonderful."

The brotherhood is scarcely two years old. It has organized well over half the 12,000 porters and maids employed by the Pullman Co. on all railroads in the United States. It has rallied the support of the best leaders of colored people who recognize in the brotherhood's fight a strong influence for the organization of other colored workers.

The women's auxiliary is opening a membership drive to be able to give the union the fullest support in its further moves. Roy Lancaster, secretary-treasures of the brotherhood, attended Pan-African Congress sessions.

American Legion Is Militarists' Tool For War Propaganda

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Every American Legion state convention is being made a sounding board for big army and navy propaganda in a concentrated drive of the militarists on the new congress. General Summerall, chief of staff, has been indefatigable in furthering the preparedness gospel, addressing Legion conventions in Vermont and Maryland within the past two weeks.

Admiral Coontz, at the North Carolina Legion convention, called for nothing less than a first rank navy and congratulated Carolina representatives who voted for the new cruisers in the last congress. "It was a source of gladness," he told the Legionnaires, "to see that in the House last winter as many Democrats voted for the cruisers as Republicans."

The militarists flatter the Legion as successor to the influence once wielded by the G. A. R., the civil war veterans organization which practically ran the country from 1880 to 1900. Leading Legionnaires such as Hanford MacNider, assistant secretary of war, are mentioned repeatedly for the vice presidency. The younger blood is urged to get out and run for congress as a stepping stone to higher preferment and the tempting prospect is held out of the Legion dominating the federal payroll within a few years.

In return the Legion is to boost incessantly the game of the military clique for industrial as well as military preparedness, for the world's biggest navy, universal military training and the suppression of all pacifist talk. So far none of the Legion conventions has objected in the least to the role for which they have been cast.

'Potemkin,' Film of Red Revolt, Shown in Chi. to Aid Striking Miners

The film company which showed "Potemkin" at the Biltmore Theatre in New York has brought this admirable historic drama to Chicago for an initial run of three weeks starting early in September.

The International Workers' Aid, 1553 W. Madison St., Rm. 303, Chicago, Ill., has arranged with this private film company to sell tickets for any evening or matinee during the entire run of the picture. All Party members, sympathizers are urged to purchase their tickets from the International Workers' Aid, who will sell the tickets at the same price as the box office. The difference however, is this: when a ticket is purchased at the box office the entire 75 cents will go to the private theatre people, while on the other hand when the ticket is purchased from the International Workrs' Aid part of the 75 cents will go for relief of the striking miners.

Here is an excellent opportunity to see "Potmekin" and at the same time help the striking miners without any additional cost to the purchaser of the ticket. If unable to come in person, call the International Workers' Aid by phone, Haymarket 25[illegible].

Musicians in Chicago Symphony Orchestra Get $10 Wage Raise

CHICAGO, Aug. 31. (FP).—The Chicago symphony orchestra opens its 37th season Oct. 14 having surrendered by roundabout fashion to the demand of the Chicago Federation of Musicians demand for a wage raise. The men will get $90 a week for the season of 28 weeks instead of $80. They had demanded $100. The money for the raise was publicly subscribed.

The gossip is that Louis Eckstein, whose hobby is Ravinia summer opera, put up $5000 of the $20,000 required and ordered the Chicago Daily News in which he has an interest to put out the publicity required to get the remaining $25,000. He needed the continuance of the symphony orchestra in order to have the services of 50 of the musicians each summer for his opera enterprise.

Coal Bosses Print Ads in Illinois Papers to Discredit Wage Demand

HILLSBORO, Ill., Aug. 31.—Big 4-column ads are appearing in the newspapers of the Illinois coal fields, paid for by the Coal Operators' Ass'n. of Illinois, seeking to turn public sentiment against the miners union because it is standing pat against a wage cut.

"Are You For Illinois Or Against Her," the ads scream in black type. Farther down in italics the operators say: "The Jacksonville agreement has made the cost of producing Illinois coal so great that it cannot compete, even in Chicago, with coal from other fields."

The ads do not say that the Peabody Coal Co., the principal Illinois operator, has been a leader in developing the non-union Kentucky fields as a competitor to break the wage scale of the union area.

ON THE DEATH MASKS OF SACCO, VANZETTI

By MICHAEL GOLD.

STUYVESANT CASINO is just another of our East Side halls. It glitters with too many mirrors, is loaded with gilt, gewgaws and rococo Cupids, lyres, and wreaths; it is painfully stylish. The hall pretends like so many others to be a salon of Louis the Magnificent, but no one is really fooled by this pretense.

For the hardwood floor is covered with sawdust. There is a dingy barroom where dingy near-beer is sold. The plentiful gilt trimmings are covered with fly-specks, and just outside the door is Second Avenue, where the loud shirt-sleeved life of the workers prevails.

Clubs of Jewish and Italian gangsters hold their "social" dances in this hall. Wailing Jewish orchestras have played Bulgars and Kazatskys at many a Jewish wedding here. There have been rivers and oceans of democratic-republican speeches flowing here. Meetings of Communists and socialists, too, and in many a strike of the needle trade workers this has been a strike headquarters, blue with smoke, and strewn with banana peels.

Today it has been converted, this hall of many changes, into a shrine of the East Side workers. The death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti are on view. For two days now about 50,000 workers—men, women and children—have passed silently with bared heads before the platform on which the masks are resting. There is a quiet, a reverence, a strange solemnity such as this raucous hall has never witnessed.

He also said "Long Live Anarchy." He also said, "My love to my children, my dear wife." He may have said other things, but they are not reported. He may have repeated the word of Cambronne; he may have looked beyond the walls of the execution chamber and beheld the vast army of capitalist judges, college presidents, governors, editors, ministers and millionaires, and flung at them the splendid word of Cambronne: Merde! It is not reported, but it is there in his last smile.

Vanzetti is serene. There is a beautiful calm on his long austere face. It is the peace of a dreamer who has not dreamed in vain. Vanzetti was a man filled with the poetry of the revolution. In his great heart there was all the pathos of the present, and the glory of the future. When he died, he was sure of the future. When he died, he was sure of the revolution. His blue steadfast eyes were filled with visions of the worker's world. He needed no priest tempting him with a mythical heaven; he was his own priest and prophet, and poet, and his heaven was not in the clouds, but on earth.

All his years of agony were not in vain. All his dark hours in the death house were not in vain. He did not forgive his judges and jailors at the last; no, he never forgave capitalism. But he forgave the revolution which had chosen him for one of its martyrs; which had led him to the electric chair; he was sure it was not in vain.

The children stare at the two significant masks and go away thoughtfully. They will grow up and remember. And the workers who file by so solemnly will remember. And history will remember, and this crude, gilt worker's hall will be remembered.

Six workers, men and women, stand constantly as a guard of honor on each side of the platform. They are dressed in vivid red blouses. There are any number of flowers, red roses and carnations, banked about the masks. These come from different unions and labor organizations. The smell of the dying flowers fills the room.

There is red bunting, and touches of black. There is a memorial sculpture, with a square worker's fist jutting out of it. There is red everywhere—bright brave red of the revolution. And a dozen cops swing their clubs idly and lounge about, marvelling at this strange solemn atmosphere.

The workers go by slowly, staring thoughtfully at the masks. They come all day and night, some of them before going to work, others weary after a day in the shops. There are many school children, thousands of them. It is a spectacle for them; everyone on the East Side has heard of Sacco and Vanzetti, and they are curious.

There are almost a million people on the East Side, and it is safe to say the vast majority of them, even when not radical, have been stirred by the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. They may not understand the broad issues involved, but with a sure proletarian instinct they feel the injustice meted out to two fellow-workers, two fellow-immigrants in the Promised Land.

The children gaze with awe. They will talk about this many a day. They will remember these names, and when they grow up the dim seeds planted during these weeks will grow into something red and daring as this bunting.

The death masks are white and still under the stare of so many eyes. Sacco, in death as in life, has his scornful defiant smile of a brave worker. There was humor in this man; as he sat down in the electric chair he greeted the frockcoated dignitaries about him with a satirical: "Good evening, Gentlemen!"

To Appeal Year Jail Sentence Imposed on Miss Donovan Sept. 5

An appeal will be taken at once from the sentence of a year's imprisonment imposed Monday on Mary Donovan, secretary of the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, it was declared today.

She was charged with "inciting to riot" and "obstructing foot traffic." The first charge is the result of Miss Donovan's arrest last week for placing placards containing the words: "Did you see what I did to those anarchistic bastards?" Judge Thayer" on the coffins of Sacco and Vanzetti while they lay in Langone's funeral parlor in the north end of Boston.

Miss Donovan is now free under $1000 bail.

Delaware Women Earn $7 Weekly Average for Eighty Hours Work

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 31.—Although California has established $16 as the minimum wage for women cannery workers, in Delaware they average $9-$10 a week if white, and $5-$6 if colored. A third of the white women and three fourths of the Negro women receive less than $7 a week. These figures are revealed by the women's bureau of the department of labor following a survey of the Delaware canneries.

"Some women worked between 70 and 80 hours a week while others had only part time employment, the report asserts. Most of the dwellings provided for the women were "the cheapest and poorest that human beings would accept as shelter. The camps ranged from a small shed in which two families lived to one of two dozen houses with accomodations for possibly 50 families. Furnishings were meager. Occasionally there were iron bedsteads and cots, but bunks, single and double-decked, with straw, were the most common arrangements for beds. In a few places straw was spread on the floor, with no pretense of bunks."

Locomotive Brotherhood Chief Rallies Workers In Labor Day Message

Grand Chief Engineer Al Johnston of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has issued the following Labor Day message, calling the organized workers to remember that there are 364 other days in the year when it is also necessary to struggle for the rights of the workers.

"The world takes off its hat to the organized power that labor represents through its unions; and the voice that the world hears on labor day is the voice of the vanguard of the workers who are organized.

"But while some measure of verbal recognition is given to labor on this day there are 364 other days in the year during which the struggle for recognition must be maintained. The increasing recognition which organized labor seeks must take a more substantial form than words."

Organization of Steel Mills, Youngstown Reply To Charlestown Murders

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 31.—Two large and successful meetings in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti were held under the auspices of the I. L. D., the Workers Party and Y. W. L. of Youngstown. Thousands of steel workers took part in the meetings and resolved that their reply to the execution of these two innocent workers will be 100 per cent organization of the steel workers in the steel mills. The rebel spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti finds thousands of willing hands and voices to carry on the fight for the liberation of the working class.

Although the mills are operating 50 per cent the response of the workers to the strike call was most successful with the capitalist press belittling the strike and quoting statements issued by the steel barons that the slaves were at work. Panic stricken steel barons had an army of police guarding their mills while armed guards guarded public buildings. The armed force of the capitalist state were everywhere seen. At the mass meetings detectives and policymen mingled in the crowd while outside heavily armed police waited the word to pounce upon the workers but in face of this the meetings carried on and aroused the fighting spirit of the steel workers into a grim realization that 100 per cent organization including every worker in the mills is the answer to the murder of Sacco and Vanzeti.

Carl Hacker of the I. L. D., H. Scott and G. Palucci of the Workers (Communist) Party spoke.

Workers crowded the newspaper offices waiting for word but the capitalist sheets withheld the news of the execution. Sacco and Vanzeti have not died in vain and a 100 per cent organization of the steel workers will be the reply.

Mexican Workers in Jalisco Hold Mines Seized in Protest

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The workers who siezed the Amparo mines several days ago to protest against barbarous working conditions and the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti are still in control of the property, it was learned today from a dispatch received from J. C. Satterthwaite, American consul at Guadalajara.

Suspect American Smuggling.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 31.—Mexican authorities today began an investigation of the seizure by a Mexican customs patrol of the American Douglas airplane, piloted by Captain C. H. Reynolds, and Sergeant S. Newland. That the American aviators may have been engaged in a smuggling attempt is regarded as likely. The investigation is being made to determine whether the landing of the plane was forced or an attempt to violate Mexican customs laws.

Negro Operators in Harlem Movies Win Struggle for Union

When the Alhambra Theatre reopened in Harlem—the colored city within New York—union Negro movie operators were in the projection room, their fight for recognition won. The fight had lasted several months. The men had walked out with the operators from a string of other theatres for better wages and conditions. When other theatres settled the Alhambra management held out. Several misguided Negro leaders—not [illegible] used their influence to persuade the colored operators to surrender. In the end the victory was completely theirs.

Rumor Says Morgan Is to Boss U. S. Steel

Who will become America's "steel king," succeeding the late Albert H. Gary?

Seven names are being mentioned as "possibilities" for the job of chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation—if a chairman of the board is eventually elected. There is indications that the position will be purposely left unfilled and that James A. Farrell, president of the corporation, and J. P. Morgan, will be the "big guns" in the future affairs of the company.

If a successor to Gary is chosen, the belief is that he will be one of the following:

1. President Farrell.
2. Myron C. Taylor, head of the American Tire Fabric Company.
3. Nathan L. Miller, corporation lawyer and former Governor of New York.
4. William J. Filbert, Comptroller of the United States Steel Corporation.
6. Dwight Morrow, one of the partners in J. P. Morgan & Company.
7. John J. Roskos, chairman of the finance committee of General Motors Company.

Militarists Incite To War as Veterans Invade Ford's Town

DETROIT, Aug. 31. — The gradual process of militarizing the United States decided upon by the bankers who have loans in Europe and loans and concessions in Latin America, goes merrily forward.

At a meeting of 20,000 Spanish War veterans here the war propagandists made every effort to impress upon the people of the United States the necessity of maintaining an immense standing army. With banners flying and fifes playing, the survivors of America's former imperialist war paraded thru the streets of Detroit preceded by a battalion of the same police who charged the Sacco and Vanzetti meeting in Cadillac Square last week.

Major General Charles P. Summerall, Army Chief of Staff, addressed the veterans, telling that the United States must maintain in peace time an armed equipment capable of being instantly expanded to the maximum in case of war.

Resolutions adopted by the veterans demand that the United States keep up a military force equal to that of any other great power and that stern measures be taken to suppress all "reds." The veterans also accepted unanimously the invitation of Gerardo Machado, Cuba's labor-murdering president, to hold their 1928 encampment in that Island. Machado recently visited the United States to receive his latest instructions from Washington and Wall Street.

Workers in Lexington, Ky. Building Trades Fighting for Union

WASHINGTON, (FP) Aug. 31.—Building trades workers of Lexington, Ky. are involved in a strike to protect the union shop, according to reports received by the labor department's bureau of conciliation. Eight other strikes involving nearly a thousand workers were reported during the past week.

Seven plumbers locals in northern New Jersey agreed to return to work pending arbitration of their demands for $12 a day and $8 for their helpers. The Parslap Co. of Buffalo agreed to pay its 300 carpenters the union scale, and three women's coat shops in New York City won their demands for the union shop.

Coolidge to Leave for Washington in a Week

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 31.—President Coolidge will leave the Black Hills for Washington on September 9th, it was learned here. One stop will be made at Brookings, S. D., where the executive will dedicate a library.

On the itinerary tentatively arranged, the presidential party will reach the capital shortly before midnight on Sunday, September 11th.

Graham Is Indicted for Murder of Paymaster

"Dan" Graham, the "Sheik" policeman, was indicted yesterday by the grand jury on a charge of murdering his friend, Judson H. Pratt, paymaster for a construction firm, and robbing him of a $4,700 payroll. The grand jury returned an indictment of murder in the first degree against Graham two hours after hearing the first witness.

For Cheaper Arbitration.

HAVERHILL, Aug. 31. (FP).—The Shoe Workers Protective Union, through president John Nolan, is asking for a reduction in the salary of of the shoe board's neutral arbitrator the union and employers are now choosing. The deposed arbitrator, Edwin Newdick, got $10,000 a year before the union enjoined him from the job. The union proposes to pay $5000 to his successor.

Freight Handlers Ask I. L. A. Aid

BOSTON, (FP) Aug. 31.—Freight handlers local 1120 has invited Joseph P. An agreement adjusting wages was signed April 1st but grievances over layoffs, short-time and other unfavorable working conditions have since developed.

REVIVE 'INSANITY' PRETEXT TO JAIL ACTIVE RADICALS

Police of Chicago and Boston Use Weapon

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 31.—The old gag of the melodrama, framing up a case of insanity on the rich heiress and dividing the loot while she pines in lovely helplessness behind the bughouse bars, is being revived by the police of Chicago, Boston and other American cities as a handy weapon against radicals. The smoothly oiled railroading to the asylum has been temporarily wrecked in Chicago by Judge William J. Lindsay of the criminal court. Lindsay took action when bootleggers instead of radicals were the police victims.

Authority On U. S. S. R.

"We are not in Russia yet. There is a right way and a wrong way to do things," the judge sententiously declared when two highup bootleggers with the reputation of several notches on their 1-arm guns appealed to him for release from the nut ward of the psychopathic hospital. Then the judge gave some hints as to the wrong way the police had taken with these gentlemen of standing in Chicago's financial and world.

Frank and Vincent McErland, the two victims who had been declared mentally alienated and committed to the asylum, were sitting in their rooms in the hotel Windermere along toward midnight when police entered and grabbed them. Taken to the city psychopathic laboratory they were asked by an assistant on the staff to take the sanity tests. They refused, giving only their name and age in answer to questions. After observing them casually for about 15 minutes, this assistant decided they were not in their right mind and signed a paper to that effect. The name of this psychiatric wizard is Gilbert Pond.

Judge Lindsay further discovered that the hospital commitment papers signed by Judge Edmund Jarecki, the authority in control, had been made out by a clerk and rubberstamped with Jarecki's signature but without his knowlege. This information was wormed out of the clerk, Jarecki himself refusing to answer any questions put in Judge Lindsay's examination. Finally Lindsay released the NcErlanes by habeas corpus, and made his remark about not being in Russia yet.

Thus it becomes evident that anyone can be taken out of his home by a policeman, thrown under the casual glance of an assistant psychiatrist, declared nuts and so committed to the psychopathic hospital on papers rubberstamped without on second's thought by a judge's clerk.

The method was tried on Aurora d'Angelo, the youthful anarchist who led the Sacco-Vanzetti parade in Chicago that was broken up by police with poison gas and nightsticks. Luckily by the use of expert advice and unusual publicity she escaped the fate destined for her by the police. She is now out on bond awaiting jury trial September 15th with other paraders on charges of disorderly conduct and inciting to riot.

In Boston similar methods were attempted against Powers Hapgood who was among the Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrators. Hapgood is a member of the United Mine Workers and a successful union organizer but he is also a graduate of "Hangman's House," as Harvard university has come to be known since President Lowell joined the Massachusetts murder conspiracy. Hapgood was rescued by a New York attorney from commitment to the asylum.

All signs point to increased use of the insanity commitment process against native-born radicals as a companion weapon to the deportation process against aliens.

Union Raises Fighting Fund.

The 4000 members of the United Neckwear Makers Union are raising $150,000 to fight the openshop in their trade. The union reached an agreement with the National Association of Men's Neckwear Manufacturers providing that 25 per cent of the slip-stitch work be transferred from home-work contracting to shop work, giving the 40-hour week two months a year and allowing small pay increases.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Secretary of War Davis today appealed to Comptroller General McCarl to reconsider his refusal to make available $2,990,000 for immediate levee reconstruction work along the Mississippi River. Davis said the work was essential.

Sacco, Vanzetti and the Law

Editor Note—The following are excerpts from a talk delivered in the Aldermanic Chamber of the City Hall last Saturday by Allan Taub, a New York lawyer who made a detailed study of the legal aspects of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Some of the more glaring discrepancies in the "evidence" presented against the two murdered workers were cited by the speaker.

Taub's lecture was given under the auspices of the Library Free Lecture Association of which Joseph P. Carney is president. Just before the lecture was to begin Capt. Donnelly of the New York police department arrived and announced that it would have to be called off. Carney, however, insisted on the right of his organization to proceed with the meeting, and Donelly finally withdrew his objection.

"There's a whole lot in the Sacco-Vanzetti case that ought to be cleared up." Carney explained.

The DAILY WORKER does not agree with Mr. Taub's statement that a situation similar to the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up could not succeed in New York City, nor does it share the speaker's optimism about the possibility (or importance) of "drastic reform in the judicial code of Massachusetts," but is glad to print the following because of the significance of the facts presented.

Drastic reform in the judicial code of the State of Massachusetts must follow that State's disposal of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The pressure of outraged public opinion must force an immediate change in the procedure which permits a judge to act as both judge and jury in cases where human lives are at stake.

During seven long years, the Sacco-Vanzetti case never left Judge Thayer's hands. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts which heard the appeal is limited in power. It can only consider questions of law and may not pass upon questions of fact. And facts may have saved the lives of these two men, internationally believed innocent.

This Puritanical despotism would have been impossible in the State of New York. Had the trial taken place in New York, the seven judges of the Court of Appeals in Albany, would have gone into all questions of both law and fact.

Only Single Judge.

As it is the Massachusetts case leaves one with something of a sick feeling when one realizes that one judge held on to the case from trial to execution,—from 1920 to 1927.

Governor Fuller's Advisory Committee said in its report:

"Judge Thayer ought not to have talked about the case off the bench and doing so was a grave breach of judicial decorum."

If this had been a juryman instead of a judge, a mistrial would have been declared and a new trial granted to Sacco and Vanzetti. In this case Judge Thayer did take the part of a jury and did make remarks outside the court room, and a new trial did not result.

During the seven years that Massachusetts played with the lives of these two men, Judge Thayer sat as sole arbiter of eight different motions. At most of these new evidence was presented on which he had to pass virtually as a jury. This judge who, outside the court room, had undoubtedly made prejudicial statements, was called upon to pass on motions for a new trial, and to decide whether or not he had acted with prejudice. Continuing Taub said:

What Crime?

Were Sacco and Vanzetti on trial for murder or radicalism? When the State's identification witnesses proved to be weak, the prosecutor shifted his attack from "identification" to "consciousness of guilt." It was at this point that the counsel for the defense realized that they would have to go through with the whole question of radicalism. For Sacco and Vanzetti were conscious not of murder but of their radicalism.

A Few Facts.

A few facts will explain how serious this was at the time.

The murder was committed April 15, 1920. Bear the date in mind—April 15. The men were arrested on May 5th, so that fully twenty days had elapsed between the crime and the arrest. Did Sacco and Vanzetti act suspiciously during that twenty day period? No. They carried on with their usual pursuits and followed their same general conduct.

Salsedo, another radical, and a friend of Sacco and Vanzetti, was held for several weeks by the Federal authorities in New York City. There were all sorts of ugly rumors circulated in regard to the third degree methods that were being applied to him. Then on May 4th—notice the date, May 4th—Salsedo met a mysterious death by crashing down on the sidewalk from the fourteenth floor of a Park Row building where he was detained. This was the cause of more rumors, even more frightful now than before. You will remember that his death occurred on May 4th. The next day May 5th, Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested.

The arrest of these two men was mere accident. But after their arrest they acted "suspiciously" and seemed to betray what the judge and district attorney constantly referred to as their "consciousness of guilt." But they were conscious of their radicalism, not of murder. Up to May 5th there was nothing unusual in their conduct. Not even the district attorney with all his detectives could find anything strange in the conduct of these two during the twenty day period between April 15th when the murder took place and May 5th, when they were arrested. When they were arrested May 5th, they had yesterday, May 4th, in mind. "Wasn't that natural? Only yesterday, May 4th, their comrade who was arrested for his radicalism came to a horrible death. Before that he had been introduced to some fancy steps in the "third degree.".

But it is suggested that these two men were armed when they were arrested. That seems to be uppermost in the minds of many.

Their Life Blameless.

Sacco's employer testified in court that Sacco acted as watchman for him and that it was natural for him to have a pistol. His employer also said that Sacco was a man of the highest character.

Vanzetti was a fish peddler. He carried his entire capital of one hundred to two hundred dollars around with him. Often he found himself travelling on the dark roads around small New England towns. He feared hold-ups.

Neither Sacco nor Vanzetti were ever involved in any trouble. They were not gunmen but honest hard-workingmen, who were armed only for self-protection.

Of course it may be said that Vanzetti had just previously been convicted for an attempted robbery in Bridgewater and he had been sentenced to jail by the same Judge Thayer. But any one who looks into the facts of the case will see that the Bridgewater charge grew out of the second, the South Braintree accusation.

Vanzetti throughout the seven years struggle insisted that he was as ignorant and innocent of the one as of the other.

Toward the end of his talk, Taub declared:

Files of Department of Justice.

William G. Thompson, a conservative lawyer, respected in Massachusetts as a man of the highest standards and a former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, has often stated that he is sure that Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent. In 1923 Mr. Thompson became chief counsel for the two men. He has repeatedly charged that if the files of the Department of Justice were made public, the innocence of the defendants would be proved. Again and again Mr. Thompson demanded the records from the department of justice, but every time his request was refused.

Two Department of Justice agents swore that there was a secret agreement between the district attorney and the department of justice. Since the Washington authorities were not able to deport these men they struck a bargain whereby the Federal men would give the district attorney full details of the defendants radical activities, while the district attorney would go the limit in prosecuting them for the Braintree crime. At the trial for murder, much was made of the radicalism of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The two former Federal agents who swore to this special arrangement now hold responsible positions. One is connected with the Beacon Trust Company of Boston, while the other is with the Attorney General of Maine. At the time of the trial, both of these men were employed by the Federal Government..

'Sacco and Vanzetti are dead. But their case must still challenge the attention of all those who seek and cherish justice.

The Peasant Revolution

BY EARL BROWDER

Landlords Fight For Existence.

"The landlord class must suppress and prevent the peasants from organizing peasant unions. This is the significance showing that the existence of the landlord class depends upon the exploitation of the peasants' interest and the landlord class will never let the peasants have unification which will be an obstacle to their procedure of exploiting the peasants' interests. From the peasants point of view, the peasant class must protest against the suppression of the landlord class; in other words, the peasant class have to prevent the landlords from exploitation so as to preserve the interest of the peasants and should not let the landlords violate their organizations and exploit their interests. Therefore, the class organization must be demonstrated by the confliction of interests; the more the class organization is demonstrated, the more struggle is inevitable. Owing to this fact, a short time after the peasants organized themselves in 1923, the Hai Fung peasant union was dissolved by the landlords who conspired with the militarists on account of the movement for the reduction of rents. In 1924, on account of the movement for the reduction of rent of the Kwong Ning peasant union, the landlords conspired with the District Magistrate, the garrisoned troop, and armed militia, killed the peasants cruelly, more than ten comrades being sacrificed.

Many Instances.

"In the same year, the Fan Yuen peasant union the same thing happened on account of the movement for reduction of rent; the landlords conspiring with the local officials and leading the militia, merchants' corps, and bandits, ruined the office of the peasant union and burned the houses of the rural villages; comrade Wong Fook-sam, vice chairman of the executive committee of the union, was killed by them. In the same year, Lam Po-shun, the chairman of the executive committee of the first division Peasant Union of Shi-Zao, was murdered by the head of the Militia Board because Lam Po-shun made objections against the Militia Board levying impositions. Lei Kao village peasant union of Shun Tak district had also been disturbed by the depraved gentries; the native bandits and the garrisoned troops, who were utilized by the depraved gentries, rushed into the peasant union to kill the members of the union; seven or eight peasants were killed and several hundred peasants shelters were burnt. On the next day of the inauguration of the Hah Kong village peasant union of Tung Koon district, it was ruined by the landlords and militia because it set up the movement for protesting against the levy of impositions.

"All these were the peasants economical struggles for the reduction of rent and for protesting against the levy of impositions; in other words, the peasants fought for their organizations in order to improve their living conditions. From the experience of those struggles, we found that everywhere and in every time not only the landlords suppressed our peasants but also the local officials, the garrisoned troops, depraved gentries, notorious rowdies, etc., also stood on the side of the landlords interests to attack the peasants for the landlord class jointly. This hastened our peasant comrades to feel the importance of the political power and made the peasants organize themselves better the better to fight for their economical and political emancipation, while the landlord class and the other controlling classes joined together to suppress the peasants more seriously. Naturally the peasants will acclaim the following slogans regarding their political struggle:

> "The armies who substantially aid the peasants are the Revolutionary Armies.
> "The government which really helps the peasants is the Revolutionary Government.
>
> "The counter-revolutionists suppress and violate the peasants and do not protect their interests.
> "Great federation and cooperation of peasants — break into the joint fighting front of the imperialists, militarists, corrupt officials, repraved gentries, notorious rowdies, great landlords, and all the counter-revolutionists.

Fight For Economic And Political Rights.

"The organization of the peasants fights for economic and political betterment. We are sacrificed on our struggle because the landlords have armed militia and armed garrisoned troops as their forces to attack us. At this moment, we must demand to have force of arms and to organize peasants self-defense corps; such demand is to prevent the landlords from attacking us with force of arms to protect the existence and expansion of the peasant union. At that time the peasant movement had already made great progress. By the awakening of the political struggles, they were led to the field of the national movement. After the Laborers and Peasants' Protection Policy fixed by the First Reorganization Conference of the Kuomintang in 1924, the workers and peasants rose up to take part in the national movement and consequently it developed to a greater extension. At the same time, the imperialists, militarists, and all the counter-revolutionists were frightened by seeing that the workers and peasants are taking part in the revolution."

"Thus, there occured on October 10, 1924, the rebellion of the Canton Merchants' Volunteers, and the labor and peasant corps suffered great losses. This made us recognize the relationship between the imperialists and the compradore Chan Lim-pak and the great landlord Chan Kung-shau. After the suppression of this rebellion the Kuomintang made experiment of her new policies in Canton—proposing that the mayor of the city should be elected by the citizens. Unfortunately the government officials who were taking charge of the new policies did not grant the right of voting to the several hundred thousands of peasants outside the Canton city. Therefore, the peasants struggled for the right and conmmenced a great demonstration movement. Although this struggle was in vain, yet during the day of election the peasants were present to supervise the election. This showed that they had a suitable recognition of politics—at present there are three peasant delegates taking part in the management of the municipal affairs. This is the result of their struggle. When in the winter of 1924, peasants elected and appointed delegates going North to participate in the National Conference Promoting Association of All-China, it happened in Peking that some of the anti-revolutionary members of the party, such a Fung Chi-yau, Ma So, etc., acted against the party, surrendering to the imperialists and militarists and setting up anti-revolutionary movements. The Hong Kong imperialists backed up Chang Chiung-ming to attack Canton while the late Dr. Sun was having serious sickness at Peking. At the same time, with their English warships, they aided the bandits and garrisoned troops in Chungshan district to shoot the Wan Tong village, Chungshan, with cannon.

Conspired To Suppress Mass Movement.

"In view of this continuous changing of the political situation, it made us understand more clearly that the imperialists, militarists, compradores, landlords, and the anti-revolutionary soldier officials, politicians, etc. in the party conspired with each other to suppress the mass movements of the Chinese people, especially the labor and peasant movements. In February, 1925, the Tungkiang peasants positively participated in the movement for overthrowing Chang Chiung-ming, the hunting-dog of the imperialists. Owing to this, then, we could have a new development in the places of Tungkiang. Moreover, all peasants of the whole province formed unions of their own class. On the one side, with the strength of their class organization, they prevented the landlords from attacking them, and on the other side they substantially participated in the National Emancipation Movement, exerting efforts to overthrow militarists and imperialists. Developing the Kwangtung peasant movement with the significance of class and nation all peasants have been united and established a chief directing organ. Therefore, on May 1st, 1925, the universal labor day, the First Peasant Delegates Conference of All-Kwangtung was held and the Provincial Peasant Union was inaugurated.

HIS ANSWER TO TEACHER

Dear Comrades: The answer to the teacher is: Soviet Russia may be a terrible country for the capitalists but not for the workers. The workers' children must not belong to the scouts, they belong to the Pioneers. The workers do not go on strike because they are lazy. It is because they want shorter hours and more money. Otherwise they could not exist. I know these facts because my father is a worker.—JOSEPH GOLDFIELD.

THEIR SPIRITS LIVE ON!

Despite the protests of thousands of workers, in this country and over the rest of the world, the capitalists of America murdered our two comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. After seven years of the most horrible torture under the shadow of the electric chair, they were finally burned. Burned for a crime that they never committed. Burned, in the Puritan state of Massachusetts, famous for its similar burnings not so very long ago.

Tho the Fullers and Thayers may say that Sacco and Vanzetti had a fair trial and were guilty, the workers know that Sacco and Vanzetti received capitalist justice, which finds workers always guilty. The workers know that Sacco and Vanzetti were murdered because they were organizers of labor fighting for the workers against the bosses. That was their crime and nothing else.

Our answer to the capitalists of America must be: "Tho Sacco and Vanzetti are dead, their spirits live on," and where we had but two Sacco and Vanzettis we shall have thousands ready to take their place and ready to die as they did.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead!
Long live the spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti!

THE WORKER

By ANNA LUCYSHYN.

Let us open the workers eyes
Which are tied with a handkerchief
And let us tell him who he is,
Like an animal for the bosses.
Let us fight for our lives,
Like brave soldiers, but not like cowards,
Fight till we kill all of them,
Who try to make us their slaves.
But they won't!
Don't believe what the teacher says,
She wants us to stand against the workers,
And help the bosses
But instead let us stand against the bosses.
And yet the bosses call the Chinese the red fighters,
But we must remember not all of the Chinese stand
up for their people,
Because some of them help the bosses.
But we must hold up the Workers' Red Flag which is red for the workers' blood.

Russia Is A Strong Country

Dear Comrade. Last week while we were having geography in our class, the teacher asked, "Name a strong country of Europe." I raised my hand and answered, "Russia is a strong country." The teacher got very angry and said, "Russia is weak and it is going to be weak while under the Soviet rule. It cannot control itself." I sat down not wishing to argue with her. My teacher knows Russia is a powerful country but is afraid to admit it.

On War and Danger of War

This is the Eighth Installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

"The boycott of war is a stupid phrase," wrote Lenin.

(b) On the strength of the experience of the war of 1914, Bolshevism also exposed the treachery of those who substituted empty phraseology for serious and preservering preparation of war against war. As everyone knows Lenin and Rosa Luxemburg were the authors of the amendment to the resolution of the Basle Congress which recommended—in the event of an outbreak of war—to work for the > "acceleration of the collapse of capitalism in the spirit of the Commune and of the October (General Strike) and December (Moscow rising) event in 1905."

But Bolshevism fought against anarcho-syndicalism and the old Herve school, which, while talking big about a "General Strike," about "insurrection" and about "sabotaging mobilization," did not take a single practical step to prepare themselves for war against war in order not to be utterly helpless at the moment when war was declared. The wrold war has vindicated the worst suppositions in regard to this type of "revolutionaries."

28. The position of Lenin on the question of "the transforming of the imperialist war into civil war" confirmed subsequently by the experience of the Russian revolution, can be summarized under the following main points:

1.—For the revolution to be successful there must be first of all the existence of a revolutionary situation arising from a series of military failures and defeats of the capitalist governments engaged in the imperialist war, that is to say a situation in which it is

(a) impossible for the dominant classes to prserve their domination unchanged; various crises among the "upper classes";

(b) unusual accentuation of the misery and poverty of the oppressed classes;

(c) considerable increase, owing to the above-mentioned circumstances, in the activity of the masses.

2.—But these objective reasons alone are not enough to bring about a victorious revolution. To them must be added:

The subjective "capacity" of the revolutionary class for revolutionary mass actions strong enough to overthrow its own government or put it with its back to the wall which will never—not even in the epoch of crises —"fall" unless it be "made to fall." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 139, and 140 "Collapse of the Second International").

3.—Apart from this, the revolutionary class must have an experienced Bolshevik leadership (today the Communist Parties) capable of preparing and organizing revolutionary mass actions of this class. In the period preparatory to revolutionary mass actions, this leadership, making use of every "legal" opportunity, must carry on an incessant agitation among the masses against the imperialist war, under the slogan of transforming it into civil war. In connection with this, Lenin took into account that this agitation will meet with fierce resistance on the part of the ruling classes.

"Not only in war," so he wrote, "but in absolutely every acute political situation let alone any revolutionary action of the masses, the government of even the freest democratic country will also threaten to break up the legal organizations, seize their funds, arrest their leaders and other similar 'practical measures.' What is to be done?"

To this Lenin replied that besides the activity of the legal workers' party:

"It is necessary to supplement it by establishing an illegal base, an illegal organization, an illegal social democratic (today read Communist) activity without, however, surrendering a single legal base." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 128, "The Collapse of the Second International").

THE STORY OF A STRANGE STRIKE

By ALEX.

(International Propaganda Committee, Transport Workers.)

"Thrift and Economy,"—these are the things usually preached by the bosses to their wage-slaves who, as a rule, don't earn enough to keep body and soul together, let alone to save. . . . At any rate, it ought to be admitted that the bosses themselves do practice economy and saving—of course, at the expense of their workers.

Example of "Thrift."

Take, for instance, the case of the Holland-American Line, a wealthy and prosperous steamship company whose vessels make round monthly trips between Rotterdam and New York. At Rotterdam the ships usually stay about a week, loading and unloading. Some time ago the shipowners hit upon the bright idea of discharging their crews upon arrival in the Dutch port, and of signing on a fresh crew before sailing. Thus, once in five weeks the company effects a saving of one week's wages.

Workers Disagree.

The Dutch seamen, however, failed to appreciate the bright ingenuity of their bosses, and on June 14th last when the usual trick was performed aboard the S. S. Rotterdam of the Holland-American Line, and an attempt made to sign on a fresh crew, the seamen, supported this time by their union, refused to sign on, demanding that the company give up the thrifty habit of signing on a new crew for each trip.

To be sure, such strikes are fairly common occurrences and it were hardly worth while to dwell on this particular strike, but for one peculiar fact which we are going to narrate.

The official organ of the so-called "International Federation of Transport Workers" ("Press Reports," July 1927), in telling the story of this strike, goes on to describe how the company, after futile efforts to secure a blackleg crew in Dutch ports, was compelled to take on a Chinese crew which brought the vessel to the port of New York. Even this, as we are told by "Press Reports," did not end the shipowners' troubles. According to report, seventy-six of the Chinese seamen had been arrested by the authorities at Hoboken for fighting the police and the deck officers, and for an attempt to go ashore without leave.

A Fake Report.

Well, the information of "Press Reports" is neither complete nor accurate. It is true that the Chinese had been signed on as blacklegs, but of this they learned to their great indignation only later on, when the ship was already on the high seas, and upon arrival at Hoboken they categorically refused to stay on board and demanded that they be taken back to the Dutch port.

The Chinese seamen did not fight the police as reported in "Press Reports;" what actually did happen was this: invited by the deck officers, the Hoboken police had boarded the ship and after beating up the strikers carried them off to Ellis Island prison "for the convenience of the company," as it was bluntly explained by an emigration inspector.

From the American labor press we learn that the case had quite unexpectedly gained considerable publicity. Even the so-called "International Seamen's Union of America," yielding to pressure from the rank and file members admiring the pluck and the splendid proletarian solidarity of the Chinese seamen, was constrained to intervene.

We are told by eminent lawyers of the "Great Transatlantic Republic" that compulsory labor is forbidden by the laws of the United States. Apparently the authorities at Hoboken had acted with undue zeal. Under the well-known La Follette Act any seaman, even including Chinese and Lascars, has the right to demand his discharge at any American port with half-pay and free return passage to the port of signing.

Ignore Laws.

Despite this and similar liberal laws of "democratic America," at the time when the New York Chinese Seamen's Club and the International Seamen's Union intervened, 16 people had already been deported for mutiny, a similar fate awaited 38 more on Ellis Island, whilst 30 of the Chinese seamen had made good their escape.

System Universal.

Facts of the kind just described should be food for thought for all the labor organizations, and particularly for those of the seamen. For Rotterdam is not the only port where the labor of the seaman is "free." In most of the other ports the same system of "shanghai-ing" crews, particularly of foreign seamen, is practiced by hosts of shady agents, nicknamed "shanghai-ers." Each "pub" in every port furnished a happy hunting-ground for these dealers in human toil and sweat. This system, of course, is connived at by the shipping companies, to the great detriment of the seamen and their organizations. Hence the control over the signing on of crews should be the immediate task for the seamen's unions.

Race intolerance and contempt for "coloured" people — happily, more widespread among union bureaucrats than among rank and file seamen—constitute a grave menace and obstacle to the everyday struggle of the seamen against the shipowners.

Attitude a Disgrace.

Before embarking upon a fight against the shipowners the Central Union of the Dutch Transport Workers did not think it necessary to inform about it the numerous Chinese and Lascar seamen in the port of Rotterdam, and this enabled the shipowners to use the class-conscious Chinese seamen against their Dutch comrades. This contemptuous outlook upon the Chinese seamen on the [illegible] of the bureaucrats in the Dutch Transport workers' union is entirely unwarranted in view of the heroic conduct of the Chinese seamen, their role in the Chinese Revolution, and their militancy outside of China.

Finally the central organ of information published by the so-called International Federation of Transport workers, instead of ill-disguised [illegible] ing of the Chinese comrades, [illegible] rather fight for the unity [illegible] Transport-workers the [illegible]

NEW COURT ATTACK AGAINST "DAILY" IS MYSTERY

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

IF you want to know the "real" facts about the Communist Party convention now taking place in New York City, do not bother reading The DAILY WORKER, but take your mental fodder from the Herald-Tribune. In last Wednesday's issue of that paper we are told that the convention is being held "somewhere in Westchester county" and that even the delegates do not yet know the location. This is the kind of rubbish that appears in the guise of news in the capitalist press. It is not surprising that every intelligent worker looks with suspicion on whatever appears in the boss sheets—even the weather reports.

FORMER governor McCray of Indiana, today quits Atlanta prison on parole. McCray was once one of the big guns in Indiana politics and respected by all who respect success in politics and business. The governor was doing business with the aid of money deposited in banks by the thrifty Hoosiers. But McCray's foot slipped and just as soon as it did, his fellow sharks grabbed it and he found himself on his way to the can. But not having violated a criminal syndicalist law and not being a militant trade union organizer he will be forgiven and restored to the bosom of bourgeois Indiana.

ANOTHER one of those farces that international capitalism pulls off periodically is now being held in Paris. It is the interparliamentary world congress where solons from many nations meet to blow off their bazoos and incidentially speak for the interests of the capitalist crooks they represent. Some people imagine that those meetings encourage peace. Just as little as would periodic meetings of second story workers enable the innocent sleeper to pound the pillow with a greater feeling of security than he experiences now.

AS a single-handed and self-serving publicity agent Charles A. Levine is entitled to the non-stop medal for continuous success in making the front page on sheer merit. Levine is an ex-junkman and owes so much money to the government that he is liable to mistake himself for the Republic of France. Being a patriot he contracted business relations with Uncle Sam during the war but Sam evidently considered himself jilted out of half a million dollars and was so sore on his unfaithful partner that he would not confer the customary honors on the former dealer in cast-off things after his successful passengership to Germany.

LEVINE is an ambitious fellow and will not return on a palatial liner as did the other air heroes. He has gotten into so many fights in Europe that the militarists of Germany and France may decide to postpone the next war for another generation. Having licked everything in France Levine jumped into his air flivver and almost knocked England into the Irish sea. Everything was more or less hurt but Levine. It is reported that the intrepid adventurer would fly alone on his return trip to the

JAMES P. CANNON ANSWERS CHARGE OF A. FELICANI

The vague and totally unfounded charges of "misappropriation" levelled by Aldino Felicani, of the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee were branded as a smoke screen to hide the differences between the role played by the I. L. D. and the weak, ineffectual role by certain members of the Boston Committee, according to James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense.

"There is nothing new in Felicani's statement," Cannon declared. "It is merely a repitition of the old lies that have been hurled at us thruout the entire campaign. Any time we tried to do anything for Sacco and Vanzetti these people wanted to limit the Defense Committee to collecting funds to give to lawyers and to soft-pedal the protest movement of the workers.

"They never had any criticism to offer of William Green and the other traitors who betrayed Sacco and Vanzetti to their death."

Cannon will issue a full statment today.

POLICE HAND OUT MANY SUBPOENAS FOR GOVERNMENT

Editorial, Business and Mechanical Staff Called

Subpoenas wholesale were served yesterday on members of the editorial, business and mechanical staff of The DAILY WORKER, calling on them to appear before the federal grand jury this morning at 11:30 o'clock.

These are all the facts at hand at this writing in the government's latest move against The DAILY WORKER, the exact object of which takes on the nature of a deep mystery.

Kelly Serves Subpoenas.

The fact that subpoenas were served by Sergeant Kelly and other members of the "bomb squad," part of the New York police department, when the summons was to appear before a federal (United States District Court) grand jury, is explained by the claim that the police sergeant is more familiar with the members of the DAILY WORKER staff than the force of the United States marshal's office.

When notified of this new government move, Attorney Joseph Brodsky, counsel for The DAILY WORKER, declared he was unable to explain its meaning.

"It is a mystery to me," he declared.

The stamp of Charles H. Tuttle, United States district attorney, was upon the subpoenas served, but when his office was called by The DAILY WORKER, those in charge refused to give any additional information.

Out on $1,000 Bail.

Members of the editorial staff of The DAILY WORKER, including J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, Alex Bittleman, with Bert Miller, manager, and David Gordon, author of the poem, "America," are now being held for trial under $1,000 bail each, because of the appearance in The DAILY WORKER of Gordon's poem. They appeared in Judge Lynch's court recently when Sept. 6 was decided on as the date for setting the time of trial on this charge.

Foresee New Attack.

It is not believed that this old charge has any connection with the serving of the subpoena on The DAILY WORKER staff yesterday.

This new attack was launched on the opening day of the Fifth Conven-

Fur Union Holding Meetings Tonight to Start Campaign

All local unions of the New York Joint Board of the Workers Union will meet tonight to prepare for an aggressive struggle on the part of the members. All registered and unregistered workers are asked to attend.

In the call for the meetings, Ben Gold, Joint Board manager says that "the need and the suffering of the fur workers has already exceeded all bounds. The army of unemployed is growing weekly and is already running into the thousands."

Cutters local 1 will meet at Royal Hall, 85 East Fourth St., Operators local 5—Manhattan Lyceum; Nailers local 10 Stuyvesant Casino, 142 Second Ave., and Finishers local 15 at Astoria Annex, 64 Fourth Street.

Several hundred fur workers at a rank and file meeting held last night at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth St., decided to conduct a fight for an aggressive policy by the workers of the organization.

MEXICAN COMMUNIST PARTY GREETS FIFTH CONVENTION OF THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY IN NEW YORK

Expresses Hope for Complete Unity of Brother Party in This Country

Fraternal Communist greetings were received by the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party yesterday from the Communist Party of Mexico calling for increased struggle against American imperialism, the common enemy of the workers of both countries.

The telegram, read by Acting Secretary Jay Lovestone, to the convention assembled at Irving Plaza Hall, Irving Place and 15th Street, was as follows:

> "The Mexican Communist Party greets the Fifth Convention of its Brother Party, the Workers (Communist) Party, wishing the outcome will be complete unity. Yours for the overthrow of the common enemy—American Imperialism."

Enthusiastic applause greeted the reading of the telegram. There has always been the closest co-operation between the Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico. Recent conventions of the Mexican Party have been attended by fraternal delegates from our Party.

The receipt of the telegram of greetings would indicate that the Mexican Party is not planning to send a fraternal delegate to New York for the present convention.

Greeting from Pittsburgh.

The convention also received a telegram of greetings from a street nucleus in Pittsburgh with "Greetings and hopes for complete unification."

The business sessions of the convention opened Wednesday, following the enthusiastic demonstration in the Central Opera House, Tuesday night, addressed by Jay Lovestone, William Z. Foster, Ben Gitlow, William W. Weinstone, Robert Minor, of the Central Executive Committee; Herbert Zam, of the Young Workers League, and a representative of the Pioneers.

Select Presidium of Five.

After the reading of the agenda proposed by the political committee, a presidium was elected as follows: Jay Lovestone, Benjamin Gitlow, Max Bedacht, William Z. Foster and William W. Weinstone.

Acting Secretary Lovestone was chosen as the chairman of the afternoon session, with Foster as chair-

WORKERS PARTY CONVENTION CALLS ON WORKERS TO BUILD POWERFUL INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

The resolution unanimously adopted by the great gathering assembled in Central Opera House Tuesday night to greet the delegates to the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party calls upon American workers to build the International Labor Defense to curb legalized murders like that of Sacco and Vanzetti. The resolution declares that it is the duty of the Workers (Communist) Party of America to expose the nature of capitalist justice. The text of the resolution follows in full:

AMERICAN capitalism is at the height of its power. But while it pursues its profit interests with ruthless brutality it is nevertheless, anxious to hide the face of its dictatorship behind a mask of democracy and justice. The contradiction thus created a merciless capitalist dictatorship operating under the guise of a benevolent democracy, has given birth to the institution of frame-ups so often perpetrated in America by organs of the state power.

The capitalist dictatorship desires to destroy its political enemy; but it cannot do it openly for fear of destroying, at the same time, the democratic illusions of the masses. Therefore the political enemy is charged with a common crime which he never committed; a crime is fastened upon him by perjured evidence, obvious discrepancies in the evidence are smoothed over by rulings of a judge who is a party to a frame-up; an atmosphere of prejudice is created and carefully nursed; and the result of it all is the covering up of an unwarranted persecution of a political opponent with the cloak of a righteous defense of society against the attacks of a common criminal.

This method of class warfare has created in America a long series of perpetrated judicial murders which invariably accompanied intensive conflicts between capital and labor. Thus the eight hour movement of American labor in the eighties was stifled for a time by the victimization of the Haymarket martyrs in 1887; the strikes and struggles of the metal miners of the west resulted in an attack by American capital through a frame-up against Haywood and others; the continued unrest of the underpaid textile workers of New England inspired the Massachusetts authorities to the frame-up against Ettor and Giovanitti in Lawrence; the desire to break down the resistance of American labor against the war brought Billings and Mooney as victims of an outrageous frame-up under the shadow of the gallows. And the general unrest of labor after the World War was attacked by American capital through its wholesale persecution of foreign-born workers by the deportation delirium of the then Attorney-General of the United States, Mitchell Palmer. The outrage committed by the prostituted capitalist justice in the legal murder of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti was an outgrowth of this delirium.

Persecute Foregin-Born.

It was during this period of wholesale persecution of foreign-born workers that a thoroughly corrupted police department in New York and an equally notorious corrupted federal department of justice attempted to lay at the door of the militant labor movement of America a blast of explosives in Wall Street which was either planned by police agents or transported through the streets of the city for building purposes with disregard of the most elementary precautions.

All police organs, city and federal, worked feverishly to cover the trails of the real cause of the explosion and attempted to fasten it as a crime upon the revolutionary movement. With third degree methods which would have been accepted with joy as a welcome addition to the technique of any medieval torturer, they attempted to get "confessions" from innocent victims. One of these, tortured to death, was unquestionably thrown out of the windows of the department of justice headquarters in Park Row, New York. This victim, the Italian worker Salsedo, because unwilling to perjure himself against his comrades in favor of a frame-up of the department of justice had to testify to the brutality of this department with his broken limbs and his mangled body.

Salsedo was a friend and comrade of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. The latter protested against the outrageous murder of their comrade and thus drew the hatred of the commissioned framers upon their own persons.

Sacco and Vanzetti Murder

The federal department of justice and the judiciary machinery of the State of Massachusetts co-operated in and are both equally responsible for the frame-up which ended in the legal murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. Sacco

KUOMINTANG IN AMERICA DENOUNCES WUHAN GOVERNM'T AS REACTIONARY

His Failure to Loose Forces of Agrarian Revolution; Supports Mme. Sun

(Special to The DAILY WORKER).

PALO ALTO, Cal., Aug. 31.—The Central Committee of the Kuomintang in America has passed a resolution supporting Mme. Sun Yat-sen's declaration against the counter-revolutionary policies of the Wuhan government and reaffirms its determination to strictly adhere to Sun Yat-sen's policy of cooperation with the Communists and the Soviet Union and the loosing of the workers and peasants revolution.

The Oakland and San Francisco branches have passed similar resolutions and the San Francisco branch has also issued a long manifesto vigorously supporting the above policy in the Kuo Min Yat Po, the daily organ of the Kuomintang in America and is carrying on a militant campaign supporting the left wing policies.

FRENCH LABOR UNITED IN DRIVE ON AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION

Socialist Federation Joins Left Wing in War Against Fascist Gathering

PARIS, Aug. 31.—Even the General Confederation of Labor, socialist-controlled federation, has joined the nation-wide protest against the American Legion Convention which is scheduled to open here on September 19th.

Describing the Legion parade and convention as an "outrage to the universal mourning for Sacco and Vanzetti," the General Confederation of Labor has followed the lead of the left wing workers of France in denouncing the fascist gathering. The confederation will have nothing to do with any ceremonies connected with the Legion Convention, a statement issued yesterday declares.

REPLICAS OF SACCO AND VANZETTI DEATH MASKS FOR NATIONAL TOUR

Chicago and Other Cities Request Copies for Memorial Meetings

The death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti were taken back to Boston midnight Tuesday by Mrs. Rose Sacco, so bronze replicas can be made. Workers in Chicago and other large cities who have been arranging memorial meetings will display the copies of the masks.

All day yesterday up to midnight thousands of workers continued to visit Stuyvesant Casino even tho the masks were no longer there. They viewed the massive pyramid topped by a worker's fist and the many wreaths that were on exhibition.

Last night ended two days of an almost continuous stream of workers into the Casino. The arrangements committee originally intended to have it open all night but the police department compelled the closing at midnight daily.

Patrolman Gets Five Dimes as Rockefeller Goes on Spending Orgy

MATAWAN, N. J., Aug. 31.—John D. Rockefeller has been on an orgy of spending again. The aged millionaire gave Patrolman Leroy Sproul five new Rockefeller dimes today.

A motorist disregarded Sproul's warning whistle when he passed a traffic signal. The next car was stopped by Sproul who ordered the chauffeur to pursue the offending automobile.

Sproul turned to the passenger and recognized Rockefeller.

and Vanzetti did not die as a punishment of crimes committed by them, but died as a monumental proof of the crimes of the federal department of justice of the judiciary machine of the State of Massachusetts and of capitalist justice as a whole.

Sacco and Vanzetti were anarchists. Although enemies of the state they opposed the aim of the communists of conquering the state power as a means of destroying capitalism and establishing a free society. Capitalist justice, as one arm of the power of the capitalist state, destroyed in Sacco and Vanzetti two of its enemies. In doing this the capitalist state proved that while philosophy may disregard an antagonistic state the capitalist state does not disregard antagonistic philosophies. It strikes its enemies and thus proves with convincing logic that it will never capitulate before an idea but will give way only to the substantial force of the proletariat organized into one revolutionary fighting class.

Expose Capitalist Justice.

In the face of this latest outrage of capitalist justice it becomes the duty of the Party to tear the false masks of fairness and justice from the face of the capitalist state and to show to the workers in its true light the capitalist dictatorship. The threads of the whole frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti must be laid bare so that the workers of America get a glimpse of the brutal manifestations of the class struggle which, under the capitalist dictatorship in America, parade as justice.

The Party shall open the eyes of the American workers to the impossibility of expecting impartial justice from a capitalist court in any case where the interests of capital clash with the interests of labor. It shall transmit to the workers the experience from the Sacco and Vanzetti case, that justice for the workers cannot come from capitalist courts, but can only come as fruit of struggle of a united working class against capital and its institutions.

Must Build I. L. D.

The Party shall draw the attention of the American workers to the imperative necessity of preparing, thru the building and strengthening of the International Labor Defense as a protective weapon, against the ever-threatening danger of persecution.

The Workers (Communist) Party will do all in its power to make the memory of Sacco and Vanzetti a cherished tradition of the American working class, to plant in the hearts of the American proletariat revolutionary hatred against capitalism and into their heads revolutionary determination to end capitalism.

W. Virginia Labor Calls for Unions For Unorganized

By Federated Press.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 31.—Adoption of a program calling for a state-wide campaign to unionize the unorganized workers of West Virginia closed the twentieth anniversary convention of the state Federation of Labor. President John B. Easton, who was reelected without opposition, will take charge of the enrolling of the hundreds of volunteer organizers the convention expects to assist in the drive.

Easton's recruits will work hand in hand with the various international unions, the state federation furnishing the unifying force.

Miners Union Week.

The twentieth anniversary convention opened with building trades, printers, glass workers and other delegates from the non-mining occupations in control. The once powerful West Virginia miners' district unions have shrunk to a shadow of the powerful organizations of 50,000 members and more than once dominated the state labor gatherings.

Will C. Thompson, secretary-treasurer of District No. 17 of the United Mine Workers, took the floor the first afternoon and made an appeal for aid from the rest of the labor movement. Referring to the strike still continuing in parts of the Fairmont (northern) field and the meetings being held in the southern regions he said the job before the U. M. W. of A. was a huge one, and the other trade unions must lend their full support if it was to be successful.

Tell of Attack on Unions.

Mining is the basic industry of West Virginia and with the defeat of the miners' union the whole labor movement has suffered. Delegates from the Typographical Union told how the two leading newspapers of Charleston, the capital city, have gone open shop in the last year. Building tradesmen told of attacks on their organizations. Realizing that a vigorous counter-movement was necessary the convention voted for the organization drive from which much is expected.

WITH A SPLENDID INTRODUCTION BY
Joseph Freeman

ELLIS has given us in this book an inspiration to carry on the brave fight of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The drawings—like their conduct—call not for mourning but for struggle"—says Jos. Freeman, noted writer in his introduction.

Drawn in the heat of the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti these inspired cartoons are a beautiful memorial tribute to the memory of two brave workers. Here is a book that will speak more than you possibly can to the man in your shop and trade union.

Only one cartoon has been placed on each page. EVERY PAGE IS SUITABLE FOR FRAMING. The book is large size—9x12 inches on heavy antique art paper. Send for a copy today. The price has been lowered practically at cost to assure the widest possible distribution in memory of Sacco and Vanzetti.

TRADE UNION PROGRESSIVES ON COAST FIGHTING FOR MILITANT ACTION

members of the Central Labor Union of Los Angeles that is now expressing itself. Recently the labor council urged all local unions to join in demonstrations for Sacco and Vanzetti and when the unions started to do so, had the orders cancelled at the 11th hour, Levin said.

Unions Gain Membership.

According to Levin the Electrical and Machinists' Unions are gaining membership in Los Angeles. The building trades of Hollywood, the world moving picture center has appointed a special committee to continue the organization work. Even the actors and actresses are planning to become union members by joining the Equity Association. This is their answer to the producers threat to cut their salaries.

The most unorganized workers in the state, who are also poorly paid are the fruit pickers. Recently in the peach district 5,000 workers who went there in response to a call, were left stranded due to a disagreement between the packers and the fruit growers.

Work As Slaves.

In the Imperial Valley many Mexican workers are brot into the state by special privileges and are then kept under virtual peonage. They work for unusually low wages at fruit packing, cotton picking and farming.

Recently the unorganized lumber workers were given a $2 slash in wages. These highly exploited workers are mostly in the Sugar Pine and Red Wood sections of the state.

In Oakland there has been formed a confernece to work for the repeal of the state criminal syndicalist law. Twenty unions are represented in this organization. The Building Trades Council of Oakland is supporting this move.

Tells of Frisco.

Ernest Ettlinger also from California told of the labor movement in San Francisco. He told how six year ago the open shop drive was started against the building thrades unions, and of the general strike of 1921.

The strike of the 2,000 carpenters that started in April of last year and ended in a defeat this January was also referred to. After their defeat the rank and file decided to get rid of the reactionary machine within the union that was responsible for their defeat. According to Ettinger, the largest carpenters' local in San Francisco is supporting wholeheartedly this rank and file movement.

For Joint Agreement.

In the painters' union the progressives are advocating a joint agreement between all building trades unions and the bosses, all of them to expire at the same time. They are also propogating the five day week. Every building trades union in Los Angeles is being visited to gain their support for the struggle. Arrangements for a large labor day parade in Los Angeles are now being prepared.

Conditions in Oregon.

Delegate Sulo W. Syvanen of the Finnish Communist Daily Toveri, Astoria, Oregon, recited the ocnditions in the state of Oregon.

According to Syvenean the largest salmon fishing center in the world is located in Astoria. The fishermen there have organized themselves into a federal union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. It is known as the Columbia Fishermen's Protective Association and has more than 1,000 members. The carpenters union in the same city is dominated by ultra-reactionary forces and is not active.

In Portland, Oregon, the only union of any importance is the Carpenters.

Strong Progressive Group.

In Seattle several years ago six militant delegates were expelled from the Central Labor Council on the charge of being Communists. The reactionary forces hoped that would act as the death knell of the progressive movement there. But they calculated wrong for today a strong group of progressive delegates sit in the council. Also a large body of militant workers are found in the various unions.

The lumber workers are unorganized. They number more than 25,000 men. The first step towards their organization has been among the higher skilled shingle weavers who have been organized in Grays Harbor, Kalamo and Ballard. About 2,500 men are in this union.

Organized 100 per cent.

In Gray's Harbor they are organized 100 per cent. In the other places the figure is not quite so high. Recently a strike took place at Kalama which resulted in an increase of four cents a thousand in the amount of work done.

Plans for the organization of the other lumber workers are going forward. The average pay is $3 to $3.50 a day for 8 hours. The bosses are attempting to raise the work day to 10 hours.

Referring to the growth of the party, Aaron Fislerman, district organizer of the Party at Seattle, said that during the last year 240 new members were secured in the district. The Party has recenlty opened a new headquarters in a three-story building. An open forum and 10 classes will be started on September 18.

The Party has participated in many united front movements during the last year. They have been on such important questions as Sacco and Vanzetti, Hands Off China and other subjects of international importance.

man of the evening session. The various members of the presidium will interchange as chairman during the sessions of the convention.

The credentials committee was selected to consist of Jay Lovestone, Jack Stachel, Abram Jakira, John J. Ballam and John W. Johnstone.

The financial committee includes Jay Lovestone, William W. Weinstone and Alex Bail.

The press committee consists of J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne and Robert Minor.

Following these preliminaries the convention recessed to allow the credentials committee to get to work and consider the challenges that had been made of delegates in several districts.

Herald-Tribune as Provocateur.

On the opening day of the convention the New York Herald-Tribune appeared in the role of provocatuer, very evidently seeking to incite governmental action against the Workers (Communist) Party. It printed a lurid story declaring that the convention was being held in secret "somewhere in Westchester country."

In speaking of the convention the Herald-Tribune declares that:

"The actual place of meeting is being kept secret by the Communists. It is known only to delegates and department of justice men operating as active members of the Workers Party.

"Altho New York is given as the convention city in the call, it was learned yesterday that the meeting place will be 'somewhere in Westchester county'."

It became known to The DAILY WORKER that the following telegram has been received by Mr. R. A. Holcomb, managing-editor of the New York Herald-Tribune, 225 West 40th St., New York City:

"Please assign two star reporters and Mr. Fred B. Marvin, editor of the late New York Commercial, to go gunning with me somewhere in Westchester. (Signed) Percy Parlor, Red Agent, Department of Justice."

Convention Held in Public.

Of course, no effort was made to keep the meeting place of the convention secret. While the Herald-Tribune was spreading its "fake" the New York Times was appearing with the news of where and when the convention would be held.

This news was also published in detail in yesterday's issues of The DAILY WORKER.

It was also announced at the mass meeting held at the Central Opera House on Tuesday night.

Reporters Arrive at Convention.

When the delegates gathered at the convention hall Wednesday morning there were plenty of reporters present from all the New York dailies and the city press association. They did not take the fiction story in the Herald-Tribune seriously.

tion of the Workers (Communist) Party. No effort was made, however, to serve subpoenas on the members of the staf of "The Daily" attending the convention.

Warrants are outstanding against J. Louis Engdahl and Alex Bittleman on state charges growing out of the publication of the poem "America," on which Dunne, Miller and Gordon have already been tried and convicted. At the time of the trials Engdahl was in Moscow, while Bittleman was in Chicago. Detective Kelly has inferred that these charges would be pressed.

Ask About Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

In questioning members of the staff of "The Daily," the visiting squad of the police department showed considerable interest in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

"You have been pretty busy during the Sacco-Vanzetti case, haven't you?" was the suggestive question put to draw out an answer.

Members of the mechanical staff were questioned as to the manner in which The DAILY WORKER was gotten out, who handled copy and who approved of various material going into the paper.

Kept Charges "Dark Secret."

The three plainclothes men who served the subpoenas on members of the staff refused to furnish them with any information. The sections of the law involved in the serving of the subpoeanas was kept a dark secret.

In the hope of serving the rest of the staff with subpoenas, the plainclothes men loitered in the building for several hours.

They asked for the editors and the business manager of The DAILY WORKER, who were out of the building at the time.

The Capitalist Press Is No Place to Discuss Lessons of Fate of Sacco and Vanzetti

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

ALDINO FELICANI, member of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston, on two occasions at least since the execution of the two workers, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, has used the capitalist press to make an attack on the American Communist movement.

Felicani is an anarchist. Sacco and Vanzetti were also anarchists. But this made no difference to the Communists, neither in the United States nor in any other country. Sacco and Vanzetti were the workers, imprisoned, placed on trial for their lives and sentenced to death by the capitalist state. Communists made every effort, stopped at no sacrifice, to achieve their liberation.

There should have been no difference between workers and working class organizations to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair. Unfortunately there were differences.

There should be no differences today among the workers to build for the unity of American labor and the development of its power, in memory of the heroic fight waged by Sacco and Vanzetti. But unfortunately there are differences. Communists are first in the effort to overcome these differences, to cement the unity of labor.

In attacking the Communist movement, Felicani does not do so on principle. He resorts to the age-long subterfuge of raising the question of finances.

The International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of New York City have both carefully, repeatedly and patiently answered all of Felicani's criticisms.

In addition, it may be said, however, that Mary Donovan, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee of Boston, in a statement to The DAILY WORKER last Saturday, specifically repudiated the statement attributed to her in the New York Herald-Tribune and other capitalist papers of that day to the effect that $500,000 had been raised by Communists and never accounted for, which Felicani again alluded to in his interview in the capitalist press yesterday.

It is an immediate duty of the Boston Committee to officially repudiate the slanders that have been circulated in its name, and credited to Felicani, who is especially obligated to give his views thru some other medium than the press of the enemy class.

Felicani, as an anarchist, may disagree in principle with the Communist program. That is his right, altho it is difficult to understand how any intelligent worker needs better proof than the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti themselves to refute anarchist theories.

The revolutionary movement that is actually threatening the capitalist social order does not consist of workers who believe in the anarchist "negation" of power; of those who believe in individual terror and a passive "refusal to deal with the state," but it is made up of workers who carry on an unceasing struggle of the proletariat for all power, for the destruction of the capitalist state. Such workers cast their lot with the Communist movement.

Let not Felicani debase the struggle, over the principle to a squabble over finances. That is a mere trick. It was the trick used by Abraham Cahan, editor of the Jewish Socialist Daily Forward, to hamper the work of the Friends of Soviet Russia, in the days of famine in the Union of Soviet Republics. It is the subterfuge used by the reactionary bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor in avoiding a direct struggle over principle with the progressives and the left wing.

Felicani, however, is also quoted as stating that the Communists of America are more concerned in spreading their propaganda than in aiding our comrades who died in the electric chair.

If Felicani makes this charge, and he has not denied it, then he has yet to learn that Communists had no interests separate and apart from those demanding the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, just as the Communist movement wages the struggle for the release of all class war prisoners, just as it fights for the emancipation for the whole working class. Even the Boston Committee must now confess the complete bankruptcy of its policies, dictated in great part by bourgeois lawyers and other non-working class elements.

It is in fact the bankruptcy of anarchist theories, especially in waging such a struggle as was needed in the fight for Sacco and Vanzetti, that draws many workers with anarchist sympathies into the ranks of the Communist International. This occurs not only in the United States, but over the entire world.

An excellent confession of the bankruptcy of anarchist theories has just been made by Ephim Yarchuk, a Russian ex-anarcho-syndicalist, in a letter to the Pravda (June 15, 1927), the central organ of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Yarchuk writes as follows:

"Dear Comrade Editor,—Please be good enough to print the following declaration:

"Since 1903 I have been in the ranks of the revolutionary movement and down to the present time belonged to the anarcho-syndicalist wing. I took an active part in the 1905 and 1917 revolutions, working in Kronstadt. I participated in the formation of the Anarcho-Syndicalist Confederation and bitterly criticized Bolshevism. I was arrested several times and in 1921 was deported from the Union of Soviet Republics.

"Looking at the post-war West-European revolutionary movement in general and at the anarcho-syndicalist movement in particular, I was forced to put the following basic questions to myself:

1. "Can the revolutionary movement successfully develop when not headed by a strictly centralized party—as the anarchists believe?

2. "Can the social revolution be victorious without the dictatorship of the proletariat?

3. "Is the road chosen by the Communist Party (Bolshevik) leading to Communism?

"During the process of my work and deliberation on these questions, and after long discussions with anarchists I must admit that:

1). "Only a strictly centralized party, led by experienced, tried and true fighters with a clear and exactly defined class-proletarian ideology, can lead the revolutionary movement of the proletariat. Such a party is the Party of the Bolshevik-Communists.

2). "The experience of the Russian Revolution must convince every honest revolutionary that a transfer to Communism from a Capitalist State is possible only by means of force. Only the dictatorship of the proletariat can overcome the duplicity, cunning and organized resistance of the bourgeoisie and their henchmen.

3). "If the process of the development of the Russian Revolution has dispelled all illusions (including my own) on quickly surmounting the resistance of the bourgeoisie, on a painless transfer to Communism, then these visionaries are alone to blame for this, for they were unable to penetrate the secrets of the dialectics of history. Taking into consideration all the conditions and circumstances that had accompanied the development of the Russian Revolution I must say straightly that the road shown by the Bolshevik Party is the only true and possible road that can lead us to the complete triumph of Communism.

"With comradely greetings,—Ephim Yarchuk."

Years of difficult struggle against capitalism in this country still face the workers of America.

The capitalist class is most interested in confusing the workers in this struggle. It uses its press most ably in its effort to create this confusion.

In spite of the capitalist class and its press, the workers must learn the lessons of the fate meted out to Sacco and Vanzetti, and build its power for future struggles. Communists have full faith that, once learning this lesson corectly the workers will turn in full confidence to the leadership of the American Communist Party and the Communist International.

Moore, Jailer of Passaic Strikers, Scores Free Speech

By IRVING FREEMAN.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Aug. 31.—Governor A. Harry Moore, democrat-elect has pitched himself on the bandwagon of professional patriots last week in his speech before the Monmouth County Historical Association, he declared, "that under the guide of free speech we permit some folks to talk and try to take the white stripes and the blue stars out of our flag and make it all red."

"It is unfortunate that some newspapers and the so-called intellectuals give their aid to radicalism in America."

Real Hundred Per Center.

Governor Moore sets himself up as a 100 per center and classes all citizens who disagree with him as radicals. This lick spittle who is in office in Trenton only because he is the puppet of Mayor Hague in Jersey City not so many years ago was a worker. Today because he has played the game of politics he is the governor of New Jersey.

Not once has he raised his voice or used his offices in the interests of organized or unorganized labor. At the last session of the legislature every bill introduced favorable to labor was killed and never adopted. The Passaic strikers framed in the textile strike of 1926 are still in jail in Trenton. No pardon has been given them by the governor.

In making the above speech Governor Moore was exploiting the Sacco-Vanzetti case for political purposes. The democratic national convention is coming. They need a candidate for the presidency. Governor Moore supporters have already announced him as a candidate in the 1928 race for the presidency. Will the workers of New Jersey permit this ambitious political performer to fool them as he did when he was elected to office or will they proceed to organize a powerful Labor Party that will fight for and protect the interests of labor in Jersey?

PAUL CROUCH ON TOUR FOR ANTI-IMPERIAL LEAGUE

Served Prison Term for Communist Agitation

By CARL HAESSLER.

CHICAGO, (FP.) Aug. 31.—The interesting career of Paul Crouch, journalist, former sergeant in the intelligence service of the U. S. army in Hawaii and peace-time political prisoner in the military "Rock o' Hell of Frisco Bay" became more vivid when he walked into the Federated Press Office. Slender and erect in his more than 6-foot height, with dark hair and friendly straightforward eyes, slow and gentle of speech, he looked anything but the bewhiskered firebrand of civil war and rapine imagined by the doddering courtmartial that sentenced him to 40 years at hard labor.

Organized Communist League.

His crime had been the organization of a league of Communist youth while stationed as a soldier in Hawaii. The ferocious goldbraid warriors would have ordered him shot if the articles of war had permitted. As it was, the war department at Washington, far from the infuriating effect of insular stimulants, cut 37 years off the sentence and Crouch served the rest, with the usual allowance for good conduct as a prisoner.

Crouch is a Carolina boy, born at the turn of the century. He joined the Young People's Socialist League at 15 and turned toward the radical side when the party split in 1919. Becoming telegraph editor of the Statesville (N. C.) Sentinel he quit because of the reactionary censorship and enlisted in the army in 1924, for the Hawaiian garrison, in search of literary material, knowing he could buy his way out after a year if he chose. At honolulu he was assigned to the journalism staff of the intelligence service and soon rose to sergeant. His task was to write publicity for the papers from an angle designed to popularize and justify the army and its ways.

In February 1925 he was arrested for his radical opinions and activity. He was soon on his way to a cell in Alcatraz military prison, the isle of bars and shadows lying just inside the Golden Gate in San Francisco bay. He put in 6 months at hard labor with pick and shovel and the remainder of his time in the prison tailor shop.

During his stay there over a score of prisoners became converted to the radical cause. On a ballot of 60 prisoners 37 voted for Communism and 23 against. Propaganda was carried on while at work, Sundays and during mealtime. On his release he received 64 pounds of mail that had been withheld by the prison censor.

Grouch is now touring the principal cities as a speaker for the All-American Anti-Imperialist League.

Cruiser for Williams Opposed by Coolidge

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 31.—President Coolidge is opposed to the proposal that the navy make a fast cruiser available to take Liet. Al Williams and his plane to Venice for the international air races, it was stated here today. A trans-Atlantic service is maintained, which is entirely adequate for any such move, it was said.

Hope to Find Redfern, Missing Flier in South Venezuela, Is Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31. — Hope that Paul Redfern, missing Georgia to Brazil flyer, may be found in the barren stretches south of Venezuela was held out today in a dispatch to the State Department from Willie C. Cook, American minister to Venezuela.

Cook reported that a mail carrier and several inhabitants of the village of Nacareito had seen a plane about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon over the Orinocco delta. It was flying southeast toward Boca Grande. An hour before the plane was sighted a heavy storm broke over the Orinocco region.

All governmental agencies in Venezuela are endeavoring to find further trace of Redfern, Cook said. Few people live in the region where the plane was sighted.

BY the way, now that Henry Ford has apologized to the Hebrews for his campaign of slander against them, and incidentally paid for the luxury of his belligerency, the Irish world, a semi-catholic, semi-Irish-Republican weekly in New York is taking up the fight. Using as an ercuse a movie which is said to slander the Irish people, the Irish World has embarked on a crusade against the Jews which surpasses in vulgarity and venom the worst that the agents of the Black Hundred of the Czars did in their hey day. Incidentally the editor of the Irish World (a fellow by the name of Jones) wrote a vicious article against Sacco and Vanzetti, branding them as murderers, anarchists and atheists.

WE hold no brief for plays on screen or stage derogatory to any people, particularly an oppressed people, and we know that one of the favorite weapons of the imperialists has been that of slander. The ruling classes of all countries have tried to laugh the Jews out of existence after they failed to crush them by other methods. The British represented the Irish as buffoons. Every other power used similar methods against their own subject people. This ridicule was designed to create the impression that the peoples against whom it was directed were not capable of governing themselves. It worked.

MOVING picture magnates are now capitalising the appetite for this kind of optic fare. The fact that many of them are Hebrews is no explanation of the matter. There are Irish film magnates and Irish film directors and Irish theatre owners just as responsible. And they are all willing to caricature and hold up to ridicule the mothers that bore them for profit. The Irish World is taking advantage of the profit-lust of moving picture barons and theatre owners to stage a cheap circulation stunt. It will not lay the blame squarely where it belongs, i.e., at the feet of the profit system. Where Henry Ford failed, it is not likely that the Irish World will succeed in a cheap, ignorant vulgar anti-Semitic campaign.

MUCH CASH SPENT ON GRAFT PROBES BRINGS NO RESULT

Failing on Higher-Ups Release Small Fry

An indignant counsel for the Citizens' Union rises to denounce Judge Kelby's report on milk graft in this city, characterizing it as worse than worthless, and declaring that it has only served to seriously hamper further investigation.

This report cost the city $60,000, according to estimates, and resulted in not a single indictment. Assistant District Attorney Pecora examined the evidence contained in ninety-six fat envelopes, submitted by Judge Kelby, and came out with the opinion that there was "nary" an indictment in the whole lot.

Mayor Walker turned the milk investigation over to Judge Kelby last August. At that time it was understood that at least one "higher up," a powerful figure, was involved in the milk scandal.

Somehow or other the investigation seemed to have languished, for on March of this year, the Citizens' Union protested at the delay, and would not be denied. They carried their complaint to Mayor Walker, who requested Kelby to make public "as much of the report as can be revealed without interfering with prosecutions."

The bulky report came to light, and then it was revealed that those against whom the alleged evidence had been obtained were the smallest of small-fry. The "powerful higher-up" who was to be "investigated," failed even to get a mention.

And now Leonard M. Wallstein, counsel for the Citizens' Union, wants something done about it.

"Not only has the report failed to develop evidence warranting prosecution," says Wallstein, "but for over a year it has obstructed effective prosecution, and seriously handicapped any real investigation that may now be begun."

Political opinion generally seems to take the stand that the investigation has been whitewashed. And the job cost $60,000.

Oppose Exploitation of Potomac.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 31 (FP).—Vigorous opposition to private exploitation of the power resources of the Potomac River is voiced by the District of Columbia—Maryland Federation of Labor's executive council. Representatives will appear before the federal power commission at Harpers Ferry when the Potomac Power Co. asks permission to build a series of power dams between that point and Washington.

The federation prefers the development of the Potomac as a national park, but insists that if power is to be generated from its falls, that the government do it so that electrical energy can be sold at minimum cost, as in Canada.

Plattsburg Camp Neara Time for Its Closing

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., Aug. 31.—The final phase in the training of 1,820 military students starts Monday, August 29th.

According to military officials this has been one of the most successful camps ever held at this barracks. Under the direction of regular and reserve officers commanded by Colonel John H. Hughes, the students were drilled in all the modern military science.

Jersey Federation Of Labor to Meet September 13-14th

(By IRVING FREEMAN)

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—The official call for the 49th annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor went out last month.

The conference will take place in Camden Sept. 13th and 14th. Delegates from all local unions and central labor bodies will send delegates. Many problems will come up for solution. In the past year the courts have made a farce of the anti-injunction law; every bill favorable to labor was killed by the politicians assembled in Trenton, Passaic strikers remain in the penitentiary; judges are willing to do the bidding of the bosses and there remains the job of organizing the bulk of the wage workers who are unorganized.

While many opposition candidates to the machine will come as delegates we can safely predict that instead of taking decisive action towards organizing the unorganized, organizing a strong Labor Party the convention will go on record as in the past. The progressives will not be powerful enough to overcome the poison virus of the Hague machine thru Jennings, Brandle, etc., coming from Jersey City.

These democratic labor politicians are in the trade union movement for their own ulterior purposes. There will be a change of the state secretary and a good Hagueite will be chosen. Until the progressives throw off their faith in the officialdom they will not succeed in breaking down the machine in control of the State Federation of Labor. No progressive resolutions will be passed and no militant action taken to overcome the menace of injunctions, organizing the unorganized and organizing a Labor Party for 1928.

Police Raid Impromptu Los Angeles Mourning For Sacco and Vanzetti

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 31.—A few minutes after the news of the fate of Sacco and Vanzetti was flashed over the wires, hundreds of people crowded the assembly hall of the Co-operative-Center Building to hold a memorial meeting, without any previous arrangements. Police and detectives swarmed about the hall, attempting to prevent the throngs from entering the building and threatening the speakers with arrest. Wm. Schneiderman, M. Karpiloff, and Frank Spector delivered memorial addresses after which the audience arose and sang the Workers' Funeral March with deep feeling.

The police tore down the black banner of mourning hung over the building. Hurried preparations were immediately made for a large memorial demonstration Thursday. The Workers Party hall is still being guarded, and the homes of Tom Lewis and other leading Communist of this city are being periodically raided and searched.

GREEK COMMUNIST DEPUTIES TRIED IN WHITE TERROR

Immunity Is Revoked; Red Daily Also Sued

ATHENS, Aug. 31.—As a result of the action of the reactionary Greek government in revoking the constitutional immunity of two of the Communist deputies at Athens, Rapanicolaou and Soulam are about to be tried for inciting to revolt.

Greek Unions Head Class War.

The charges grew out of the recent demonstrations of the militant tobacco workers in Saloniki in which one man was killed when the police attacked a gathering of over 30,000 workers, while 250 were arrested and thousands clubbed. The Greek government is determined at all costs to break the militant spirit of the Saloniki tobacco workers who, together with the powerful unions of the textile-workers, miners and seamen, have declared their willingness to fight side by side with the Greek Communist Party for the rights of the exploited Greek workers.

"The incitement to revolt" with which Papanicalaou and Soulam are charged consists in their speeches to the Saloniki workers who were demonstrating against the infamous Workers' Security Fund, a disablement insurance fund established by law, into which the workers have to pay 4 per cent of their wages. The tobacco bosses are trustees of the fund and collect the workers contributions. The two Communist deputies were demanding the right of the workers to elect their own representatives as trustees of the fund when they were arrested.

Daily Communist Paper Attacked

As a further step in the government's drive on the Greek workers the Greek Communist daily, "Rizopastis" is also being sued by the government on charges of inciting to revolt. "Rizopastis" has a wide circulation among the militant Greek workers and trade unionists.

The ten Communist deputies in the national parliament at Athens have protested vigorously against the proposed government increase of the consumption taxes to 235,000,000 drachmas. The government succeeded in introducing the measure, however.

The united protest that is arising against meeting of the Legion is evidenced by the declaration of the socialist confederation, which refuse to participate in the mass demonstrations against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti last week.

Sixty workers are still being held by police authorities for having participated in the monster Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations last week.

Our Letter from Australia

Fascist Confab.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.)—Fascisti organizations throughout Australia held a conference at Katoomba, a mountain resort near Sydney, during the second week in June. It was stated that the purpose of the conference was "to improve the position of Italians in Australia but without mixing in any way in local politics." The fascisti chiefs and their aim was "to promote peace and goodwill". Facism is steadily extending throughout Australia as most of the Italian immigrants are supporters of Mussolini. However, it has little influence outside the Italian people. Should it attempt to interfere with Australian politics, labor organizations are ready to deal drastically with the "Castor Oil experts". The Labor Volunteer Army promises the fascists a warm time should the occasion warrant.

Restrict Chinese Workers.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.)—Legislation has been introduced by the labor government in New South Wales which will in future prevent Chinese workers in furniture factories remaining on the premises after their day's work is ended. They must now leave the factories at 5 p. m. of an evening and not return before 8 a. m. in the morning. Neither can they work on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays. The Furniture Trades Union officials have been granted the right to enter the Chinese factories to see that the law is being observed.

A previous law observed Chinese to be on factory premises after they had officially finished their day's work. If they were caught at work they were all "working proprietors", and if they were not "partners", it was a case of "no savvy." European competitors against the Chinese alleged that the Chinese did not know night from day, neither did they observe week-ends and public holidays.

SYDNEY, Australia (FP.) — The New South Wales Labor Government has approved of plans for the establishment of a government-owned wireless service in the state of N. S. W. The scheme will co-ordinate and develop the wireless services now established in several government departments, provide a departemental system of communication in order to facilitate government work, and provide a system of relay stations for country areas and a central station. The scheme is distinct from the existing labor broadcasting station at the Sydney Trades Hall.

Bar Soviet Union Workers.

MELBOURNE, Australia (FP.) — Like Cal Coolidge's administration, the Australian federal government fears that if many Russian immigrants come to the country a "red" revolution might be started.

Since the raid on the Arcos premises in London, the Australian federal government has instituted special precautions against Russians entering Australia. All Russians arriving are subjected to special scrutiny and in some cases they are not allowed to land. Recently two Russians who came to Sydney from China were held up until the government was satisfied they had no bombs or "Bolshie" literature in their possession.

Repress Samoan Natives.

APIA, Samoan Islands, South Pacific Ocean (FP.). — Ever since the German portion of the Samoan Islands has been mandated to New Zealand, the natives have been more or less discontented because of the abolition of many of their tribal customs and usages. All efforts to get these restored have failed—the New Zealand government being determined to compel the natives to adopt the British forms of law and custom.

Recently, the native chiefs petitioned the government to be allowed to go to New Zealand so that they could state their case for a return to the old time customs, but the New Zealand government refused to issue them passports. The government's action evoked considerable sympathy with the natives and the government has now interpreted this sympathy as an attempt to ferment native discontent! The latest action of the government has been to threaten white inhabitants in Samoa with deportation if they do not cease extending their sympathy towards the natives.

THE MACHADO TERROR IN CUBA

By J. NEVAREZ.

The terror against the Cuban working class initiated by the government of General Machado, in the interest of the Wall Street sugar holders still continues and exacts its toll from the ranks of the workers, taking its best elements. Some months ago it became known to the world that the Machado executioners have deprived more than 200 trade-unionists of their lives. But very little as yet, is known of the grim deeds of Machado, in theoutside world, because of the censorship.

In spite of the disclosure of the Machado terror made by Chester W. Wright, erstwhile secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, the recent congress of that body failed to take any action or vent the slightest protest against the existing state of affairs in Cuba. On the contrary, the delegates sent by Machado to this so-called labor congress, and the cable greetings from this murderer of the Cuban workers were, ironically enough, seated and accepted, and the Machado agents were permitted to whitewash the Machado oligarchy. Thus it appears that this shameful procedure on the part of the Pan-A. F. of L. has given the Machado dictatorship encouragement to further their plans for crushing completely the Cuban labor movement.

The Machado government has announced the confiscation of 22,000 documents which refer to 680 active members of the Cuban working class and anti-imperialist movement, many of them Communists, out of which 118 have been indicted and will face a farcical trial, torture in the prisons and execution.

CHICAGO, (FP) Aug. 31.—As labor-displacing machinery invades the big printing establishments in the cities, skilled workers are being crowded out and the printing crafts unions face heavy burdens of unemployment. Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 is assessing its employed members 1 per cent of their earnings to aid the members unable to find work. Pressmen are also finding it difficult to discover enough jobs to go around.

BAR LEAGUE FROM HELPING LATIN-AMERICA

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (FPP).—Latin-American nations in general and Panama in particular have just been warned by the state department that their membership in the League of Nations will not save them from whatever hard bargains American imperialism wishes to drive with them. Panama has been trying to shield herself from a treaty which the state department is forcing on her by the claim that its provisions conflict with her duties to the league. In a formal announcement, department officials assert that the new Panama-American treaty does not impair Panama's rights.

Panama however is by no means so sure about it and the Panama Federation of Labor in particular is putting up a hot battle against ratification of the document, which in effect signs away what shreds of independence the little nation ever possessed. In the next war, apparently with Great Britain, for which American military, diplomatic and commercial interests are preparing, Panama must also embroil herself, the new treaty provides.

Makes A Slave State.

While franker than the treaty of 1903, which legalized Roosevelt's interference in the internal affairs of Colombia and the subsidizing of a successful revolution, this new document evidently aims at the same end, the vassalage of the little state through which the Panama Canal runs. Although Panama is forced to declare war against whatever enemies the United States may have, this is nothing new. Panama was dragged into the world war the day after the United States declared war on Germany. On that same day, April 7, 1917, Cuba was also dragged in. Both Panama and Cuba are thus virtually dependencies just as Hawaii and the Philippines.

But the status of Panama as a member of the League of Nations has ruffled Washington diplomats. The league has bothersome provisions concerning the declaration of war by its members which obviously would prevent Panama from being plunged into war just because the United States ordered it. That these provisions are valueless and of no effect insofar as Latin-American nations are concerned, is made plain by the state department's pronouncement, which is a warning to the League that it had better not butt in on the private deals which the United States forces on its quasi-independent vassals in the Caribbean.

The pronouncement is a hard blow at the League's prestige in Latin-America and is official notice to the selves that the League can save them selves that the leageu can save them from the colossus of the North.

The Herald-Tribune's Campaign of Lies

The principal Coolidge organ of New York, the Herald-Tribune, has adopted a policy of deliberate mendacity against the left wing labor and Communist movement. For this purpose it employs certain low poltroons and debased prostitutes who do not even bother to obtain the slightest degree of information for their fantastic tales.

An example of how writers for the reptile press may fill columns of space with plain lies occurred on Wednesday, August 31, when the Herald-Tribune published a romantic tale to the effect that the Communists were holding a secret convention somewhere in Westchester county for the purpose of drawing up "plans for a Soviet revolution in the United States." The story is further adorned with the declaration that the actual place of meeting is "known only to delegates and department of justice men operating as active members of the Workers Party."

Of course it is ridiculous to assume that the publishers and editors of this reptile sheet will admit that the man who wrote the tale is a plain liar who had not a scintilla of evidence upon which to base it. The story was written only in an effort to incite the blood-hounds of the various suppressive agencies of the state and national governments against the legal and open convention of the Workers (Communist) Party now being held in this city.

Our plans for revolution are public property—open to all. We disdain to conceal our views and the full reports and proceedings of our convention will be published openly in the columns of The DAILY WORKER and other Party papers. Such reports are also available for any of the capitalist papers who care honestly to report the facts, instead of resorting, as did the Herald-Tribune, to palpable lies concocted out of the putrid brain of some mental pervert.

Judge Panken Flattered by Republicans.

Municipal Court Justice Jacob Panken, elected ten years ago on the socialist ticket, has proved such a loyal servant of the capitalist class that the republican party, thru Congressman Nathan D. Pearlman, arch-reactionary and satellite of the Wall Street-Mellon-Coolidge administration, has offered him the republican nomination.

If Panken were a representative of the working class he would never have been offered such a nomination. A true representative of the working class would consider such an offer an insult, would deeply resent it and indulge in the most severe self-criticism to learn why the enemy class favors him. But, instead of recognizing the fact that the offer is an indictment of his record and evidence of his treachery to the working class, he replies to the republican congressman, Pearlman, in the following favoring and servile manner:

> "While I appreciate the fact that your offer is a great compliment to me and an endorsement of my services on the bench by you personally and the republican organization of the district, I must nevertheless decline."

He explains that his convictions as a socialist and the policy of the socialist party does not permit him to accept the republican nomination.

This offer of a republican nomination to the socialist, Panken, symbolizes the complete identity of the socialist leaders with the capitalist class. It is the logical, inevitable result of the anti-labor policy followed by the socialist leaders.

In their fight against the left wing and the rank and file of the labor movement the socialists have become the lackeys of the corrupt labor bureaucracy that in New York is allied with Tammany Hall. Tammany and the republican machine divide the jobs of judicial lackeys of capitalism among themselves without entering into contests at the polls, in order to create the illusion that judges are impartial and not bound to render special favors to their political bosses.

The endorsement of Panken by the republicans proves that the exploiters of labor in New York consider this so-called socialist a safe and sane servant of their class interests.

Tammany and the republican machine may refrain from putting up a candidate against Panken, the capitalist judge, but he will nevertheless be challenged at the polls by a real representative of the working class under the banner of the Workers (Communist) Party.

"The Common Enemy—American Imperialism"

In its telegram of greetings to the Fifth National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party the Communist Party of Mexico concludes with the salutation: "Yours for the overthrow of the common enemy—American imperialism."

Therein is symbolized the whole revolutionary struggle on the part of the Latin-American republics, the allies of the working class of the United States. The Southern republics into which Wall Street is investing more and more of its wealth plundered from the workers it exploits are victims of the most brutal, relentless and sinister despotism the world has ever seen—Dollar Imperialism.

As against the imperialist conspiracy called the Pan-American union and its lieutenants in the Pan-American labor organization, the workers of Latin-America must unite with the workers of the United States into powerful anti-imperialist organizations that will wage a determined fight against the minions of Wall Street. Under the coordinating revolutionary leadership of the Communist International the two Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico will eventually lead the exploited masses of both countries to the overthrow of the power of American imperialism and the establishment of the rule of the workers and farmers over both countries.

Labor Leaders Silent on 10-Hour Day Offensive

By V. Q.

A MONTH ago, articles in the DAILY WORKER exposed the ten hour day drive planned by the railway companies, as set forth in the report of the American Railway Executives, under the guise of "stabilization of employment." The writer pointed out then that the Machinists Journal, while shouting "nothing doing," informed the membership that there was no danger of the plan going into effect, as far as the union men were concerned. It pretended ignorance as to the attitude of President Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, whose name was signed to the report, and who was chairman of the committee which prepared the report. The writer proved by reference to an interview recorded in "Labor" of July 2nd, that Willard defended the report. But the Machinists Journal, which appeared fully a week after this interview denied knowledge as to Willard's attitude.

Willard Like the Rest.

WILLARD'S signing the report showed that he used the B. & O. Plan to fool the workers into increasing production, when the road had a deficit. It showed that the plan of union-management cooperation or (worker-employer cooperation) was all bunk. The officials of the International Association of Machinists will not admit this, so they are silent on Willard.

If they didn't know Willard's attitude for the July issue of their Journal, they could have found out in a month's time. A month passed. The August issue is out. It continues to preach class collaboration, with articles on the benefits in apprentice training on the B. & O., and on Nash's fake "Golden Rule" plan in the clothing industry. But not another word on the threat of the ten hour day. Still no word as to Willard's attitude.

Do They Want More Proof?

"RAILWAY AGE," the organ representing the railway company executives, in its issue of July 9th, boasts of the fact that executives friendly to labor made the report. It says: "Some branches of organized labor are apparently suspicious of the suggestion for an elastic working day recently made by a special committee of the Association of Railway Executives. It is significant, however, that some executives who have the confidence of organized labor to an unusual degree, were included among those who made the report." Willard has not denied this.

THE interview with Labor proves he defended the report. He played the role of trying to convince the labor movement that the plan was not harmful to labor. He was used by the railway executives to sugar-coat the pill. That is his role in the drive for the ten hour day. If Willard did not endorse the report, he had a month to say so. He knew that the Machinist Journal claimed ignorance as to his stand. He knew that "Railway Age" said that he with others made the report. He has had plenty of time to explain himself. The Machinists Journal had plenty of time to find out. But their claim of ignorance is pretense. They know that Willard was for the report, and they fear to come out with it.

The Shop Craft Unions Silent,

NOT only is the Machinists Journal silent, but the other unions in the shop-crafts on the railroads are similarly silent. All are tied up with the B. & O. Plan of union-management cooperation.

If they can get away with their campaign of silence, the operators will have plenty of time to prepare the ground for their ten hour day drive. They will initiate a campaign of publicity, and more important, will take steps in the shops to insure the "successful" introduction of the ten hour day. Silence by the unions aids the companies in their plan.

The Ten-Hour Day Must Be Fought.

WHAT is needed is to arouse the labor movement as to the reality of the danger. What is need is to strengthen the resistance of the unions involved, through amalgamation. What is needed is an immediate joint campaign of the unions involved for the defense of the 8 hour day. But the shop crafts unions are asleep. Nothing of this is done. On the contrary, the union leaders go farther along on the road of class collaboration. They attack those of their members who sound the call to arms —who demand preparation for a war against the introduction of the ten hour day. The union leaders weaken the organizations, ideologically and organizationally, rendering them impotent, before the companies' onslaught.

Nothing but a well prepared campaign for struggle will defeat the ten hour day. Communist must take the lead. Progressives must fight. The ten hour day must be defeated.

Letters From Our Readers

Hapgood Disagrees With Gold.

Editor, Daily Worker:

I was much surprised and incensed at the vindictive, narrow, and untrue statement of Mike Gold in The DAILY WOSKER for August 30th that "Mary Donovan, an obscure spiteful female with a great lust for publicity was responsible" for the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti not coming to New York for the demonstration Monday. In the first place, it was not Mary Donovan at all, but circumstances over which she had no control such as the necessity of getting permits from four states to transport ashes, the unwillingness of the committee to take the risk of transporting them illegally because of the likelihood of their being taken and destroyed by the capitalist police, and finally Miss Vanzetti's illness and desire not to have the ashes go without her that made it impossible to bring the ashes last Monday.

In the second place, such adjectives used in connection with a person like Mary Donovan, who has given her entire time and strength without pay to the Sacco-Vanzetti cause, who lost her job as state factory inspector because of her activities in the case, and who on the very day that Mike Gold penned his spiteful lines was sentenced to a year in prison on framed-up charges by representatives of the same group who murdered Sacco and Vanzetti, are absolutely inexcusable. I know Mary Donovan well because we have worked together and fought the police together and I admire her courage and her devotion to the cause for which she fights so ardently. I have never seen anyone who was less interested in personal publicity or glorythan she is.

While, I would be the last person in the world to deny anyone the right to criticise policies for the sake of analyzing mistakes and thereby improving tactics, and while I feel that there are certain policies and errors for which the Boston Committee can well be criticized, still I must denounce such untrue and vindictive criticism as that indulged in by Mike Gold. Because it is so obviously untrue and unfair it convinces no one, alienates many, and helps to make impossible any attempt at a united front against capitalism which many of us are working for.—Powers Hapgood, New York, Aug. 31, 1927.

KARLIN DISOBEYS ORDERS.

A significant fact about the Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting in Union Square Tuesday was that William Karlin, former socialist assemblyman, spoke from the central platform in defiance of August Claessens, secretary of the local socialist party.

As the socialists attempted to sabotage the protest strike on the day our comrades were killed, so they tried to keep workers from a memorial meeting even tho it seemed certain that Sacco and Vanzetti's ashes would be brought there.

Capitalist Press Applauds Claessens.

All of the capitalist papers, anxious to gloat over any division in the ranks of labor, anxious to have the masses soon forget martyrs of the class struggle, were informed by Mr. Claessens that the socialist party would not pay last respects to the ashes of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Claessens also charged that the Memorial Committee had not been authorized to announce that William Karlin would act as a member of Mrs. Sacco's guard of honor and later speak at the Union Square meeting.

The announcement of William Pickens, secretary of the Society for the Advancement of Colored People, that he "thought a representative of the socialist party" would speak was greeted with sneers from capitalist paper reporters on the porch of the nearby park house. They had seen Claessens!

Police Surprised.

But when Karlin stepped to the front of the platform and, standing beside William W. Weinstone, secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, began to speak, the reporters and police officials on the porch leaned forward in amazement.

The Industrial Squad head, John Broderick, could not believe his eyes at first, and then muttered, "Well, well." A uniformed police lieutenant said, "I did not expect this after the way the socialists kicked Gold off the platform at the other meeting."

"Karlin's only speaking as an individual, he was not authorized to by the socialists," Edward Levinson, of the "New Leader" explained. Then he admitted Karlin told him early in the afternoon that he would speak.

Karlin, however, was not just speaking "as an individual." He represents a large element in the socialist party who are dissatisfied with the American Federation of Labor leader-style inertia of the present bosses of a once significant party.

He represents a seething rebellion against the sabotaging tactics which all but broke the final Sacco-Vanzetti protest strike and which—in the person of certain members of the Boston committee — prevented Mrs. Sacco from bringing the ashes of her martyred husband to Union Square.

The action of three Brooklyn furriers' locals and many cloak and suit shops, heretofore ruled by socialists, in defying their leaders by striking Aug. 22d, are other evidences of this dissatisfaction.

Class-conscious workers do not long tolerate those who betray them, whether the Judas is a Claessens or a Green.

—Walter Snow, New York.

Violence Brings Violence.

Dear Comrade:

Sacco and Vanzetti were sentenced to die before their trial by Governor Fuller on the floor of congress and by Judge Thayer on the golf links and elsewhere. The evidence is plain. The governor's "respectable" advisory board did not deny it.

The legal murder gang of capitalism has declared a war of violence against the workers. They have beaten, arrested and fined peaceful protesters against this violence. They have maltreated all who dared to protest. The ruthless plutocrats have not learned that violence brings violence.

A capitalist victim.

Poor Michigan Farmers and Workers Send Aid.

Enclosed, please find the money order for $101.30 which is the net profits from two entertainments held under the auspices of the Community Club of Dukes Siding, Mich., for the benefit of our paper The DAILY WORKER.

In return we do not ask nothing else but that you continue your great work in the fight against the capitalist class.

Sorry we cannot send more just now because there are in this community less than twenty poor farmers and about ten wage workers. But if in future you want our help just give your order and let us do the rest.

Yours for the working class revolutionary movement. Vaino Pelto.

Knew Fighting Daily at Once.

Dear Comrade:

Just the other day I got hold of a Daily Worker by accident and was instantly interested in it. So I've decided to send in $2.00 for a three months subscription, for that's the best I can do just at this time.

(Mrs.) Geo. Simko, Masury, O.

Editor, Daily Worker:

We can already see some of the many lessons which the Sacco and Vanzetti case will teach. It has brot the international workers together for one cause. It has shown us our potential strength. The judges, educators and bosses are class conscious, they stand united against the workers. Let us learn from them and prepare for the fight. Our cry should be: Sacco and Vanzetti have not died in vain!—Susan H. Calkins, Deming, New Mexico.

Editor, Daily Worker:

The yellow press in the United States is devoting yards of space to telling the workers in the industrial centers that the farmers are profiteers. In the farming sections they are devoting an equal amount of space to telling the farmers that it is the workers in the industrial centers who are the profiteers. The money interests have been preaching for forty years that the farmers' interests and the workers' are not the same. But the fact is that their interests are exactly the same.—N. G. Barnhouse, Comertown, Mont.

DELEGATES TO CONGRESS OF INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE ALLIANCE REPORT ON SITUATION

By ESKEL RONN, and MATTI TENHUNEN.

MOSKOW, August 31.—At the Fifth Co-operative Congress of the Co-operative League of America, we were elected as delegates to the Congress of the International Co-operative Alliance to be held in Stockholm.

Study Soviet Union's Co-op.

Desiring to get better acquainted with the co-operators in other countries and to learn from their experiences, we planned to visit various countries before the congress. So we decided to visit the Swedish co-operatives and the Finnish co-operatives first, for we knew that they had developed the co-operatives to a high degree. Then we wanted to visit Soviet Russia, and thus get a picture of the two extremes so far as perfection of organization, efficiency of management, etc. was concerned.

Highly Developed.

In Sweden and Finland we were not disappointed for we found the highly developed organizations that we expected. For one who comes from America and who has read the reports that fill the newspapers about the conditions in Soviet Russia, who comes prepared to see chaos and disorder, the actual conditions are a surprise, very true to us they were a pleasant surprise.

Coming from American conditions one cannot of course help but see the differences in the form of architecture, the styles of clothing, but what especially attracted our attention was the general appearance of the people. There was not that display of the extreme rich and the extreme poor that is so prvalent in our country. There seemed to be a standard of life to which all were subjected. We found contented happy people, and the youth one immediately noticed. Their bouyance and healthful appearance must be due to the work that is being done to preserve the welfare of the children and young workers.

U. S. S. R. Workers Best Off.

We have visited hundreds of factories in America and must say that the working conditions, and the cleanliness we found in Soviet Russia is above the average American factory. This no doubt is due to the fact that all the workers in the industries are organized, having their union office connected with each large factory. Eight-hour work-day, with a vacation of two to four weeks at full pay, full pay while sick, are something the American worker does not even dare to dream of.

Comparing the co-operative stores, factories and restaurants of Soviet Russia with the hundreds of co-operatives and private similar institutions we have seen in America, we must confess that they are equal to these. Some of the stores were the finest we have ever seen. We found the shelves stocked with merchandise, of all descriptions, excellently displayed, clean and the personnel appeared to be courteous and efficient. We visited the large city stores, the small town stores, and the peasants' stores, and in all we failed to find the chaos and disorder, which we had expected. The fact that they are conducting these stores at a gross profit of 12 per cent and expenses of from 8 to 9 per cent already prove conclusively that there must be order and system. In America which is highly developed the private stores are charging 18 to 20 per cent with an expense of from 15 to 18 per cent. And one must not lose sight of the fact that the Russian co-operators only work 8 hours a day compared to the 10 hours or more of the American store clerk.

Good Reading Room.

To find the reasons for the spirit that prevails among the workers you will find the answer by looking over the club rooms attached to every factory and co-operative store. General meeting places are provided, with special reading rooms, co-operative corners for co-operative propaganda, trade union corners, hygenic corners, and Lenin corners where the government brings its messages of the development of the country and the various tasks to be performed before the workers. The workers are taught to stick together. Their united problems they jointly discuss. To talk organization they do not have to go around sneaking to the homes of their fellow workers. Is it a wonder that the workers are so solidly behind the trade unions, the co-operatives and the state?

To really understand the tremendousness of the development of the co-operative movement in Soviet Russia, one cannot do it by simply reading their reports and figures, but one must see the organization in action, to feel the throbbing pulse of this gigantic movement. Eleven million heads of families organized in one movement, doing 48 per cent of the business of the entire country, that's what these Soviet Russian co-operators have done. Such a development in a few years is only possible because their movement is highly centralized through district unions into the Centrosoyus, and the close co-operation that exists between the co-operative movement, the trade unions and the workers state. It is absolutely impossible for any co-operative movement in a capitalistic state to make such strides forward.

The development of the country we feel assured will progress still faster if the Soviet Russian workers are allowed to pursue their work in peace. The Russian worker realizes this for he sees the progress that has been made in the past few years, and so it is to be understood why everywhere the workers confronted us with the plea: "Keep your government from attacking us!" The earnestness of their plea brought to us what an enormous task the co-operators and the workers in general have to prevent their imperialist government from making war on the workers of Soviet Russia. It is the duty of co-operators to arouse the workers in all countries so that they will stop the onslaught that threatens Soviet Russia today!

DRAMA

"Adam the Creator" by the Capeks to be Seen Here

A report from Prague says that New York will see the new play of the brothers Capek, "Adam the Creator," some time during the coming theatrical season. "Adam the Creator" deals with humanity, as did the two plays which made the brothers Capek famous, with a type picked out here and there to illustrate the authors' philosophy. In its symbolism and type psychology the play resembles the plays of the Robots and insects. The motivating idea behind this latest of Capek products is the creation of a new world by Adam.

Arthur Hopkins is co-author with George Manker Watters of "Burlesque," a play treating that phase of the show business, and which is scheduled to open at the Plymouth theatre tonight. Mr. Hopkins is both producer and director of the new production.

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen has been engaged by Joseph Santley for "Just Fancy," in which Mr. Stanley is to make his debut as an actor-producer late in September. This will be Mrs. Whiffen's first appearance in musical comedy, although this "grand old lady of the stage" has been before the public since 1865, when she made her debut in a London pantomime. Her most recent appearance was as Mrs. Mossop in "Trelawny of the Wells." Mrs. Whiffen, is eighty-two years of age.

Mae West is ready to do it again. The author and star of "Sex" has written another called "The Wicked Age," which she is planning to show on Broadway. The reformers who closed up "Sex" are already sniffing.

Edwin Justus Mayer, whose bright and merry play, "The Firebrand" played here last season, has completed his second play. It is a comedy-drama, and is titled "Children of Darkness."

MARTHA MALLIS

Will sing the title role in the special performance of "Carmen" which will be given for the benefit of the Joint Defense Committee at Starlight Park, Saturday Night.

H PGOOD, KRASKE AND DOS PASSOS INED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—Powers Hap-ood, George Kraska, and John Dos Passos have been fined ten dollars ach in the municipal court for picket-ng the State House. The charge gainst them is loitering and saunter-ng. All three appealed.

Army Man Goes Free.

Paxton Hibben, formerly in the diplomatic service, and now a captain in the United States Army Reserve, was acquitted altho he admitted having been among the pickets. Judge Sullivan, before whom the cases were tried, said that he believed Hibben had not heard the police order to move along altho the officers on duty declared that they had warned each of the picketers individually.

"I am not guilty of sauntering or loitering," Hangood said in his statement. "According to Funk and Wagnalls' definition of these words, sauntering means 'an idle stroll' and loitering means 'idling' or 'lingering idly by the way.' I was certainly not idling or wasting time, nor was I resting.

"On the contrary, I was engaged in the serious business of trying to help save human life. I was trying to persuade governor Fuller to prevent the execution of my comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, both of whom were entirely innocent of the crime of banditry with which they were charged. They were trying to build a better and more just social system and have now been legally murdered, crucified for opposing injustice in the same way that many of the greatest men in history have been murdered and crucified.

Brands Investigation.

"I was not loitering but was conveying to Governor Fuller a message, asking him why, if his conscience was clear, he had held the investigation in secret behind closed doors, far from the public eye, where the brutal character of the frame-up could not be exposed. This fact made me feel that the governor's conscience could not be clear.

"If trying to save life is 'sauntering and loitering,' then I am guilty of the charge. If trying to persuade Governor Fuller to prevent murder is not 'sauntering and loitering' then I am not guilty even tho Governor Fuller did not heed my persuasion and allowed two innocent men to die."

Kraska Denies Charge.

Kraska spoke as follows:

"I deny that I was sauntering and loitering. Together with other American citizens I walked on the sidewalk in front of the State House on Saturday morning, Aug. 20, for a serious and definite purpose. I consider that it is my duty to protest against any attempt to send workers to death upon such inconsistent evidence as was brought out by the state against Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Remembering my American history, from grammar school, (for I cannot claim any more schooling than that, owing to the economic conditions which forced me to work at the age of fourteen) that William Lloyd Garrison was dragged thru the streets of Boston for views contrary to the then existing powers I thought how he is today accepted as heroic, and statues are erected to his honor in this city. With that lesson in mind I attempted to persuade peacefully the present authorities against shamefully carrying out the disgraceful murder of these two workers.

"I walked with my other comrades (some of whom are here with me) solemnly and without interfering with anyone whatsoever, carrying a card with the inscription: 'Try it on' (referring to the cap which was identified as Sacco's but never tried on him) as one of my expressions to prevent a judicial murder, which has since been carried out."

Daily Worker Struggle to Save Sacco, Vanzetti Lauded by Newark ILD

By LEO KLING

(Worker Correspondent).

At an enthusiastic meeting held at the Hungarian Workers Home in Newark last week, the International Labor Defense branch of that city made a collection of $17.00 for The DAILY WORKER.

Finding the need very great, the comrades dug into their pockets and raised the sum to $20.05. They were not satisfied. They began to investigate the condition of their treasury. They thereupon took the balance of the money they had and donated the full amount of $35.05 to The DAILY WORKER.

The comrades of Newark gave their support to The DAILY WORKER because of its splendid fight for class war prisoners, particularly of its fight for Sacco and Vanzetti. The entire discussion which was full of life and enthusiasm lasted for three-quarters of an hour.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 31.—The workers of Newark are on the job to defend and aid the DAILY WORKER despite the efforts of the master class to put it out of business. Within the last two weeks $100 was collected from individuals. Friend Barnett donated $50. The local branch of the I. L. D. after giving Leo Kling a fine reception responded to his appeal and collected $35.05 for the Daily.

The Workers Party of Newark also voted $25 at its regular meeting. Fraternal organizations have also done their bit. The comrades collecting donations with books are also meeting with good response.

MASS MEMORIAL IN CHICAGO FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 31. — The Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting, which has been held up until now grant a permit or to allow hall owners to rent meeting places, is now scheduled for Saturday, at 8 p. m. at the Coliseum, the largest hall in Chicago, following urgent requests made by labor organizations and prominent persons.

Prominent representatives of labor organizations will address the meeting. Ralph Chaplin, W. H. Holly and Rev. Norman E. Barr are among those who will speak at the memorial gathering, which is being held under the auspices of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Conference of Chicago.

The Conference has forwarded a request to Boston to have the death masks of the labor martyrs sent to Chicago for the Saturday memorial.

Rabbi Buchler Freed of Charge of Perjury

Dr. Samuel Buchler, rabbi, lawyer, former deputy attorney-general of New York State, and former Jewish Chaplain in Sing Sing Prison, who was tried before Federal Judge Harry B. Anderson and jury in federal court on a charge of perjury yesterday, was found not guilty.

The rabbi was accused of perjury in a case involving the alleged misuse of funds belonging to a Jewish relief organization.

Felicani Attack Upon I. L. D. Made With Help of the Socialist Leaders

The attack on the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Labor Defense given to the capitalist press Tuesday night by Aldino Felicani, treasurer of the Boston Defense Committee, was issued with the active co-operation of the socialist party leaders in the office of the New Leader, 7 East 15th St., it was stated today.

The local newspapers were requested to send reporters to the New Leader office to obtain a statement. When they arrived they found Felicani together with Edward Levinson, assistant editor of the New Leader waiting to receive them, it was said.

When the red-baiting statements were being given out, August Claessens, secretary of the local socialist organization, and one of those who kicked Ben Gold manager of the Furriers Union during a recent Union Square meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti entered. With a smile from ear to ear Claessens handed Felicani a check of $108 which he said "was for the defense work," according to persons in close touch with the situation.

Last week Levinson promised the capitalist reporters an "expose of the Communists."

Believe Redfern Plane Lost in Brazil Jungle

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 31.—Further evidence that Paul Redfern, missing Brunswick-to-Brazil flyer, is somewhere in the northern jungles of South America was received in Brunswick by the flight committee today in the form of a report from the government that a Norwegian ship arriving at Kingston, Jamaica, had seen the plane off the Venezuelan coast.

This added confirmation to previous reports that the monoplane Port of Brunswick had been sighted Saturday afternoon flying southward over the delta of the Orinoco River in Venezuela.

Maternity Law Helped Mothers and Children

WASHINGTON, (FP.) Aug. 31.—Nearly a million babies and 180,000 mothers were reached last year through the various types of work conducted under the maternity act, the children's bureau of the labor department reports. Every state but three co-operated, contributing sums equal to that paid out of the federal treasury.

In the year ending June 30, 15,000 child health conferences were held under the direction of physicians and 6,500 conferences were conducted by nurses where no physician was available.

The maternity law, enacted in 1921 for a five year period, was extended by the last congress for two years after reactionaries had been promised that it would die then. Although the law has saved thousands of babies' lives and improved the health of tens of thousands, the standpatters have warred inceassantly on it and on the children's bureau for backing the law.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 31.—The State Parole Board in its present form has been abolished so it was announced today at the office of Governor Alfred Smith.

In its place there will be a new board consisting of Dr. Raymond Kieb, Commissioner of Correction, or a representative—the warden or superintendent of the institution in which the prisoner to be paroled is confined, and a third member to be named by the commissioner.

MINE WORKERS TO ATTEND FOREIGN BORN CONFERENCE

Plan Fight on Davis at Harrisburg

Representatives from trade unions including a large number of United Mine Workers locals, fraternal societies, and local councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers will gather in conference on September 4 and 5, at Harrisburgh, Pa., at the Moose Temple, to consider effective means of aiding in the nation-wide opposition now being organized against the anti-alien measures pending in congress, which it is feared will be passed by the coming congressional session.

Delegates representing approximately 400,000 workers from the State of Pennsylvania, mostly of foreign birth, have been spurred to fervent activity in the work of organizing the foreign born workers against the anti-alien sentiment eminating from Washington, by the recent declaration of Albert Johnson, Chairman of the Immig[illegible]ttee in Congress and [illegible] Davis.

This Penn[illegible] is the first [illegible] ferences h[illegible] tional Off[illegible] for the [illegible] Workers, [illegible] will culm[illegible] national [illegible] ture.

These co[illegible] called forth [illegible] declarations of [illegible] and Secretary of [illegible] anti-alien sentiments o[illegible]smar Johnson and Secretary Davis represent a definite attitude in regard to the foreign born residents of America entertained by powerful forces in American industrial life that have found their echo in the halls of congress in the form of introduction of definite bills proposing severe restrictive laws against the foreign elements.

Registration and Finger-Printing.

Congressman Holliday of Illinois, Congressman Brand of Georgia, Congressman Aswell of Louisiana have presented bills to congress calling for registration and finger-printing and other petty impositions on foreigners providing also for very severe punishment such as deportation, heavy fines, and incarceration for the least non-compliance.

The enactment into laws of these bills has heretofore been prevented by the activities of the National Council for the Protection of Foregin Born Workers and the opposition that they have aroused among the trade unions and liberal circles throughout America. Very many prominent men have expressed their resentments against these proposals. The American labor [illegible]vement has condemned these bills [illegible] blow aimed at the labor movement itself. This opposition has pre[illegible] the passing of the bills but has [illegible]eeded in dissuading the pro[illegible] persisting.

[illegible]n Demonstrations.

[illegible] account of the many de[illegible]ations that have taken place in [illegible] Sacco-Vanzetti case the 'dark [illegible]es of American life have seized [illegible]on these demonstrations as evidence of anti-Americanism on the part of the foreign elements and are trying to develop the theory that the foreign elements are a menace to America and should be curbed. Secretary of Labor Davis has publicly stated that his department is enlisting the aid of employers in checking up on foreigners. This subtle manner of implying that the foreigners require checking up, is insidious in its effect and presages a general propaganda intended to sway the country into the feeling that the passing of the anti-alien measures in congress is a necessity.

Two-Day Session.

The Pennsylvania State Conference will take place September 4-5. It will be addressed by Nina Samorodin Secretary of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, Attorney, Peter P. Jurachak; Dr. R. W. Hogue; Rev. David Dunn; Robert Rosenberg; Joseph Washington; Domenick Giolett, Jeannette D. Pearl, field organizer of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, and Anthony Ramuglia, field secretary of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

WORKERS SCHOOL BEGINS FIFTH YEAR OCTOBER 10; MANY NEW COURSES TO BE ADDED, DIRECTOR SAYS

The Workers School will open its fifth school year on October 10. From present indications, the coming year should be the most successful in the history of the school. Plans have been laid for a more extensive curriculum than ever before; many leading figures in the American labor movement have been added to its faculty. The headquarters of the school are being repaired while many hundreds of new volumes have been added to the library.

The Workers School expects the steady increase in registration of the past few years to continue. In 1924-25 the Workers School consisted of some 5 or 6 classes with a registration of 60. Last year the registration for the fall term alone was 1,200 distributed over 50 classes. Three years ago all sessions were held in one small room; now the quarters consist of 9 large rooms. Because of its rapid expansion, however, the Workers School is already laying plans for a new and larger building which will more adequately meet its growing needs.

Within the next two weeks the new catalog of the Workers School will be out. This will give detailed information as to the course, the instructors, the evening and hour of each course, the regulation regarding fees, the training courses, etc. Anyone wishing to secure a catalog should write to Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers School, 108 East 14th St., N. Y. C.

Registration beings on September 26 and ends on October 10. Fall classes in English begin on Monday, October 10. Most other courses for the fall term commence the week of October 17. Sessions will last from 6.45 to 8 p. m., from 8 to 9.15 p. m. and from 9.15 to 10.30 p. m.

The fee for each course of 12 sessions is $3.50. The charge for English courses, twice a week, 24 sessions a term is $6. Special fees will be charged for courses consisting of less than 12 sessions.

HAPGOOD, KRASKE AND DOS PASSOS FINED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—Powers Hapgood, George Kraska, and John Dos Passos have been fined ten dollars each in the municipal court for picketing the State House. The charge against them is loitering and sauntering. All three appealed.

Army Man Goes Free.

Paxton Hibben, formerly in the diplomatic service, and now a captain in the United States Army Reserve, was acquitted altho he admitted having been among the pickets. Judge Sullivan, before whom the cases were tried, said that he believed Hibben had not heard the police order to move along altho the officers on duty declared that they had warned each of the picketers individually.

"I am not guilty of sauntering or loitering," Hapgood said in his statement. "According to Funk and Wagnalls' definition of these words, sauntering means 'an idle stroll' and loitering means 'idling' or 'lingering idly by the way.' I was certainly not idling or wasting time, nor was I resting.

"On the contrary, I was engaged in the serious business of trying to help save human life. I was trying to persuade governor Fuller to prevent the execution of my comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, both of whom were entirely innocent of the crime of banditry with which they were charged. They were trying to build a better and more just social system and have now been legally murdered, crucified for opposing injustice in the same way that many of the greatest men in history have been murdered and crucified.

Brands Investigation.

"I was not loitering but was conveying to Governor Fuller a message, asking him why, if his conscience was clear, he had held the investigation in secret behind closed doors, far from the public eye, where the brutal character of the frame-up could not be exposed. This fact made me feel that the governor's conscience could not be clear.

"If trying to save life is 'sauntering and loitering,' then I am guilty of the charge. If trying to persuade Governor Fuller to prevent murder is not 'sauntering and loitering' then I am not guilty even tho Governor Fuller did not heed my persuasion and allowed two innocent men to die."

Kraska Denies Charge.

Kraska spoke as follows:

"I deny that I was sauntering and loitering. Together with other American citizens I walked on the sidewalk in front of the State House on Saturday morning, Aug. 20, for a serious and definite purpose. I consider that it is my duty to protest against any attempt to send workers to death upon such inconsistent evidence as was brought out by the state against Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Remembering my American history, from grammar school, (for I cannot claim any more schooling than that, owing to the economic conditions which forced me to work at the age of fourteen) that William Lloyd Garrison was dragged thru the streets of Boston for views contrary to the then existing powers I thought how he is today accepted as heroic, and statues are erected to his honor in this city. With that lesson in mind I attempted to persuade peacefully the present authorities against shamefully carrying out the disgraceful murder of these two workers.

"I walked with my other comrades (some of whom are here with me) solemnly and without interfering with anyone whatsoever, carrying a card with the inscription: 'Try it on' (referring to the cap which was identified as Sacco's but never tried on him) as one of my expressions to prevent a judicial murder, which has since been carried out."

Daily Worker Struggle to Save Sacco, Vanzetti Lauded by Newark ILD

By LEO KLING
(Worker Correspondent).

At an enthusiastic meeting held at the Hungarian Workers Home in Newark last week, the International Labor Defense branch of that city made a collection of $17.00 for The DAILY WORKER.

Finding the need very great, the comrades dug into their pockets and raised the sum to $20.05. They were not satisfied. They began to investigate the condition of their treasury. They thereupon took the balance of the money they had and donated the full amount of $35.05 to The DAILY WORKER.

The comrades of Newark gave their support to The DAILY WORKER because of its splendid fight for class war prisoners, particularly of its fight for Sacco and Vanzetti. The entire discussion which was full of life and enthusiasm lasted for three-quarters of an hour.

NEWARK N. J., Aug. 31.—The workers of Newark are on the job to defend and aid the DAILY WORKER despite the efforts of the master class to put it out of business. Within the last two weeks $100 was collected from individuals. Friend Barnett donated $50. The local branch of the I. L. D. after giving Leo Kling a fine reception responded to his appeal and collected $35.05 for the Daily.

The Workers Party of Newark also voted $25 at its regular meeting. Fraternal organizations have also done their bit. The comrades collecting donations with books are also meeting with good response.

MASS MEMORIAL IN CHICAGO FOR SACCO, VANZETTI

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 31. — The Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting, which has been held up until now grant a permit or to allow hall owners to rent meeting places, is now scheduled for Saturday, at 8 p. m. at the Coliseum, the largest hall in Chicago, following urgent requests made by labor organizations and prominent persons.

Prominent representatives of labor organizations will address the meeting. Ralph Chaplin, W. H. Holly and Rev. Norman E. Barr are among those who will speak at the memorial gathering, which is being held under the auspices of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Conference of Chicago.

The Conference has forwarded a request to Boston to have the death masks of the labor martyrs sent to Chicago for the Saturday memorial.

Felicani Attack Upon I. L. D. Made With Help of the Socialist Leaders

The attack on the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Labor Defense given to the capitalist press Tuesday night by Aldino Felicani, treasurer of the Boston Defense Committee, was issued with the active co-operation of the socialist party leaders in the office of the New Leader, 7 East 15th St., it was stated today.

The local newspapers were requested to send reporters to the New Leader office to obtain a statement. When they arrived they found Felicani together with Edward Levinson, assistant editor of the New Leader waiting to receive them, it was said.

When the red-baiting statements were being given out, August Claessens, secretary of the local socialist organization, and one of those who kicked Ben Gold manager of the Furriers Union during a recent Union Square meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti entered. With a smile from ear to ear Claessens handed Felicani a check of $108 which he said "was for the defense work," according to persons in close touch with the situation.

Last week Levinson promised the capitalist reporters an "expose of the Communists."

BRUNSWICK, Aug. 31.—Further evidence that Paul Redfern, missing Brunswick-to-Brazil flyer, is somewhere in the northern jungles of South America was received in Brunswick by the flight committee today in the form of a report from the government that a Norwegian ship arriving at Kingston, Jamaica, had seen the plane off the Venezuelan coast.

This added confirmation to previous reports that the monoplane Port of Brunswick had been sighted Saturday afternoon flying southward over the delta of the Orinoco River in Venezuela.

Maternity Law Helped Mothers and Children

WASHINGTON, (FP.) Aug. 31.—Nearly a million babies and 180,000 mothers were reached last year through the various types of work conducted under the maternity act, the children's bureau of the labor department reports. Every state but three co-operated, contributing sums equal to that paid out of the federal treasury.

In the year ending June 30, 15,000 child health conferences were held under the direction of physicians and 6,500 conferences were conducted by nurses where no physician was available."

The maternity law, enacted in 1921 for a five year period, was extended by the last congress for two years after reactionaries had been promised that it would die then. Although the law has saved thousands of babies' lives and improved the health of tens of thousands, the standpatters have warred inceassantly on it and on the children's bureau for backing the law.

MINE WORKERS TO ATTEND FOREIGN BORN CONFERENCE

Plan Fight on Davis at Harrisburg

Representatives from trade unions including a large number of United Mine Workers locals, fraternal societies, and local councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers will gather in conference on September 4 and 5, at Harrisburgh, Pa., at the Moose Temple, to consider effective means of aiding in the nation-wide opposition now being organized against the anti-alien measures pending in congress, which it is feared will be passed by the coming congressional session.

Delegates representing approximately 400,000 workers from the State of Pennsylvania, mostly of foreign birth, have been spurred to fervent activity in the work of organizing the foreign born workers against the anti-alien sentiment eminating from Washington, by the recent declaration of Albert Johnson, Chairman of the Immigration Committee in Congress and Secretary of Labor Davis.

This Pennsylvania State Conference is the first of a series of state conferences being arranged by the National Office of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers. Various state conferences will culminate into the calling of a national conference in the near future.

These conferences have not been called forth merely by the threatening declarations of Congressman Johnson and Secretary of Labor Davis. The anti-alien sentiments of Congressman Johnson and Secretary Davis represent a definite attitude in regard to the foreign born residents of America entertained by powerful forces in American industrial life that have found their echo in the halls of congress in the form of introduction of definite bills proposing severe restrictive laws against the foreign elements.

Registration and Finger-Printing.

Congressman Holliday of Illnois, Congressman Brand of Georgia, Congressman Aswell of Louisiana have presented bills to congress calling for registration and finger-printing and other petty impositions on foreigners providing also for very severe punishment such as deportation, heavy fines, and incarceration for the least non-compliance.

The enactment into laws of these bills has heretofore been prevented by the activities of the National Council for the Protection of Foregin Born Workers and the opposition that they have aroused among the trade unions and liberal circles throughout America. Very many prominent men have expressed their resentments against these proposals. The American labor movement has condemned these bills as a blow aimed at the labor movement itself. This opposition has prevented the passing of the bills but has not succeeded in dissuading the proponents [illegible] persisting.

[illegible] Demonstrations.

Now on account of the many demonstrations that have taken place in the Sacco-Vanzetti case the dark forces of American life have seized upon these demonstrations as evidence of anti-Americanism on the part of the foreign elements and are trying to develop the theory that the foreign elements are a menace to America and should be curbed. Secretary of Labor Davis has publicly stated that his department is enlisting the aid of employers in checking up on foreigners. This subtle manner of implying that the foreigners require checking up, is insidious in its effect and presages a general propaganda intended to sway the country into the feeling that the passing of the anti alien measures in congress is a necessity.

Two-Day Session.

The Pennsylvania State Conference will take place September 4-5. It will be addressed by Nina Samorodin Secretary of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers, Attorney, Peter P. Jurachak; Dr. R. W. Hogue; Rev. David Dunn; Robert Rosenberg; Joseph Washington; Domenick Giolett, Jeannette D. Pearl, field organizer of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, and Anthony Ramuglia, field secretary of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

WORKERS SCHOOL BEGINS FIFTH YEAR OCTOBER 10; MANY NEW COURSES TO BE ADDED, DIRECTOR SAYS

The Workers School will open its fifth school year on October 10. From present indications, the coming year should be the most successful in the history of the school. Plans have been laid for a more extensive curriculum than ever before; many leading figures in the American labor movement have been added to its faculty. The headquarters of the school are being repaired while many hundreds of new volumes have been added to the library.

The Workers School expects the steady increase in registration of the past few years to continue. In 1924-25 the Workers School consisted of some 5 or 6 classes with a registration of 60. Last year the registration for the fall term alone was 1,200 distributed over 50 classes. Three years ago all sessions were held in one small room; now the quarters consist of 9 large rooms. Because of its rapid expansion, however, the Workers School is already laying plans for a new and larger building which will more adequately meet its growing needs.

Within the next two weeks the new catalog of the Workers School will be out. This will give detailed information as to the course, the instructors, the evening and hour of each course, the regulation regarding fees, the training courses, etc. Anyone wishing to secure a catalog should write to Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers School, 108 East 14th St., N. Y. C.

Registration beings on September 26 and ends on October 10. Fall classes in English begin on Monday, October 10. Most other courses for the fall term commence the week of October 17. Sessions will last from 6.45 to 8 p. m., from 8 to 9.15 p. m. and from 9.15 to 10.30 p. m.

The fee for each course of 12 sessions is $3.50. The charge for English courses, twice a week, 24 sessions a term is $6. Special fees will be charged for courses consisting of less than 12 sessions.

Sacco, Vanzetti and the Law

Editor Note.—The following are excerpts from a talk delivered in the Aldermanic Chamber of the City Hall last Saturday by Allan Taub, a New York lawyer who made a detailed study of the legal aspects of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Some of the more glaring discrepancies in the "evidence" presented against the two murdered workers were cited by the speaker.

Taub's lecture was given under the auspices of the Library Free Lecture Association of which Joseph P. Carney is president. Just before the lecture was to begin Capt. Donnelly of the New York police department arrived and announced that it would have to be called off. Carney, however, insisted on the right of his organization to proceed with the meeting, and Donelly finally withdrew his objection.

"There's a whole lot in the Sacco-Vanzetti case that ought to be cleared up." Carney explained.

The DAILY WORKER does not agree with Mr. Taub's statement that a situation similar to the Sacco-Vanzetti frame-up could not succeed in New York City, nor does it share the speaker's optimism about the possibility (or importance) of "drastic reform in the judicial code of Massachusetts," but is glad to print the following because of the significance of the facts presented.

Drastic reform in the judicial code of the State of Massachusetts must follow that State's disposal of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The pressure of outraged public opinion must force an immediate change in the procedure which permits a judge to act as both judge and jury in cases where human lives are at stake.

During seven long years, the Sacco-Vanzetti case never left Judge Thayer's hands. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts which heard the appeal is limited in power. It can only consider questions of law and may not pass upon questions of fact. And facts may have saved the lives of these two men, internationally believed innocent.

This Puritanical despotism would have been impossible in the State of New York. Had the trial taken place in New York, the seven judges of the Court of Appeals in Albany, would have gone into all questions of both law and fact.

Only Single Judge.

As it is the Massachusetts case leaves one with something of a sick feeling when one realizes that one judge held on to the case from trial to execution,—from 1920 to 1927.

Governor Fuller's Advisory Committee said in its report:

"Judge Thayer ought not to have talked about the case off the bench and doing so was a grave breach of judicial decorum."

If this had been a juryman instead of a judge, a mistrial would have been declared and a new trial granted to Sacco and Vanzetti. In this case Judge Thayer did take the part of a jury and did make remarks outside the court room, and a new trial did not result.

During the seven years that Massachusetts played with the lives of these two men, Judge Thayer sat as sole arbiter of eight different motions. At most of these new evidence was presented on which he had to pass virtually as a jury. This judge who, outside the court room, had undoubtedly made prejudicial statements, was called upon to pass on motions for a new trial, and to decide whether or not he had acted with prejudice. Continuing Taub said:

What Crime?

Were Sacco and Vanzetti on trial for murder or radicalism? When the State's identification witnesses proved to be weak, the prosecutor shifted his attack from "identification" to "consciousness of guilt." It was at this point that the counsel for the defense realized that they would have to go through with the whole question of radicalism. For Sacco and Vanzetti were conscious not of murder but of their radicalism.

A Few Facts.

A few facts will explain how serious this was at the time.

The murder was committed April 15, 1920. Bear the date in mind—April 15. The men were arrested on May 5th, so that fully twenty days had elapsed between the crime and the arrest. Did Sacco and Vanzetti act suspiciously during that twenty day period? No. They carried on with their usual pursuits and followed their same general conduct.

Salsedo, another radical, and a friend of Sacco and Vanzetti, was held for several weeks by the Federal authorities in New York City. There were all sorts of ugly rumors circulated in regard to the third degree methods that were being applied to him. Then on May 4th—notice the date, May 4th—Salsedo met a mysterious death by crashing down on the sidewalk from the fourteenth floor of a Park Row building where he was detained. This was the cause of more rumors, even more frightful now than before. You will remember that his death occurred on May 4th. The next day May 5th, Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested.

The arrest of these two men was mere accident. But after their arrest they acted "suspiciously" and seemed to betray what the judge and district attorney constantly referred to as their "consciousness of guilt." But they were conscious of their radicalism, not of murder. Up to May 5th there was nothing unusual in their conduct. Not even the district attorney with all his detectives could find anything strange in the conduct of these two during the twenty day period between April 15th when the murder took place and May 5th, when they were arrested. When they were arrested May 5th, they had yesterday, May 4th, in mind. Wasn't that natural? Only yesterday, May 4th, their comrade who was arrested for his radicalism came to a horrible death. Before that he had been introduced to some fancy steps in the "third degree."

But it is suggested that these two men were armed when they were arrested. That seems to be uppermost in the minds of many.

Their Life Blameless.

Sacco's employer testified in court that Sacco acted as watchman for him and that it was natural for him to have a pistol. His employer also said that Sacco was a man of the highest character.

Vanzetti was a fish peddler. He carried his entire capital of one hundred to two hundred dollars around with him. Often he found himself travelling on the dark roads around small New England towns. He feared hold-ups.

Neither Sacco nor Vanzetti were ever involved in any trouble. They were not gunmen, but honest hard-workingmen, who were armed only for self-protection.

Of course it may be said that Vanzetti had just previously been convicted for an attempted robbery in Bridgewater and he had been sentenced to jail by the same Judge Thayer. But any one who looks into the facts of the case will see that the Bridgewater charge grew out of the second, the South Braintree accusation.

Vanzetti throughout the seven years struggle insisted that he was as ignorant and innocent of the one as of the other.

Toward the end of his talk, Taub declared:

Files of Department of Justice.

William G. Thompson, a conservative lawyer, respected in Massachusetts as a man of the highest standards and a former president of the Massachusetts Bar Association, has often stated that he is sure that Sacco and Vanzetti were innocent. In 1923 Mr. Thompson became chief counsel for the two men. He has repeatedly charged that if the files of the Department of Justice were made public, the innocence of the defendants would be proved. Again and again Mr. Thompson demanded the records from the department of justice, but every time his request was refused.

Two Department of Justice agents swore that there was a secret agreement between the district attorney and the department of justice. Since the Washington authorities were not able to deport these men they struck a bargain whereby the Federal men would give the district attorney full details of the defendants radical activities, while the district attorney would go the limit in prosecuting them for the Braintree crime. At the trial for murder, much was made of the radicalism of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The two former Federal agents who swore to this special arrangement now hold responsible positions. One is connected with the Beacon Trust Company of Boston, while the other is with the Attorney General of Maine. At the time of the trial, both of these men were employed by the Federal Government.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead. But their case must still challenge the attention of all those who seek and cherish justice.

Landlords Fight For Existence.

"The landlord class must suppress and prevent the peasants from organizing peasant unions. This is the significance showing that the existence of the landlord class depends upon the exploitation of the peasants' interest and the landlord class will never let the peasants have unification which will be an obstacle to their procedure of exploiting the peasants' interests. From the peasants point of view, the peasant class must protest against the suppression of the landlord class; in other words, the peasant class have to prevent the landlords from exploitation so as to preserve the interest of the peasants and should not let the landlords violate their organizations and exploit their interests. Therefore, the class organization must be demonstrated by the confliction of interests; the more the class organization is demonstrated, the more struggle is inevitable. Owing to this fact, a short time after the peasants organized themselves in 1923, the Hai Fung peasant union was dissolved by the landlords who conspired with the militarists on account of the movement for the reduction of rents. In 1924, on account of the movement for the reduction of rent of the Kwong Ning peasant union, the landlords conspired with the District Magistrate, the garrisoned troop, and armed militia, killed the peasants cruelly, more than ten comrades being sacrificed.

Many Instances.

"In the same year, the Fan Yuen peasant union the same thing happened on account of the movement for reduction of rent; the landlords conspiring with the local officials and leading the militia, merchants' corps, and bandits, ruined the office of the peasant union and burned the houses of the rural villages; comrade Wong Fook-sam, vice chairman of the executive committee of the union, was killed by them. In the same year, Lam Po-shun, the chairman of the executive committee of the first division Peasant Union of Shi-Zao, was murdered by the head of the Militia Board because Lam Po-shun made objections against the Militia Board levying impositions. Lei Kao village peasant union of Shun Tak district had also been disturbed by the depraved gentries; the native bandits and the garrisoned troops, who were utilized by the depraved gentries, rushed into the peasant union to kill the members of the union; seven or eight peasants were killed and several hundred peasants shelters were burnt. On the next day of the inauguration of the Hah Kong village peasant union of Tung Koon district, it was ruined by the landlords and militia because it set up the movement for protesting against the levy of impositions.

"All these were the peasants economical struggles for the reduction of rent and for protesting against the levy of impositions; in other words, the peasants fought for their organizations in order to improve their living conditions. From the experience of those struggles, we found that everywhere and in every time not only the landlords suppressed our peasants but also the local officials, the garrisoned troops, depraved gentries, notorious rowdies, etc., also stood on the side of the landlords interests to attack the peasants for the landlord class jointly. This hastened our peasant comrades to feel the importance of the political power and made the peasants organize themselves better the better to fight for their economical and political emancipation, while the landlord class and the other controlling classes joined together to suppress the peasants more seriously. Naturally the peasants will acclaim the following slogans regarding their political struggle:

> "The armies who substantially aid the peasants are the Revolutionary Armies.
> "The government which really helps the peasants is the Revolutionary Government.
>
> "The counter-revolutionists suppress and violate the peasants and do not protect their interests.
> "Great federation and cooperation of peasants — break into the joint fighting front of the imperialists, militarists, corrupt officials, repraved gentries, notorious rowdies, great landlords, and all the counter-revolutionists.

Fight For Economic And Political Rights.

"The organization of the peasants fights for economic and political betterment. We are sacrificed on our struggle because the landlords have armed militia and armed garrisoned troops as their forces to attack us. At this moment, we must demand to have force of arms and to organize peasants self-defense corps; such demand is to prevent the landlords from attacking us with force of arms to protect the existence and expansion of the peasant union. At that time the peasant movement had already made great progress. By the awakening of the political struggles, they were led to the field of the national movement. After the Laborers and Peasants' Protection Policy fixed by the First Reorganization Conference of the Kuomintang in 1924, the workers and peasants rose up to take part in the national movement and consequently it developed to a greater extension. At the same time, the imperialists, militarists, and all the counter-revolutionists were frightened by seeing that the workers and peasants are taking part in the revolution."

"Thus, there occured on October 10, 1924, the rebellion of the Canton Merchants' Volunteers, and the labor and peasant corps suffered great losses. This made us recognize the relationship between the imperialists and the compradore Chan Lim-pak and the great landlord Chan Kung-shau. After the suppression of this rebellion the Kuomintang made experiment of her new policies in Canton—proposing that the mayor of the city should be elected by the citizens. Unfortunately the government officials who were taking charge of the new policies did not grant the right of voting to the several hundred thousands of peasants outside the Canton city. Therefore, the peasants struggled for the right and conmmenced a great demonstration movement. Although this struggle was in vain, yet during the day of election the peasants were present to supervise the election. This showed that they had a suitable recognition of politics —at present there are three peasant delegates taking part in the management of the municipal affairs. This is the result of their struggle. When in the winter of 1924, peasants elected and appointed delegates going North to participate in the National Conference Promoting Association of All-China, it happened in Peking that some of the anti-revolutionary members of the party, such a Fung Chi-yau, Ma So, etc., acted against the party, surrendering to the imperialists and militarists and setting up anti-revolutionary movements. The Hong Kong imperialists backed up Chang Chiung-ming to attack Canton while the late Dr. Sun was having serious sickness at Peking. At the same time, with their English warships, they aided the bandits and garrisoned troops in Chungshan district to shoot the Wan Tong village, Chungshan, with cannon.

Conspired To Suppress Mass Movement.

"In view of this continuous changing of the political situation, it made us understand more clearly that the imperialists, militarists, compradores, landlords, and the anti-revolutionary soldier officials, politicians, etc. in the party conspired with each other to suppress the mass movements of the Chinese people, especially the labor and peasant movements. In February, 1925, the Tungkiang peasants positively participated in the movement for overthrowing Chang Chiung-ming, the hunting-dog of the imperialists. Owing to this, then, we could have a new development in the places of Tungkiang. Moreover, all peasants of the whole province formed unions of their own class. On the one side, with the strength of their class organization, they prevented the landlords from attacking them, and on the other side they substantially participated in the National Emancipation Movement, exerting efforts to overthrow militarists and imperialists. Developing the Kwangtung peasant movement with the significance of class and nation all peasants have been united and established a chief directing organ. Therefore, on May 1st, 1925, the universal labor day, the First Peasant Delegates Conference of All-Kwangtung was held and the Provincial Peasant Union was inaugurated.

HIS ANSWER TO TEACHER

Dear Comrades: The answer to the teacher is: Soviet Russia may be a terrible country for the capitalists but not for the workers. The workers' children must not belong to the scouts, they belong to the Pioneers. The workers do not go on strike because they are lazy. It is because they want shorter hours and more money. Otherwise they could not exist. I know these facts because my father is a worker.—JOSEPH GOLDFIELD.

THEIR SPIRITS LIVE ON!

Despite the protests of thousands of workers, in this country and over the rest of the world, the capitalists of America murdered our two comrades, Sacco and Vanzetti. After seven years of the most horrible torture under the shadow of the electric chair, they were finally burned. Burned for a crime that they never committed. Burned, in the Puritan state of Massachusetts, famous for its similar burnings not so very long ago.

Tho the Fullers and Thayers may say that Sacco and Vanzetti had a fair trial and were guilty, the workers know that Sacco and Vanzetti received capitalist justice, which finds workers always guilty. The workers know that Sacco and Vanzetti were murdered because they were organizers of labor fighting for the workers against the bosses. That was their crime and nothing else.

Our answer to the capitalists of America must be: "Tho Sacco and Vanzetti are dead, their spirits live on," and where we had but two Sacco and Vanzettis we shall have thousands ready to take their place and ready to die as they did.

Sacco and Vanzetti are dead!

Long live the spirit of Sacco and Vanzetti!

THE WORKER

By ANNA LUCYSHYN.

Let us open the workers eyes
Which are tied with a handkerchief
And let us tell him who he is,
Like an animal for the bosses.
Let us fight for our lives,
Like brave soldiers, but not like cowards,
Fight till we kill all of them,
Who try to make us their slaves.
But, they won't!
Don't believe what the teacher says,
She wants us to stand against the workers,
And help the bosses
But instead let us stand against the bosses.
And yet the bosses call the Chinese the red fighters,
But we must remember not all of the Chinese stand
up for their people,
Because some of them help the bosses.
But we must hold up the Workers' Red Flag which is red for the workers' blood.

Russia Is A Strong Country

Dear Comrade. Last week while we were having geography in our class, the teacher asked, "Name a strong country of Europe." I raised my hand and answered, "Russia is a strong country." The teacher got very angry and said, "Russia is weak and it is going to be weak while under the Soviet rule. It cannot control itself." I sat down not wishing to argue with her. My teacher knows Russia is a powerful country but is afraid to admit it.

—JOHN CIBULSKIS.

On War and Danger of War

This is the Eighth Installment of the Theses on the war danger adopted at the Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on May 29, 1927. It gives the official Communist viewpoint on this important question.

"The boycott of war is a stupid phrase," wrote Lenin.

(b) On the strength of the experience of the war of 1914, Bolshevism also exposed the treachery of those who substituted empty phraseology for serious and preservering preparation of war against war. As everyone knows Lenin and Rosa Luxemburg were the authors of the amendment to the resolution of the Basle Congress which recommended—in the event of an outbreak of war—to work for the "acceleration of the collapse of capitalism in the spirit of the Commune and of the October (General Strike) and December (Moscow rising) event in 1905."

But Bolshevism fought against anarcho-syndicalism and the old Hervé school, which, while talking big about a "General Strike," about "insurrection" and about "sabotaging mobilization," did not take a single practical step to prepare themselves for war against war in order not to be utterly helpless at the moment when war was declared. The world war has vindicated the worst suppositions in regard to this type of "revolutionaries."

28. The position of Lenin on the question of "the transforming of the imperialist war into civil war" confirmed subsequently by the experience of the Russian revolution, can be summarized under the following main points:

1.—For the revolution to be successful there must be first of all the existence of a revolutionary situation arising from a series of military failures and defeats of the capitalist governments engaged in the imperialist war, that is to say a situation in which it is

(a) impossible for the dominant classes to prserve their domination unchanged; various crises among the "upper classes";

(b) unusual accentuation of the misery and poverty of the oppressed classes;

(c) considerable increase, owing to the above-mentioned circumstances, in the activity of the masses.

2.—But these objective reasons alone are not enough to bring about a victorious revolution. To them must be added:

The subjective "capacity" of the revolutionary class for revolutionary mass actions strong enough to overthrow its own government or put it with its back to the wall which will never—not even in the epoch of crises —"fall" unless it be "made to fall." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 139, and 140 "Collapse of the Second International").

3.—Apart from this, the revolutionary class must have an experienced Bolshevik leadership (today the Communist Parties) capable of preparing and organizing revolutionary mass actions of this class. In the period preparatory to revolutionary mass actions, this leadership, making use of every "legal" opportunity, must carry on an incessant agitation among the masses against the imperialist war, under the slogan of transforming it into civil war. In connection with this, Lenin took into account that this agitation will meet with fierce resistance on the part of the ruling classes.

"Not only in war," so he wrote, "but in absolutely every acute political situation let alone any revolutionary action of the masses, the government of even the freest democratic country will also threaten to break up the legal organizations, seize their funds, arrest their leaders and other similar 'practical measures.' What is to be done?"

To this Lenin replied that besides the activity of the legal workers' party:

"It is necessary to supplement it by establishing an illegal base, an illegal organization, an illegal social democratic (today read Communist) activity without, however, surrendering a single legal base." (Lenin, Vol. XIII, p. 128, "The Collapse of the Second International").

THE STORY OF A STRANGE STRIKE

By ALEX.

(International Propaganda Committee, Transport Workers.)

"Thrift and Economy,"—these are the things usually preached by the bosses to their wage-slaves who, as a rule, don't earn enough to keep body and soul together, let alone to save. . . . At any rate, it ought to be admitted that the bosses themselves do practice economy and saving—of course, at the expense of their workers.

Example of "Thrift."

Take, for instance, the case of the Holland-American Line, a wealthy and prosperous steamship company whose vessels make round monthly trips between Rotterdam and New York. At Rotterdam the ships usually stay about a week, loading and unloading. Some time ago the shipowners hit upon the bright idea of discharging their crews upon arrival in the Dutch port, and of signing on a fresh crew before sailing. Thus, once in five weeks the company effects a saving of one week's wages.

Workers Disagree.

The Dutch seamen, however, failed to appreciate the bright ingenuity of their bosses, and on June 14th last when the usual trick was performed aboard the S. S. Rotterdam of the Holland-American Line, and an attempt made to sign on a fresh crew, the seamen, supported this time by their union, refused to sign on, demanding that the company give up the thrifty habit of signing on a new crew for each trip.

To be sure, such strikes are fairly common occurrences and it were hardly worth while to dwell on this particular strike, but for one peculiar fact which we are going to narrate. The official organ of the so-called "International Federation of Transport Workers" ("Press Reports," July 1927), in telling the story of this strike, goes on to describe how the company, after futile efforts to secure a blackleg crew in Dutch ports, was compelled to take on a Chinese crew which brought the vessel to the port of New York. Even this, as we are told by "Press Reports," did not end the shipowners' troubles. According to report, seventy-six of the Chinese seamen had been arrested by the authorities at Hoboken for fighting the police and the deck officers, and for an attempt to go ashore without leave.

A Fake Report.

Well, the information of "Press Reports" is neither complete nor accurate. It is true that the Chinese had been signed on as blacklegs, but of this they learned to their great indignation only later on, when the ship was already on the high seas, and upon arrival at Hoboken they categorically refused to stay on board and demanded that they be taken back to the Dutch port.

The Chinese seamen did not fight the police as reported in "Press Reports;" what actually did happen was this: invited by the deck officers, the Hoboken police had boarded the ship and after beating up the strikers carried them off to Ellis Island prison "for the convenience of the company," as it was bluntly explained by an emigration inspector.

From the American labor press we learn that the case had quite unexpectedly gained considerable publicity. Even the so-called "International Seamen's Union of America," yielding to pressure from the rank and file members admiring the pluck and the splendid proletarian solidarity of the Chinese seamen, was constrained to intervene.

We are told by eminent lawyers of the "Great Transatlantic Republic" that compulsory labor is forbidden by the laws of the United States. Apparently the authorities at Hoboken had acted with undue zeal. Under the well-known La Follette Act any seaman, even including Chinese and Lascars, has the right to demand his discharge at any American port with half-pay and free return passage to the port of signing.

Ignore Laws.

Despite this and similar liberal laws of "democratic America," at the time when the New York Chinese Seamen's Club and the International Seamen's Union intervened, 16 people had already been deported for mutiny, a similar fate awaited 38 more on Ellis Island, whilst 30 of the Chinese seamen had made good their escape.

System Universal.

Facts of the kind just described should be food for thought for all the labor organizations, and particularly for those of the seamen. For Rotterdam is not the only port where the labor of the seaman is "free." In most of the other ports the same system of "shanghai-ing" crews, particularly of foreign seamen, is practiced by hosts of shady agents, nicknamed "shanghai-ers." Each "pub" in every port furnished a happy hunting-ground for these dealers in human toil and sweat. This system, of course, is connived at by the shipping companies, to the great detriment of the seamen and their organizations. Hence the control over the signing on of crews should be the immediate task for the seamen's unions.

Race intolerance and contempt for "coloured" people — happily, more widespread among union bureaucrats than among rank and file seamen—constitute a grave menace and obstacle to the everyday struggle of the seamen against the shipowners.

Attitude a Disgrace.

Before embarking upon a fight against the shipowners the Central Union of the Dutch Transport Workers did not think it necessary to inform about it the numerous Chinese and Lascar seamen in the port of Rotterdam, and this enabled the shipowners to use the class-conscious Chinese seamen against their Dutch comrades. This contemptuous outlook upon the Chinese seamen on the part of the bureaucrats in the Dutch Transport workers' union is entirely unwarranted in view of the heroic conduct of the Chinese seamen, their role in the Chinese Revolution, and their militancy outside of China.

Finally the central organ of information published by the so-called International Federation of Transport workers, instead of ill-disguised baiting of the Chinese comrades, should rather fight for the unity of the Transport-workers the world over.

Party Convention Receives Greeting From Comintern

Current Events

By T. J. O'Flaherty

THO the investigation of milk graft in the New York City health department cost the municipality $60,000 and the grafters are alleged to have benefited to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars, acting district attorney Ferdinand Pecora believes there is no basis for further indictments. The milk grafters are lucky in not being involved in a strike for better conditions for the workers and their dependents. Grafting under a capitalist government is a dignified and respectable profession unless practised by those who slip on the political banana peel.

SURELY it is a more henious crime to distribute adulterated milk in a city of several million people than to plead for the lives of two innocent workers doomed to death by the ruling classes of the United States in general and of Massachusetts in particular. Yet hundreds of workers have been jailed and thousands beaten by police all over the country for demonstrating for Sacco and Vanzetti while the crooks that poison the food supply are allowed to escape.

"AMERICA" the official organ of the Jesuit order in the United States reinforces with typical Jesuit sophistry the decision of the Massachusetts hangmen (which was carried out) to murder Sacco and Vanzetti. This is not surprising. The catholic church which has never relinquished the theory of temporal power is nevertheless a bulwark of capitalist society all over the world. It is the handmaiden of catholic, protestant and agnostic governments alike. It serves the British government in western Africa, the French government in Syria and despite occasional tiffs with Mussolini, it assists the murderous Fascist government in Italy to crucify workers and peasants regardless of religious belief or political sympathies.

THE ruling classes of the United States were somewhat divided on the advisability of executing Sacco and Vanzetti before the fatal switch was thrown. But once the two workers were burned in the electric chair, practically every mouthpiece of the capitalist system, from liberal to conservative, opened fire on the militant workers that insisted on pointing out to the labor movement the lessons and the significance of the execution of the two innocent laborers.

THE Jesuit organ declares that Sacco and Vanzetti were not convicted

URGES STRUGGLE AGAINST RULING CLASS "JUSTICE"

Unify the Party and End Factionalism

"The future belongs to the Communist Party!

"Down with the class justice of American imperialism!

"Hail the revolutionary struggle of the American working class!"

As Ben Gitlow, acting as chairman on the second day of the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party, read these closing sentences of the greeting from the Communist International, the delegates and audience rose spontaneously and began singing "The Internationale."

Hall Echoes with Song.

The great hall of "Irving Plaza," re-echoed with the singing of this song of the world's working class.

The greeting of the Comintern, published in full in another column, was signed by the Presidium of the Executive Committee and had just arrived by cable.

It called special attention to the meaning of the death sentence imposed on Sacco and Vanzetti, and enumerated the problems confronting the American Party. It calls for the extermination of all factionalism and the development of a unified party. The Presidium was instructed to draw up a reply to this greeting.

Take Up Credentials' Report.

Immediately following the reading of the Comintern Greeting, the convention proceeded to a consideration of the report of the credentials committee.

48 Delegates Seated.

Forty-eight delegates were seated from fourteen districts as follows: Boston, 3; New York, 15; Philadelphia, 3; Buffalo, 1; Pittsburgh, 3; Cleveland, 2; Detroit, 2; Chicago, 5; Minnesota, 4; Kansas, 1; Seattle, 2; San Francisco, 2; New Haven, 1; and the Agricultural District, 1.

Chairman Gitlow also read to the convention a greeting from John Pepper, the representative of the Party to the Comintern, as follows:

Please communicate my warmest greetings to the Party Convention. Absolute unity within Party, uncompromising struggle against imperialist bourgeoisie, unrelenting

"The Future Belongs to the Communist Party", Says Greeting of the Communist International

Singing of "The International" greeted the conclusion of the reading before the Fifth Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party of the Greeting from the Communist International, which called for the extermination of all factionalism and the strengthening of the Party for the great struggles confronting it in the United States. The Greeting in full follows:

THE National Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party meets at a time of growing reaction of the powerful American imperialism which fights every suppressed people from Nicaragua to China, which executes thru its brutal class justice Sacco and Vanzetti and begins a new campaign of persecution against the foreign-born working masses.

Passaic, the struggle in the needle trades, the prolonged miners' strike are signs of the increasing class struggle of the American proletariat which in the powerful movement with solidarity for Sacco and Vanzetti developed into a mighty demonstration against the capitalist state power.

In the country of the most powerful imperialism and a most brutal capitalist class the Communist Party can fulfill its duty and can become the leader of the working class against imperialism and capitalist aggression only if it is united and if it is not torn to pieces by factional struggle.

The Comintern considers as one of the central tasks of the Party the extermination of all factionalism and the unification organizationally as well as ideologically. It will be the duty of the newly elected Central Executive Committee to lead the Party in a non-factional spirit and it will be the duty of the whole Party membership to rally around the Central Executive Committee which it itself shall have chosen.

Forward to struggle with a united Communist Party.

Despite tremendous difficulties the future belongs to the Communist Party.

Down with class justice of American imperialism.

Hail the revolutionary struggle of the American working class.

PRESIDIUM,
Executive Committee of the Communist International.

INDICATIONS ARE NEW CHARGE IS IN PREPARATION

Members of Staff Are Quizzed by Grand Jury

It became clearer yesterday that the new attack started by the United States government against The DAILY WORKER thru the federal courts in New York may be due to the brilliant fight it waged for the liberation of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, put to death in the electric chair in Boston on the night of August 22.

Belief that the new hearings ordered before the federal grand jury grew out of the old charges, resulting from the publication of the poem, "America," were dispelled yesterday, when it was learned that the federal prosecutors were planning to push this case to trial in the very near future on the old indictment.

Witnesses Are Called.

Two members of the editorial office, one from the business office and a fourth from the mechanical department were called before the federal grand jury yesterday, the sessions of which are held in secret.

This was the first meeting of the September grand jury, with the attack on The DAILY WORKER the first business to come before it. The case is under the direction of United States District Attorney Foster. Postal Inspector Keen spent much time about the grand jury rooms.

Will Press the Old Charge.

The old charge against The DAILY WORKER, resulting in indictments against J. Louis Engdahl, William F. Dunne, Alex Bittleman, Bert Miller and David Gordon, comes up on Sept. 6, when a trial date will be set. These comrades are now out on $1,000 bail each.

It was believed Wednesday, when the federal authorities, thru the New

MOVIE STRIKE IN CHICAGO SPREADS TO STAGE HANDS

Minneapolis Workers Join Walkout

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Operators and stage hands today voted to stand together for a finish fight against the Chicago motion picture exhibitors whom they accuse of responsibility for the shutdown which since last Monday has resulted in the closing of more than 350 theatres.

Only two Chicago motion picture and vaudeville theatres were reported open for business today. Even independent exhibitors being forced to lock their doors by the film board of trade action in refusing to send films to any theatres until the dispute was settled.

Indefinite Strike.

Today's meeting of the operators was virtually unanimous for a continuance of the suspension until their demands are met. The strike or lockout originated when Orpheum Circuit Theatres refused to employ two extra operators.

Roars of approval marked the voting which followed a statement by Tommy Maloy, their business manager, that the suspension might continue indefinitely—even into the new year.

Operators also voted unanimously to accept no agreement with exhibitors until the theatre men amicably adjust their differences with the stage hands' union. The latter union then followed suit, pledging support for the operators.

• • •

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 1.—Minneapolis motion picture operators, members of the International Alliance of Theatre Stage Employes, will go on strike unless their demands for wage increases and better working conditions are met before midnight Thursday, representatives of their union informed theatre owners today.

The strike would close 58 theatres and throw between 6,000 and 7,000 persons out of work.

A wage increase ranging from 10 to 28 per cent is demanded by the operators.

SIGMAN GETS INJUNCTION AGAINST CHICAGO CLOAK AND DRESSMAKERS

Cannot Call Themselves International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—A temporary injunction prohibiting the Joint Board of the Cloak and Dressmakers' union from using the name International Ladies' Garment Workers' union has been secured by Peter Susman, a socialist. He was acting under the direction of Morris Sigman and David Dubinsky, right wing leaders.

A successful shop chairmen's meeting has been held, with a packed hall. Levine, manager of the joint board reported on the present situation. Many shop chairmen then gave shop reports. A resolution was adopted pledging full support to the joint board and condemning the autocratic moves on the part of Sigman and his clique.

Enthusiastic Meeting.

Tailors' local 104 held the most enthusiastic meeting since its organization. The only right winger that was present admitted the loyalty of the local to the joint board. A resolution was adopted supporting the joint board and its militant administration.

At a meeting of Polish Local 60 last night Salvatore Ninfo, right wing henchman, attempted some of his famous tricks. But he was not successful. While he was speaking Levin, Saff and Glassman, joint board officers entered and were greeted with cheers. Ninfo was requested to leave the hall before the meeting proceeded. When he refused the rank and file members left the hall and continued their meeting elsewhere.

Sigman called a shop chairmen's meeting last night. Only 11 were present. The meeting did not last long nor make any decision.

Friday the first meeting of the joint board at the new headquarters, 28 So. Wells St., will be held. Important questions will be acted upon.

Italian Troops Revolt Against Fascisti; Shot Down by Black Shirts

VIENNA, Sept. 1. — The newspaper Grazer Tageblatt today published a report from Liverno that several battalions of Italian troops had mutinied during army maneuvers.

A Fascist regiment fired upon the mutineers killing several before the officers regained control, the message said.

Labor Day Celebration In PerthAmboy Monday

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Sept. 1.—Plans are now being made for a Labor Day celebration here. With the entrance of progressive forces in the Central Labor Union of this city, its activities have taken on new life.

Included on the program will be a picnic and a number of sport events.

Placing of Wreaths and Radio Speech Is A. F. L. Program for Labor Day

The placing of a wreath on the statue of Benjamin Franklin in City Hall Park and radio speeches by William Green, president, and John Manning, head of the Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor will constitute the program here next Monday when Labor Day will be celebrated.

According to Jerome Keating, acting secretary of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council no picnic will take place this year as in the past. When asked for the reason, Keating informed The DAILY WORKER that "no one attends the picnics so it is better to have speeches over the radio where they can be listened to in the homes."

30 Drowned as Flood Sweeps Polish Town

BERLIN, Sept. 1. — Thirty persons are dead and 1500 homeless as a result of floods that have inundated a large area in the province of Galacia, Poland, according to reports from Warsaw today.

Fifteen towns are under water, the reports said, and the rich Galician oil fields have been extensively damaged.

A tornado accompanied the floods, adding to the devastation. Fires also broke out in several of the towns.

The waters of the Dniester, San and Stryj rivers rose twelve feet in one hour, sweeping away many bridges. Railroads throughout the district also were destroyed.

INSPIRED STORIES OF U.S.S.R. ARMS PURCHASE ANTI-SOVIET PROPAGANDA

Amtorg Trading Corporation Denies Any Move to Buy Military Supplies Here

Denying Washington reports that the state department has expressed disapproval of selling arms and munitions to the Soviet Union, the Amtorg Trading Corporation yesterday announced that the Soviet government has made no attempt to buy such supplies in the United States.

Dispatches from Washington yesterday said that the state department had expressed disapproval several times within the past few months of proposals to sell arms and munitions either to the Soviet government or to "private interests in Soviet Russia."

It is well-known that private interests in the USSR cannot legally import arms and munitions into the Union.

Deny Arms Purchase.

A statement issued by Amtorg yesterday declares flatly that the USSR purchasing agency has bought no military rifles or other military supplies and has not attempted to make any purchases.

Amtorg added that it has authorized no one to make any such proposals on behalf of purchasers in the USSR.

State Department Silent.

According to yesterday's Washington dispatches, the state department refused to explain its statement and declines to give any specific instances of requests for approval to ship arms to the USSR.

All information regarding the names of applicants for permission to make such sales were likewise refused.

The ambiguous dispatches did not indicate whether the arms were intended for the Soviet government or for counter-revolutionists.

No Embargo, Anyway.

Officials of the department admitted that no department has the authority to forbid the shipment of arms to Soviet Russia as the arms embargo has not been extended to that country.

Circumstances surrounding the incident point to deliberate provocation by anti-Soviet elements.

The first Washington dispatches in yesterday morning's papers were almost identically worded in the Times, World, Journal of Commerce and later in the Evening Post.

Without revealing the source of information, the dispatches said that the state department voiced its disapproval to Soviet agents.

Anti-USSR Propaganda.

Later Washington dispatches based on inquiries at the state department expressed its disapproval to American manufacturers wishing to sell arms in the USSR.

While it is possible that irresponsible speculators are attempting to find markets in Soviet Russia for surplus military stores or that Russian counter-revolutionists are trying to buy them here, the effort to make it appear that the Soviet government is trying to buy arms in the United States at a time when it is making no such attempts point to sources interested in anti-Soviet propaganda.

Endicott-Johnson Shoe Co. Sells Co-operative Stores to Monopolists

ENDICOTT, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The Endicott-Johnson Corporation, employing 17,000 persons in its shoe factories here, today announced the sale of all its workers' cooperative grocery stores to the American Stores Company of Philadelphia, a chain store organization.

This was in conformity with the decision announced two months ago by the Endicott-Johnson Corporation to dispose of the cooperative grocery stores.

Jail Sentence for Carrying Red Flag at Union Sq. Meet

Because he carried a red flag at Monday's memorial meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti, Placido Rodriguez, Spanish waiter, was given a ten day jail sentence by Magistrate Henry Goodman at the Yorkville Court yesterday. The original charges lodged against Rodriguez were criminal anarchy and disorderly conduct, the criminal anarchy charge was later dropped.

Rodriguez, when arrested, was severely beaten by two detectives. With thousands of other workers he started to march from Union Square to Stuyvesant Casino where the death masks of Sacco and Vanzetti lay. Mounted police rode into the procession of workers, throwing many to the sidewalk.

STAFF OF DAILY WORKER QUIZZED BY GRAND JURY

Seek More Indictments Is Belief

York police department, served subpoenas wholesale on The DAILY WORKER staff, that the government prosecutors had found something faulty in their original indictment and were planning a new indictment thru the present grand jury.

Information gathered about the federal prosecutor's office yesterday, however, indicated that the government plans to go ahead with this case and rush it to trial immediately.

Inquire About Sacco-Vanzetti Fight.

The fact that the police officers, when serving the subpoenas, asked of the staff members, "You have been pretty busy during this Sacco-Vanzetti case?" takes on added significance as a result.

Wholesale Subpoenas.

Inspector Kelly of the "bomb squad" who accompanied the subpeona servers especially showed considerable interest in the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Members of the mechanical staff were also questioned about the methods of editing and publishing The DAILY WORKER.

ROSEN—

Wednesday afternoon eight subpoenas were served by Sergeant Kelly of the New York "bomb squad" and two U. S. postoffice inspectors, but no information could be obtained from them as to the reasons for the summons. The papers were served on those members of the editorial and business staffs who were in the office at the time, in addition to the foreman of the composing room and one proof-reader.

After serving the subpoenas the agents loitered about the building for nearly three hours and questioned everyone who entered or left the building.

Daily Worker Led the Fight.

Since The DAILY WORKER started publication January, 1923 it has continuously been in the forefront of the struggle to save Sacco and Vanzetti. Day after day it has published news stories, articles and cartoons on the case.

During the last few months The DAILY WORKER has devoted almost all its space in leading the fight to save the lives of the two men. It continued this fight as the successor of the Weekly Worker that preceded it. It devoted all its energies in the effort to mobilize enough working class strength, so Fuller and Thayer would not dare murder Sacco and Vanzetti.

Several special editions of The DAILY WORKER were published during the last few months. These papers were distributed in the working class sections of New York and other cities mobilizing the workers for action against this judicial murder.

As a result of the aggressive part of the DAILY WORKER played in the campaign to save the lives of the two workers, it has won an increasing working class support.

There are many indications that the present attack has been launched in an effort to prevent our "Daily" from continuing to gain power and influence among the broad masses of the American workers.

That it will not have the effect that the government authorities desire is certain, for thousands of more workers will now rally to its defense.

Inhuman Murderers.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

In our deep sorrow for our unforgotten martyrs, I write these few lines. Sacco and Vanzetti will remain forever in the memory of the workers because they died innocent to relieve the world from slavery and starvation. Those who hunted their blood do not belong to the human race.—Frank Ginsburg, Boston.

JOINT DEFENSE COMMITTEE ISSUES CALL TO ALL WORKMEN CIRCLE BRANCHES AND WORKMEN'S CLUBS

To all members of the Workmen Circle branches and workers clubs:

The Joint Defense committee is proud of your work in the needle trades fight. The fact that you have called special conferences to mobilize your members for the Joint Defense Committee, adopted resolutions of protest against the union betrayers, called upon your members to fight to save the unions, shows clearly that you understand the importance of the present struggle, in the needle trades.

Our defense against the Sigman, McGrady clique upon the unions has thus far been unsuccessful. But the job has not been completed yet. We must now, more than ever, develop our resistance against the betrayers, and commence the work of reorganizing those shops which have been lost to the union.

The Joint Defense Committee gets its support from donations by workers, as well as from affairs. We know that up till now you have been giving us your full support, and relying upon this support, we arranged the Starlight Park Jamboree. Rain however, forced the postponement of the affair and caused heavy losses to the committee. We were forced to postpone the affair to next Saturday, and we appeal to you to come en mass to the park, East 177th Street this Saturday. If you have already made arrangements to go out of town we call on you to postpone it till Sunday.

Tens of thousands are needed to make the Jamboree a success. COME IN MASSES TO STARLIGHT PARK ON SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3RD.

Parcel Post by Air New York to Frisco in Thirty-one Hours

Air express service across the country began yesterday.

From now on it will be possible to send packages from New York to San Francisco in 31 hours; from New York to Chicago in 7 hours and from New York to Dallas, Texas, in 20 hours. Air connections can also be made with many other cities all over the country.

For the first time the American Railway Express began sending packages by air as a result of a contract entered into with the National Air Transport, Inc., popularly known as N. A. T.

At the same time the United States government went out of the air mail carrying business, the National Air Transport having taken over the Eastern division from New York to Chicago, this being the last leg of the cross-country route to pass from government to private operations.

The N. A. T. is now carrying express matters as well as mail and is operating on a regular schedule.

Thirty-five airplanes are in use by N. A. T., which will operate on a daily flying basis of 5,000 miles.

Discover Negro Tribe In Caucasus Mountains

MOSCOW, Sept. 1.—An expedition sent out by the Moscow University into the Caucasus has discovered settlements of Negroes in the Kodorsk district. Despite partial assimilation of the local Caucasian tribes, the Negroes are said to have retained original language and customs. It is believed that they were brought centuries ago to the Black Sea coast from Africa by Europeans. Their language is a mixture of African and Caucasian dialects.

Prior to the Bolshevik revolution the inhabitants of Avkhasia, where these Negro settlements were found, was hostile. Since the revolution the attitude of the Caucasian tribes has become friendly.

Musicians in New York Win $7 to $15 Increase

(Federated Press)

The New York members of the American Federation of Musicians have won a pay increase of from $7 to $15 a week, in their new three-year wage agreement.

According to Joseph N. Weber, president of the Federation, musicians throughout the United States have been securing increases of from 5 per cent to 15 per cent, but in other cities the wage is about 10 per cent lower than in Chicago and New York.

The New York wage will now be $90 a week in legitimate or musical comedy houses and for those in vaudeville houses it will range from $75 to $90 a week. The new agreement also includes an improvement in minor conditions of work.

Unionization of Negro Progresses as Leaders Change Point of View

Along with the new interest manifested by certain intelligent white labor groups in the unionization of Negro workers, there is a noticeable change on the part of a few Negro leaders in regards to the question of organizing Negro workers. On the part of liberal whites this interest is evidenced by the publication of articles recently dealing with organizing problems of Negro groups in Philadelphia and elsewhere in Labor Age, the National Labor Monthly of New York, articles on the Pullman Porter's Union and the Dining Car Union in the Locomotive Engineers' Journal of Cleveland, Ohio and the Conference on Negro Labor held May 19th and 20th at Brookwood Labor College, Katonah, New York.

In several industrial centers such as New York, Philadelphia and Chicago attempts are being made to organize Negro workers. In view of these organizing efforts, the statements made recently by several leading Negroes on the question of Negro labor and the Trade Union Movement come at a most opportune time. The most significant thing, however, is the fact that most of these Negro leaders advocate the alignment of Negro workers with the labor movement.

Among those whose statements will be made public shortly are Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, editor, of the Crisis, Dr. Leslie P. Hill, principal of Cheyney Training School for Teachers, Charles S. Johnson, editor of Opportunity, A. Philip Randolph, editor of the Messenger and general organizer of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, James Weldon Johnson, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, William Pickens and Robert W. Bagnall of the N. A. A. C. P., Prof. Gordon B. Hancock of Va. Union University, Prof. W. H. Jones of Howard University, T. Arnold Hill and Eugene Kinckle Jones of the National Urban League and Dr. John M. Gandy, president of the Virginia Normal and Industrial Institute of Petersburg, Virginia.

Sacco-Vanzetti Library For School.

The Sacco-Vanzetti murders will, for long remain the storm-center in the workers' war with the capitalists. It will therefore be necessary to keep the ghastliness and brutality, the cunningness and circumspection of the principal actors in this drama accessible to workers. Also the socialists and reformists should not be allowed to crawl out from under their shame.

I suggest, that the Workers' School collect a Sacco-Vanzetti library, including all the literature, legal and personal, in book form and newspaper files published here and abroad, touching on the case. At least a comprehensive index to such literature should be published. This is work suitable for the school, because no individual worker is in position to do this.—Samuel Blum.

SOUTH COLORADO MINERS THREATEN STRIKE IN AUTUMN

United Mine Workers and I.W.W. Show Unity

DENVER, Sept. 1.—Faced with the probability of a strike in the Colorado coal fields this autumn, the coal bosses are uneasily watching the signs of a growing agreement among the leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World and the United Mine Workers of America, a keystone union of the American Federation of Labor. The two organizations have a consistent policy of hostility but the conditions in the Colorado fields is bringing many of the miners across to the militant position of the I. W. W. This is especially true of the rank and file and an increasing spirit of unity is visible between the members of the two organizations.

The I. W. W. miners are now in session at Aguliar where they are mapping out their demands for higher wages, a five day week and weight checking. Earl Hoage, president of the Colorado Fedration of Labor, has stated that while his federation is opposed to the militant methods of the I. W. W., he is heartily in favor of the miners' demands. John Gross, secretary of the U. M. W. A., will speak at Aguilar, and indications are that the miners' union is planning to get into the fight in the Colorado district. A drive for membership will be begun by the United Mine Workers at their parade in Aguilar on Labor Day.

According to tentative demands sketched by Kristen Svanum, general organizer of the I. W. W. in Butte, Montana, his organization is planning to demand a wage of $7.75. The present wages in southern Colorado are from $5.25 to $5.52 as compared with $7.75 in the neighboring state of Wyoming.

Cleveland Party Plans Picnic at Lakeland Park on September 4

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1.—As a closing to the summer season, the Cleveland Workers (Communist) Party is arranging a gala picnic on Sunday, September 4, at Lakeland Park, 11711 Lakeshore Boulevard, beginning at 10.00 a. m.

This park is situated right on the lake and is ideal for swimming, so the workers who toil throughout the week may come and cool off.

In addition there will be dancing, contests in athletics, and games on the program.

All Cleveland workers are invited to attend and bring their families and friends along. Admission is 35c at the gate, tickets in advance 25c.

To get to the picnic grounds, take a Euclid Beach car (not a Collinwood-Euclid Beach car). Get off at East [illegible] St. & Lakeshore Boulevard.

All come. A good time is guaranteed.

I. L. D. ANSWERS FELICANI SLANDER; SOCIALISTS CURBED MASS PROTEST

James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense issued a statement yesterday denouncing the vague charges of "misappropriation of funds" issued by Aldino Felicani of the Boston Defense Committee as "slander raised as a means of demoralizing and breaking up the protest movement and concentrating all activities into the narrow financial legal groove of Mr. Fellicani's committee."

Cannon's statement follows in full:

Curb Mass Movement.

During the long fight to save the lives of Sacco and Vanzetti the most important and decisive method of struggle was the organization of the protest movement of the masses. The class-conscious workers to whom the International Labor Defense belongs understood this and put the center of gravity on such activities. The Boston Committee, of which Mr. Felicani was the treasurer, influenced and dominated in its policy by the Socialists, the liberals, labor fakers and predatory lawyers, opposed this line of action and wanted to concentrate on the raising of money for these lawyers. Not only did they follow this policy but they opposed in every way possible the activities of the militant workers who were trying to organize the protest movement. Everything that was done to develop this movement was not only done without the help of the Boston Committee but in spite of their opposition and sabotage.

The money slander which has been refuted and proven groundless many times before was raised as a means of demoralizing and breaking up the protest movement and concentrating all activities into the narrow financial and legal groove of Mr. Felicani's committee. They acted as though they had a patent right upon the great issue of the martyrdom of Sacco and Vanzetti and tried to push aside the honest and militant workers. They wanted to assign to the militants the role of contributing money for the lawyers and keeping their mouths shut otherwise. The money slander is revived now with the same kind of object—to hamper and cripple the movement for labor defense in general and to prevent the harnessing of the great energies and militancy of the movement which supported Sacco and Vanzetti to the fight for the other class-war prisoners.

To cripple this movement is the wish of every reactionary and faker in America. And the action of Mr. Felicani in rushing into the capitalist press with his slanders against the militant workers, while the ashes of our martyred brothers were still hot can be at best only characterized as that of a tool of the reactionaries and traitors.

The information that his accusations were framed-up in the local office of the socialist party which was one of the chief sabotagers of the movement in New York City is not without significance in this connection. It is surprisingly strange that Mr. Felicani directs all his criticisms and venom against the militants who were spiritually brothers to Sacco and Vanzetti. He does not say a word against Mr. Green who appealed to the governor of Massachusetts to imprison Sacco and Vanzetti for life. He does not say a word against the traitors of the socialist party who opposed and sabotaged the general strike in New York City. He does not say a word against the liberals who wanted to put all faith in the justice of the courts and did not want to embarrass the governor with protests and demonstrations, and finally, he does not even criticise the highly paid lawyer who withdrew at the last hour.

Slanders I. L. D.

On the contrary, he again hurls the mud of calumny and slander against the International Labor Defense, the Emergency Sacco and Vanzetti Committee of New York and other agencies of the militant workers who devoted themselves unsparingly to the long fight. Just at the moment when the persecution against the workers is increasing in America, when the International Labor Defense is called upon to defend twenty miners in Pennsylvania against a new frame-up case in connection with a broken-up Sacco-Vanzetti meeting, when we have news that the Michigan cases against the Communists are again to be brought up for trial next month; when we are flooded with demands for material support for the families of humble working class prisoners at Passaic and throughout the country, Mr. Felicani, in collaboration with his yellow socialist allies, attempts to involve us in a money scandal. No doubt he hopes by this to accomplish two ends: On the one hand to cover up the ignoble role played by himself and others in sabotaging the protest movement of the masses and, on the other hand, to belittle and discredit the militants who had no illusions about capitalist justice, the governor's commission or any other agency of the executioners machine.

Heritage of Masses.

The honest and class-conscious workers will know how to judge these vindicative and treacherous actions and will put the proper estimate upon them. For our part we will not be turned aside from our tasks and our duties. We will continue as in the past to strive with all our power to build and unify the movement for the defense of all the persecuted working class victims of capitalist justice.

The great tradition and heritage of Sacco and Vanzetti is not the private property of any little clique. It belongs to the toiling masses of the world and above all to the militant vanguard who fought in their behalf to the last ditch without any illusions. The example of Sacco and Vanzetti is of the greatest forces for the inspiration and regeneration of the labor movement of America and the militant workers would be failing in their duty if they did not reject with scorn and contempt any efforts of a spiteful and insignificant clique to appropriate them as private property.

AMERICAN NEGROES LEARNING CLASS STRUGGLE FROM CONDITIONS IN AMERICA NOT FROM MOSCOW AGENTS

By THOMAS L. DABNEY.

Such articles as those appearing in the Philadelphia Inquirer, the New York Herald-Tribune, and other papers are calculated to do the Negro much harm. Such papers cannot be depended upon to encourage and to support any movement for the emancipation of the Negro masses. Because Negroes do not understand this fact they are likely to fall for the cheap counter propaganda of the kept press. The Negro would not be so easily fooled, however, if he could recall the fact that the same bogus cry was raised with respect to alleged German propaganda among American Negroes during the world war. Criminals are always afraid of being arrested because they know this is what they deserve. Hence whites who know they are guilty of oppressing and exploiting the Negro are a little afraid lest the awakened Negro make some attempt to free himself — a thing that is to be expected on the part of any intelligent oppressed people.

Environment Turns Negroes Red.

The American Negro Labor Congress, which was the target of attack by these newspapers is merely another nation-wide organization for Negro emancipation. It is led by intelligent new Negroes who do not have to go to Moscow in order to realize that the Negro is being oppressed and exploited. The light from the funeral pyre and the smoke from burning Negroes in Georgia and Alabama can be seen better from Atlanta or Mobile than from Moscow. Radicalism among American Negroes is the product of the Negro's daily environment. Neither books nor theories no matter of what origin are as convincing as the daily insult, oppression, exploitation, and lynching of American Negroes. Unless the editors of our big dailies are hopelessly ignorant they know these facts.

The American Negro Labor Congress was organized to fight for the rights of Negroes and protect them from the oppression and exploitation to which they are subjected daily both North and South. The Congress, believing that the problems of immediate interest to the Negro are those involved in making a decent living, is laboring to organize the Negro workers into trade unions with white workers who have the same economic interest as Negro workers.

White and Negro Workers Unite.

With regard to the race problem the Congress dictum is that white workers and Negro workers must unite for their common interest. It feels that the race problem is fundamentally economic; that race prejudice and misunderstanding get their main support from jealousies and fears engendered between the workers of both races in competition for jobs. To meet this problem the Congress is attempting to foster goodwill and understanding between the races by organizing Interracial Labor Committees in the chief industrial cities of the country. It advocates the organizing of the workers of both races in the same unions and the education of white and black workers so that they can appreciate their common position as the exploited class in America.

The Congress believes that the proper kind of education will destroy race prejudice. It is the purpose of the Congress to use the Interracial Labor Committees as educational agencies. These Committees will arrange meetings and conferences where Negro workers and white workers can meet on common terms and frankly and honestly study and discuss the various problems affecting their daily lives. These committees will be of more vital interest to the Negro than the Interracial Committees in the various centers functioning under the Commission for Interracial Cooperation because the former are concerned with that field in race relations from which the race problem emerges.

Negroes Learn of Class War.

The Congress believes that the Negro should become acquainted with the struggles of labor to better its condition. Hence its program includes means for the education of the Negro workers along trade union and industrial lines. Recently the New York Council of the Congress organized a class in "Problems of Race and Imperialism." Forty students enrolled the first week. This course which will run from July 19 to September 20 will give the students an excellent chance to see beneath the surface of historical events.

The Philadelphia Council of the Congress is conducting a weekly forum Sunday afternoons at which time problems affecting Negro workers are studied and discussed. The Council held a conference on the flood Sunday July 31 at which time problems of the Negro workers and tenant farmers of the flood area were discussed. Other conferences are planned in order to acquaint the public of Philadelphia with the conditions of Negro workers in the South. In Pittsburg, New York, Youngstown and other places local Councils hold mass meetings occasionally on questions of immediate and vital interest to the race.

Such activities and beliefs as outlined above are labelled by the conservative white press as bolshevistic. Any Negro with a modicum of intelligence will never be fooled by such bunk. The New Negro wants freedom and he will never stop fighting for it.

Three Held for Killing Youth to Get Insurance

Two frightened and sallow young men, hardly more than boys, and the middle aged man involved in their confession, were arraigned today in Brooklyn Homicide Court, charged with the murder of Benjamin Goldstein, 22, of 892 Eagle Ave., the Bronx. The two boys accuse the older man of having instigated the murder in order that he might collect $70,000 insurance, of which he was beneficiary.

The man is Joseph Lefkowitz, 42, of 13 Clinton St., a cloak and suit merchant. The youths who confessed to drowning Goldstein are Irving Bubinzahl, 22, of 2074 Daly Ave., and Harry Greenberg, 17, of 250 E. Third Street.

DELEGATE FROM DISTRICT NO. 7 DESCRIBES PROGRESS OF PARTY ACTIVITY AMONG MICHIGAN INDUSTRIES

E. Baker, delegate from District No. 7 to the Fifth Party Convention of the Workers (Communist) Party now being held in New York City, has reported great progress in the Party's work in Michigan. The Party is meeting the problems which confront it in this section of the Lake industrial basin with energy and is overcoming the obstacles which the situation presents.

Automobile Nuclei Grow.

In the most important industry of Michigan, the automobile industry, the Party has been very successful in its work of organizing nuclei. The automobile workers are almost 100 per cent unorganized and the field for organization work is immense. The Party's success has been very great to date but it could unquestionably accomplish much more important results provided there were a sufficient number of organizers to do the work.

Nuclei whose membership runs into the hundreds have been established in several of the big automobile plants. The effectiveness of these units can be gauged from the fact that their membership increased rapidly after the reorganization of the Workers Party.

Shop Papers Sell by Thousands.

Twenty shop papers, with a paid subscription and a circulation of about 60,000 are appearing regularly and there are others which make an irregular appearance in many shops. Thru the medium of these papers the Party is placing the daily problems of the class struggle effectively before the workers in the factories.

Despite the difficulties which are presented by the lack of organization among the automotive workers and the frightful conditions of unemployment in an industry where thousands of men are now idle, the Party continues its activities and one by one meets and solves the concrete problems which confront it in practice.

Sacco-Vanzetti Results.

Besides its work in the organizational field the Party in District No. 7 has given special attention to the agitation against the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti. With the assistance of the International Labor Defense huge protest meetings and demonstrations were organized in District No. 7 and resolutions were sent out denouncing the execution of the two workers. Thousands of workers were drawn to the Party thru this agitational work. The militant attitude of the Party and the campaign, the implacable hatred of the bosses as manifested in the raid on the Party headquarters and the police ferocity during the meeting on Cadillac Square in Detroit all served to put clearly before the masses of workers the struggle between the bosses and labor and our Party's function as the leader in this struggle.

Thru its shop papers and its work among the workers in the factories, the Party in District No. 7 has been able to tie up its protest work for Sacco and Vanzetti with the daily struggles of all the workers and this way to deepen the struggle.

In other fields the Party in District No. 7 is not idle. Arrangements have been made to open a camp of several hundred acres outside Detroit. There is a great amount of interest in the project among the Party members and the workers. The camp will be ready for use next season and is expected to accommodate 200 or 300 workers tho it may have to be enlarged in the future.

An Object Lesson.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I wish to be informed as to which union I should belong. I am working now in an automobile factory. I would also like to know the address of the Workers Party office in Detroit.

I want you and your paper to know that I now belong to the labor cause with my heart and soul, and that the Sacco-Vanzetti case has opened my eyes like I believe it has done to millions of unorganized workers.

Fred Garcia, Detroit, Mich.

CONTINUE FIGHT ON RULING CLASS, URGES COMINTERN

fight for power of working class, are slogans of the day."

The greeting was received with enthusiasm.

Another burst of applause came with the reading of the telegram from C. T. Chi, at San Francisco, published in yesterday's issue of The DAILY WORKER, reporting the action of the American Kuomintang in endorsing the letter of the widow of Sun Yat-sen, in which she denounces the treason of the right wing and supports the workers' and peasants' revolution. Chi also sent his greetings to the convention.

Greeting From Steel Workers.

Pullman, Illinois, steel workers greeted the convention in a telegram as follows:

"On behalf of the steel workers of Pullman and vicinity, Section No. 2, of the Workers (Communist) Party, Pullman, sending comradely greetings to the Fifth Party Convention and wishing all success and unity in the Party. Long live the Workers (Communist) Party of America."

Bishop Brown Sends Greeting.

Another characteristic greeting was received from Bishop and Mrs. William Montgomery Brown as follows:

"Greetings to you, the apostles and martyrs of Communism; you who are the greatest saints and statesmen in America. More power to the Workers (Communist) Party and The DAILY WORKER. Free Mooney and Billings with all class war prisoners. Long live Sacco and Vanzetti. Down with the tyranny that tortured and killed them."

Select Convention Committees.

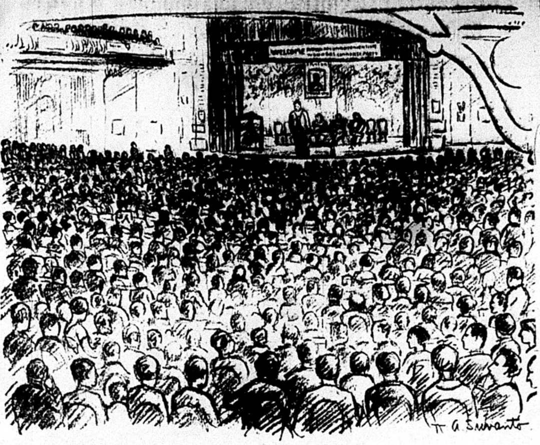
Additional convention committees were selected as follows:

Political Commission: Majority, Gitlow, Bedacht, Wolfe, Minor, Amter, Heikkinen, Lovestone, Knudson, Dinfelt; Opposition: Weinstone, Bittleman, Cannon, Foster, Dunne, Browder.

Organization Commission: Majority, Tallentire, Shklar, Pure, Stachel, Fislerman; Opposition, Swabeck, Krumbein, Ballam, Abern.

The convention will convene this morning at the Irving Plaza Hall and receive the report of the political committee from Jay Lovestone, acting secretary.

OPENING OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY CONVENTION



More than 3,000 New York workers greeted the delegates to the fifth national convention of the Workers (Communist) Party Tuesday evening at a mass meeting at Central Opera House, Third Ave. and 67th St. Benjamin Gitlow, chairman, is seen opening the meeting. Sessions of the convention are now being held at Irving Plaza, Irving Place and 15th St.

Ex-Governor McCray to Tell Jury of Bribery

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 1. — Whether former Governor Warren T. McCray, who was scheduled to return to Indianapolis at noon today, would be called as a witness before the Marion County Grand Jury now terminating an exhaustive investigation of Indiana political corruption was regarded today as nearly as important a question as the jury's action.

McCray would appear to be the most conclusive witness in regard to the charge that Governor Ed Jackson sought to bribe him with an offer of immunity from prosecution and $10,000 cash in exchange for delivery of the Marion county prosecutor's office to the Stephenson-Jackson faction.

Ticket Brokers Oppose McBride Plan; Given a Chance by Managers

Another desperate attempt on the part of ticket brokers to avoid the penalty of getting caught at the gentle game of bamboozing the public will be made at a meeting to be held soon for further discussion of McBride 50 cent surcharge plan.

This meeting was unanimously approved when eighteen theater owners met at the Hotel Astor Wednesday night. The resolution calling for the meeting was proposed by Arthur Hammerstein.

Previously Hammerstein had announced that unless the brokers assented to the McBride plan, the managers would establish a ticket agency of their own. The brokers, however, pleaded for another chance, and obtained their request for a renewal of negotiations.

Passaic Labor Defense Meeting Will Listen to "Mother" Bloor Speak

PASSAIC, Sept. 1. — A memorial meeting for our two martyred comrades Sacco and Vanzetti will be held on Friday, September 2nd, at 7:30 p. m. at the Workers Home, 27 Dayton Ave., Passaic, N. J. Ella Reeve Bloor, well known for her many years of activity in the labor movement, and relief organizer during the Passaic Textile Strike will address the meeting. There will also be many other prominent speakers. This tribute to the two militant workers who have been murdered by American capitalism is being arranged by the International Labor Defense, Passaic section.

MINERS FIGHT ON AS BOSSES TRY TO SMASH UNION

Thousands Starve in Hand Six Month Strike

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—One of the nation's greatest industrial tie-ups, the coal strike of 1927, today enters its sixth month. Except for occasional violence, as efforts are made to change closed union mines into open shop operations, the public is hardly aware that a great war of industry is being fought.

Thousands Out of Work.

More than 100,000 men have been idle for five months. Production is at a standstill, or practically so, in the great coal producing states of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Here and there a mine, or group of mines, has signed what is called a provisional wage scale, permitting workers to dig coal until the strike is ended at the Jacksonville wage scale.

Such coal, and that produced in non-union mines, particularly in West Virginia and Kentucky, has supplied the nation.

Bosses Try to Break Union.

In the Pittsburgh district desperate attempts are being made to continue open shop operations in mines which formerly had contracts with the union. Mine operators claim the union has had to tie up $1,000,000 of its limited funds to cover pending court proceedings. The miners are getting no strike benefits as the present shutdown is called a suspension and in such cases no payments are made.

Union officials point to the completeness of the tie-up in the Central States as an indication that their men are unbroken in their ranks. Mine operators likewise are confident, declaring wages must be lowered. This, the United Mine Workers say, never will be accepted by them. The deadlock is no nearer a solution than it was when the men quit work on March 31.

Thousands Starving.

Tens of millions of dollars in wages have been lost. Thousands of miners' families are feeling the pinch of their situation. Thousands will be evicted from mine company homes as winter approaches if the strike is not settled. Their plight will be desperate, it is, even now, in some regions. And yet the battle goes on its bitter way.

because of their political beliefs, but because of the commission of murder. This will be the alibi of capitalist apologists as long as the case will be discussed—a long, long time. Millions of workers thruout the world who have not the slightest sympathy with the hare-brained anarchist theory, that governments of any kind, workingclass or capitalist, are tyrannies, rallied to their defense because they believed in their innocence and because they believed that they were immolated on the sacrificial altar as object lessons to other workers willing to give their lives for the service of their class.

IT is regretable, yet to be expected at this stage, that millions of workers should believe with the capitalist press and the courts in the guilt of Sacco and Vanzetti. Even now after the execution of these two idealists it is very important that their innocence should be established to the satisfaction of those who still believe that a militant worker has the same right before a capitalist court as a member of the ruling class. Tom Mooney escaped execution by the skin of his teeth because of the worldwide protest against his legal murder. He is still in jail, tho practically everybody connected with the case, even the trained perjurers, have long since confessed their belief in the innocence of Mooney and his comrade Israel Weinberg. Cases like that of Sacco-Vanzetti and Mooney do more to blast the faith of the masses in the justice of capitalist courts than all the propaganda the Communists could put out in one hundred years.

• • •

THO somewhat susceptible to the claims of any kind of science except that of mental healing, this column is inclined to take issue with Sir Arthur Keith on the Darwinian theory. We admit prejudice against an individual sporting a "Sir," "Duke" or "Lord" before his regular cognomen, but what we have up our beak for Sir Arthur is his alleged assertion that man has risen from the anthropoid ape. Perhaps the headline writer did him an injustice, but tho I am not a member of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals the ape's plight has me weeping.

THERE are many commendable things the ape does that his biological superior should avoid but does not. Comparatively few apes have been known to work, except some dissolute scoundrels who have taken to the stage after suffering seduction. But they have a good time compared to the average wage slave, who toils all his life and whose worry is lest he may die without having enough money saved to pay the undertaker.

• • •

MORTICIANS meeting in Atlantic City dropped tears of regret into their beer over the doleful prospect that faced the undertaking business. Too many undertakers! Too few corpses! This was the concensus of opinion. This reminds one of John L. Lewis's solution for the coal mining problem. Too many miners! We do think that the undertakers are not taking proper advantage of all the breaks. There was a nice little war a few years ago in which some 70,000 husky American boys were killed. If the morticians had appointed a member of the trade to slave for the government in the capacity of patriot for one dollar a year, he might have been able to get a contract for wrapping the dead heroes in wooden boxes, thus helping the undertakers over the comparatively lean years that were bound to follow the war.

"See Russia for Yourself"

Tenth Anniversary
of the
Russian Revolution!
Second Tour --- Eight Weeks

London Helsingfors Leningrad Moscow

Extensive celebrations throughout Soviet Russia will usher in the Tenth Anniversary of the Russian Revolution this November. The Moscow Art Theatre and similar artistic and cultural organizations are elaborately preparing to make the occasion a memorable one.
Members of our fall tour will witness the history of Soviet Russia from its world-shaking inception to its present prosperity vividly portrayed in pageant and festival.

Visiting delegations expected from all countries compel us to limit the number accepted to 100.

"If we were a royal or diplomatic delegation we could not have received more attention, consideration, hospitality and ovations."
"Russia was a revelation! Such a spirit and enthusiasm that exists cannot be seen elsewhere . . . It is like going to another world."

American Imperialism in Conspiracy Against Soviet Union.

If there was any doubt regarding the malevolent designs of Wall Street against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics that doubt is now dispelled by the action of the state department at Washington in refusing to permit the shipment of 150,000 rifles to Russia. The state department does not place embargoes, officially or unofficially—as in this case—upon arms to a country unless it views that nation as an enemy and is preparing for war against it.

There is one other country which Wall Street has on the arms embargo list, and that is Mexico. In the case of Mexico the Washington government that serves the interests of dollar imperialism is doing everything in its power to concoct a case for intervention so that the Wall Street bandits can pillage that rich country of its resources.

In the case of the Soviet Union the United States government participates in the conspiracies against the workers' and peasants' government because it knows that as long as Russia remains the formidable proletarian power that it is the conflicts between the imperialist powers for a new redivision of the world must be held in abeyance.

In regard to shipments of arms it is noteworthy that no embargo is placed upon weapons to those European nations that have become vassals of imperialism and that comprise the reactionary bloc that is being created against the Russian revolution.

This arbitrary act by the state department must be the signal for new activity on the part of labor in favor of recognition of the Soviet Union and against the world-wide conspiracy that is on foot to again make capitalism supreme thruout the world.

By their mass power the workers of the United States must show the imperialists that we can fight so effectively against the attacks on the Soviet Union that we will offset a thousandfold the effect of the embargo upon rifles.

Wall Street Increases Hold Upon the Argentine.

On last Saturday the convertibility into gold of the Argentine national currency was officially established, thus placing that country on a gold basis. It means that the public and private debts of that nation are to be measured by the gold standard.

Wall Street, by its mastery of the world gold supply, forces all those nations in its clutches to pay in its own currency. On the same day the official decree establishing the gold standard was proclaimed preparations were also made by the Chase Securities Corporation and Blair & Co. to float a $40,000,000 bond issue of the Argentine government. This issue is to be applied to the funding of the floating debt of the Argentine state railroads. It will, of course, be secured by the properties of the railroads. What really happens is that the bankers of New York have a claim on a portion of the surplus wealth produced by the working class of the Argentine forever, or until the bonds are recalled or transferred to new forms.

This latest bond issue is only the culmination of a series of inroads made by American bank capital in the Argentine. In June, 1925, the House of Morgan and the National City (the Standard Oil bank) floated a $45,000,000 issue for that country. Since that date the same banking houses have floated five Argentine loans ranging from $17,000,003 to $30,000,000 in round figures.

These figures are reasons why the Coolidge-Kellogg-Hoover government of Wall Street is constantly on a rampage somewhere in Central and South America. After the workers of this country have produced such an enormous surplus that it cannot be disposed of within the confines of the United States it is invested in other countries and then the capitalists have the audacity to demand that we become enthusiastic about fighting to protect their right to exploit the workers of other countries with the investment capital they obtained through exploitation of us.

The next time we hear patriots raving about atrocities in any of the Latin-American countries we should remember the investments of Wall Street and demand that American forces not only be not sent to defend their interests but that the gunmen of imperialism get out of those countries and stay out.

As for the workers of Latin America, they should do everything in their power to create powerful anti-imperialist movements against the Wall Street plunderers and join hands with the advanced workers of the United States in a drive to challenge the power of the arrogant ruling class of America.

"Curious Form of Censorship."

So notorious and world-wide is the flagrant despotism of American imperialism and so brazenly do the diplomatic agents of the government defend the interests of the capitalist thieves that no conference of any sort can be held anywhere without some of its atrocities coming to light.

While discussing the effects of censorship upon the press at the International Press Conference at Geneva the editor of the "Imparcial," of Guatemala, M. Asturias, asserted that a "very curious form of censorship exists in South American countries, carried out by diplomatic representatives of the United States." These representatives, according to the Guatemala editor, exercise censorship over South American newspapers "every time the national interests of the countries are contrary to the North American concerns established in these countries."

Surely the editor of the "Imparcial" is very innocent if he imagines the diplomatic flunkeys of Wall Street, appointed by the Washington government, are in South America for humanitarian purposes, or for any reason other than to defend the interests of yankee imperialism.

Such exposures will make it more difficult for the pen valets of American capitalism to convince the people of this country that the United States government is held in contempt in Latin America because the natives of those Southern republics are constitutionally depraved and unable to appreciate the disinterested blessings of American democracy.

More than ever should the masses of these countries organize to drive out the agents of dollar imperialism and the subservient politicians and newspaper editors among the natives who sell themselves to Wall Street. Only the most intense anti-imperialist agitation and organization will defeat the vultures of Wall Street in Latin America or elsewhere.

The Southern Conference Fiasco of the Miners Federation of Great Britain

By NAT WATKINS.
Secretary of the Miners' Minority Movement.

The following article is written especially for The DAILY WORKER by Nat Watkins, secretary of the Miners' Minority Movement of Great Britain. The article shows the methods used to gerrymander the conference in order to shut out rank and file representation—methods which American militants will recognize as familiar ones altho so far unaccompanied by the gangsterism rampant in the American labor movement.

The effect upon the Miners' Federation of Great Britain of the betrayal of their strike of last year and the continual evasion of struggle by the leaders in the face of the fascist trade union bill and other evidences of growing reaction is set forth clearly in this article.

American left wing miners will be interested in the fact that as they are fighting here for a national strike and a national agreement, the British left wing fights along similar lines—for a national union in place of the federation and for a national agreement of which the betrayal deprived the union.—Editor's Note.

IT is an extremely difficult proposition in one sense, yet in another a very easy matter indeed, to regard the Miners' Annual Conference held at Southport as anything but a defeat for the militant miners, especially when the decisions registered on the more important issues are considered.

A brief description of the nature of the representation at the conference enables one to find the end of the thread before rolling it off the reel.

ON this occasion there were present 150 delegates from the various districts in the coalfields; on past occasions there has been approximately double that number.

The decrease did not in the least effect official representation, the officials were present in full force; but the cut was seriously felt by the rank and file delegates, of whom an insignificant number attended. The arguments utilised by the officials in every district for reducing the number of delegates, was the extreme financial disabilities under which the districts were laboring. The conference, therefore, can be classed as purely official in character, as it consisted of miners' agents, executive committee members, and checkweighmen, with only a few delegates actually from the mines.

AGAIN, the method (according to rule) of appointing delegates to annual conferences is what is known as the "rota system", which means that delegates are sent in turn to conferences regardless of experience or debating qualifications. As a result, their inexperience, and (as is often the case) obvious incapacity, plays into the hands of the reactionary officials to oppose (indirectly) measures which their districts have agreed to support.

THE lead given in Smith's presidential address was followed by the official element generally, with the exception of Cook, S. O. Davies, and Arthur Horner (the latter an avowed Communist and President of the Miners' Minority Movement, recently elected to the Executive Committee of the M. F. G. B.)

The vacillating character of Smith was easily discernible in his discourse. He inferred that the basis of all future hope for the working class is no longer the development and perfection of the industrial machine as the most powerful and effective weapon that the workers can wield against the coal-owners and capitalists generally, but urged that implicit trust in a potential Labor Government should be the alpha and omega of our endeavours to solve the colossal problems with which we are confronted.

THE unpardonable and deliberate omission of any reference in his address to the splendid financial support rendered by the Russian Unions to the British miners is characteristic of his vilifying attacks upon the Minority Movement, the Communist Party and the U. S. S. R.

The recent successes of members of the Communist Party and Minority Movement in the district elections were the responsible generating factors of his explosion of slanderous abuse. The conference provided the crater for the free flow of the molten lava of official abuse which had been accumulating for several months.

THEY fully realised that the Minority Movement was not a spook movement materialising when the trained medium appeared, but a concrete organization dangerously threatening the citadels of reaction and those who defended them: no longer a bogey to be laughed at and ridiculed, but a serious competitor for the leadership of this great organization.

In one of the open sessions (to which the press and interested visitors were admitted) the conference discussed a pious emergency resolution protesting against the Trade Union Bill, which reads as follows:

> "We, representing the overwhelming majority of British mineworkers, hereby emphatically condemn the Government's Trades Disputes and Trade Union Bill as a reactionary measure aimed at the liberties of the people and with the badly camouflaged object of preventing further democratic, industrial and political progresses.
> "We, therefore, knowing by history and experience that the emancipation of the workers can only be achieved by trade union and political action combined, urge the workers in all other industries to unite with us to defeat the operation of the nefarious measure."

THE mover, Straker (Northumberland) and seconder, Tom Smith (Yorkshire) of this resolution, dealt with the various clauses affecting picketing, sympathetic strikes, and the political levy, with the recommendation that intensified efforts should be made to secure a Labor Government at the next election — an attitude identical with that of the general council and the Labor Party in all their demonstrations against the bill.

COMRADE HORNER then rose to support to resolution, and at once pointed out the absurdity of waiting two years for a Labor Government to repeal the bill, when there was no assurance that at the end of that time we should have a Labor Government: even assuming that we should, there was no guarantee that a future Labor Government would act any differently from the last, which fathered the Dawes Plan (which Smith so vigorously opposed), operated the Emergency Powers Act, and threatened the London Tramwaymen's Strike in 1924 with a scab service if the men did not return to work etc.

HORNER declared we must prepare for action now or admit our impotence for two years, not only in smashing the bill but in defending the status of those districts whose agreements were terminating this year. He called for action before a Labor Government comes into power, because the salvation of the miners depends not so much on a Labor Government as it does on the Miners' Federation, and therefore unconstitutional action is necessary. He proposed that the E. C. should immediately approach the general council demanding a general strike should be called to smash the bill.

THIS was supported by Mainwaring, but as an alternative he preferred to wait until penalties for violating the act were imposed, and then take mass action.

This opened the official sluicegates, and torrents of calumny, lies and slanderous abuse were poured out against the Minority Movement, Communist Party and the U. S. S. R. It was Smith's intention to keep his firing squad well in hand until the matter should be raised in closed session, but he completely lost control of himself and the conference, and the fight took place with the press in attendance. Smith said in the course of his remarks "if I were born in Russia under the Czarist regime undoubtedly I would have been a revolutionary". Later he said "I have been to Russia, and if I was a revolutionary entering there, I should not be one coming out".

THE three important questions of the conference were relegated to the last session. These were, one national union, the formation of an Anglo-Russian Miners' Unitey Committee, the affiliation of the Communist Party to the Labor Party.

The defeat of the one national union was obvious. The machination of reactionary officialdom in the districts had secured the votes against this principle, on the plea that the immediate task was to get 100 per cent organization before considering the remodelling of the Federation along the lines of one union, — the usual official get-out when proposals for reorganization have been discussed during the past months.

The fear of their own displacement gave rise to the vigorous hostility of the district officials, only Scotland, the Forest of Dean and Notts being mandated to vote in favor.

STRANGE as it may seem the issues of the one national miners' union and the formation of an Anglo-Russian Miners' Unity Committee when raised at lodge meetings and demonstrations are greeted with uproarious enthusiasm as the two needful organizational reforms of the moment.

The district officials themselves are keenly alive to the fact that colossal support for these issues is to be found in every district. Without the least exaggeration it is safe to say were a referendum of the rank and file to be taken 75 per cent would endorse the proposed transformation of the Federation and the creation of an Anglo-Russian Miners' Unity Committee.

Steps must now be considered by the Miners' Minority Movement to get the district view of the miners on these all-important matters and to flout the retarding influence of the right wing officials which now dominates district organizations.

THE decision to form an (All-in World Miners' International) was carried with acclamation, and this was used effectively by Smith and others as a pretext against the creation of the proposed Anglo-Russian Miners' Unity Committee. Smith stipulated that if any barriers were set up, or existing barriers allowed to remain which prevented the Russian miners from affiliating, then the question of such a committee should receive further consideration.

THE affiliation of the Communist Party to the Labor Party was rejected on a card vote by 422,000 to 220,000 votes. The South Wales Delegation remained neutral, although mandated by its district conference to vote in favor of affiliation, thus reducing the vote in favor by 140,000. This act exposed in all its nakedness the trickery of the right-wingers.

The plea for remaining neutral advanced by the reactionary officials, who formed a preponderance of the delegation, was that the resolution discussed and carried at the South Wales Conference contained a clause in which the following was stipulated — "on condition that the Communist Party accepts the constitution of the Labor Party". The resolution before the annual conference did not contain this reservation.

THIS reveals the fact that although mandated by their own conference to vote in favor of affiliation, the reactionaries were prepared to risk censure at a future conference, rather than cast their vote in favor of the resolution.

The loophole through which they escaped actually does not exist, since the Communist Party in its press and official applications to the Labor Party has stated its readiness to accept the constitution. Comrades Horner and S. O. Davies fought courageously to cast the vote in accordance with their mandate, but were outnumbered by the opposition. This episode will surely be raised at the next conference, and steps taken previous to such conference to repudiate the action of the delegation.

IN summing up, although the conference and its decisions were retrogressive in form, the militants are to be credited with splendid progress in the districts, although this was not reflected at the annual conference owing to the system of electing delegates, and the domination of the federation bureaucracy.

The immediate tasks before the Miners' Minority Movement are, to demand:—

1. Special lodge meetings to discuss the conference decisions.
2. Vigorous repudiation of the unwarranted attacks of S. Smith, Sullivan and Duncan Graham, etc., upon the Minority Movement, the Communist Party and Soviet Russia.
3. Demand that the E. C. of the M. F. G. B. bring forward a scheme for one union, as an essential preliminary measure to a national agreement, and nationalization of mines and minerals.
4. Insist that the E. C. takes steps without further delay to set up an Anglo-Russian Miners' Unity Committee.
5. Increased efforts to clear out district leaders who stand in the way of progress and to secure real fighting leadership in one union for all workers in and about the mines.

Letters From Our Readers

Gold Replies to Hapgood.

Editor The DAILY WORKER: In reply to Comrade Powers Hapgood, may I say I am really sorry I seemed too harsh, "spiteful" and "vindicative." I am not that way by nature, and do not admire anyone else who is. I dislike personal attacks, and have always disapproved of a great deal of the turgid, undisciplined and venomous attacks which are too often found in The DAILY WORKER and which never serve any good purpose, Communist or otherwise.

My fault, as I see it, was in being too impulsive. I let my feelings go in a matter which should be conducted as an impersonal fight on the general tactics and policy of the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Committee. It has a great deal to answer for, I believe. Most of the people who went to Boston to help the fight during the past three weeks felt that way, also. They were not Communists, either — there were anarchists, liberals and even socialists who found themselves confronted by the suspicion, narrow jealousy and provincialism of the Boston committee. It is a story that may yet have to be told by someone.

I hope it will be told by some anarchist, however, and not by a Communist, so that no one can say the tragic case of Sacco and Vanzetti has been made into a factional struggle. I know the Workers' Party comrades, though insulted and provoked, have always splendidly tried to maintain the united front, and have never ceased working for Sacco and Vanzetti. It was about a month ago that the Committee issued its first statement calling the Workers' Party a "lot of ghouls," and nothing less than thieves. But the party comrades did not mind this insult made thru the capitalist press, and made no personal answer, but went on fighting for the bigger thing—which was to free Sacco and Vanzetti. That was the right procedure, and I am therefore sorry I became personal in return Bert Wolfe's cool, just and objective criticism of the Boston Committee more than covered the situation, and a temperamental playwright like myself should have refrained from the arena, I guess.

Fraternally, Michael Gold.

Sacco and Vanzetti Will Live.

Dear Comrade:

Sacco and Vanzetti is the old story. Their martyred bodies are returned to earth, "to mix forever with the elements;" their clear voices will go ringing down the years, echoed in drama, in song, in every avenue of human expression, inspiring and uniting those in all lands; labor to create a new and better social order. The old order is rotten, root and core; the forces that struggle for the new, which seem weak and scattered, are full of life and integrity; and the wheels of human progress fly ever more swiftly.—Margaret Shipman, Lee, Mass.

DRAMA

Georges Bizet and His Tuneful Opera "Carmen"

GEORGES BIZET and his opera "Carmen" has rather a unique history—and an interesting one. To the enthusiast who has seen and heard the opera time and again, and can hum many passages of the melodious score, it may seem strange to hear that the opera was a dismal failure when first produced in Paris fifty-two years ago. In view of its world-wide popularity, that failure is historic. Bizet, depressed and discouraged, died three months after the first production. There is no doubt the first failure of the opera was partly responsible for his hasty death. In Vienna, four months following his death, the opera had its first triumph. Brussels, London and New York acclaimed the production soon thereafter. In 1883 when the opera was reintroduced in Paris it created a sensation. But Bizet, mortally hurt in his pride as an artist, died disconsolate.

The Libretto of "Carmen" is the work of Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halevy and is based on the novel by Prosper Merimee. The Opera had its first hearing at the Opera Comique, Paris, March 3, 1875, the title role being sung by Galli-Marie—a famous singer of that time. Minnie Hanck created the role in London and later sang the part here at the Academy of Music on Fourteenth Street, October 23, 1879.

Since then "Carmen" has become very popular with the masses. Not a single opera company can afford to keep it from its repertoire. At the Metropolitan the tuneful score is heard again and again during the season. And Bizet died before he had an inkling of the success his masterpiece was to obtain.

"Carmen" is one of the very few operas which has a story dealing with the people. There is not an aristocrat in it. Perhaps that is one of the reasons the opera is so popular among the workers. Next Saturday night, at the big Stadium in Starlight Park, the workers of this city will have an opportunity to hear the beautiful and tuneful opera which aristocratic Paris of the Seventies turned down and thereby sent Bizet to an early grave.

The production is being given for the benefit of the Joint Defense Committee. Tickets are one dollar, which also includes the Jamboree and dancing at the park, and are on sale at The DAILY WORKER, the Freiheit, and Joint Defense office, 41 Union Square.

MINE WORKERS TO ATTEND FOREIGN BORN CONFERENCE

Plan Fight on Davis at Harrisburg

Representatives from trade unions including a large number of United Mine Workers locals, fraternal societies, and local councils for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers will gather in conference on September 4 and 5, at Harrisburgh, Pa., at the Moose Temple, to consider effective means of aiding in the nation-wide opposition now being organized against the anti-alien measures pending in congress, which it is feared will be passed by the coming congressional session.

Delegates representing approximately 400,000 workers from the State of Pennsylvania, mostly of foreign birth, have been spurred to fervent activity in the work of organizing the foreign born workers against the anti-alien sentiment eminating from Washington, by the recent declaration of Albert Johnson, Chairman of the Immigration Committee in Congress and Secretary of Labor Davis.

This Pennsylvania State Conference is the first of a series of state conferences being arranged by the National Office of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers. Various state conferences will culminate into the calling of a national conference in the near future.

These conferences have not been called forth merely by the threatening declarations of Congressman Johnson and Secretary of Labor Davis. The anti-alien sentiments of Congressman Johnson and Secretary Davis represent a definite attitude in regard to the foreign born residents of America entertained by powerful forces in American industrial life that have found their echo in the halls of congress in the form of introduction of definite bills proposing severe restrictive laws against the foreign elements.

Registration and Finger-Printing.

Congressman Holliday of Illnois, Congressman Brand of Georgia, Congressman Aswell of Louisiana have presented bills to congress calling for registration and finger-printing and other petty impositions on foreigness providing also for very severe punishment such as deportation, heavy fines, and incarceration for the least non-compliance.

The enactment into laws of these bills has heretofore been prevented by the activities of the National Council for the Protection of Foregin Born Workers and the opposition that they have aroused among the trade unions and liberal circles throughout America. Very many prominent men have expressed their resentments against these proposals. The American labor movement has condemned these bills as a blow aimed at the labor movement itself. This opposition has prevented the passing of the bills but has not suceeded in dissuading the proponents from persisting.

Afraid of Demonstrations.

Now on account of the many demonstrations that have taken place in the Sacco-Vanzetti case the dark forces of American life have seized upon these demonstrations as evidence of anti-Americanism on the part of the foreign elements and are trying to develop the theory that the foreign elements are a menace to America and should be curbed. Secretary of Labor Davis has publicly stated that his department is enlisting the aid of employers in checking up on foreigners. This subtle manner of implying that the foreigners require checking up, is insidious in its effect and presages a general propaganda intended to sway the country into the feeling that the passing of the anti-alien measures in congress is a necessity.

Two-Day Session.

The Pennsylvania State Conference will take place September 4-5. It will be addressed by Nina Samorodin Secretary of the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers. Attorney Peter P. Jurachak; Dr. R. W. Hogue; Rev. David Dunn; Robert Bosenberg; Joseph Washington; Domenick Giolett, Jeannette D. Pearl, field organizer of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers, and Anthony Ramuglia, field secretary of the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers.

WILKES-BARRE, Sept. 1. — The Miners' Auxiliary Club of Wilkes-Barre and Luzerne will hold a grand picnic on Rose Hill, Luzerne, Labor Day at 10 o'clock. There will be all kinds of amusement, refreshments and good music. All proceeds from the picnic will be forwarded to the Striking Miners' Relief Committee.

Workers will rally to the support of this picnic.

200 Upholsterers In Minneapolis On Strike for Union

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 1.—Nearly 200 upholsterers employed in the Brooks Parlor Furniture Co. here have just gone on strike. The workers are members of Local 61 of the Upholstery Workers' Union.

Demand Closed Shop.

The closed shop is the fundamental demand of the striking workers. Bitter resentment also exists against the constant reductions in wages, and the striking men declare that they will not only resist further cuts in pay but will remain out until previous wage slashes have been withdrawn.

The workers, who are 100 per cent solid behind the present struggle, are also striving to win the abolition of the piece-work system which they declare is a menace.

Workers in McCormick Plants Point to U.S.S.R. When Refused Vacation

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Upon the refusal of the International Harvester Co. to grant 2 weeks vacation to its employes after 1 year service, The Harvester Worker, organ of workers in the McCormick works, says:

"In Soviet Russia, the land ruled by the workers and farmers only, every worker (in the metal industries) gets a full month's vacation with pay at a summer resort. Is the Harvester Co. already ready to admit that the workers of the Soviet Republic are so much better off than the workers in the Harvester plants? We know that this is so.

"But perhaps the Harvester workers will begin to think that the Harvester plant should be run like the factories in Soviet Russia—by the workers, through their trade unions and shop committees."

Thousands of Chicago Workers to See Sacco And Vanzetti Memorial

Chicago's largest hall, the Coliseum will be the scene of a huge memorial to Sacco and Vanzetti, labor's martyrs, on Saturday, September 3rd at 7:30 p. m. The calling of the meeting follows more than a week of fruitless effort to get a permit now secured from the police authorities for such a gathering.

A feature of the memorial will be the exhibition of the death masks of the two victims of Massachusetts reaction. Prominent speakers and representatives of numerous labor organizations will be on the platform, among them, Rev. Norman B. Barr, W. H. Holly, Ralph Chaplin and others to be announced within the next few days.

The Memorial here follows great mass mournings held earlier in the week in most of the large eastern industrial centers. The local committee, organized to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair is following the lead of a national conference now meeting in New York the purpose of which is to undertake to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt the innocence of the two martyred workers and to provide a suitable monument to their courage and devotion to labor's cause.

UNEMPLOYMENT ON THE INCREASE THRUOUT UNITED STATES; FIGURES SHOW SLUMP DURING LAST YEAR

(By LELAND OLDS, Fed. Press)

Massachusetts, the latest state to add to the roll of labor's martyrs, is increasingly unable to provide jobs for its workers, according to the report of the state department of labor covering employment in July, 1927. The department holds that the general curtailment in factory operation is largely due to vacations and seasonal inventories but this cannot explain the fact that employment in the state falls to a lower level year by year.

Employment Falls Below 1926.

The decline in employment from June to July, the report shows, amounted to 2.4% while the total distributed in wages fell 3.6%. This brought per capita weekly wages down 1.2% to an average of $24.11. At this rate the average factory operative would make only $1,250 if he worked every week in the year.

Factory employment in Massachusetts is now 1.3% below July 1926 and 2.2% below the average for the 5 years 1919-1923 which the department takes as 100%. Changes compared with a year ago are very irregularly distributed among the industries with increases of 19.5% in rubber goods, 18.1% in cotton goods, 14.6% in rubber footwear and 13.9% in dyeing and finishing textiles, contrasting with decreases of 20.7% in electrical equipment, 15.1% in hosiery and knit goods, 12.1% in foundries and machine shops and 6.5% in the boot and shoe industry.

Industries in the doldrums include the boot and shoe industry with only 56.4% as many workers as in the 1919-23 period, the manufacture of textile machinery with 58.9%, hosiery and knit goods with 62.4% and cotton mills with 71%.

Pennsylvania Cuts Payrolls

Pennsylvania factories are cutting their payrolls to meet the slump in demand by cutting down working time rather than by laying off workers. This appears in the report of the Philadelphia federal reserve bank which shows that between June and July factory employment declined 1.7% while total wages fell off 7.1% and average per capita wages 5.6%.

Factory employment in Pennsylvania is now 6% below July 1926 and 15.5% below 1923. Payroll totals have fallen 8.3% from a year ago and 18.6% from July 1923.

Industries in which the workers have been hard hit in the last month include the explosives industry with a reduction of 20.4% in the total payroll, hardware with a reduction of 19.2%, shipbuilding with a reduction of 18.8%, iron and steel blast furnaces 15.9%, iron and steel forgings 16.5%, steel works and rolling mills 11.7%, knit goods and hosiery 13% and building construction with a payroll reduction of 9.6%.

Road Workers Boost Employment Figures.

American railroad employment increased seasonally in May due entirely to taking on 40,585 maintenance of way workers. In all other departments there were slight reductions in force except that the railroads added 17 to their staff of executives and officials.

The total number of railroad employees in May was 1,793,141 compared with 1,808,728 in May, 1926. The reduction compared with last year involved layoffs in all departments except maintenance of way in which the force is larger by 20,825. Important reductions from 1926 include laying off 26,169 shopmen, 5,410 train and engine service employees and 2,300 clerks.

The total payroll for May amounted to $249,146,236, an increase of about $2,600,000 over May, 1926. The average wage for the month was $139 compared with $136 last year. If we include only employees paid on an hourly basis the average this year was $133.

LIFE OF A GREAT NORTHERN EXTRA GANG IN MONTANA

Work: No Eats.

I have just finished two and one half months of slavery on a "floating gang," for the great Northern Railroad. A floating gang is a gang that works without eating.

The crew varied from 24 to 17 men, and but 6 of the 24 men who were the original gang, remained on the job after two and one-half months of work.

Zenith Wages 39 Cents!

I got 39 cents an hour, paid $1 a day for board, and $1 a month for blankets.

For the two and one-half months work I received $39, and wore out $10 worth of clothes. I was poisoned two times by the rotten food, and almost broke my leg on a falling tie; so you can see that it made me feel bad when the time came for me to leave the slave-driving, rotten paying, stomach robbing Great Northern.

Costly Experience.

On Great Northern freight cars one can see the picture of a mountain goat. That emblem means that the company can make a goat out of any man.

I may not have earned much money, but "Oh boy!" the experience.

Most of the men who were on our gang had wintered in Minneapolis, and had been shipped out to Hovre, Montana, to the job.

Poor Farmers Follow Other Slaves

There were Russians, Germans, Austrians, Poles, Hungarians, and Italians in the bunch, and as they were driven by the bad food from the job, they were replaced by Norwegian and Swede dry-land farmers.

The boss of our gang was a young aspiring Swede who was after a roadmaster's job, and who had read books on how to handle ignorant foreign workers, and become a success in life by working for the Great Northern.

Where Banks Own Farmer's Bodies.

The farmers expect big crops in Montana this year, for it was a rainy season. About all that remain of the country where a few years ago farmers were pictured by the Great Northern Publicity Department, plowing gold dollars from the ground; is gophers, prairie-dogs, Russian thistles, deserted buildings, rusty farm machinery, and foreclosure signs.

When we arrived in Hovre, we talked with a horse-buyer who was buying horses for $4 and $5 a head. We were told that these animals were shipped east for their bones and hides, and their flesh was made into canned beef for the Frenchmen.

Page the Great White Father!

There was a camp of renegade Indians on the edge of town. They had some how pulled through the winter on the rotten food which the old squaws had dug from the city garbage cans.

Some ambitious social citizen had finally discovered the camp, and found some were almost starved, some were frozen, and some were deathly sick.

Great Northern Needs Own Graveyard.

There are two graveyards in Hovre; one is for the pioneers, farmers and business men; the other is for the Great Northern foreign employers.

In the first cemetery not a sign of country loyalty could be seen, but on every foreigners grave was an American flag.

Another thing, every foreigner who works for the Great Northern pays a $4 road and poor tax, and most of them are not allowed to vote.

Foreigners Robbed.

If that isn't "taxation without representation" my mother-in-law is the "best lady in the land."

There is just one good thing about working for the Great Northern. If you don't want to work for them you can quit.

That is what I did.

And if the poor, old, ignorant foreigner who swings the spike maul, or the big Austrian, who hold the towping gun; isn't worth more than 39 cents an hour for the labor they perform, then it is time for every working man to dig a deep hole and jump into Hell.—John Crodatt.

Force Chicago Workers To Double Up on Jobs

Pennsylvania Foreign Born to Protest the U. S. Registration

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 1.—A mass protest meeting against police-registration of aliens living in the United States has been arranged for Sunday evening, Sept. 4, 1927, at the Moose Temple, Harrisburg, Pa., by the Penna. Council Protection Foreign Born Workers.

The object of the protest meeting is to acquaint the public at large with the reactionary character of the proposed legislation and to organize to defeat these measures calling for finger-printing, photographing, taxing, and carrying of "passports," with the threat of fines, imprisonment and deportation for infraction. Among the speakers will be:

Peter P. Jurchak, compensation attorney of the United Mine Workers of America of Johnstown, Pa.

Nina Samorodin, secy. treas. Nat'l Council Protection Foreign Born Workers, N. Y. C.

Jeannette D. Pearl, field organizer National Council of New York City.

Dr. Richard W. Hogue, Inter Racial Commission, Harrisburg.

Rev. David Dunn, St. John's Reformed Church, Harrisburg.

All are cordially invited. Admission is free.

Young Workers League To Hold Stunt Night In Cleveland, Sept. 10

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1.—On September 10, Branch No. 2 of the Young Workers League, will hold a social and stunt night at South Slav Hall, 5607 St. Clair Avenue. This is a young branch of the League, and we are going to try to strengthen our social contact in Cleveland.

On this stunt night there will be various performances by League members from all the branches, a couple of speeches, and dancing for the crowd. Refreshments will be served. Admission is free.

We ask that all sympathizers and friends of the Young Workers League come to this affair, and help us to build the branch of the League in the east section of the city.

IMPERIALISM

The Final Stage of Capitalism

By LENIN

THIS book, a classic of Communist literature, was written, (as Lenin explains in his introduction) to "help the reader to understand the fundamental economic question, without the study of which modern war and politics are unintelligible—"

With a growing danger of an imperialist war, at this time particularly it should be read by every worker.

HAPGOOD, KRASKE AND DOS PASSOS FINED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Powers Hapgood, George Kraska, and John Dos Passos have been fined ten dollars each in the municipal court for picketing the State House. The charge against them is loitering and sauntering. All three appealed.

Army Man Goes Free.

Paxton Hibben, formerly in the diplomatic service, and now a captain in the United States Army Reserve, was acquitted altho he admitted having been among the pickets. Judge Sullivan, before whom the cases were tried, said that he believed Hibben had not heard the police order to move along altho the officers on duty declared that they had warned each of the picketers individually.

"I am not guilty of sauntering or loitering," Hapgood said in his statement. "According to Funk and Wagnalls' definition of these words, sauntering means 'an idle stroll' and loitering means 'idling' or 'lingering idly by the way.' I was certainly not idling or wasting time, nor was I resting.

"On the contrary, I was engaged in the serious business of trying to help save human life. I was trying to persuade governor Fuller to prevent the execution of my comrades Sacco and Vanzetti, both of whom were entirely innocent of the crime of banditry with which they were charged. They were trying to build a better and more just social system and have now been legally murdered, crucified for opposing injustice in the same way that many of the greatest men in history have been murdered and crucified.

Brands Investigation.

"I was not loitering but was conveying to Governor Fuller a message, asking him why, if his conscience was clear, he had held the investigation in secret behind closed doors, far from the public eye, where the brutal character of the frame-up could not be exposed. This fact made me feel that the governor's conscience could not be clear.

"If trying to save life is 'sauntering and loitering,' then I am guilty of the charge. If trying to persuade Governor Fuller to prevent murder is not 'sauntering and loitering' then I am not guilty even tho Governor Fuller did not heed my persuasion and allowed two innocent men to die."

Kraska Denies Charge.

Kraska spoke as follows:

"I deny that I was sauntering and loitering. Together with other American citizens I walked on the sidewalk in front of the State House on Saturday morning, Aug. 20, for a serious and definite purpose. I consider that it is my duty to protest against any attempt to send workers to death upon such inconsistent evidence as was brought out by the state against Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Remembering my American history, from grammar school, (for I cannot claim any more schooling than that; owing to the economic conditions which forced me to work at the age of fourteen) that William Lloyd Garrison was dragged thru the streets of Boston for views contrary to the then existing powers I thought how he is today accepted as heroic, and statues are erected to his honor in this city. With that lesson in mind I attempted to persuade peacefully the present authorities against shamefully carrying out the disgraceful murder of these two workers.

"I walked with my other comrades (some of whom are here with me) solenly and without interfering with anyone whatsoever, carrying a card with the inscription: 'Try it on' (referring to the cap which was identified as Sacco's but never tried on him) as one of my expressions to prevent a judicial murder, which has since been carried out."

JAMES P. CANNON ANSWERS CHARGE OF A. FELICANI

The vague and totally unfounded charges of "misappropriation" levelled by Aldino Felicani, of the Boston Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, the International Labor Defense and the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee were branded as a smoke screen to hide the differences between the role played by the I. L. D. and the weak, ineffectual role by certain members of the Boston Committee, according to James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense.

"There is nothing new in Felicani's statement," Cannon declared. "It is merely a repitition of the old lies that have been hurled at us thruout the entire campaign. Any time we tried to do anything for Sacco and Vanzetti these people wanted to limit the Defense Committee to collecting funds to give to lawyers and to soft-pedal the protest movement of the workers.

"They never had any criticism to offer of William Green and the other traitors who betrayed Sacco and Vanzetti to their death."

Cannon will issue a full statment today.

Felicani Attack Upon I. L. D. Made With Help of the Socialist Leaders

The attack on the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee and the International Labor Defense given to the capitalist press Tuesday night by Aldino Felicani, treasurer of the Boston Defense Committee, was issued with the active co-operation of the socialist party leaders in the office of the New Leader, 7 East 15th St., it was stated today.

The local newspapers were requested to send reporters to the New Leader office to obtain a statement. When they arrived they found Felicani together with Edward Levinson, assistant editor of the New Leader waiting to receive them, it was said.

When the red-baiting statements were being given out, August Claessens, secretary of the local socialist organization, and one of those who kicked Ben Gold manager of the Furriers Union during a recent Union Square meeting for Sacco and Vanzetti entered. With a smile from ear to ear Claessens handed Felicani a check of $108 which he said "was for the defense work," according to persons in close touch with the situation.

Last week Levinson promised the capitalist reporters an "expose of the Communists."

The Clock Strikes Twelve!

By WILLIAM GROPPER.

SOMEWHERE in my consciousness, like a dim memory, or a dream within a dream, I have heard of the city of Boston. All America is proud of Boston. There in the years gone by, I have been told, blossomed the culture and liberty of the new world. Thoreau, Emerson, Wendell Phillips the abolitionists sprang from the soil of New England. John Brown walked forth with a handful of men to battle for the freedom of the slaves, and from Boston mainly came the spiritual and financial aid that carried him through his days of fighting in Kansas and his last glorious battle in Virginia. Is this a dream?

I am now in Boston. I have just alighted from the boat after a sleepless night. It is raining a little. The streets are squalid and narrow and dirty. Police, state militia, guns, bayonets. People tread cement walks with unsteady gait as if they were lost in a dark forest. With all this military protection, great fear still remains in their hearts. For months the capitalist press planted this fear, carefully, systematically, with cries of "foreigner, communist, revolution." Many people remain indoors. Nurses hold the little children of the rich a bit tighter by the hand. Italian banana peddlers are eyed suspiciously. And the Italian quarter is nervous and restless.

It is the morning of the execution. More than ever is the city of Boston, this crade of liberty, filled with police, gunmen, soldiers. Mounted horses dance on the streets. The city is in high fever. Newsboys cry their extras. The state house is officially closed for the day and a huge cordon of police is thrown around it. I climb the steps of defense headquarters. Many men and women, tired men and women, men and women who have worked days and nights these many months and years look sleepy and wan, black circles under their eyes; but this last day of days their work is still the uppermost thought and only thought in their minds. Stops a limousine in front of defense headquarters. Up come two bediamonded women. Well fed, heavy jeweled, soft, thin, cool dresses. A couple of flunkies follow them. This is Mrs. Harriman and Mrs. Cram. "Oh, how tired we are, what a strenuous trip this is from Newport. Is there anything we really can do for Sacco and Vanzetti? This has been a dreadfully strenuous trip from Newport. Yes, we shall see the Governor."

• • •

The impartial governor sits in his office and listens to pleas for Sacco and Vanzetti. Men and women come, come and go. He listens. He is fair. He is ever so anxious to be convinced. And he listens. "I am open to conviction." He listens. "Gentlemen, this is a beautiful day" and the impartial governor of all the people drives homeward.

• • •

A. F. of L. electricians were testing the wires for the execution. Massachusetts is fair to organized labor. There goes the executioner, Mr. Elliot! I wonder when he gets home tonight does his wife say, daddy, did the world treat you fair today?" "Yes, my only one, you can have that fur coat your little heart has ached for, for so long."

• • •

Workers are gathering into two small halls for last minute demonstrations. The halls are small but they are the only available ones. The police have issued their orders to all owners of buildings and halls. An overflow crowd gathers in the street. "Mother" Bloor addresses the crowd from an upper story window. Her gray head is framed like a white window box flower. Out of her mouth come fiery words of courage and hope and daring. Suddenly more police appear and the crowd is dispersed. Some are arrested and together with many pickets are thrown into jail. The jail is very crowded and the rebels are herded into cells, six or seven into a narrow cell, like cattle in Chicago stock yards. Strains of the "International" come through the barred windows and crowds gather around the jail. The jail windows are shut and the rebels almost suffocate, and now as from a far distance a song comes, comes breaking through the jail walls,

My Country 'tis of thee
Sweet Land of liberty

Across from the Charlestown prison there is a bridge. Regiments of soldiers with machine guns and bayonets guard the prison. No one can cross the bridge, it is the deadline. Huge glassy-eyed crowds stare on. Grotesque shadows are cast on dark streets. Cossacks' horses dance on. A few people in ignorance walk on to the bridge. A few more follow them. Then a few more. The police let them. I hold my breath and look on, for it is an obvious trap. Two or three hundred people are now on the bridge and quickly like a cannon shot comes a signal from somewhere . . . many horses plunge forward riding through the mass of bewildered and scared men and women. The night now is not so silent, there is shuffling feet, sticks on heads, cries, the bucking of horses and finally the mass is crowded to the edge of the bridge and from there they are inched along on to the street. Many run up the elevated station, horses gallop up the steps a short distance. From below the police warn them not to come down again but to take the next train. Again all is silent. The government has proven its supremacy.

The hour of the execution is approaching. Many thousands of people are on the street but all about me there is a deep silence, only the mounted horses running on cement are heard. Night is coming and lights are lit in dark tenement house windows. A police automobile speeds down the avenue. A dog darts across. There is a terrific howl. The machine runs on. The hurt animal with its entrails half out takes a few steps and drops dead. A woman screams, the police rush in her direction. Soon all is quite again and the clock on the square strikes the hour nine.

A woman rushes to the gates of the prison. There behind those walls sit Sacco and Vanzetti. The woman is Mrs. Cram. She must see the warden! She must see the warden!! The prison guards and the police handle this woman somewhat differently. She is not a worker. She stands high in the social scale of Boston and they bow before her and become servile. She must see the warden. Mrs. Cram asks for a two-hour stay until some important word can be had from Washington. No, she cannot see the warden. This is a busy night for him. This is the night of the execution! Three men are to die tonight. And on all such nights the warden gets drunk. This is an arduous task. It is a man's job. And the warden is a man. The warden is drunk tonight. Courage, brother, courage. Eh, it is a man's job. The warden is drunk tonight. No, Mrs. Cram, it is impossible for you to see the warden tonight. We are sorry, very sorry.

There stands on a street in Boston a huge clock with two black hands. I shall always remember it as the death clock, for there I with many others waited for the hour of twelve. Our eyes were lifted to that clock with its two black hands, and in terror we watched a hand crawl slowly towards the deadly middle with the Roman numerals. And then the clock struck and I heard someone beside me count slowly from one to twelve. He counted, and in that simple count I heard twelve little death songs. And soon on a board near us appeared the words, SACCO, VANZETTI DEAD. Then nothing mattered, nothing except the morrow, . . . for I knew the workers would remember.

(Written Especially For The DAILY WORKER)

By J. O. BENTALL.

Wingdale, N. Y., Sept. 1.

"One aim thruout our lives: Freedom to the working class."

These closing words of the Pioneer pledge keep ringing in my ears. I cannot get away from them. They follow me as I walk the winding roads about the camp. They haunt me as I look up the mountain sides and gaze into the blue sky above the mountains. The little hustling stream that hurries down the steeps chants and chants the pledge it has heard every morning from the coming rulers of the earth—"One aim thruout our lives: Freedom to the working class." The clouds that come sweeping over us and the torrents of rain that they pour into the gulches, the majesty of the mighty flashes of lightning and the roar of the deafening thunder join that throng of coming power, unite with that mass of determined, live, willfull, energetic flesh and blood and brains, and in unison, definitely, forcefully, in rythym, undyingly pledge—pledge—pledge "One aim thruout our lives: Freedom to the working class."

I would go a thousand miles to get the inspiration that this group of young humans imparts in a day at the camp. To see the plans they have laid for future work and for children that will follow them in the great struggle is to get a new grip on life.

In the two short years they have increased from a handful of a dozen to over a hundred at the present time. From a little corner set aside for some nobodys and lost in the bustle of large crowds they now have their own plot, their own tents, their own office, hospital, gymnasium, sport field, showers, store rooms, and flag pole.

Very materialistic individuals have helped the Pioneers to get equipment. To be specific it is the management of Unity Camp that has been far-sighted enough to make the Pioneers one of its first cares. Unity has a large tract of the most picturesque land in the mountains. There is an ideal lake for swimming, a fine river with crystal clear water issuing from high altitudes in the mountains, making water supply with natural high pressure easy to pipe for every purpose, and there is natural beauty and delightful slopes for thousands of tents.

So Unity Camp told the Pioneers that they could have part of this land, a very liberal tract splendidly located and gloriously beautiful.

And did the youngsters know what to do with this concession? You just come over here and take a look at the territory now in possession of the Pioneers and your eyes will bulge out like headlights in a Rolls Royce.

First we run into the "Red Square," in the middle of which is the flag pole where a very significant flag is hoisted every morning, of which more in the next article. To one side is "The Kremlin." This is the center of activity where all official meetings are held and where the officers have their posts. The director is a young man bubbling over with energy, full of life and overflowing with plans and schemes for making Pioneer Camp the most attractive, healthy, educational, enlightening in America, who does not give a whoop what people call him, but I wormed myself into his confidence and found out that his name is Morris Gottfried. This young worker has put the brains of the children to work and given them the task of naming the streets, roads and tents. So you read the big letters on the tents: "Spartacus Tent," "Debs Tent," "Zetkin Tent," "Sacco Tent," "Vanzetti Tent," a tent for Mother Bloor, Foster, Frank Little, Voikoff, Kruppskaia, Kollontai, a "leaders' Terrace," with tents of Karl Marx, Sun Yat Sen, John Reed Botvin. "Pioneer Lane," is the main thorofare, leading thru the Camp. Between two sections of tents is "Ruthenberg Parkway." Then we come upon "Liebknecht Ave," Luxemberg Ave.," and so on. There is also the "Washhouse Alley," where you are told "Don't Forget Your Neck and Ears.' All meetings are held in "Lenin Hall," and all play and sports take place in "Victory Playground."

A budding museum contains numerous specimens of peculiar rocks, insects, leaves, trees and pre-historic bones. The more scientifically inclined contribute both specimens and explanations to the museum.

The camp bulletin called "The Fighting Pioneer" is issued regularly once a week. A special Sacco-Vanzetti number won greater response than any other. The library contains a fine selection of books and magazines as well as the leading daily papers. There was also a paper on the table called The "DAILY WORKER," which the Pioneers for some reason seemed to prefer to the metropolitan press.

This, in a nutshell is the equipment. In the next article I will tell you what the Pioneers are doing to while away their young days in the Camp.

THEIR UNITED FRONT

By ADOLF WOLFF.

Herr "Noske" Shiplacoff.
This gent sure knows his stuff.
A word from him
And cossacks grim
Start in to treat us rough!
Start in to treat us rough!

Herr Claessens knows his place
He kicks our leader's face;
Because he tries
To head our cries.
No coward was so base.
No coward was so base.

In vain we'd have to hunt
For a more perfect stunt
Then the P. D. and
The S. P. band
In their united front.
In their united front.

Wilmington Is Saved!
